Russell Johnson, Peace Education Secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, will speak in Wright Hall, Smith College tonight at 8 p.m. His lecture, "Where Do We Go from Here: United States Policy in Asia?," is being sponsored by Curriculum Committee. The public is invited to attend.

In 1965 Mr. Johnson returned to New England as Peace Secretary of the A.F.S.C. after spending four years in Southeast Asia. He was working there as director of the Quaker Southern Asia Seminar Program. From his headquarters in Delhi, India, his work took him into thirteen Southeast Asian countries. Recently, Mr. Johnson attended a conference in Prague where he talked at length with some 30 Vietnamese nationalists.

Meteorite Research

Dr. Brian H. Mason, Curator of the Division of Meteorites of the U.S. National Museum (Smithsonian Institution), will be a special guest of the UMass geology department from Wednesday to Friday as the second in a series of four-college geology lecturers.

His major public lecture entitled "Recent Advances in Meteorite Research," will be given in Morrill Auditorium at UMass, Wednesday, Dec. 5 at 8 p.m.

Dr. Mason was born in Port Chalmers, New Zealand in 1917. He holds M. Sc. degrees from the Universities of Otago in New Zealand and Oslo in Norway. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Stockholm in Sweden in 1943.

After working in New Zealand for a number of years, he joined the faculty at Indiana University as an associate professor in 1947. From 1953 to 1965 he was Curator of Physical Geology and Mineralogy at the American Museum of Natural History. He has been Curator of the Division of Meteorites in the Smithsonian Institution since 1965.

The Four College Lecture Series in Geology is administered by the geology departments of Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith Colleges and the University in cooperation with Williams

War Policy to Outlast McNamara

By RICHARD ANTHONY
Collegiate Press Service

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will leave his present position sometime within the coming months in order to take over as head of the World Bank.

There is no indication that McNamara decided to resign because of disagreement with President Johnson's Vietnam policy, although the secretary has generally argued for less dependence on bombing than the President's military advisors.

Nor is McNamara's impending departure likely to mean any moderation of the Government's Vietnam policy. Any successor to the secretary is likely to be at least as hawkish as he has been.

Speculation about who will take over as Secretary of Defense centers around five men: Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Nitze; Texas Governor John Connolly; Air Force Secretary Harold Brown; Cyrus Vance, former Deputy Secretary of Defense; and Roswell Gilpatrick, another former deputy secretary. Connolly has denied that he is being considered to replace McNamara.

Robert S. McNamara, during his seven years as head of the largest military complex in the world, has been a controversial figure. He has been not very cordially hated by most of the military officers over whom he holds sway, alternately hounded and aided by Congress, and deeply admired by two Presidents. He has been called names, most of them related somehow or other to his computer-like modes of thought and his supremely rationalistic approach to government.

But oddly enough, in spite of the controversy, the dominant image that McNamara has created during his tenure has been that of the man who is always on hand, usually with what would seem to be all the answers. He appeared during the Cuban missile crisis, poking charts and blown-up photographs with his pointer to explain how we were threatened, and what we were doing about it. He was on hand during the Dominican crisis, showing exactly why it was necessary to send thousands of U.S. Marines to battle 50 or so Communists in the rebel movement on that island. He has appeared numerous times to talk about the Vietnam situation, usually bringing along enough statistical material to soften later criticism of his more formidable misjudgements (in the fall of 1963, he said the U.S. could start withdrawing troops from Vietnam by the end of 1965).

People who should be concerned about the power aspect of McNamara's position, and doing something about it—the intellectuals and/or the liberals—have also been diverted by the idea that McNamara has somehow been the reluctant dragon of American Government, going along with policies that he basically disagrees with out of a deep sense of loyalty and a commitment to the ideal of public service, all the while struggling within the inner councils of government to hold back the rising tide of militarism.

It may be that two recent developments — the decision to build an anti-ballistic missile system and the various decisions to take North Vietnamese targets off the restricted list—have been opposed by McNamara in private. It may be that these developments are part of the reason he has decided to resign. Neither of them, however, is of much significance compared with the simple fact that McNamara has presided over the development of the most fantastic military apparatus in history.

It may be that two recent developments — the decision to build an anti-ballistic missile system and the various decisions to take North Vietnamese targets off the restricted list—have been opposed by McNamara in private. It may be that these developments are part of the reason he has decided to resign. Neither of them, however, is of much significance compared with the simple fact that McNamara has presided over the development of the most fantastic military apparatus in history.

Much as many of us would like to forget it, it was John F. Kennedy who raised the spector of a "missile gap" between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, and McNamara who saw to it that the gap was closed and then reopened in our favor to the extent of a three or four to one missile edge. And it was McNamara who implemented Kennedy's call for a "flexible response" capability, enabling the U.S. to engage in limited wars, like Vietnam, without resorting to nuclear weapons. Finally, it was McNamara who began to move the Defense Department away from a total reliance on military hardware to an increasing use of "software"—the use, that is, of social science research and techniques as weapons in the political phases of warfare.

In addition to bringing about basic changes in what might be described in Pentagonese as our "defense posture," McNamara has radically changed the bureaucratic structure of the Defense Department, and thereby has changed its role in American society as a whole. In place of a department that was riven by inter - service rivalries throughout its early years he leaves one firmly under the control of a unified, mainly civilian bureaucracy.

I don't know why McNamara worked so hard to accomplish all this. Looking at it from a certain perspective, one could say, that he believes military force is the best way to stabilize the world. A more complimentary view is that he is a misguided liberal, who somehow believes the creation of a vast and efficient military machine would help bring about worldwide economic development and healthy social change. I lean to the view that he is simply the kind of man who likes to run huge organizations in his own rationalistic, authoritarian way, and that it is just damned bad luck Kennedy put him in the Defense Department.

"No pill can stop you from flunking out," I scoffed. "Well, he's there. And I'm here. Take warning from my sad case. And take NoDoz to help you stay with it."

But it can help, any time you're drowsy or tired. For example: A couple of NoDoz can sharpen your mind and help you remember facts at exam time, or NoDoz can wake you up when you have to cram late at night.

When driving makes you drowsy, NoDoz can bring you back to life. If a long lecture makes your attention wander, NoDoz to the rescue.

Get the point? NoDoz can help you anywhere, any time, and it's non habit-forming.

Best Dressed Girl Contest To Be Held

On February 4, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Angel Flight will sponsor its annual Best Dressed College Girl Competition in conjunction with Glamour magazine in the Student Union Ballroom. The candidates for the contest will be nominated by dorms, fraternities and sororities on campus. The girls chosen from among the nominations will be feted at a tea with the judges at the Colonial Lounge on January 28. Last year's "Best Dressed Girl on Campus" winner, Miss Kathy Koumjian, will be a judge this year along with Dean Field, Mrs. Gonon, Dr. Arney, Miss Crowe, Mrs. Tunis, Chet Weinerman and Major Oakes of the AFROTC Detachment on campus.

The candidates will be judged on three outfits: a daytime outfit (campus wear), a date-time outfit (cocktail dress) and formal outfit (long gown). The winner will receive gift certificates from The House of Walsh, Peck and Peck, The Salt Box, Ann August and Cohen's of Northampton. If she goes on to win the area competition, she will be sent to compete in the Ten Best Dressed Girls Contest at the Glamour Magazine studios.

Mount Holyoke Growth Assessed After 130 Years

"Mount Holyoke stands secure today as one of the finest institutions of its kind. It should be able to face the future with confidence," according to President Richard Glenn Gettell in a report on "Mount Holyoke's Thirteenth Decade."

The 56-page report, compiled by the President, is a comprehensive summary of the growth and development of the College under Mr. Gettell's 10-year administration. Earlier in the academic year, Mr. Gettell, who has served the College since 1957, announced his resignation effective not later than the end of the academic lear 1968-69.

"The decade 1957-67 has been a period of rapid development and gathering strength. Whether one assesses the College in terms of financial resources; physical facilities; quality of its faculty and staff; promise of its students; or liveliness of its academic, social and religious programs, one can find notable progress," Mr. Gettell reports.

Since 1957 there has been a tremendous change in the physical face of the campus. New buildings include four residence halls, an outdoor amphitheater, a religious activities center, health center and infirmary.

The War and The Draft: Opposition

M.I.T. Graduates See Vietnam More Than Military Problem

On May 11, 1967 the Graduate Student Council of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology passed a resolution condemning the Vietnam policy of the United States Government. The resolution also called for a poll of graduate student opinion.

While 60% of M.I.T. graduate students responding to a poll oppose the war in Vietnam, most stop short of advocating an immediate withdrawal of all United States troops.

The poll showed that 83% of the M.I.T. graduate students responding to the poll do not consider Vietnam as primarily a military problem, and that only 3% foresee a military victory "in the near future" if our present military policy continues.

Of those who said they "opposed" the war in Vietnam, most gave as their reason that "the high cost of the war diverts our efforts away from domestic problems."

Recognition of the Viet Cong as an independent negotiating party was endorsed by 47% of the graduate students responding, and 45% asked for a cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam. Only 17% of the graduate student respondents endorsed an immediate withdrawal of all United States troops.

Among those students who said they "support" the war (38%), the most popular reason was that "to relinquish our commitment at this time would endanger our international prestige and influence."

Twenty-two per cent of the responding graduate students at M.I.T. want a removal of bombing restrictions, while an invasion of North Vietnam was endorsed by only 6% of those responding.

Other findings include a disapproval by many responding students of unlawful protest (43%). Yet 85% of the graduate students who answered the poll also felt that protest is a "democratic expression of opinion which must be safeguarded."

The faculty members and foreign students generally responded with more opposition to the war than did U.S. graduate students. On the question whether they "supported" or "opposed" the war, 67% of the faculty respondents, 75% of the foreign student respondents, and 58% of the U.S. graduate student respondents said they opposed the war.

A poll conducted by the Daily Collegian in November found that 37% of the students taking the poll favored de-escalation and stopping the bombing while 19% favored immediate withdrawal.

Draft Suit Is Planned by National Student Association

The National Student Association plans to file suit in Federal Court to stop local draft boards from complying with Lieut. Gen. Hershey's recommendation that those interfering with draft procedures be reclassified and inducted.

According to Edward Schwartz, president of the organization, the suit would also challenge the constitutionality of the recommendation by Hershey. Schwartz said that the selective service "is neither a policeman nor a court" and should not be used to punish dissent.

The suit says the selective service actions represent "a critical threat to the free exercise of fragile and sensitive rights," including the freedom of speech and the right to petition for redress of grievances.

Elsewhere, Yale University President Kingman Brewster Jr. referred to Hershey's recommendation as being "outrageous," and a "real damper on free discussion and dissent."

Picketing

"Let every man make known what kind of government would command his respect, and that will be one step toward obtaining it." In accordance with this, Thoreau's philosophy, the American youth are making known their convictions concerning our government and other issues, by means of mass demonstrations.

The recent demonstrations in Northampton and the participation of University students in the march on Washington has made apparent the need for clear-cut University policy concerning demonstrations on campus. The Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Picketing has attempted to meet this need by proposing resolutions dealing with picketing and other forms of demonstration on the University campus.

The problem facing the Committee was a two-fold one. First, of protecting the right of any member of the University to "attempt to communicate ideas to his fellows by any means he selects." The second aspect of the problem was to propose resolutions which would prevent the interference with the activity of the University by demonstrators.

Although the student must be free to express his ideas, he must also realize his responsibility to allow the University to fullfill its role as a source from whence ideas can flow. With this in mind the proposals of the Picketing Committee should be reviewed, so that the University policy on demonstrations may "protect and promote an environment within which there may be a spirit of free inquiry and free exchange of ideas."

Johnson's Challenger

The announcement on November 31 by Sen. Eugene McCarthy (D-Minn.) that he will enter several presidential primaries against President Johnson represents the only hope that the Vietnam War can be ended through traditional political means. McCarthy has become increasingly dissatisfied with American policy in Southeast Asia and his decision to run against the leader of his own party must be regarded as an extraordinary act of political courage.

He is quite aware that he has virtually no chance of being nominated for the presidency. He also knows that the re-election of Lyndon Johnson will ensure not only the continuation of the war, but also McCarthy's own political death.

Yet, there is reason to hope that the McCarthy challenge will result in a change of policy in Vietnam. McCarthy will run in the Democratic primaries of Wisconsin, Oregon, California, Nebraska and possibly New Hampshire. Each of the first four states has a long, if sometimes dormant, tradition of progressivism and they are states in which McCarthy is particularly well-known. A protege of Hubert Humphrey, McCarthy helped to form the Democratic-Farmer-Labor coalition in Minnesota in the 1940's. He thus has a strong appeal to both Mid-West farmers and the liberal wing of the Democratic Party.

Further, if he enters the Massachusetts primary, his Irish Catholicism should help him. Perhaps his most important asset in the primaries will be the substantial sum of money he will receive. The New York Times (Dec. 1) reports that McCarthy has already received pledges of financial support amounting to $2,000,000. This is twice the sum spent by John F. Kennedy in the 1960 primaries.

At this point, it seems quite doubtful that McCarthy could win the nomination himself, even if he can defeat Johnson in some of the primaries. Thus, the chief hope is that either primary victories by McCarthy will encourage Robert Kennedy to enter the race, or that a peace plank will be adopted as part of the platform of the Democratic Convention. While the chances of either happening are at best slim, it is also quite clear that decisive defeats for McCarthy would encourage the President to escalate the war even further. Thus, it becomes increasingly necessary for McCarthy to perform well in the primaries.

In his statement of November 30, McCarthy said that one of the factors behind his decision to run was "the growing sense of alienation from politics which I think is currently reflected in a tendency to withdraw from political action . . ., (and) to become cynical." For those of us in the academic community—students and professors — McCarthy's words have great relevance. If Senator McCarthy enters the Massachusetts primary, those who now complain so bitterly about the present political situation will be offered a clear challenge to do something to change it.

At the University, a group has already been formed to offer Senator McCarthy assistance in this state. This group will include students and professors whose common goal is to end the insanity of American involvement in Vietnam. If we are truly committed to ending the war, we can find no more effective means than to participate in this University effort.

Facts On Drugs

The following facts were gathered by Wayne Soini, News Staff, from Dr. Robert W. Gage, Director of University Health Services.

Dr. Gage analogized marijuana with alcohol, saying that alcohol ranges in strength from beer to 180 proof liquor. Marijuana, while similarily ranging in strength, has no indicative characteristic of strength. You cannot tell by color or taste whether you are taking "beer" marijuana, or '180 proof" marijuana.

The Infirmary made a discovery of sorts in the affects of marijuana. Four people have come to them stating that they had "return trips" under the affect of marijuana. That is, they experienced a second period of hallucinations several days after having taken the marijuana. The conclusion, that marijuana second trips are possible, is doubt. As Dr. Gage explains it, "The four may have been particularly susceptible to marijuana, they may have gotten "180 proof" marijuana, or they may have gotten marijuana laced with LSD." Even with a so-called harmless drug such as marijuana you are playing a game of drug roulette.

Issues in Education—4

Dangerous Duty of Educa

(The following is the fourth in a series of articles about philosophy, problems, and possibilities of education. The intent is to begin to focus the dialogue about education in a way such that all people committed to education can contribute. We must be continually trying to redefine education in terms of the changing world and needs of the people. If you are at all concerned about education you will want to participate in the dialogue. —Ed.)

The dangerous and exposed position of the university is to stand on the front of history creating the local and the global community. Martin Luther King explained Mrs. Rosa Parks' initiation of bus integration by saying she had caught the zeitgeist—the world spirit. She went to jail for defending her idea. The idea behind the university demands a no less dangerous stance. That great idea in history, the one of which Alfred North Whitehead writes, is the idea of universal human rights.

In this idea the emphasis is on freedom. It is the growing sense that dignity and opportunity to develop one's nature to good ends are owed to every man. But there is another idea now working in history. Or perhaps it is a new emphasis, a new accent, upon the old idea. This is the idea of universal human responsibility.

The dangerous task of the university is two-fold. It is the developing of a world community and the developin, of the idea of universal common responsibility.

Henry Steele Commanger, historian at Amherst College, has stated clearly that the social responsibility of the university is to the world. It is no longer to the Board of Selectmen of Amherst, The legislators in the General Court, to the Congress of the United States, but to the world community, of which the United Nations is one weak, but struggling, progenitor. Marshall McLuhan said it this way: "Ours is a brand new world of allatoneness. 'Time' has ceased, 'Space' has vanished. We now live in a global village."

Let us say it straight. What is this dangerous stance to us at a university? We can begin with the issues of national and world social change. This nation and the world community have experienced rebellions in their cities and the quiet death of the poor in its rural towns. Nat Turner, H. Rap Brown in America, Albert Lithuli in South Africa and Ghandi in India have given the word. Social change will occur. It could be haphazard and random. But there is every possibility for meaningful change if those with the ability take action. The university has such ability. And it is this authors contention that responsibility of the university is to be on the edge of social change, pushing forward.

There is no such thing as a legitimate ivory tower, or isolated university community. I say that the isolated, and uninvolved university is not a university. But it is safe and secure.

Herein lies the tenuousness and extreme danger to the university in its fulfilling the duty of education. If a university stands for social change, it is in trouble, whether with the town of Amherst, the state of Massachusetts, or the funding agencies of the Federal Government. There is every cause for fear; for, if the university dares to act for universal rights and responsibility, it will raise the wrath of parents, legislators, businessmen, and many other citizens of a country, especially our own.

The War on Poverty with such social programs as Upward Bound, the Vietnamese question with its implications of military training, conscription, and research for military purposes, and all the questions of racism in the American Way of Life requires the university to respond. To do so is dangerous to the university, to refrain is dangerous to the nation, and more importantly, to the world.

The beginnings of the university's efforts towards univ human rights and commo sponsibility are of necessity campus, or in its town or The university must take a cal educational look at itse Paul Goodman has said, "... though they have no corn moral virtues, students a responsibly as adults even culty, when given mean responsibilities . . . Student culty, and administrators short tenures at colleges and versities (about four years) is time that these groups of ple recognized their commo alities, rights and, espec their common responsibility

To concretize this discussi social responsibility, let us mine some of the issues f the University of Massachus One of the most frightening disheartening is the proble students exerting power other students. The most re case of this was the passage $30,000 budget for the s class graduation week at G singer's in New York. The quirement of $12.00 to be by all seniors whether or they will attend the week cates a serious governmenta civil liberties problem. The cedures for passing this bu also require class scrutiny.

Another issue is the rela ship of students to faculty, administrators. The faculty dent contact on counseling meager as it was, has now decreased so that it is not essary to have any such co on counseling day. It is not that such contact is desire students or faculty. If so, sorely lacking. If not, the ta

Campus Comment

Support Dick Wood

To the editor:

The very notion of being a public figure brings with it the surety of public criticism just as certainly as day follows night. Those of us who hold elective offices on this campus have conditioned ourselves to this reality. We are aware that we are constantly monitored by thousands of students, faculty, and administrators.

When we are criticized justly we respect that criticism. But, when that criticism is calculated and clandestine it should be exposed. This, I feel, is largely the case with regard to President Wood and his plans for Senior Week 1968.

Let me affirm that the matter of the budget is, indeed, one for the seniors themselves to decide. But, in watching the deliberate attempts to dis-credit the person of President Wood, I can no longer remain silent.

Dick and I have been close friends ever since he and I were elected to office in 1965. I have watched his progress with interest from his shaky beginning to his solid and positive shaping of the class of 1968. He has confided to me his secret thoughts and desires for both himself and his class. He is one of the most honest, genuine, and concerned persons that I have ever met.

It is upsetting to think that he and all he stands for might be lost now amidst the ostensible commotion over his budget. It is my hope that by exposing this plot to the university community that this might not happen.

Dick knew some months ago that he would have his "day in the Collegian", just as surely as I know now that my writing this letter will hasten mine. Dick, however, thought at that time that the issue would indeed be issues, not personalities. He knew that he could defend his program. But, he can no longer speak on the issues and guard his back at the same time.

What he needs most now is the support of his classmates, those persons for whom he has worked so diligently in the past. It is not so much necessary that the seniors rally in support of the budget as it is essential that they rally behind the person.

It should be known that there is at present no significant number of persons opposed to President Wood. But, the few who are have hold of many strings. And when they all pull together they have the illusion of being as strong as a rope. There is no rope —only a collection of jealous persons out to knock off the top man.

Seniors, consider the situation carefully. Be aware of what is happening. Decide upon the budget; but, either way—support the man.

Hail the Latin

To the editor:

Co-eds, come and get it, the best fraternity men, fraternity houses and fraternity parties have to offer.

Take a typical fraternity party on the Saturday night before Thanksgiving vacation. R.L., a typical brother, meets a freshman co-ed at the Union dance and asks her to his frat party, keeping secret that it's a pajama party, knowing that when she gets there she'll be surprised and impressed. As soon as she arrives two things happen; her coat is taken and put away and she is told that if for any reason she might not want to be molested all she has to do is say "DA, DA, DA". These are magic words and will keep her from all harm.

Then our loving brother offers her a sweet, fruity drink, feeling sure that she'll feel much better about the party after it 'takes effect'. Our hero also is feeling better and better. Deciding that his date is bored, R. and his brothers try to entertain her with songs, games and dance. Seeing that she's enjoying the show (they tell this because when they touch her she jumps and because she's pleading for her coat), and to maintain her interest, the brothers try to get her physically involved in it at which point she starts babbling "DA, DA, DA".

The brothers persist but all they manage to do is drive her upstairs. The show upstairs is so much better. It's darker and more cozy but she's lost her date.

That's all right though because in his place are at least eight friendly brothers; and she knows they're friendly because they shout obscenities in her ear, try to drag her into their rooms, try to take her clothes and constantly wrestle with her when she tries to get away. But seeing that she's all tired out from screaming and her makeup is smeared from crying, a man gets her coat and escorts her outside. After all, it's not their fault that she's hysterical.

Sen. Marcus Speaks

To the editor:

The reconsideration motion on the part of the Student Senate leadership against the Senior Class Budget is another attempt to force the classes out of student government. The Senate-dominated Constitutional Convention is the body which insures that funds are appropriated in a correct manner; that is, that all monies are catagorized correctly and that the appropriation can be reasonably justified.

However, each year the Senate leadership has tried to go further into the planning realm. Fortunately for the student body, the rank and file of the Student Senate rejected this year's attempt by passing the Senior Class Budget.

Perhaps President Dick Wood was negligent in not calling a class meeting to determine the opinions of his class. When was the last time that the Student Senate held an open hearing to determine student opinions on the quarter of a million dollar Student Activities Tax Appropriation? Senate leaders contend that the Senior Class would never approve the budget even though the Exec Council did. I contend that the student body would never approve of the Student Activities Tax either.

It is outrageous that the Student Senate asks for powers that it refuses to grant to an equally constituted branch of student government — a branch which represents a better cross-section of student opinion than does the Senate.

Academic Reform—3 Philip Lerner

At Amherst

Frank Greve, assistant to the Dean of Admissions, Amherst College, was a student at Amherst preceeding curriculum and course changes and following these changes. The essence of my conversation with him seemed to reiterate those feelings for change I found at Smith College.

Question: What is your academic system at Amherst?

Answer: Requirements at Amherst are rather liberal. We are required to take eight to ten courses in our major field, but no more than 17 of the total of 32 courses students take in four years here are in any way stipulated. But we also found it necessary to reform our course load as well.

Question: In what way?

Answer: When I first went to Amherst, I was taking five or six courses per semester. And, as you know, each course was built around a certain area of information. In such a well-divided life (six courses), devotion to one means sacrifice to another. In the reform move, it was thought that it would be easier to keep track of 4 strands rather than 5 or 6. It was a move away from quantity in the interest of increased intensity and hopefully quality. Such a heavy, strict course load simply led to a mechanical incoherence. (Like juggling five balls at the same time.) With so many courses spinning around in your mind, it is tougher to concentrate and more difficult to find depth.

Question: Can a boy take a 5th course at Amherst if he wants?

Answer: It is very possible to take a 5th course if he gets the dean's permission. An extra course at Amherst, called a half-course, may be taken without permission. The meeting hours are easier and it counts for two credits instead of the usual four.

Actually, all I can say, with my past experience at Amherst, is that the present system (the reformed system) seems to give to you, the student, "A better sense of where you are at."
(Fourth in this series will be a comparison of the requirements of Smith, Amherst, UMass-Boston and UMass-Amherst. The differences are really amazing.)

Burning Need

To the editor:

There has been much discussion recently concerning the effectiveness of the Amherst Fire Department. The Amherst Fire Chief says his department is seriously under-strength.

The time lag between when the alarm was sounded recently and when the first truck cleared the Fire Station was an inexcusable five minutes and 23 seconds.

What's up there, old fire chief, do we have to send you to Anh Ké to show you how men can clear a barracks in 45 seconds?

There will be a special election to fill 17 vacant Senate seats on Thursday, Dec. 7.

There is one seat vacant in each of the following: J. Adams Lower, J.Q. Adams Middle, Chadbourne, Coolidge Lower, Dickinson, Hamlin, Hills South, and Johnson. There are also two seats open for the fraternities and seven for the commuters.

On Dec. 7, dormitory residents will vote from 6 to 9 p.m. in the dorms; the commuters and fraternities will vote in the Union from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

House Passes SMTI Land Bill

BOSTON (AP) — A bill to allow Southeastern Massachusetts Technological Institute to buy land in Westport for an oceanographic study station was enacted by the House Monday and sent to the Senate for final action.

The bill was filed because the original legislation that created the school at Dartmouth limited it to the 700 acre campus set aside for it.

Ten Students Solve "Whatsit"

Walter Bickford of 130 Amity Street was drawn the winner in last week's Whats it? contest from the ten correct answers received.

Bickford described the photo subject as "a Phunt-type gaseous absorption shell."

Among the incorrect guesses received were:

- "A ready-made popcorn popper with a tin foil top. The top or middle of the tin foil has a hole in it to let the steam through. When heated, the tin foil expands to a semi-spherical shape, and the picture is taken from the inside of the tin foil after it has expanded, looking through the hole. Through the hole is shown a young man possibly standing over a stove using one of the popcorn containers."
- "View of the top of a plastic umbrella."
- "Ballpoint pen tip."

By PHILIP E. RYNES

Housed in the new Astrophysics building, just east of the Computing Center, is a huge steel absorption cell. Dr. William T. Plummer and his three graduate student assistants, D. Holmes, P. Rynes and E. Walter, are attempting to simulate the scattering of the sun's light by the dense clouds in the atmosphere of Venus.

The absorption cell is three feet in diameter and one hundred feet in length. A cloud formed by blowing steam onto two hundred pounds of dry ice will fill the tube. The density of the cloud can be altered and the pressure may be adjusted, if necessary, from 1/10 to 15 atmospheres.

Six "sun gun" movie lights, 600 watts each, will shine into one end of the tube. The cell is lined with fourteen 75-foot rolls of aluminum foil to reflect the light hitting the walls back into the cloud. Light reflected by the cloud back toward the front end of the tube will be collected by a spectrometer and electronically analyzed.

The results will be compared with the infrared reflection spectrum of Venus as measured by Professor William Plummer and Professor John Strong, by means of an unmanned balloon flight into the stratosphere in 1964. Their measurements showed that Venus clouds exhibit the same spectrum as ordinary ice clouds. The new experiments are designed to learn more about Venus clouds by a more detailed comparison.

Heart Transplant Termed Successful

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A South African hospital claimed Sunday the world's first successful human heart transplant. Surgeons removed the heart of a 25 year old woman who died after an automobile crash and placed it in the chest of a dying 55-year-old man.

When the transplanted heart was in place, it was started beating by an electric shock. Dr. Jan H. Louw, the hospital's chief surgeon, said: "It was like turning the ignition switch of a car."

Groote Schuur Hospital said the man was in satisfactory condition late Sunday but that the next few days would be critical.

Doctors around the world hailed the transplant achievement but said the crucial question would be whether the man's body would accept the alien heart.

The heart was taken from the body of Denise Ann Darvall, 25, an accounting machine operator at a bank, and transferred to Louis Washkansky, a businessman, the hospital said.

Washkansky was reported fully conscious and in very satisfactory condition after the five-hour operation that ended at 6 a.m. The announcement said his blood pressure was normal by Sunday afternoon.

The operation involved putting both Washkansky and the body of Miss Darvall on heart-lung machines and then removing her heart and keeping it beating with a pump, the hospital said. Washkansky's heart then was removed and the girl's heart was put into place and activated by an electric shock, it added.

The hospital said the operation "was his only chance."

'Collegian' Establishes New Tutorial System

by GERALD W. VIGEANT

"Having fun while learning" might well be the motto of the new tutoring program for members of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Established six weeks ago at the request of Chester Weinerman, editor-in-chief, the training program features as professional journalist-consultants Sidney McKeen, state editor of the Worcester Gazette and Telegram, Alvin F. Oickle, an editor of the Greenfield Recorder, and Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of journalistic studies at UMass.

Dr. Politella explained that the three men provided on-the-job training services during the five nights of publication. "Mr. McKeen has been hired to sit on the copy desk on Sunday nights," he said, "and Mr. Oickle and I have volunteered for the other four nights."

Dr. Politella stressed that the consultants are in no way censors. "We are strictly neutral," he said, "and we have nothing to do with making decisions about content. The students are free to take or reject our advice."

Although he feels that the end product will inevitably be improved because of the tutorial services, Dr. Politella cautioned that the consultants must in no way be credited for improvement or condemned for errors. "On many occasions the next day's paper has surprised even us, though we were on duty the night before," he said.

Dr. Politella feels that the function of the consultants is to provide on-the-job how-to-do-it training. "We function as slot men," he said. "We began by showing each student day editor how he should function, and now we work with the student staff, the headline writers, the copy editors, the make-up editors."

The ultimate mission of the consultants, Dr. Politella said, is to make up for the lack of such practical training in the classroom. He stressed the educational value of the tutorial services. "This training gives students the authoritative knowledge they need to make responsible decisions," he said.

Dr. Politella believes that the Daily Collegian training program is unique. "I don't know of any other college with a program such as ours," he said. "Other college publications have professional journalists who act essentially as publishers, but I don't know of any that has a tutoring service such as ours."

Dr. Politella feels that the 30 hours each week that the professional journalists put in has been well worthwhile. "We think that the system has worked out quite well," he said. "I think that the students feel that the program is worthwhile. Our tutoring has psychological advantages for the students. Just the fact that we are available to answer questions that might come up makes the students feel more secure," he said.

"And the authoritative knowledge gained by the students will undoubtedly result in an improved newspaper."

Area Colleges Resolve Meal Conflicts

The Five College Coordinator, Mr. North Burn, announced today that Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges and UMass have agreed to a reciprocal meal-time arrangement for interchange students.

Previously, students of one institution attending courses at another have sometimes found it impossible to return to their home institution in time for a scheduled meal. Under the new meal-time arrangement, this problem would be eliminated.

This meal-time conflict was brought to the attention of Mr. Burn and the four institutions by the Four College Student Coordinating Board.

Under the reciprocal agreement, any interchange student experiencing such a conflict may contact his Registrar to obtain authority to take the meal at the host institution. If, in the opinion of the Registrar, authorization is justified, the student's yellow Four College identification card will be stamped accordingly.

Although the new meal arrangement will probably not take effect until the beginning of next semester since there are so few instructional days left in the present semester, any student who wishes may approach his Registrar on this matter now.

Servicemen Given Holiday Phone Privileges

W1PUO, the amateur radio station on campus, is offering a Holiday Service to those families with servicemen overseas. The station will attempt to make it possible for telephone contact to be established. This will be done through an intermediate Ham station in the following areas: most of Latin America, Canada, Israel, Liberia, Greenland, Japan, all U.S. bases and possessions in the Caribbean, and any U.S. vessels in U. S. or international waters. These areas are open to such contact because of Third Party agreements.

Students on campus who wish to use the services of W1PUO are to go to the RSO office and fill out the form, dropping it in Box 306. Others can call WMUA at 545-2425 and relay the information.

This service is only open to those with an immediate family member in the armed forces. It will begin immediately and continue until the Christmas vacation.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bert Lahr, Broadway's versatile clown and Hollywood's fidgety, unforgettable Cowardly Lion in "The Wizard of Oz," died Monday at the age of 72.

He was also the entrancing potato chip huckster, whose television commercial was intended to demonstrate that nobody could "eat just one."

The old trouper, master of the idiotic grimace and the deep vocal inanity, was at work on a new movie, "The Night They Raided Minsky's" when he became ill with a back ailment Nov. 21.

Pneumonia set in and a subsequent massive internal hemorrhage took his life at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

LONDON (AP) — British tennis officials showed the first signs Monday of wavering on their revolutionary plan to stage an open Wimbledon tournament. J. Eaton Griffith, British delegate to the Executive Committee of the International Lawn Tennis Federation ILTF, admitted it might be a good idea to postpone open tennis for at least a year.

Britain's bold position was shaken by failure of the other two big tennis playing nations, the United States and Australia, to back up the move.

TOKYO (AP) — People's Daily, Communist party organ of China, claimed Sunday Chairman Mao Tse-tung's supporters have gained firm control of Tientsin, an important industrial center in north China.

The People's Daily article, broadcast by the New China News Agency, said: "The handful of party persons in authority taking capitalist road in Tientsin have collapsed." This was a reference to supporters of President Liu Shao-chi, Mao's arch rival.

With a shroud of mystery surrounding the status of URI forward Tom Hoyle, the UMass basketball team journeys to Kingston, R.I. tonight for a big game against preseason Yankee Conference favorite Rhode Island. WMUA (91.1 FM) will broadcast the game starting at 7:50.

Rhody was picked to win the title primarily because of the return of the "Big Three," Art Stephenson, Larry Johnson and Hoyle, all of whom were outstanding for the Rams last year.

Now, for some unexplained reason, Hoyle is not playing. Rhode Island spokesmen are keeping silent about it, and URI publicists evasively list the 6'5 junior absent because of "personal problems at home." No matter what the reason is, his absence is bound to hurt the Rams.

Although the game is early in the season, it could have a great bearing on the outcome of the Yankee Conference race. UMass served notice that it is a contender by beating New Hampshire Saturday. This will be the first conference game for the Rams, who beat St. Anselm's 83-63, in their opener.

Despite the loss of Hoyle, Rhode Island must still be considered the favorite in the conference on the strength of its co-captains, Art Stephenson and Larry Johnson.

Stephenson is a 6'5 senior who controls the rebounding action like Anderson's towing controls UMass parking. He was the team's leader in both scoring and rebounding last year. Stephenson likes to take turn-around jumpers from ten feet, and if he misses he is often under the boards to tap in the rebound. Since the bulk of Rhody's rebounding will depend on him, UMass will have to key on Stephenson tonight.

Johnson is a 6'2 guard from Newark, N.J. who averaged 17.1 last year. He does most of the outside shooting and when he gets hot, he is hard to stop. He is also very fast and moves well on the fast break.

One of the forward spots is occupied by 6'5 sophomore John Fultz from Natick. The best performer on last year's URI freshman team, Fultz is a good outside shooter and a fairly good rebounder.

The forward spot vacated by Hoyle is undecided. Coach Ernie Calverly will probably go with either Joe Zaranka, a 6'3 junior who started at guard last year, or Stan Moody, a 6'5 junior who did not play during his first two years at Rhode Island.

Helping Johnson out in the backcourt will be Mike Schanne, a 5'11 transfer from Ferrum (W. Va.) Junior College where he was named to the second team junior college All-American squad. Schanne will do most of the ball-handling. However, junior Leon Mintschenko looked good against St. Anselm's and may see a lot of action at guard.

One of Rhody's main strengths is the fast break. The Rams have excellent team speed. On defense, URI uses an aggressive man-to-man. They have excellent depth, with a fine bench. However, most of the scoring will be done by Stephenson and Johnson, and if the Redmen can contain them tonight, then it could be a fine game.

Last year UMass beat Rhode Island in the Cage but was bombed by the Rams at Keaney Gymnasium later on in the season. Tonight's game will go a long way to deciding the title. If the Redmen can win, they will be in excellent position since the Rams have to play at Amherst in February.

Deadline for Sports Copy 6 p.m.

Outlook Good for Hockey Fans

Former UM puck star Ed Polchlopek, now coach of the frosh, calls his charges "one of the best frosh teams ever at UM." They open against Amherst Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Orr Rink.

Polchlopek said his first line would consist of Paul Riley of Gloucester at center and Tom Peters of Arlington and Bill Weigle of Great Barrington at the wings. On defense will be Brian Corkery of Arlington and Mike Murray of Winchester, with Larry Walsh of Brockton in the goal.

Mike Fallon, a high school All-American center from Springfield leads the second line, which has Ked Reddick of Norwood and Pete Kawie of W. Springfield at the wings. A third line includes Woody Cook of Gloucester, Ed Zobloski of Brockton and Jim Garvin of Boston. Other defensemen are Dave White of E. Longmeadow, Dale Bacausas of Marlboro, Jim Griffin, Gerald Burke of Boston and Tom Kane of Springfield. Charlie Boland of Malden is the back-up goalie.

Puckmen Seek 2nd Win

Coach John Caniff's UMass hockey team will attempt to spoil Amherst's opening game Wednesday night when they take on the Lord Jeffs at Orr Rink at 7. They have already ruined one team's opener by trouncing MIT Saturday night 15-0 and hope to come up with the same kind of performance against the Jeffs.

Amherst hockey coach Ben McCabe will ice a young squad consisting of 11 sophomores, six juniors and five seniors. McCabe will count heavily on Co-captains Jeff Goff and John Potter to provide the scoring punch.

His biggest problem will be on defense. McCabe felt that if some of his younger defensemen came through for him and provided protection for goalie Terry O'Malley his team would better last year's record of 6-12.

O'Malley and the defense should get a stiff test from the high-scoring UMass offense. In their first two games, the Redmen have produced 20 goals.

Jim O'Brien heads the goal scoring list with 5 followed closely by Jeff Sanborn with four goals. The Sanborn-Robinson-Johnson line has produced the most goals with eight.

Passing was the key to the UMass' victory over MIT. The Redmen passing was much sharper than in their opening game loss to Vermont.

Wrestlers Face Coast Guard

By JOE DUFFY
Staff Reporter

The varsity and frosh wrestlers entertain the U.S. Coast Guard Academy tonight in Boyden Auxiliary Gym. The freshmen take to the mats at 6 p.m., while varsity action is slated for 8 p.m.

The varsity grapplers, a predominantly underclassman unit, will be making their home debut. Led by junior Captain Gene Paltrineri, this year's squad is looking forward to a fruitful season after their fine showing in Brockport, N. Y.

Probable starting lineup for the Redmen: junior Dave Wade (115 lbs.), soph Bill Goodwin (123), soph Paul Pearl (130), Paltrineri (137), soph Mike McKenna (145), soph Brian Urquhart (152), senior Fred Fitzpatrick (160), senior Bob Yurkus (167), senior Ernie Smith (177), soph Dick Gnatek or soph Bruce Fulton (191), and soph Glenn Cummins (unlimited).

The little Redmen host the Coast Guard freshmen in the first of their 12 dual meets of the upcoming season. This year's squad appears to be loaded with talent, including a former New England champ and a New Jersey titleist in their respective weight divisions. Tom Andrews of Springfield was last year's N.E. champ in the 167-lb. class. Bob Willman of New Jersey was top man in the 177-lb. category in his state.

Starting lineups for tonight: Nick DiDominico (115), Dwight Dawser (123), Phil Davis (130), Howie Kaplin (137), Bob Freeman (145), Mike Bravner (152), Tom Young (160), Andrews (167), Willman (177), George Zguris or Harry Berejik (191), and Scott Berry (unlimited).

Landry Tops in New England; Leaman Likes Reserve Power

By TOM FITZGERALD
Sports Editor

Greg Landry adds one more trophy to his growing collection Dec. 13 when he is presented with the Bulger Lowe Award as New England's outstanding player this season. The Gridiron Club of Boston will honor him at a dinner in Cambridge, it was announced.

With the 88-67 win in Saturday's opener against New Hampshire, Coach Leaman was a Smilin' Jack this weekend. Bill Tindall, who scored 27 points and bagged 20 rebounds, played his best game ever at the Cage, according to Leaman. "He's usually a lot better on the road," the coach said.

Meanwhile, Pete Gayeska, the 6'9 center, played his best game ever for UMass, home or away, with 15 points and 14 rebounds. Leaman was particularly pleased with the performance of the hard-working junior, who only started playing the game as a junior in high school and has needed patient guidance to become a starter at UMass.

Leaman extolled the virtues of ball-hawking guard Joe DiSarcina, who chipped in 20 points and eight assists. The coach liked the strength of his bench. "We had nine good men on the court," he said.

Stylish junior Ron Nowakowski had 10 points and five rebounds in his seven minutes of play, and lefty soph Ray Ellerbrook looked like the much needed outside threat with a couple of lengthy bombs.

Leaman said the only line-up change for tonight's game at Rhode Island may be at forward. Rhody will be without two players who were supposed to back this year. Dick Coleman, a 6'7 soph, flunked out, and Tom Hoyle, a 6'5 junior, is mysteriously absent from the team.

Redmen Roundup

Hockey coach John Canniff's first win at UMass, a 15-0 burial of M.I.T., was "no indication of things to come," he said. "As many goals as we scored, we made too many mistakes." He was pleased with the performance of the second line of Don Robinson, Jeff Sanborn and Tom Johnson, who combined for 7 goals.

"We would have had to be at our very best," said Coach Erik Kjeldsen, whose gymnastics team lost a heart-breaker to Southern Connecticut, 174-168. "But it's tough to be at your best in your first meet." He liked the performances of Dick Del Gallo on the rings, Joe Reed on the long-horse vault, floor exercise and parallel bars, Bob Leclair on the side-horse, Joe Godwin in the floor exercise and Steve Brown on the parallel bars.

Southern Connecticut was lead by Joe Amerine, a member of the pre-Olympics team this fall, "He's had five years of national-level competition behind him," said Kjeldsen. Amerine took first place in the floor exercise, side horse, rings, parallels and horizontal bar.

Although the swimming team edged Tufts, 54-41, Coach Joe Rogers acknowledged, "We were lucky." Rogers should know. He's been the UMass swim coach for 36 years. If the Jumbos had used a different swimmer in the 400-yard medley relay, he said, "they would have won the meet."

Rogers praised the showings of Dave Larsen and Rick D'Andrea, who placed one-two in the diving; Captain Bob Asquith in the 200-yard individual medley and 200-yard backstroke; Mark Miller, in the 200-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle; Flip Morton in the 50-yard freestyle, Al Northup in the 200-yard breaststroke and Dick Donoghue in the 200-yard butterfly.

Coach Homer Barr considered his wrestling team's trip to the Interstate Quadrangular Meet in Brockport, N.Y., profitable, although the Redmen finished fourth. "They had great apprehensions about going," he said, "but I think they came away with the feeling that they had done well against the top-notch competition."

Two reportedly "loaded" frosh teams, hockey and wrestling, open their seasons this week. The freshman gymnastics team, under Coach Julius Gundersheim, triumphed over the Southern Connecticut frosh Saturday, 129.5-101.9. Norm Vexler of UMass took first in 4 events and scored a total of 42 points in 6 events.

Other UMass points were recorded by Gene Palmer and Norm Silver (first and second in the floor exercise), Rick Riley and Tim Chase (second and third in the sidehorse), Steve Margil and Ed Jones (second and third in the rings), Make Peleguin and Jones (second and third in the parallel bars) and Palmer (second in the high bar).

The frosh basketball game with the Westfield State College junior varsity at Westfield, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed to tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

Details of Senior Week Explained, Pros, Cons Discussed at Bowker

By JUDY LEONARD
News Day Editor

The Senior Class presented and defended its plans for Senior Week at an open meeting, yesterday morning attended by approximately 200 students. Many of the students who stood to speak opposed the Senior Week plan for a weekend at Grossinger's resort in New York, to be partially subsidized by $30,000 student tax levied on seniors.

Brad Johnson, Chairman of the Budget Committee of the Constitutional Convention, presided over the meeting on the Senior Week Budget plans in Bowker. Johnson gave a brief history of the controversial budget issue up to its acceptance by the Senate last week. He emphasized that the meeting was concerned only with the Senior Week budget as the Executive Council presented it.

Johnson yielded the floor to Pres. Dick Wood who stated, "There has been a great deal of confusion, doubt and ambiguity about the budget." He expressed the hope that most of his audience had not already made up their minds concerning the issue but would wait until the facts had been presented in detail.

WOOD

Henry Barr, chairman of the '68 Senior Week, then attempted to explain the Exec Council's methods of research into the available accommodations for Senior Week in answer to a question from the floor. He stated that of the 10 resorts investigated only Grossinger's could handle more than 2,000 people.

SILVERMAN

Barr explained, "It wasn't possible for all to attend the '67 Senior Week because of the lack of accommodations. At Grossinger's all could attend." He further stated that if, "we don't go to Grossinger's, we don't have a Senior Week." This view was later upheld by Wood.

Another question from the floor concerned the justification of taxing those who possibly couldn't afford it for the benefit of those few who would actually attend Senior Week. This concern for justification of the tax was the overriding note of the opinions expressed during the meeting.

Barr explained that the rationale behind the tax for all is that this area is too small to accommodate a Senior Week for a class this size. Tradition was also given as a basis for the overall tax. An opinion was expressed that it should be this tradition that should be justified rather than the tax of the Seniors who don't attend the Senior Week. This drew applause from the floor.

Wood stated, "We aren't trying to rob from the rich to give to the poor. We have provided what we feel is the most economical, productive and financially responsible budget for Senior Week. If the majority want a Senior Week then there is nothing wrong with the subsidy."

Paul Silverman, Student Senate Treasurer, questioned the accommodations available at the New York resort. Silverman said that there are no figures available indicating what facilities, and at what rate, would be available if more than

Two Motions Passed

'68 Exec Council Reviews Problem

The 1968 Executive Council met at Alpha Chi Omega Sorority last night to discuss the problems that are confronting their proposed Senior Week budget, which is being presented to the Constitutional Convention tonight for reconsideration.

Considerable discussion took place concerning the legality of the increased Senior tax and the possible alternatives to the proposed plan. A number of the Council members said that their questioning of seniors had resulted in the impression that the opposition was to the suggested subsidy and not to the idea of Senior Week.

Wood stated that "we're arguing the morality of taxation." He felt that there are too many talking about something they knew nothing about. He said that what the executive council decided would be representational of the class.

Debate over the equity in taxing all, a point raised in the morning meeting, resulted in the motioning of a two-program plan for the week. A Council member sponsored the idea that the estimated 60% who would go to Grossinger's could, while the other 40%

'Suspend Gvt. Recruiting' --Senate Matters Comm.

By JOHN WOJNAS
Staff Reporter

The Student Matters Committee of the Senate Tuesday night unanimously approved a resolution to suspend federal recruiting by agencies of the Executive branch of the government.

The resolution, which will be presented to the Student Senate on Dec. 13 calls for "the suspension of any recruiting agency of the federal government on campus until General Hershey's suggestion to draft boards on reclassification of objectionable dissenters be officially rescinded."

The open meeting, held in Hasbrouck 20, also discussed the Student Matters Committee's proposed amendments to the Picketing Code of the Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Picketing adopted unanimously Nov. 13.

A final draft will be issued today, the committee said.

Concerning the resolution of suspension of government recruiting on campus, the "Senate makes no comment on the morality of the military, but only on its belief in the civil rights of demonstrators." Much debate arose over which agencies would be suspended from campus.

Initially, the proposed resolution called only for suspension of Armed Service and CIA recruiting. After a heated debate, it was decided that, since not only is Hershey responsible to the Chief Executive but the Chief Executive has a responsibility to General Hershey. All recruiting agencies of the federal government should be allowed to recruit on campus.

The hour discussion on picketing centered on defining the context "interfering with the normal conduct" of University affairs as to grossly effect the day to day affairs of the community."

The proposed amendments offer a complete "Bill of Rights" to the protestor, as one member of the committee stated. The proposed changes to the Picket-Code attempts to safeguard the rights of protestors and to insure that all steps be taken to avoid violence and any forms of "bodily harm".

The Committee pointed out that the purpose of this open meeting was to "gauge opinion on picketing" at UMass. It also gave the students a voice in the policy formation of picketing and demonstrating on the campus.

Commuter Wilson Favors "Optional Participation"

By PAT FRANCIS
Staff Reporter

A new concept has been added to student government at the University. Ray Wilson is running for the vacant seat for commuters and married students in the Student Senate on a platform advocating optional participation of these students in the student tax and in the ensuing benefits.

Said Wilson, "A vote for me is a vote for optional participation (or non-participation) in the student tax." He said that it is his belief that some commuters and the great majority of married students have no interest in student government. He attributes this not to apathy but to the fact that they live off campus and their interest lies in their families and homes. They show their disinterest by not participating.

"However," Wilson emphasized, "I don't want anyone just to be checking off a name. That's why I'm running strictly on a write-in basis. That way, people who feel as I do will show their feelings by writing in a name."

Wilson feels that he is qualified to serve in the Senate. He is a past senator (while living on campus) and was a member of the Senate Executive Committee.

He also does intend to serve, if elected: "I will represent my constituents. At every meeting of the Senate I intend to make sure it's known that there are people who elected me, who want out of all this business that doesn't really concern them anyhow.

Wilson only decided to run this week, which is part of the reason that his name is to be written in. "I decided that it was time to make it known that students living off campus are a completely separate entity and not concerned with the activities that student government represents."

Wilson would like to see it left up to the individual about whether or not they are taxed, including both senate and class taxes. He also said that he has been talking to a "responsible voice in the Administration" who will be speaking directly to the Trustees to inform them that there is a possible inequity in the representation of commuters and married students in the Student Tax.

Fox Reports Progress On Animal Science Center

By RICHARD LANE
Staff Reporter

Dr. Thomas Fox, head of the Department of Veterinary and Animal Science at the University of Massachusetts, this week announced progress toward Animal Research Center, located on UMass property at South Deerfield.

Fox, who is in charge of coordinating the project from an academic point of view, continued, "The sooner we have it the better we can conduct our work."

He stated that the project is to be oriented toward a dual purpose of instruction and research for graduate, undergraduate and Stockbridge students. Specific areas of study would include such areas as nutrition, genetics and reproduction, among others.

The Animal Science and Veterinary Department head also made special note of the center's intended cooperation with the Department of Physical Education in supplying horses and space for riding classes.

Fox added that this cooperative program would allow interested students an option of taking riding courses in the winter (by use of an indoor arena) in addition to the present fall and spring choice.

Actual make-up of the farm center is to include dairy animals and livestock (sheep, beef and swine) and horses. There will also be supporting elements for the Plant and Soil Science Department.

Facilities are to include housing units for the animals, stabling areas, an indoor arena for classwork and riding, silos and other farm equipment.

The reasons for the creation of this center to replace the present set-up are two-fold, according to Dr. Fox.

"It is quite obvious we are located (on the main campus) in an inappropriate spot. It is more hazardous and inconvenient to conduct operations here," he said, referring to the location on the west side of campus.

The second reason, according to Fox: "There is a need for more appropriate, sophisticated equipment for future work."

The entire program has "been planned for a good many years" by the animal science faculty for what is needed in research.

"It's not really one man's plan but a response to the needs of the program," said Fox.

He pointed out that the other five Land Grant schools in New England also possess such projects, "not all new, but similar in commitment."

The South Deerfield land, purchased five years ago, includes over 300 acres. Not all will be for animal science use, however. About 40 acres will be available for soil science and some of the rest is just woodland or too rocky.

The present status of the project, according to Dr. Fox, is in the "preliminary stages" and "not far in some cases". In the last six months, however, site layout has been proposed and reviewed by animal and soil science personnel and architects, while the Massachusetts legislature has provided $30,000 for planning.

"No final cost estimate has been established," he added although University trustees hope to keep the final cost within $1.5-million.

Building costs could increase as much as 12% if there is a delay in construction, he said.

"One and one-half to two years at least," said Fox of expected completion time. "The earliest starting date would be late next fall." Accounting for the time lag are reviewing by architects, changes in planning, bids and other formalities, he commented.

1,500 students decided to attend.

Another student, Richard Story, said that the real question that should be raised is, "Do we want a Senior Week at all?" Story said that if the answer is "yes" then the discussion should be over the feasibility of a subsidized Senior Week.

Story feels that a Senior Week is merely an unwarrented extravaganza which should not be subsidized out of student tax.

Lew Gurwitz also questioned the rationale of a subsidized Senior Week. He suggested that the subsidy be scratched and students be allowed to sign up for the Grossinger's weekend with the option to pay the expense on a time basis.

Barr replied to the subsidy question: "We have looked into the rationale of a non-subsidy and it is not feasible. The subsidy helps people who would not be able to afford the entire expense themselves. Also, without a subsidy, it is expected that only a few hundred students would sign up to go. We want something where the majority will be able to attend."

Stan Levco said that while "I am personally excited about going to Grossinger's, I can't figure out why people who don't go should pay for me." It would be a liability for these people, while the rest of the class gained, he added.

Bill Wilkinson changed the tone of the meeting with his concern over civil liberties, which he feels is a prime issue. He expressed agreement with Wood's earlier statement, "It is class government that is the question at hand." Wilkinson questioned the legality of the Executive Council's proposing legislation and then voting on it. He did not feel that this was its function.

Wilkinson said, "To spend $30,000 for a weekend is a crime against society when you consider the responsible program that could be presented."

He added, "The issue is are students going to be continually seeking and getting power over other students or are we going to get a decent student government."

The desire for a referendum was expressed in order to gauge the class sentiment on the issue. Sen. Pres. Jim Collins said that a referendum couldn't be held in less than a week. He felt that the proposed vote at the Constitutional Convention tonight is a "poor second to a referendum" but it is the only way open.

Dr. William Wolf Predicts Future Education Changes

By WALTER STACHURA
Staff Reporter

"Secondary education will undergo a complete revolution, not just a reformation," according to Dr. William Wolf, a research expert in the UMass School of Education.

In a Collegian interview, Wolf offered his views concerning the widespread changes which will take place within 20 years in the field of secondary education.

Wolf envisions the ideal educational plant circular in structure with a learning resources center in the middle.

This center will contain a bank of computers which are connected to units in the circumference of the circle. Each unit will be used by one individual student.

The circular part of the structure will be divided into three educational modules, each with its own certain functions in the total learning process.

The cybernetics module will be used to provide the elementary skills for the student. Computers will aid greatly in teaching the elementary skills in mathematics and in English even so far as to make up the tests for the student, Wolf said.

Another function of the cybernetics module will be vocational training. Almost no manual teaching will be done in this module, he believes.

The individual module will be used to bring out the talents of each student. The teacher to student ratio in this module will be one-to-one.

The group process module will be the final step in the process, said Wolf. The function of this unit would be to iron out errors that the student might have learned during the cybernetics and individual module phases of his education.

Wolf noted that this module would be set up for discussion groups. The teacher would be a person capable of leading controversial and provocative discussions that would reveal any errors developed in the learning process.

Another innovation envisioned by Wolf would be the elimination of libraries as they exist today. "All the books in a library as large as Goodell library could be reduced on microfilm to fit into a shoebox," he said.

This minaturization would be accomplished by putting the information on a special microfilm now being developed by a major camera company.

Actually, this film could be called macrofilm because it will be 10 times smaller than present day microfilm.

Wolf's specialty in education is in research. He received his Ph.D. from the State University of Iowa.

could have a Senior Week in the area. The subsidy would be accordingly proportioned.

This plan would necessitate the $30,000 subsidy with a tax of $12 per Senior. Henry Barr, the chairman of Senior Week, felt that this split week could be financed.

In response to opinions that this would still be taxing those who did not take advantage of either plan, Wood replied that "We can never satisfy that part of the class that doesn't want a Senior Week."

A second motion was made by Mike Garjian that a public relations committee be established with the Daily Collegian. This motion was extended and modified to include an investigation of the paper's editorial policies and its alleged "misuse of the power to sway opinion on campus." This motion was passed unanimously.

UMass Poet-in-Residence To Give Reading Thursday

Mr. Richard Weber of Dublin, Ireland will be the speaker at a lecture to be held on Thursday, Dec. 7, at 8 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the UMass Student Union, sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee.

A notable poet, Mr. Weber is presently a visiting lecturer at Mt. Holyoke College and Poet in Residence at UMass.

The program will consist of an informal reading and discussion of the poet's own works as well as pertinent comments on contemporary Irish poetry.

In the past, the poet has given readings in Salzburg, London, Dublin, and throughout the U.S., in addition to broadcasts in both Ireland and America.

Publications of Mr. Weber's works include: The Time Being, O'Reilly Poems, Lady and Gentlemen, Stephen's Green Revisited. His poems also appear in several anthologies.

LSD and Your Children

A report was issued a number of months ago to the effect that LSD use may have a detrimental effect on chromosomes, such as mutation and breakage. It was suggested by the reporting medical officals that the mutation and breakage might cause birth defects.

The publication of this medical finding was met by loud scoffs from the hippie community. It appeared to the "flower children" that the Established had concocted a scheme to dissuade people from "turning on." The report was therefore dismissed and the "trick" didn't have any effect.

The East Village Other (paper of the East Village hippie community in New York City) looked into the matter and published information discovered by researchers at the University of Oregon, Buffalo State University and New York's Bellevue Hospital. According to the research reports the rate of chromosomal breakage in LSD users goes up to 12.5 per cent as opposed to the normal breakage of 2.5 per cent.

All of the medical reports up to this time were only speculative on the effects of the chromosomal abormality on children. Last weekend in Boston a report was published of a baby which was born to a mother who had "tripped" out during her pregnancy. The unfortunate child had a severely deformed right leg—shorter than her left foot and attached to her hip at an odd angle. Her right foot was also short and had only three toes.

According to an Associated Press release on the medical report, "the pediatricians said they were certain LSD had caused the defects because there was no evidence of birth defects in the families of father and mother. Both parents are healthy they said and the mother did not take any drug except LSD during pregnancy."

The worth in escaping into a world of fantasy is a personal value judgment. But a serious question one should ask in the light of conclusive medical findings is does one have the right to predetermine a world of reality for several other individuals to be a permanent world of deformity.

Can one rationalize careless hedonism and selfish escapism as mind expansion and still remain truthful to the values professed in the love of a human life.

Academic Reform—4

The National Blahs?

In an advertisement a few months ago, Miles Laboratories came up with the 'Blahs,' our first national ailment. Their playful commercialism has turned out to be a pitifully perfect description of the country's political situation. Max Frankel in the New York Times called it the season of discontent, but rather it is a season of wearisome confusion. Americans aren't finding the present leadership satisfactory but don't know where to turn for better.

The dissatisfaction stems from a number of causes. People resent the Vietnam war because they are slowly being sapped of their sons, their money, and their peace of mind. The doves want immediate withdrawal while the hawks press for all-out military effort to finish the war. However violently they may disagree on the method, both groups agree to a common purpose. Meanwhile the casualties increase as fast as the draft protests and beneath it all people are discomfited by the fact that the war is doing wonders for the economy.

Americans are living well, but the threat of inflation becomes increasingly real. This they blame largely on the federal government with its huge foreign aid allotments and the poverty program. The program itself is rapidly losing face with the people who see it becoming another welfare agency.

The summer riots have shaken many people's faith in the government. Taxes rise year after year but little of its monies finds its way into the urban ghettos. The militant activities of "black-power" groups suggest that the worst is yet to come.

The greatest displeasure seems to be with the present crop of political leaders. Newsweek campus pollsters reported this week that college students no longer find idols or gurus in politicians. Rather they use them as anti-idols or urugs. The latest fad of barbecueing LBJ is proof of this. On this point, their elders seem to agree with them.

They are puzzled by the antics of the pre-election-year politicians: "I do not choose to run" Rockefeller bows to "If at first you don't succeed . . ." Nixon. Goldwater is out of it but Reagan studies his script backstage while Romney carries on his humble campaign. Cloudy skies are gathering on Johnson's political range while Eugene McCarthy assails the Administration from his perch atop the peace platform. And George Wallace (you know, the governor's husband) is setting out to avenge the South.

Meanwhile, DeGaulle assails our dollar after conquering the British pound. Palestine, Cyprus and God-knows-where else become major pains in Uncle Sam's neck. The Russians are winning the space race and the Indians are taking back Florida. It's enough to give us a national Excedrin headache! Not even Alka-Seltzer will pull us out of this one.

At Other Schools

UMASS-BOSTON

Liberal Arts School, exclusively.

Four courses the first two years and five courses the last two years. As explained by a UMass-Boston Junior:

"We have a four course load the first two years because the requirements are more concentrated and intense and the students couldn't handle any more. The first two years are drudgery with constant complaining of the language and natural science requirements."

The Core Requirements are as follows:

(1) 2 yrs of English

(2) 2 yrs of natural sciences or mathematics or 1 yr of introductory mathematics and 1 yr of biology or chemistry

(3) 1 yr. introductory social science

(4) 3 yrs foreign language (1 yr. beyond intermediate proficiency)

(5) 24-30 hours in the major.

AMHERST COLLEGE

(1) 600 or better in language achievement test or passing an equivalent exam given at Amherst constitute exemption in language requirement.

(2) Amherst student must be able to swim 100 yds.

(3) 3 courses required in the first two years in problems of inquiry: one course in natural science: one course in social science, one course in humanities

(4) non-major concentration—2 semesters in a field related to the major

(5) 8-10 courses in major field

SMITH COLLEGE

Until reformed Smith had 7-8 requirements. But in the fall of 1966 these requirements were cut to merely two. In so doing, S realized that keeping the quirements just for the sa keeping them would repeat vious education gained in th ondary school experience.

In lieu of redundancy, Sm more realistic requirement tem today constitutes

(1) one year of a labora science

(2) intermediate language ficiency.

(3) 30 credits in the m field.

It seems clear from this lysis that the University sh modify its requirement syste should promote an atmosphe academic flexibility. Then only then will the Universit really responsive to the new demic needs of its modern better qualified students.

Campus Comment: Swim Team Coverag

To the editors:

As a member of the UMass varsity swim team, I can assure you that the team greatly appreciates any and all coverage devoted to it in the Daily Collegian. However, being familiar with my fellow teammates and their accomplishments, I would like to call your attention to the fact that past articles concerning the team have often been inexact and erroneous.

I can recall one such article that appeared last year having four rather greivous mistakes including; incorrect final score, incorrect caption, incorrect swimmer attributed with winning a particular event. The article appearing in yesterday's Dec. 4 issue covering the Saturday encounter with Tufts contained its share of errors.

The diver pictured on page 11 is not Dave Larson (nor Dave "Larsen" as it was misspelled in the article), as the caption st s, but Rick D'Andrea. The dive being executed is by no means a 'swan dive" as stated, but an inward dive, layout position, (if it were a swan dive he would be facing in the other direction for one thing.) Furthermore, knowing Rick's capabilities, I can assure you the dive was not a "perfect" one.

Concerning the write-up, the so-called "Phil" Morton is known to all as "Flip" Morton. Few people (even members of the team, including myself until today), are aware that his first name is Phillip. Also, Mr. Senior's nickname is Jeff, not Goef.

With regard to this situa may I suggest that the pe responsible for sports covera the swim team contact any of the swimmers (prefe Dick Lennon) to clarify any certainties he may have con ing factual material.

May I again express our g tude for your coverage of events. I am sure exactnes reporting will make our s faction complete.

Senior Class Comment

Might Not Refuse to Pay

To the editor:

Wow! zap! whee! Senior—you sure do have some bitter, distorted views. The logic in your article is not too clear.

You exhibit the perfect example of class unity. If everyone felt like you do, we would never have the problem of class unity—at all. There would be none. If such problems as the lack of class unity bothered you so much, why did you wait until now to come forth with your feelings?

If you are not going to pay your $8.00 class tax, why do you go on paying your athletic fee, fine arts fee, etc.? I'm sure you do not receive the full benefit that these taxes are supposed to entitle you to. So let's be consistent in your subtractions from your University bill.

As for your student leaders and class officers, do not forget—you elected them (if you voted). You will think that this is absurd, but with a class our size—2509—it is an overwhelming problem to get entire unity. At least these fellow classmates strive to develop such a unity.

My advice is—before you critize your student government or student leaders, evaluate all the facts and problems they have, but most of all, evaluate yourself.

A Senior Week Is a Senior Week . . .

To the editor:

Although certain campus publications would have us believe otherwise, we have seen no evidence to indicate that our class officers have been motivated by anything but a genuine desire for a memorable Senior Week. We stand behind them.

Certain facts have been deliberately glossed over or obscured, to wit:

A Senior Week, in order to be a Senior Week, must be open to the class as a whole. An on-campus affair would not meet this definition; there are no facilities large enough to accommodate 2500 people. That means no banquet, no class night—in short, no Senior Week.

It boils down to this: Are we willing to pay for a Senior Week? Our class officers assumed we did—there was no reason to assume we didn't—and for this they should not be condemned. Everyone knew that plans were being made for a Senior Week — why weren't any voices heard then? We are already paying for basketball games we don't always go to, art exhibits we don't always see — the list is long.

We feel that Senior Week should be subsidized (we're not arguing for $20,000 or $30,000) in order that it might be open to the entire Senior class at a cost which all can afford.

Tyranny?

To the editor:

Ordinarily, I would prefer to remain my common, apathetic, senior self. But the educated inner me seems to be appearing under the stimulus of the campus crisis. Suddenly, I can recognize and sympathize with the senior plight of subjection to tryannical Class Officers and Executive Council for four whole years. They are rising from this state of repression and I want to support these poor seniors, whoever they are.

I not only cast my vote to end this forced class facade of unity and approval, but also I endorse any motion that would donate Class of '68 funds to the building of permanent polls and counseling quarters adjacent to the Student Union. Why not have permanent police, too?

I personally feel that instead of paying for senior week, we could cause a fuss and get the week free! I would prefer that my contribution to the class be used to establish a campus by referendum. Let's vote for jello flavors on the Commons menu?!

A.K., Class of '68

The Issue

To the editor:

President Dick Wood and the Class of '68 Executive Council have repeatedly expressed in the past few days that the Senior Week issue must not degenerate into a personality issue. Now Wayne Thomas, who is not a Senior, ads his plea as another "public figure" who will probably also be persecuted when "his day comes".

It seems to me that this is not a personality issue for the majority of the class—the so-called "negative voice on campus".

The Senior Week spree at Grossinger's has become rather an issue of principles.

The '68 Exec Council and class officers gave the class no advance indication of their plans for Senior Week, especially the need for an increased subsidy to carry out the grandiose plans. This is a gross insult to the class. A newsletter would have been a simple and possibly adequate device for this needed communication.

The attempt to tax all for the Senior Week extravaganza at Grossinger's, "the place that is known to have everything," is unfair. Logically, some will pay for what they do not want to attend. It is just that we pay a Senior Tax for graduation expenses. But those who want to go to the Catskills should pay their own way. Wayne Thomas has shown us the feasibility of this with his Class trip to New York.

These are the pivotal points in the issue, not personalities. But personalities entered the picture today when the Sam Spark sign was posted in the Union. This is petty and achieves no valid aim. And it was not the Opposition to Senior Week that posted that sign.

"Want a company where you can really put your education to work? See IBM December 14th."

"Some of the engineers who graduated before me complained that their education didn't mean much in their jobs. That's not what I wanted," says IBM's Jim Carr. (Jim is a Manager of Mechanical Process Engineering.)

"At IBM I knew I'd be using what I learned. There's so much diversity here that you can usually work in the specific area you choose. In my own case, I majored in Mechanical Engineering and minored in Metallurgy. Today my ME degree means more than ever. And I often use my metallurgical background. For example, I'm now working on a process development program that requires a knowledge of machine design, metallurgy, heat transfer, and chemistry, all of which I studied in school.

"Another good thing about IBM's diversity is that it creates an interdisciplinary environment. You get a chance to work with and learn from people in many different fields. Since our industry is growing so fast, the people you talk to are likely to be working at state-of-the-art levels or beyond."

There's a lot more to the IBM story than Jim has mentioned. We'd like to tell you about it when we're on campus. We'll be interviewing for careers in Marketing, Computer Applications, Programming, Research and Development, Manufacturing, and Field Engineering.

Sign up for an interview at your placement office, even if you're headed for graduate school or military service. And if you can't make a campus interview, send an outline of your interests and educational background to J. E. Bull, IBM Corporation, 425 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10022. We're an equal opportunity employer.

Sierra Club To Present Photo Display

A Sierra Club exhibition of Ernest Braun's color photographs, "GRAND CANYON OF THE LIVING COLORADO," will be on display at Alumni Memorial Hall from Sunday (December 10, at 1:00 p.m., through Wednesday evening, December 13. The exhibit will be open weekdays from 10:00 a.m. through 8:15 p.m.

According to the Sierra Club, a national conservation organization that celebrates its 75th anniversary on December 9th, most of the scenes portrayed in the exhibit would be destroyed if the two proposed hydropower dams pending before Congress and the Federal Power Commission were built.

A companion feature of the exhibit will be the multiple showing of the Sierra Club's long-awaited "Grand Canyon" film.

Please don't zlupf Sprite.
It makes plenty of noise
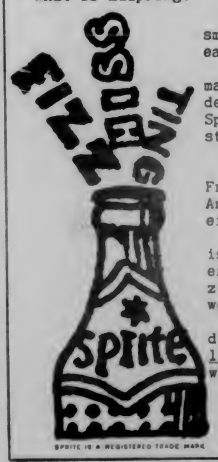
all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.



Flip its lid and it really flips. Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink.

Hence, to zlupf is to err.

What is zlupfing?

Zlupfing is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzlllupf!

It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But. If zlupfing Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment; if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zlupf goes a long, long way.

JOHNSON SCORES 26

Redmen Handed First Loss, 77-66, by Rhode Island

Sports

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 6, 1967
Page 8 Vol. XCVI, No. 59

By STEVE ROSS
Staff Reporter

KINGSTON R.I.—Featuring the outside shooting of Larry Johnson, the Rhode Island Rams opened their Yankee Conference season with a convincing 76-66 victory over UMass in Keaney Gym last night.

Art Stephenson tightly controlled the board as Rhode Island took command in the latter stages of the first half and were never seriously threatened.

UMass was plagued with outside shooting difficulties (only 24 of 67 from the floor) as Rhode Island dominated the boards (52-54).

Johnson led the Rams with 26 points and Bill Tindall led the Redmen with 22. Stephenson contributed 18 points and a game-high of 16 rebounds.

The Redmen enjoyed a small lead for the first nine minutes, but the next five minutes were seasaw, UMass tied the score at 22-22 on Ron Nowakowski's rebound shot, but there were five minutes left in the half, and the URI powder keg exploded.

Johnson fired home three bombs and Zaranka two. Leon Mintschenko added one. A pair of free throws by Stephenson and one by Johnson gave the Rams 15 points. UMass could only answer with buckets by Tindall and Jim Sulesky. The Redmen left the floor at halftime, trailing 37-26.

U.R.I. defense was so effective that in the first half Joe DiSarcina did not even attempt a field a goal. Adding to the Massachusetts woes was an anemic free throw percentage reminiscent of Wilt Chamberlain on a bad night—two for eight. Rhode Island controlled the board's, 27-11. Stephenson had 11.

Johnson exploded for five baskets in less than four minutes to turn a nine-point lead into an 18-point lead, then fouled out with 9:38 left. He had given the Rams a 58-42 cushion.

After Johnson's departure, Redman Ron Nowakowski contributed 12 points but it was too little too late. Even a rat-press could not shake the Rhody five.

Redmen Rantings—Coach Jack Leaman said, "We played hard but we didn't play well. Gayeska gave us a great game. He played until exhaustion." Rhody's winning coach Ernie Calverly said, "We're not as good as I'd like us to be. Frankly I hope someone knocks off Massachusetts before we meet them again at Amherst." It was a near capacity crowd of 5,000. URI's Stephenson, when asked about Gayeska's performance, said, "He was all right."

Landry Lands Agganis Award

From the Associated Press

Another feather in the star Redman's bonnet came when Greg Landry received the Harry Aggamis Award as the best back in New England. The award was announced at the New England Football Writers Association Captains Luncheon held in Boston Tuesday.

Landry was awarded the George Bulger Lowe award on Monday as the best senior player in New England.

Joe Yukica who lifted his New Hampshire Catamounts from a winless season in 1965 to a 5-3 record this fall was named New England Coach of the year.

Wrestlers Bow to Coast Guard

By JOE DUFFY
Staff Reporter

The varsity wrestlers bowed, 29-16, to the Coast Guard Academy at Boyden Auxiliary Gym last night before a capacity crowd.

The Redmen, off to a flying start, lead 13-13 at one point, but appeared to be outclassed in the heavier divisions. Junior Dave Wade (111 pound class) pinned his opponent, Jim Rees, with one minute left in the second period.

After soph Bill Goodwin (123) was decisioned, 5-0, soph Paul Pearl (130) won, 12-10. Pearl wrestling aggresively the entire match, executed an escape and takedown with less than 10 seconds remaining to earn three points and the match.

Captain Gene Paltrineri, (137), pinned his opponent with six seconds left. The Redmen held a 13-3 advantage, but only garnered three additional points. Fred Fitzpatrick (160), was a victor in a 13-3 decision.

Soph Brian Urquhart (152) and senior Bob Yurkus (167) were decisioned, 5-4 and 13-7 respectively. Mike McKenna (145), Ernie Smith (177), Bruce Fulton (191) and Glenn Cummings (unlimited) were all pinned.

A fabulous freshman team overran their Coast Guard counterparts, 49-0, in a show that should send shivers down the backs of future freshman foes.

Little Redmen Meet Westfield

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

Any basketball team with a 105 point output in its opening game would seem to have few problems. But there is room for improvement when the same team allows its opponents 96 points. UMass freshmen hoopsters face Westfield State junior varsity at Westfield tonight in their second game of the season.

The Little Redmen put on an awesome offensive display Saturday, enroute to their first win. They seemingly could score at will, employing a free-wheeling, free-shooting attack, which was both a pleasure to watch and a terror to defend. Yet, UMass had to scramble to win in one of the most exciting games seen in the Cage for many years.

Playing a man-to-man defense throughout, the Redman guard was pierced by Henry Searight and his aides from Rockwood Academy for 96 big points.

The scoring was balanced with 28 point performances of Bob Dempsey and Lou Griffith. They were supported by Frank Schaffeld's 15 points and identical 9 point outputs by Jim Ryan and Ken Mathias.

The team will be bolstered by the return of highly-regarded guard, Jon Kruper. Kruper, who missed Saturday's game due to leg injury, is expected to take much of the scoring pressure off Dempsey.

After tonight's game, the Little Redmen travel to Manchester, N.H. to play St. Anslem's freshmen.

McGuirk Hopes for Boston School Included in Conference

By TOM FITZGERALD
Sports Editor

At least one Yankee Conference athletic director would like to see the Conference expanded. Warren P. McGuirk, UMass athletic director and dean of the school of physical education, said recently that the league would be more highly rated if it added a school from Boston, the communications hub of New England.

"I'd like to think that sometime we could have a Boston school enter the membership," he said. "It would help immensely in publicity. We wouldn't have to worry about coverage. At present, the 90 miles seem like 9,000."

He wouldn't specify what Boston school he was most interested in but process of elimination leaves B.U. and Northeastern. The mathematicians at M.I.T. and Babson Institute would have a tough time trying to figure out the Twenty Formula, the Conference scholarship limit. Harvard? Sure. Tufts, Emerson and Boston State reportedly would rather play tackle with Wellesley, Radcliffe and Simmons, who in turn lack the depth of most Conference teams.

UMass-Boston would be frowned upon by five of the Yankee Schools. And, of course, Boston College is in a league of its own.

The Conference charter limits membership to land-grant institutions, but that incident could be worked out, according to McGuirk. "I wonder if the presence of Northwestern, which is not a land-grant school, has hurt the Big Ten," he said. "I don't think so."

McGuirk knows that B.U., which has already applied for membership and been turned down, would probably lend support to UMass in trying to raise the scholarship limit. Specifically, the controversial Twenty Formula limits each athletic department to a total of 20 full-scholarships in the five main Conference sports (football, basketball, baseball, soccer and track), or the equivalent in partial grants.

The Formula remains unchanged, McGuirk said, despite the unanimous disapproval of the six athletic directors, all of whom want the limit raised. Conference policy, however, is decided by the presidents, and at the moment only President Lederle favors the higher scale.

In football, UMass' independent opponents next season will include Buffalo, Delaware and Holy Cross in place of Dartmouth and Rutgers. The complete 1968 schedule was released today: Sept. 21, Maine, home; Sept. 28, Buffalo, away; Oct. 5, Delaware, away; Oct. 12, Boston University, home; Oct. 19, Rhode Island, away; Oct. 26, Connecticut, home; Nov. 2, Vermont, away; Nov. 9, Holy Cross, away; Nov. 16, New Hampshire, home; and Nov. 23, Boston College, home.

As for future schedules, now projected through 1975, McGuirk said, UMass will play Harvard in '72 and '73, not Army as was originally planned. Dartmouth comes back in the '70 and '71 seasons.

What will happen to the UMass crew program when Coach Dave Clarke, now a senior, graduates? Clarke has reportedly received a "sizable offer" to coach at B.U., and will undoubtedly think twice about returning to UMass unless the athletic department delivers some funds.

Redmen Roundup

The department has given crew only about $1000 over the last three years, but the sport has flourished through the energetic efforts of Clarke in soliciting funds from the Student Senate and the classes.

Forty crew members are working out during the winter at Memorial Hall. Unlike members of every other sports team and, incidentally, the marching band, they do not receive physical education credit.

Saturday's basketball opener was the first test at the Cage of the new controversial rule banning the dunk. The rule, which is as well-grounded as a rule taking the home run out of baseball, prohibits a player from putting his hand or arm over the hoop before, during or after a basket is made.

Bill Tindall had three bona fide opportunities to jam the ball but he executed each basket legally. Hopefully, a touch of "civil disobediance" will be used by the Redmen if they ever are way ahead again in a game at the Cage. A player will lose the basket if he dunks it but those forgotten people, the fans, will love him for it.

The current Cage scoring record is held not by Jim Walker or Wes Bialosuknia or Sonny Dove but by Henry Searight, the 6'4 jumping jack from Rockwood Academy who pumped in 52 points although his team lost to the UMass frosh, 105-96, in overtime this weekend. Searight, reportedly ear-marked for A.I.C. next year, had 20 field goals and 12 free throws.

When he fouled out in the over-time session, the Little Redmen breezed because Rockwood had only four men on the court. The visitors had brought eight players, and four of them were out on fouls.

$30,000 Senior Week Tax Subsidy Is Defeated; Motion To Censure Collins, Boronski Withdrawn

By JIM FOUDY and BILL DICKINSON

The Constitutional Convention last night voted to do away with any student tax subsidy for Senior Week.

Later, President Richard Wood of the senior class introduced and then withdrew a motion to censure Senate President James Collins, who is also chairman of the convention, and Vice-president Frances Boronski, on the grounds that "Collins acted illegally and in poor faith in calling an open meeting on the Senior Class Budget."

The 38-31 vote eliminating the Senior Week funds from the Class of '68 budget came after a week of heated debate over the question of taxing each senior $12 for a weekend at Grossinger's resort in upper New York state.

BORONSKI

With the budget cut, no tax will be levied on students for any senior week program and any activities planned will have to be paid on an individual basis by seniors.

In light of recent controversy within the Senior Class, Pres. Wood introduced an amended version of the Senior week plans last night. The uproar had been over the question of whether members of the class who didn't want to, or couldn't, go on the planned trip to Grossinger's resort in the Catskill mountains should subsidize those who did.

According to Wood's new plan those who wished to sign up for Amherst area events would be allotted a subsidy of $12 each. Thus if a hundred individuals wished to take part in those activities $1,200 would be allocated. The rest would go toward the Grossinger portion of the week. Wood moved that the convention adopt the new proposal that included the original $30,000 subsidy.

At this point Sen. Fred Hartwell introduced an amendment to the motion. His amendment substituted a subsidy of zero dollars for the $30,000 in Wood's motion. This means that if the convention adopted the amendment, it would then vote on the question of no subsidy of Senior Week. A roll call vote with 40 aye's and 29 nay's passed the amendment.

After tumultuous debate with delegates shouting at each other and constant interruption by "points of order" and "points of personal privilege" on the part of the delegates, the convention finally got to vote on Wood's amended motion. Another roll call vote was called and the motion for no subsidy passed 38-31. This means that no tax for a Senior Week will appear on next semester's bill.

Prior to the second vote, Pres. Wood rose and told the convention, "We could filibuster until 11:30 and win this. But we won't."

—MDC, Jack Dean

Contemplating the fate of Senior Week during a lull in the proceedings at last night's Constitutional Convention are Senior Class President Dick Wood and Vice-president Jeff Humber.

Wood made this statement in spite of the fact that four or five of his supporters had been pleading with him to block the vote.

MARCUS

Earlier in the meeting, Sen. Larry Marcus, a close supporter of Wood's, moved to block the convention's re consideration of the budget. He said that neither he nor the class officers had been informed far enough in advance of tonight's meeting, therefore the meeting was illegal. He was supported by Wood, Junior Class Pres. Wayne Thomas and Freshman Pres. Joe Tabacco. Chairman Collins explained that the haste with which the meeting had been called was because the budget had to be submitted to the Trustees on Thursday morning. Sec. Wyke also noted that she had endeavored several times to contact all of them without success. Various other delegates also stated that they had verbally informed the people involved at various times last week. Collins as chairman ruled that the meeting was legal. Marcus then lodged an appeal to the assembly which defeated it.

THOMAS

Following the vote to cut Senior Week funds, Marcus made another motion that the issue be thrown open to a referendum.

Collins explained to the delegates that a referendum would take at least a week and that the budget was due in the University Treasurer's Office the next morning. The delay that a referendum would incur would mean that no Senior Week budgeting would be done by the University. Collins asked that any alternatives for a Senior Week budget be presented to the Convention at that time. He expressed hope, however, that the Convention would uphold the vote and not throw it open to a referendum.

"I feel that this body is representative of the campus and if we are going to hold any stock in our student government then the people here have to make the final decision tonight," he said.

Although this ended the question of a referendum, Collins did not close the door on the possibility that change is needed. "If it is decided that tonight's meeting was not representative then we should make moves to change it. We have to make sure that our student government is legitimate," he said.

Although the question of student government legitimacy isn't a new one, a number of the people attending the session felt that the hassel over Senior Week has brought the issue to a head.

The last motion brought before the Constitutional Convention was one of censure brought by Pres. Wood against Sen. Pres. Collins and Vice-Pres. Boronski.

It came at a time when tempers were short and seemed to finalize the polarization between opposing groups.

Wood proposed the motion to censure on the grounds that Collins had illegally called the open

'Mother' Raises Issue

Campus Publications Under Scrutiny

By JIM FOUDY
City Editor

The question of obscenity in print, raised by the Administration over the underground newspaper Mother of Voices, has now affected the role of other publications on campus and it appears that a new set of policies may be developing.

Emerging from the melee is: a favorable attitude by some University officials toward the new Yahoo, a policy of presidential approval for publication advisors and an indication that the Board of Trustees will personally be considering more of the issues raised over student press on campus.

The uproar began the week before Thankgiving when the off campus newspaper, the "Mother of Voices" was banned from sales at the lobby counter of the student union. The first issue of the paper was pulled off the stands by Associate Dean of Students Dr. Mark Noffsinger after he read the paper and declared that it was "gross."

Although Noffsinger said he would defend the paper's right to free expression he thought that the proper place for sales would be at a separate table in the Union lobby.

Last Thursday the Student Union Governing Board met on the issue and by an 8 to 5 vote granted the "Mother of Voices" a selling table three days a week.

The issue of obscenity in print did not confine itself to the "Mother of Voices," however,

Heart Transplant Patient Continues to Improve

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) —Louis Washkansky's chances of surviving a heart transplant brightened Wednesday, said the chief surgeon in the historic operation. If he continues to improve, he may go home within three weeks.

Dr. Ian Barnard expressed his belief that Washkansky's body will make no major rejection of the new heart he received in an operation Sunday. Rejection has been the chief critical factor in his survival.

Barnard told reporters that any slight rejection of the heart would not be serious.

In Groot Schuur Hospital, Washkansky joked with his nurses, telling them: "I am a new Frankenstein." He has been able to take solid food for the past two days.

A cobalt radiation device and drugs are being used to suppress rejection of the transplanted heart.

With continued improvement, Barnard said Washkansky will be home in three weeks, adding: "Quite simply, he will be better off there. After all, hospitals are where germs are found and the chances of infection would consequently be greater."

Barnard noted that there was no sign of rejection of the transplanted heart, electrocardiagraph readings are satisfactory and the patient is feeling well.

Barnard gave a few more details of history's first heart transplant. The heart was taken from the body of Denise Ann Darvall, 25, who had been killed a few hours earlier by a car.

Barnard said nerves of Miss Darvall's heart were not connected with Washkansky's nervous system. This would have been impossible. He pointed out this did not hamper replacement because the heart has its own nervous system. The heart system was stimulated with hormones.

"The will to live and determination to make the operation succeed are vital," Barnard continued. "A patient who undergoes transplant surgery has to be psychologically suited to an operation."

Mrs. Washkansky still has not seen her husband since the operation. She was asked to wait a week to avoid any chance of infecting her husband.

Mrs. Edward G. Darvall, mother of the dead girl, also was killed by the car that struck them in a street Saturday. The bodies of mother and daughter were cremated Wednesday after a simple ceremony.

Baby Dies After Heart Transplant

NEW YORK (AP) — Doctors transplanted a dead baby's heart into the breast of a 2½-week-old boy Wednesday, but after 6½ hours, the heart failed.

Dr. Adrian Kantrowitz, the chief surgeon, announced the failure. "We do not know at this time why this transplanted heart failed," he said.

hearing on the Senior Class Budget and had ordered Sen. Treas. Silverman to conduct an investigation of the budget proposal.

Sen. McGahan stood and asked for a vote that the motion not be considered. Opponents of Senior Week cheered McGahan's motion and the opposing forces cheered when it was ruled out of order.

Wood asked that he be heard on the motion of censure and Collins agreed, asking only that, "The censure motion be kept to five or ten minutes because the Senate has a lot of work to do after this." More cheers and Collins called for a second to the motion. Wayne Thomas jumped to the floor and shouted that he seconded the motion. Collins said, "I thought you might." More cheers.

Wood finally reached the floor to present his complaint against Collins and issue the charges which he felt were "charges that could go to the General Court."

Besides his charges of illegal activity Wood said, "Although I feel that this group was representative you could not have made any other decision because you were only given half the facts."

Collins countered the censure motion. He said he acted legally in calling the open meeting because the budget had passed from the hands of the Senior Class to the Constitutional Convention of which he was chairman.

Collins said, "I called the open meeting because I felt it was in the best interest of the students and I would do the same thing again."

Wood finally withdrew the motion because he did not feel there had been enough debate to bring the question to a vote.

Sicily Had Great Effect On Works of Pirandello

By MARYBETH GIBB
Staff Reporter

On the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the birth of the Sicilian author, Luigi Pirandello, Dr. Glauco Cambon of Rutgers U. said, "It is a misconception that Pirandello was an intellectual, cerebral and heartless, who delighted in throwing us puzzles and a lot of impossible situations. The truth is that Luigi Pirandello was one of the most passionate writers that ever existed."

Appearing Monday evening before about 100 students and faculty members, the UMass Dept. of Romance Languages presented Dr. Cambon, who spoke on "The Uuworldly Pirandello". The program was held in conjunction with the University of Massachusetts Theatre production of Pirandello's Enrico IV, on Dec. 6-9.

Dr. Cambon said that Pirandello was a cosmopolitan figure, having studied in Germany and traveled extensively in the production of his drama. And yet, as Cambon explained, "Sicily made Pirandello and Pirandello remade there, but he couldn't stand not to live there."

Sicily's layers of history, Cambon continued, with the institutions and conventions of this history caused Pirandello to retreat within himself and view the world from an unworldly vantage point.

Dr. Cambon traced this aspect Sicily. He couldn't stand to live of the Italian author's work through his early fiction to the drama for which Pirandello is primarily known.

Born and educated in Italy, Dr. Cambon is a professor of Italian and of comparative literature at Rutgers. He is widely published in his field.

ENRICO IV will be performed at Bowker Auditorium Dec. 6-9.

and the waves created by that publication rocked the boat of Spectrum, the general interest magazine on campus.

Shortly after the "Mother of Voices" appeared a University official telephoned Spectrum's printer and held up work on the first issue which was expected to be out by the end of November.

According to the University, Spectrum was held up because its constitution had not yet received administration approval. Under University policy, student organizations are not allowed to spend funds until an official constitution has been passed by the Student Senate, the Dean of Students Office and the President.

Spectrum editors said that part of the delay was normal procedure but it was rumored that the publication was also being held up because of administrative fear that it would be another "Mother of Voices."

A University official verified this report at a meeting of the Student Communications Board last week. He said, "I believe that part of the delay of Spectrum is a result of the "Mother-of Voices." The Administration saw that a few of the same people that wrote for "Mother" also wrote for Spectrum and they feared another controversy."

According to Fred Pilon, editor of Spectrum, any fear of content in the magazine is unfounded. "The first issue contains all top quality material from a number of off-campus writers who are well respected in the trade. Our printer has congratulated us on the work and told us it is one of the best student publications he has ever seen."

Noffsinger said Monday that he sees no barrier to publishing Spectrum. He said that he would have the recommendation approving the constitution written and in the President's hands Tuesday.

Noffsinger added, however, that a clause was being added to the Constitution giving the President of the University power of approval over student publication advisors.

Under this provision, which many people feel is becoming a pre-requisite to publishing on campus, the President can give or deny approval to advisors selected by the publications. If the President refuses approval it will be up to the media to submit the name of a new advisor.

Dissent to this policy has been voiced by some members of the Student Comunications Board but it is doubtful if any action will be taken until next semester.

Finally, squeezed somewhere between the uproar over "Mother of Voices" and the confusion over Spectrum is the old favorite, Yahoo.

With the old editors ousted a new group of students, under the leadership of Pete Ward, a student senator, reorganized Yahoo and have taken a quiet, steady approach toward convincing the Administration that they can produce a worthwhile product.

First the magazine wrote a new constitution which cleared up a number of complaints that the Administration had with the old one. The new editors also prepared a new statement of policy.

According to Ward, "Yahoo would no longer print smut for the sake of smut. We intend to have responsible advisors and we hope to recruit good writers from the campus to prepare our satire."

Ward said, "The magazine would continue to criticize the University and various aspects of society including government, sex and religion but we will be more responsible in our outlook."

It was learned yesterday that the Administration is pleased with the responsible attitude of the new Yahoo crew and has been working closely with the group in an attempt to iron out some of the old complaints with the magazine.

But it is clear that the Administration alone is not the only authority that has to be convinced. Yahoo's ultimate bid for republishing will take place before the Board of Trustees.

It was brought out at a meeting of the Student Communications Board Tuesday, however, that an appeal by a student group directly to the Trustees for funds is unusual and may indicate an increased concern by the Board over questions of the student press on campus.

Dr. Noffsinger said yesterday that he and other administrators intend to work hard in helping the new staff organize effectively so that when they appear before the Board of Trustees to plead their case they will have a fighting chance.

Globetrotters Close 1967 S.E.N.D.O.F.F. Activities

The Harlem Globetrotters will perform at the Cage tonight at 8 p.m. as the close of S.E.N.D.-O.F.F. weekend sponsored by the class of '70

The Globetrotters were first organized after a Globetrotter—All Star basketball game at Chicago Stadium on November 30, 1940. The Globetrotters were defeated 44-42 in overtime. After almost defeating one of the greatest collections of basketball talent, the Globetrotters were placed in the sports spotlight as being a good basketball team and good crowd pleasers.

The Globetrotters had qualified to play in this first All-Star game by winning the world championship tournament, defeating the Chicago Bruins. Following that game Abe Saperstein, a sports-writer, bought jackets for the Globetrotters with "World Champions" emblazoned on the back. Abe Saperstein became the manager of the Globetrotters.

The team was reorganized and they began playing most of their games in small towns on the road. The first game was in January of 1927 in a small town near Chicago. They called themselves the Harlem Globetrotters even though none of the team members had ever been in Harlem. People idenitfied the group as a Negro team. Since this time the Harlem Globetrotters have traveled all over the country entertaining and pleasing many different kinds of audiences.

Meadowlark Lemon of Harlem Globetrotters must get his basketball wholesale.

Simon and Garfunkel Tired

Singers Find Road Tours Grueling

by BOB GORMAN
Staff Reporter

Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel have an air of friendliness that is not often seen in performers on, as well as off, stage. After Sunday's concert, the two were willing to talk with anyone who wanted to see them.

Both Simon and Garfunkel relate closely with the college audience. In fact, Art Garfunkel said that the two perform to, "almost exclusively college audiences."

Art's impression of the college audience is that they don't vary, because their outlook on life is pretty much the same. He added, "I don't think this is good."

Both college graduates, Paul received his Bachelor's degree from Queens College in New York, while Art received his B.A. in Art History and his M.S. in Math Education from Columbia University. Just a few weeks ago Art dropped out of a Math doctoral program at Columbia.

Since Art had been a full time student until recently, they only performed during the weekends on two or three nights. The artist-mathematican said that he often had trouble being both a student and a performer.

Despite their popularity, the two singers are getting tired of their performing life. As Art said, "I like music and like to sing it, but I'm getting tired of it and when I am tired of it, I'll quit."

His complaint isn't with performing," but airports and locker rooms are hang ups. They get to you after a while." Eventually, the singer plans to teach college mathematics.

He said, however, that his career as a performer has helped him to progress. A few years ago, Art said, he was searching for answers to life. "I have changed from searching for conclusions to searching for understanding."

In this regard the Columbia graduate doesn't want to change anything, he wants to fit into the pattern of life. He added, "I'm content to look and not change anything."

Perhaps this indicates a change in Art's thinking and a turning point for Simon and Garfunkel. However, the change is towards maturity, and it will be interesting to see how the two singers adjust their style.

CAMPUS BANDS

The Registered Student Organizations (RSO) has announced that all bands on campus should register with them before December 20.

The office is now compiling a list of all of the bands on campus, to be provided to all organizations seeking a band for a function. The RSO office is the principal 'agent' for the bands on campus.

All bands, whether presently registered with the office or not, are urged to register before the closing date.

ARVN—Part I

The South Vietnamese Army

Why is it that "our" Vietnamese do not fight well, and "theirs" have a reputation for battle prowess. Surely this question must have crossed the minds of many Americans, as Johnson escalated our troop commitment to the war in Vietnam. The answer does not end with "They lack the will to fight." Why does this condition exist and why must we "give them something to fight for?"

The basic problem is that the war is an American, not a South Vietnamese, affair now. We pay the South Vietnamese Army (ARVN) to fight for us. As American casualties have surpassed those of the Vietnamese, it has become increasingly clear that "our" Vietnamese are generally unreliable and ineffective in battle. Even the pacification program is being taken over by American troops. This function was considered vital to the future success of ARVN; but it failed.

Another recent failure has been the integrated fighting corps of Vietnamese and Americans. Operation Fairfield was dropped due to ARVN tendency to become too dependent on U.S. forces.

Donald Duncan, a former Master sergeant in the Green Berets and now a vehement dove, spent 18 months on active combat duty in Vietnam. In regard to the comforts provided to Vietnamese being trained for a Project Delta, the war critic wrote, "these were men already being paid their regular salary and we actually had to pay a bonus each time they went to the field on normal duties." (Ramparts—Feb. 1966) Thus in "administrationese", "progress" is achieved when ARVN does its duties.

In contrast the Viet Cong fight at a subsistance level, often under hardship conditions. The extreme dedication to their cause among this group, is markedly absent in ARVN. The VC believe they are fighting for national independence; they have faith in their leaders who live and eat with them. What's more they are fighting for no one but themselves.

On the other hand their government counterpart knows his leaders obtained their positions because of family, money, and politics. Their leaders live in luxury, paying as much for one meal as a soldier earns in a week. Many of the nightclubs in Saigon are owned by the Vietnamese generals, who profit from the American presence in Vietnam. The ARVN realizes that he is fighting only to perpetuate a system that has kept him uneducated and in poverty.

The ARVNs only fight well when their survival is at stake. The few crack battallions are not representative of their fighting caliber, There is no enthusiasm for battle among most of these troops who owe no loyalty to Saigon. The majority of South Vietnamese are either anti-Saigon or pro-Viet Cong or both. ARVN is drafted from the people; peasants, who have only suffered from the government, are forcefully conscripted to protect the people in power who have oppressed them. Thus it is not surprising that 125,000 deserted the army in each year of 1965 and 1966; many remain as a means to support their families. This high desertion rate continues today.

Pre-Registration

by Kent Barclay
Editorial Staff

We have just gone through the twice-yearly ritual of pre-registration. the great rehearsal for that fetish of fetishes, registration. We have dutifully turned in our little prepunched IBM cards at the Registrar's office, with only those in Arts and Sciences fortunate enough not to be forced to go through the additional rigors of obtaining one's adviser's signature for approval of their course selections. But even they must still throw themselves upon the tender mercies of the computer for their section scheduling and resultant time slots, instructors, and texts obtained. The writer feels this to be an anomaly which must presently be remedied by allowing students the option of not freedom from, but real freedom: freedom for.

Judging from what the writer was able to elicit in the Registrar's office, the prime obstruction in the way of change appears to be none other than administrative inertia ("It's always been done this way!" one responsive staffer volunteered). Predictably enough, this is coupled with equally deplorable student listlessness (the comment of one such worthy: "I have no thought on that"). No one in the Registrar's office seemed to be cognizant of the fact that the assumption implicit in my questions was that students are not a thoughtless mass to be curried and manipulated into the administration's definition of what is necessary, proper, or expedient. But this seemed to be the admission underlying the answers this writer obtained.

The writer believes that the administration should revise upward its estimation of student self-education, especially, for freshmen and sophomores, as the change would principally affect them.

For the solution is some administrative creative innovation: To trust the students as a responsible body politic by allowing those sufficiently concerned to choose their sections, with due consideration to the financial aspects and a review of priorities, both of which would be inextricably involved in any proposed changeover. The remaining students, who did not care to take the trouble to be eclectic, could then be assigned to those instructors who were not before chosen. The time and place are here. The next move is up to the administration.

Philip Ler

In Puberty

The University seems to be responding to problems as a matter of priorities. The most important issue that confronted the University Community a few years ago was the problem of Women's curfew. Now the problem before the University Faculty Senate is parietal hours, whether or not individuals living and working under the artificial pressure stimulated by the intense microcosm that is the UMass environment will be allowed to live, interact, and react freely with other human beings. The University does seem to be responding to student needs. But I feel the next priority, and possibly the most important to any educational institution's future is the visibility of its academic system—its requirements and its course loads. This University must realize that a more modern, feasible product must be molded in the not too distant future or else this school's maturity and growth will have been only in body and not in mind.

Each year the University states that it is receiving only quality students with the ability to do quality college work. The out of state requirements for entrance are particularly high—a student must be in the top 5-10% of his class and get well over 600 on his boards. In-state students must be in the top 20% of their class with 600 in their SATs. This type student is every bit as capable as a student entering Smith, or Amherst, or University of Michigan, or almost anywhere. Yet in the College of Arts and Sciences, a new student is subjected to some of the most rigid and demanding distribution requirements and course loads of any school in perhaps all of New England. A freshman is bogged down in drudgery—the drudgery of busy-work or of changing gears and moods to do 5 or 6 different pieces of courses in a day, or of the ridiculous repetition of courses previously taken in secondary school, then taken he requirements. This redundan the educational process of University does not give an and Sciences person a Li Education it merely shackle spirit, and similarly it does give an engineering major freedom to breath. The fe seems to be 'you picked the jor you wanted, you picked school, not us. You know th quirements, and you know consequences.'

It is true that the Univ is big and that course loa academic reform even t place within one school wou a great undertaking. But this writer's feeling that, l or not, it must be done, if to be responsive to the ne the new generation of good ity students. Yet, there is better reason—to keep the cational experience at this versity vital and interesting to find greater depth and in the courses so that the growing and maturing expe does not have to begin aft class is over.

HORROR SHOW

There will be a special tion to fill 17 vacant Se seats on Thursday, Dec. 7.

There is one seat vacan each of the following: Adams Lower, J.Q. Ad Middle, Chadbourne, Cool Lower, Dickinson, Ha Hills South, and John There are also two seats for the fraternities and s for the commuters.

On Dec. 7, dormitory dents will vote from 6 p.m. in the dorms; the muters and fraternities vote in the Union from 9 to 5:30 p.m.

"Issues in Education" Reply

Multiversity or Subversity?

Just how subversive of mainstream society is it possible for public universities to be? That, for me, is the question raised by Mr. Wilkinson's "Dangerous Duty of Education" (Issues in Education—4). While I sympathize with his desire to make social change a goal of the University and share his concern with the general silence of American intellectuals on issues such as poverty, the draft, and Vietnam, I do not understand precisely how, other than through exhortation, the University will come to assume a radical posture toward social change. Can the university ever become a subversity, subverting the status quo of the very society which supports its existence? Can radical social change ever be an institutional goal, or must a truly radical attack on the norms of society be, at best, a lonely and individual task? Those wishing for radical institutional changes within and outside the University would do well to take a hard-headed (indeed, radical) look at the obstacles to such changes.

It is sobering, for instance, to realize that academic freedom in America is sustained (paradoxically) by self-imposed unfreedom. Christopher Lasch makes this point brilliantly (In The Nation, 9/11/67) by documenting the uncritical spirit with which American intellectuals supported the national position on the Cold War. The academic community won freedom from political control largely by, as Lasch puts it, "purging itself of ideas." Groups of leading intellectuals accepted secret C.I.A. subsidies for their defense of an "open" society. Rather than establishing themselves as an independent force, intellectuals thus became willing accomplices of America's simplistic foreign policy in the 1950's. The academic community bought tolerance, but in so doing it abrogated its critical role.

This was self-castration in the guise of responsibility, of respectability. It illustrates that society and its institutions are repressive. A person, from childhood on, is rewarded for following the social norm and put under great pressure for any deviation from the norm. In the face of this fact, my students claim they are "free"—apparently because they have always been told that they are. With no sense of possible contradiction most will admit that they have never even wanted to do (much less done!) anything socially unacceptable. This form of responsibility boils down to "I am free because I have chosen not to be." To this Dylan says, "Look out, kid; they keep it all hid"—meaning, I think, that resistance to destructive conformity is not a vaguely "off-beat" possibility. It is an obligation.

Another obstacle to the University becoming an agent of radical social change is the pervasive egalitarianism of our society. The academician's potential value to society as an informed individual—a member of an informational elite, if you will—is constantly undermined by the viewpoint that one man's opinion (of what is obscene, for example) is as good as another's. This egalitarianism is a major source of the anti-intellectualism that Richard Hofstadter, among others, has proved to be so pervasive in American society. Ironically, academicians accept this anti-intellectualism by endorsing "value-free" research and "opinion-free" classrooms — all of which, as Lasch says, drain academic research of its "critical potential." Within such an academic setting there is scarcely room for intellectuals to make a serious impact on public affairs. Little wonder that Theodore Roszak (in The Dissenting Academy) can write, "We do not have an intellectually respectable politics in America, very largely because the single largest intellectual interest group in our society—the learned professions—has opted out of politics . . . It does not insist that intellect embrace a dimension of citizenship."

I do not wish to close on such a disheartening thought. My personal view is that no public university is ever likely to be dominated by a radical social perspective, but that it is possible that the university of the future will be much less monolithic in its social-political outlook than the universities of today. It is possible that the multiversity can become more than just a multiplicity of vocational options sharing roughly the same orthodox values. The multiversity might also incorporate institutionally (not just tolerate from individuals) a multiplicity of life styles—of politically radical, socially orthodox, and career-oriented students. Rather than tailoring education to a single norm, the university might permit each sub-group a large measure of flexibility in adopting curricular and teaching styles to its intellectual needs. A political radical, for instance, might appropriately be given credit for reports made on his activities as a civil rights organizer; whereas a career-vocational student would study political problems in orthodox courses. The competition among such varying intellectual styles would surely contribute to the dynamic and critical elements of university life.

The transformation of the present university cannot be accomplished, however, unless the student radicals adopt, as they so often have failed to do, the tools of the academic community. Radical ideas will win a respectful hearing only when they are supported by disciplined argument and well-researched information. I am heartened by the efforts of Mr. Wilkinson and others to do just that. I wish them success.

The Election

To the editor:

On Monday, the Daily Collegian published a press release beginning, "At least three student senators representing the constituency of older off-campus, students will be quitting the Student Senate this week in protest over what they term 'lack of representation' by the Senate of their constituency's needs."

Yesterday, another release announced Ray Wilson's candidacy for the Senate, "for commuters and married students. . .on a platform advocating optional participation of these students in the student tax and in the ensuing benefits."

Wilson went on to claim, "a vote for me is a vote for optional participation," which is a little bit more than he can realistically promise—a vote for him might be an expression of agreement with his views.

My principal opposition to Wilson's statements, is not so much disagreement with his views on questions of substance but an opposition to his demogogue-like tactics.

In the first place it is inconsistent to justify the resignation of two current members, and the automatic expulsion of the third because of 5 absences from Senate meetings, on the grounds that the student activity tax should not be compulsory for commuters and that the Senate does not represent their needs and, at the same time, to propose Wilson as a candidate on these grounds.

If Messrs. Papaluca, Hardy, and Robinson have decided to quit in protest," how can it be assumed that Ray Wilson, the commuters "protest" candidate will be able to accomplish anything.

A little bit of history will remind the commuters that the three gentlemen mentioned above (and two others who have no desire to leave the Senate) all ran for office promising the commuters to work for their specific interests. They have nothing to show for their efforts.

In his candidate's release Wilson explains that he is a write-in candidate as oppopsed to being on the ballot because (1) he only decided to run this week and (2) "I don't want anyone just to be checking off a name." What Wilson failed to mention is that of seven seats which were open to commuter candidates, only one commuter submitted nomination papers and according to election rules because only one seat has been filed for, only one candidate can be elected. If a write-in gets more votes than the individual on the ballot, he will win.

The reason for the limitation is that if one candidate files nomination papers and seven positions are to be filled, the other six might be filled by one write-in vote (like your best friend, just for laughs) each.

So because, Wilson has decided marking an "x" does not have as much meaning (hear that, intelligent commuters) as writing W-i-l-s-o-n, he will deny to this nominated candidate the chance to be elected.

Let me say, I question Wilson's motives and methods. There will be six to nine vacant commuter seats next semester — which he can run for. In the meantime, he can publicize his rationale for his assertions and gather some proof that other commuters hold this view — proof currently utterly lacking.

Today, in the commuter election to elect one candidate, I will be voting for Lawrence Cunningham—who cared enough about runing for the Senate to take out nomination papers—and whom I believe has no desire to mislead the commuters but will represent them to the best of his ability.

Gambling, girls, and dancing to a rock band will again be highlighted at the annual Las Vegas Night festivities.

Taking place tomorrow (Friday night) at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom, the evening is sponsored by the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega.

The twelve semi-finalists in the Las Vegas Night Queen contest, chosen by various dormitories, fraternities and sororities, will be narrowed down to five by 5 p.m. tomorrow afternoon. The voting is down by placing a penny in a jar at booth in the Union lobby. Each jar represents candidate and each penny counts as one vote.

Again on Friday night, the Las Vegas Nig Queen will be chosen by a penny vote.

All money collected will be contributed to charity and Alpha Phi Omega hopes that ever one will attend what promises to be a fun-fill night.

Honor Society Initiates New Members

Tau Beta Pi, national engineering society, recently initiated sixteen new members. Candidates for Tau Beta Pi are selected from the top one-fifth of the senior class and the top one-eighth of the junior class. In addition to distinguished scholarship, Tau Beta Pi candidates are considered for exemplary character, breadth of interest, leadership potential adaptability, and unselfish activity. The new members initiated are the following:

SENIORS — Bruce Benwood Pio Lombardo, Bradford Mason Leslie Pickering, Russell Theu

Formal initiation was conducted on Friday, Dec. 2, followed by a banquet at the Gables.

Freshman Goalie Gets Pro Advice

Editor's Note: Larry Walsh, who authored this article, is himself a member of the "lonely breed". Walsh, who comes from Brockton, is the starting goalie for the UMass Freshman Hockey team.

Hockey goalies are a special and sometimes lonely breed. A goalie must make the right decision at the right moment, he is the most vital cog in team operation.

One night after tending goal, getting hit on the head, banged in the jaw and stopping close to seventy shots thrown at me by the UMass varsity, I wondered why any man would want to play professional hockey.

On Thanksgiving night, Eddie Johnson, the Boston Bruins backstop, gave me an answer.

Ed Johnson, a 32-year old Irishman born in Montreal, is in his sixth year with Boston. Ed is one of six brothers and only the second to play any hockey at all.

He started playing hockey in the nets where older kids shoved him. He got better and older and went to the Montreal Forum to watch the ice master himself, Jacques Plante.

Johnston was signed by Les Canadiens and spent his time in the minors. In 1962, Boston drafted him for $20,000, it was a good deal for both Ed and the Bruins. Ed got his break on Dec. 15, 1963 when he replaced injured Bob Perrault in the Boston nets. Since then he has been the regular goal-tender.

Hoping to pick up any tips he might offer, I asked Ed why he is a pro goalie and what he thinks of during a game. His first words were, "I'm crazy just like you and any other guy who gets between the pipes." He told me that hockey was his life and the way to make a living. "It's tough mentally and physically having to stop the Hulls and Howes who can shoot up to 120 m.p.h, but I love the game. The only people who really understand goal-tenders are other goal-tenders."

It's a great feeling to stand alone before screaming fans, experiencing personal satisfaction after stopping an opposing player. Like Ed said, you can't tell why you're a goalie but you must have ability, love the game and be a little nuts.

Because of the help he got from the greats like Jock Plante, Terry Sawchuck, Gump Worsley and Glen Hall, he is quick to offer whatever assistance he can. "Any technique you can steal from a good goalie is okay—so do it."

In training camp this fall, Ed was hit just under the left eye by a Bobby Hull slap shot. After recovery, he put on the mask for the first time in his career.

I asked him why he didn't wear it against the Rangers. "The club felt I could do better without it," he answered. Most people would say he's crazy but he said that was true anyway. He feels he can help Boston more without it.

I've had to make some of the same decisions Ed has made. I love the game because it's fast, exciting and dangerous. I guess I'm crazy too, because if given the chance I'd play professionally just like Ed Johnston.

Mermaids Stay Unbeaten with Convincing Win

Swimmers from Green Mountain College, Poultney, Vt., were swamped in the WoPe pool recently when U-Mass women's swim team defeated the visitors, 64-40, bringing its intercollegiate record to 3 - 0.

Tough Tests for Girl Gymnasts

Saturday, Dec. 9, the U-Mass Women's Gymnastics team will meet the team from Southern Connecticut State College at 1:00 p.m. in Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

The Southern Connecticut team is one of the best in the country. It includes several national champions and Olympic candidates. The meet should be a good one with a high level of performance.

UMass girls will miss the services of co-captain Linda Binney, who sprained her ankle in last weeks competition. Margie Sims, out with a toe injury last week, will participate in limited capacity this Saturday.

The team currently has a 1-0 record after defeating Montclair (N.J.) YMCA. Saturday's contest will be the last home meet the women have until February.

Redmen Skaters Ice Amherst, 6-2

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Third-period goals by Charlie Hanifan and Bill Fallon clinched a 6-2 victory for the UMass hockey team over Amherst last night before a near capacity crowd at Orr Rink.

The win raised the team's record to 2-1 while Amherst took the loss in it's opening game.

Amherst winger Eric Nelson had brought the Jeffs within two goals, 4-2, at the :30 second mark of the third period.

Things did not improve any when Bill Fallon went off for a five minute misconduct a few minutes later and was followed by Jeff Sanborn 45 seconds later leaving the Redmen skating three men against five for Amherst.

Excellent penalty killing by Hanifan, Doug Powling and Joe DiCioco killed the penalty. However, the Jeffs kept the pressure on until Hanifan scored at 14:51.

Hanifan's effort was a beautiful stickhandling job through three players finally deking the goalie and tucking the puck behind him.

Fallon followed with his goal 30 seconds later taking a pass from Greg Stone and scoring from directly in front of the net.

The Redmen had jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first period. Jeff Sanborn tallied an unassisted goal at the 5:30 mark, stickhandling through the Amherst defense and beating Jeff goalie Tom Viall with a 15 putt wrist shot.

Don Robinson and Jeff Sanborn scored rapid fire goals 22 seconds apart to up the margin to 3-0.

Sanborn scored his second goal of the night at 11:46, taking passes from Robinson and Powling and firing the puck into a half empty net.

Charlie Hanifan scored a fluke goal at 16:50 when his shot from about twenty feet out took a couple of bounces before finally bouncing over Viall's stick.

UMass goalie Pete Scoville's shutout streak was ended at the 13:00 mark of the second period. Marcus Beebe broke the string knocking in a loose puck from in front of the net.

Statistics indicate that the game was a lot closer than the score showed. UMass and Amherst both fired 37 shots on goal with Viall stopping 31 and Scoville making 35 saves.

Mermen Mopped By Lord Jeffs, 62-33; Now 1-1

"We got murdered" was the way swimming coach Joe Rogers summed up his team's 62-33 defeat to Amherst last night in Pratt Pool.

The mermen were only able to win three of the events during the meet. Dick Asquith came up with a win in the backstroke for one of the bright spots in a disappointing evening.

Dave Larson took the diving competition executing several fine dives in his winning performance. The only other victorious UMass effort came in the final relay.

Phillips and Steckles paced the Jeffs triumph. They finished one-two in both the 100 and 200 meter freestyle events with Phillips taking the 100 and Steckles the 200.

WESTFIELD—Jumping out to a big first half lead, the UMass freshman basketball team went on to a 72-53 victory over the Westfield State junior varsity, in action last night.

The Little Redmen attack was led by Ken Mathias with 17 points and Lou Griffith with 14. Jim Ryan and Bill Greeley each had 11.

Scoring early and often, the UMass team led at halftime 45-29. A key factor was the rebounding of the Little Redmen, as the taller frosh repeatedly got second and third shots.

The second half saw the Westfield team make a determined bid to get back into the game. They fought back to close the gap to as little as 11 points with seven minutes left, employing an all-court press. However the brillian ballhandling of Bill Greeley succeeded in breaking the press.

The brightest spot in the UMass triumph had to be the improved defense. The Litte Redmen, after being pierced for 96 points last week, foiled most Westfield thrusts.

Miller Drops From Heights

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Jim Miller resigned as head football coach at Boston College Wednesday after the Jesuit institution declined to give him a new three-year contract.

Miller had one year left on his present contract. The college said he asked for the new one, but that "Boston College could not see its way to grant Miller's request at this time."

Miller had a six-year record at Boston College of 34 victories and 24 defeats but had won only eight while losing 12 during the last two seasons.

Veteran Swim Coach Rogers Knocks Athletic Scholarships

By TOM FITZGERALD
Sports Editor

"Every athletic team in the country would be a lot better off if there were no athletic scholarships," UMass swimming coach Joe Rogers said yesterday. Rogers, one of the most popular people in the athletic department, is never afraid of dropping a bombshell, and he is a man who speaks his mind.

"A scholarship is supposed to be for scholastic ability, isn't it? Look at some of these teams that are bringing idiots here." His views, are probably applauded by many on campus, especially members of the faculty. But other coaches, some well-imbursed with so-called "full boats" to lure athletes here, may take exception.

Rogers has not received a penny of scholarship assistance in his 36 years as UMass swim coach, and he likes it that way. His players call him "Joe," and they'll win more than they lose.

"Let a kid play because he wants to, not because he's getting his education paid for," he said. This year, however, Rogers has confronted for the first time the rising cost of athletes' demands. Only five freshmen showed up for practice, and the entire fresh schedule for the first semester had to be cancelled. Rogers remains firm in his philosophy.

Hundreds Arrested in New York As Demonstrations Enter New Phase

By A. P.

NEW YORK (AP)—Antiwar demonstrators mounted a third "stop the draft" protest Thursday, but police on the ground and in helicopters thwarted their moves over the five miles from the southern tip of Manhattan to midtown.

Trying new tactics, some 700 demonstrators split into roving bands to strike at targets from the armed forces induction center to the United Nations to the Times Square recruiting station.

But they were outmanned and outmaneuvered by policemen, who arrested 300 on charges ranging from inciting to riot to disorderly conduct to parading without a permit. Arrests for the three days totaled 604.

Protest leaders, admitting frustration and charging police with harassment, began laying plans for another demonstration Friday, but said specific plans were "quite up in the air."

A spokesman for the sponsoring "Stop the Draft Week Committee," described by protest leaders as a coalition of 50 antiwar groups, did say the protestors would again assemble at Battery Park in Lower Manhattan, but at 8 a.m. instead of the 5:30 a.m. of the two previous days.

Police used 4,000 policemen to control the demonstrations Thursday, as they did Wednesday. It is estimated that the demonstrations will cost the city $100,000.

Later Thursday, five adult antiwar demonstrators were escorted by police away from the area of St. Patrick's Cathedral, where President Johnson was attending the funeral of Francis Cardinal Spellman.

The five were about a half-block from St. Patrick's when they displayed signs protesting U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

A solid wall of police cars kept the demonstrators from the entrance to the United Nations. At Times Square, site of a recruiting station, a busload of police arrived just in time to turn aside an oncoming group of 150 demonstrators.

Police also had to keep the protestors apart from a group of longshoremen searching for them.

"Why I fought bums like these overseas for 3½ years," shouted one longshoreman as mounted policemen kept the two groups separated. "I can do it here," he said.

Govt. Officials Attend Rites For Francis Cardinal Spellman

NEW YORK (AP) — With solemn splendor, Francis Cardinal Spellman was interred Thursday beneath the majestic cathedral where he reigned for 28 years with great power and sunny simplicity.

President Johnson, his lined face grave, was among the extraordinary congregation of notables-of-state, church, industry and many faiths—assembled to do final honor to America's best-known prelate.

He was "a Christ-like Catholic churchman," said the Rev. Robert I. Gannon in a eulogy. Although the cardinal wielded enormous influence, Father Gannon said, "he never tried to impress anyone—even the most exalted."

But an illustrious company, including one of the most imposing array of eminent churchmen in the nation's history, was present in Manhattan's majestic St. Patrick's Cathedral to give their farewell homage.

President Johnson, dressed in black, sat on the aisle in a front pew, which he shared with other notables including Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and New York Sens. Robert F. Kennedy and Jacob K. Javits.

The cardinal died last Saturday of a cerebral stroke at the age of 78.

Eighteen churchmen, including six American cardinals and three cardinals from abroad, joined in concelebrating the solemn requiem Mass for their colleague, archbishop of New York since 1939.

His burial chamber was a vault beneath the high altar, where six of his predecessors rest. And high above—from the vaulted ceiling—the red hat given him by Pope Pius XII was hung to mark his passing.

About 3,300 persons packed the cathedral, most of the pews filled by invited dignitaries. A few of the throng outside were allowed to enter, and fill side aisles.

President Johnson flew in from Washington and returned after the service. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey also was present, along with a vast turnout of other public officials.

An estimated 3,000 people jammed the area in front of the cathedral, where Christmas lights sparkled from Fifth Avenue's store windows on a gray, overcast afternoon.

On the far edges of the crowd, a bearded man carrying a huge board, studded with medallions hawked, "Get your Cardinal Spellman buttons here."

Five antiwar demonstrators were escorted from the area by police. They held signs reading, "Napalm: Johnson's Baby Power," and "Hey, Hey, LBJ, How many kids did you kill today."

Smith Begins New Drive To Raise $45 Million

Smith College will initiate a program to raise $45 million before its centenary in 1975. The goal is the largest ever undertaken by a college for women. The program will begin with a three-year national campaign for $17 million on January 2, 1968.

President Thomas C. Mendenhall announced today that gifts and bequests for endowment, buildings and current funds will be sought from alumnae and other friends of the college.

President Mendenhall pointed out that the cost of operating the college has risen 77% in the past seven years, while income from student fees has increased only 37%. The college budget has shown a deficit in each of the past five years.

Last year the Smith student paid 65% of the total cost of her education. The balance was provided by income from endowed funds, with a market value of about $58 million, and by current gifts, including the annual alumnae fund.

The new development program will seek $19 million for endowment, $15 million for current operations, and $11 million for new buildings, including a fine arts center, dormitories, a food preparation center to serve dormitories, and improved recreational facilities.

Although Smith has no plans at this time for increasing enrollment or for coeducation, gifts will be sought in the campaign to develop further the cooperative program with Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges and with the University of Massachusetts.

This program has resulted in the enrollment of men in courses at Smith and enlarged opportunities for cultural and social events. A fifth member, Hampshire College, will join the program when it is opened in 1970.

"Smith's problem is not unique among independent colleges," President Mendenhall explained, "for operating expenses continue to rise at a greater rate than income. More gift support will have to be sought and new sources found if independent colleges are to maintain the quality of their education."

Legislature Forced To Act on Reducing Its Present Size

The Election Division Thursday certified 82,236 signatures on petitions to reduce the 240 member Massachusetts House to 160 seats.

That was more than enough to force the legislature to act on the proposed amendment. If at least a quarter of the present membership of the legislature approves the amendment in 1968 and 1969, it then will go on the ballot in the election of 1970.

If the legislature fails to act or fails to give the amendment the needed vote, the sponsors can collect an additional 10,206 signatures and insure a place on the ballot.

The petitions for the reduction in the membership were filed by the Committee for a Modern Legislature, and the League of Women Voters.

The Election Division also has under study a petition filed by the Committee for a Constitutional Convention, headed by Sen. John M. Quinlan, R-Dover, which proposes a convention to redraft the state constitution.

New Censure Action in Student Senate

By DON LEBLANC
Staff Reporter

Senator Brad Johnson has introduced for action next week a bill calling for the censure of Senator Larry Marcus. In a meeting last night of the Student Senate Executive Committee, Johnson cited as his reason "conduct unbecoming a Student Senator."

He claims that at Wednesday's meeting of the Constitutional Convention, Marcus heckled speakers, failed at times to be attentive and spoke out of turn.

Viet Cong Request United Nations Visa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States said Thursday night that the Viet Cong in recent months had sought to send two representatives to New York for a year or two, but had dropped the idea when told that they could come only on U.N. business."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg said the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front, the so called Viet Cong, had made an inquiry through the U.N. secretariat in late September about getting visas for the visit. But later, he said, the NLF stated that it was asking "no U.N. status" for the representatives and that they would grant interviews to news media, and it failed to reply to a question of whether they would talk with the U.S. government.

In response to a question, Goldberg said he did not believe that "under the circumstances" an NLF visit would have contributed to negotiations leading to peace in Vietnam.

World famous pianist, Claudio Arrau, will perform in the SU Ballroom Monday night. For details see page 3.

"Giant Step" Debuts As UM Film in Color

By DICK GEIKIE
Staff Reporter

Lights—Camera—Action, have been the words of the day at the office of the Secretary of the University of Massachusetts, Robert McCartney.

He and his staff have worked for the past year making an interpretational movie of the University entitled, Giant Step. To be released in February, the film is approximately 30 minutes long, in color, with sound. Ten prints will be made available for showing at high schools, clubs, and meetings of interested organizations. Flyers publicizing the film's availability are being prepared.

The purpose of the film is to give an up-to-date account of the educational, research, and service programs offered to students at UMass.

Giant Step points out that a college education is a must today, and then enumerates many facets of college life.

It starts at the Admissions Office, an applicant's first encounter with the University. The emphasis is on the University's personalized processing of applications, which is of prime importance in the student selection process.

Provost Oswald Tippo also comments on the value of higher education and the University's faculty.

Student participation in such organizations are student government, the Massachusetts Review, and WFCR—Five College Radio, is highlighted as being invaluable. The film also emphasizes the existence of many such extra-curricular activities.

The Five College Cooperative Plan is shown as another important and attractive University program.

Complementing the University's academic and extra-curricular activities are its residential Colleges, i.e. Orchard Hill and Southwest. These two are depicted with their accompanying innovations and advantages. The opening of Southwest marked the occupation of the largest single residential complex at any university in the history of the United States.

"Many of the recent University advances," says McCartney, "have been illustrated in Giant Step, but there is still a need for more."

There will be a university showing of the film before it is released.

John MacDermott To Speak Sunday

John MacDermott, associate editor of "Viet Report" will give a lecture titled "Kennedy, Johnson and New Intervention," on Sunday, Dec. 10 in Dining Commons #7 at 8:00 p.m.

MacDermott has traveled through Europe with the National Liberation Front and has caused much controversy because of his views on United States' foreign policy.

The lecture is presented by the Southwest College Council free of charge to the university community.

STATESMAN DEBUT

The Statesmen, the male vocal octet of the University of Massachusetts, will make their debut on Friday, December 8, 1967, at a Christmas Bazaar Concert at Mt. Holyoke College. The group is available for group or club functions. If your organization is interested in booking the Statesmen, please contact their Business Manager, Stan Rosenberg, at Brett House (6-6289).

Chorale Season To Begin Sunday

The University of Massachusetts Chorale under the direction of Dr. Richard duBois will make its first appearance of the year in Holyoke, Mass. They will be giving a Winter Concert which will include a cappella piece by the Chorale, madrigals by the Chamber Singers, and a selection by the Madrigals.

The concert will be Sunday, Dec. 10, in the Holyoke High School and is being sponsored by "Project Culturama". In conjunction with this concert, the Chamber Singers, a select group of singers chosen from the Chorale, appeared on Channel 40, a Springfield, Mass. T.V. station last Friday, Dec. 1.

The Chorale will also be appearing on Dec. 14, at the Lord Jeffery. This concert will be sponsored by the Amherst Rotary Club; and finally on Sunday, Dec. 17, the Chorale, along with the Chorus, will appear in Bowker Auditorium at 4:00 p.m.

SEA's Stress Advent

During the Eighth Century, the Christian Church decided to make all of December a period of preparation for Christmas. This period they called "advent."

"Advent" is a word that has almost dropped out of ordinary speech. It is still affected from time to time by newspaper writers in search of a resounding opening of their articles: "With the advent of the spring fashions" or "The advent of the football season brought with it a return to wintery conditions." But in spoken English the word is on the way out—which is a pity, because it has all to do with "coming in."

It is this idea of "coming in", of Christ's coming in, that the Students for Ecumenical Action have chosen to stress in their University Christian Worship services during the month of December. The students planning their services often depart from many of the Church's rigid structures in searching for worship materials which are relevent for today's students. Experimentation, freedom and communication are among the elements concerning those students.

These services are held each Sunday morning at 11:00 a.m.

Drama Review

Stelzer Shows Skill In Title Role of "Enrico"

Henry IV is about 50 and very pale. The hair on the back of his head is already grey; over the temples and forehead it appears blond, having been tinted in an evident and puerile fashion. His eyes have a fixed looked which is dreadful to see, and this expression is in strained contrast with the sackcloth he is wearing.

Adopting the role of a rational 'madman", Peter Stelzer brings the twentieth century audience back into the violent era of King Henry IV of Germany, and then carefully returns them to the passive present.

Surrounding him are two picturesque images of the past which are more realistic than the young couple that portrays them. Through these portraits the Pirandellian version of illusion and reality is crystallized in a confrontation of form and life.

In revealing climax, the supposedly "mad" king explains to his false contemporaries:

"I am cured, gentlemen; because I can act the madman to perfection, here; and I do it very quietly, I'm only sorry for you that have to live your madness so agitatedly, without knowing it or seeing it."

Stelzer moves through the roles of pretended insanity, outrage, and confrontation with his characteristic skill. The only other well-played character was Baron Belcredi, who portrayed one of the king's antagonists.

Pirandello, in the final analysis, carried the play with his ideas that man is the sum of other people's opinions, that illusion and truth are deceptive, and that tragedy results when people are forced to look at themselves through the eyes of others.

Enrico IV, will be presented through Dec. 9 at 8:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Blasko Blasts Vandals As Troublesome Minority

By SANDRA BORNSTEIN
Staff Reporter

"Every opportunity they get, they get destructive," said Police Chief Alexander P. Blasko, discussing student vandalism. "Ninety-six per cent are the best kids, but it's the other four per cent that cause all the trouble," he said.

Most often it is impossible "to apprehend anyone because there is a lack of help". The skimpy force uses all its facilities to the utmost, he said. Every evening after 6, there are fire and security guard patrols. Portable radios are used by these patrols throughout the campus, and stakeouts are used when needed.

According to the chief, there is more thievery than vandalism. The heaviest stealing occurs during the weekends, the two main targets are dark parking lots and vacant dorms.

"Can't always say it's our students," said Chief Blasko. Over the weekends there are many guests on campus who could be causing some of the damage. In addition, dances and concerts draw strangers which could be the source of much trouble, he said.

Another large target for thievery is the dormitories. According to Chief Blasko, it is the student's own fault when his possessions are stolen. "The surest way to prevent thefts is to lock your door," said the chief. He stressed that each student should lock his room whenever he leaves, no matter for how long. "Money is a temptation to anyone," he said. "It doesn't take long to walk 10 feet into a room, pick up a purse or wallet, and walk out unnoticed."

Dorms are also the prime target for vandalism. Big boxes and cans are pushed out, windows are smashed and elevators are tampered with, he said.

But, on the whole, this campus really isn't bad, said the chief. There is basically only "one walk of life represented here the majority of the time so "we know what we're dealing with."

GOP Governors Foresee Scramble

by WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writer

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) —Republican governors foresee a wide open scramble for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination at the party's national convention next August.

They doubt that any man will emerge from the presidential primaries with a grip on the nomination.

And only a scattered few are committing themselves now to any of the candidates for the White House.

Ky. Students Press Opts for Seats on Governing Bodies

GEORGETOWN, Ky — The Kentucky Intercollegiate Press Association has unanimously supported a resolution favoring student representation on governing bodies of all colleges and universities in Kentucky.

Started by the Student Congress and the student newspaper at the University of Kentucky, the move was climaxed at the Fall meeting of KIPA at Georgetown College, Dec. 1 and 2.

The organization's executive committee also initiated a study on the freedoms and responsibilities of the college student press in the state.

Taking the first steps toward providing a state-wide news service for campus papers, KIPA voted to furnish its members with information and will plan concerted editorial campaigns initially on two issues that may surface at the 1968 General Assembly—A campus speaker ban and student representation on college governing boards.

"The organization has laid the foundation for what it sees as its future, a viable coalition of Kentucky campus newspapers working for their high quality, responsibility and freedom," KIPA President John A. Zeh said. He is a University of Kentucky communications senior.

He called the establishment of the freedom and responsibilities study an obvious result of the convention's discussion of "Student Power and the Student Press in Kentucky."

One speaker sparking the study was Gary C. Dickey, the former Troy State (Ala.) College editor who was expelled after trying to editorialize against the state legislature.

Dr. Dario Politella of the University of Massachusetts, president of the National Council of College Publications Advisers and coordinator of its Commission on the Freedoms and Responsibilities of the College Student Press in America, gave the keynote speech on "Student Power and the Student Press." He said that many campus newspapers are editorially seeking "student power as well as covering it in their news pages. He warned against overplaying of local minorities.

Wood Technicians To Hold Open House

The Wood Technology Section of the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management will hold an informal open house and social gathering on Dec. 12 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Room 203, Holdsworth Hall.

The purpose of the meeting is to show visitors the new training facilities of the Wood Science program and to acquaint them with the career opportunities in the wood-using industries. This event is open to anyone interested in learning more about the area of forest products. Students considering a change of major are especially welcome to attend.

The meeting has been planned and will be conducted by the Wood Technology—Wood Utilization Student Committee, a joint committee of students from the Forestry Department and the Stockbridge School. Alumni of both programs, representing such firms as DuPont, Borden Chemical, Carborundum, Georgia-Pacific, Weyerhaeuser, and International Paper have been specifically invited to meet with students and visitors to discuss their work and the opportunities available in their specific fields. There will be displays illustrating the equipment currently being used in wood research.

Arrau Performs at S. U. Monday

Claudio Arrau, world famous concert pianist, will be performing in the Student Union Ballroom Monday at 8 p.m. The concert is sponsored by the University Concert Association.

Beginning his career at the age of five, by the time he was 20, his world famous tours began. This is his 27th.

He is acclaimed for his outstanding interpretations of Bach, Mozart, Chopin and Liszt.

The Vietnam War

John T. Wheeler reported recently that "official figures for 1967 show 7,092 Americans were killed through the first week in October, compared to 8,133 Vietnamese." (Boston Herald 10-17-67) Yet these figures are deceptive, as he notes, because they include "not only regulars, but militia, pacification workers, police and special forces mercenaries." Actually, "only 3,200 ARVN (South Vietnamese Army) regulars" had been killed in combat. In 1965, US battle dead accounted for 16 per cent of the allied slain. The following year, this increased to 61 per cent of the allied regulars killed in battle. This year, according to the above figures, American forces are absorbing 70 per cent of the regular battle dead. This evidence clearly reflects the diminishing role of the South Vietnamese Army in the war.

In the pacified villages, American forces do not trust the militia and many times cannot break through the Viet Cong infra structure in these villages. Because VC sympathizers are everywhere, the war effort cannot be entrusted to the Vietnamese. As John Kenneth Galbraith has stated: "It is necessary to explain why ARVN morale and efficiency, a certain ingenuity in avoiding combat apart, remain well below Arab-minimum standard."

Our government has answered these inquiries with bombs and war escalation. Its efforts to give the Vietnamese a nation have failed; the American brand of right wing oligarchy does not suit these people's needs. The ARVNs won't fight for their "freedom", because they have no freedom to lose.

"OUR" Vietnamese don't fight at night or on week ends. According to Peter Arnett of the Associated Press, "Most of the troops insist on a 5½ day week, taking Saturdays and Sundays off, while their allies and the Viet Cong go on fighting. The National Observer of Sept. 25, 1967 said, "Collecting tales about the incredible inefficiency, slovenliness, and laziness of South Vietnam's army is perhaps the easiest work in all of the country. The Army is the No. 1 scandal of the war and it is the No. 1 failure of the American military command."

The more we do, the less they do. The less they do, the more we do. Total American casualties now regularly outrun the South Vietnamese draft call, and last September the U.S. drafted more men than South Vietnam had in the past six months. It should be quite obvious that the 60 or so per cent of hamlets said to be "pacified" are under varying degrees of military, not political control.

Viewpoint

A Grander Ideal

The bane of education in America today is the demand for useful information. Students demand information that will get them through exams, courses, the university, perhaps through graduate school as well, and certainly into a job; and the university is set up to provide what they want. The process is stifling to the mind; and one may well wonder if the university improves half so many students as it ruins.

The students demand the information that ruins them, but they can hardly be blamed; for they have been led to believe that they should do so, and few are aware of any alternatives. Their parents, their relatives, their teachers, their future employers, their government — all conspire against them. For this is the reasoning: the purpose of a university, we are told, is to serve society; and it does this by turning out graduates who will meet society's needs. Thus the student learns to evaluate his education in terms of a specific career; and thus the demand for useful information.

The danger of this demand is that it turns the educational process into a mere transmission of information; the professor becomes a mechanical dispenser, and the students, lifeless receptacles. The professor is effectively shut off from a vital source of learning, his students; and the students come to feel that it is not their purpose to challenge authority, to offer their own insights, or to draw their own conclusions. They learn to absorb, like sponges, and they will accept anything. Mentally, they are dead.

As a result, the university is divided into two groups, filiers-of-minds and minds-to-be-filled: teapots and teacups. No longer is it a community of scholars. I think the situation is desperate, and I wonder how we were ever conned into accepting it. It seems that the universities are dedicated not so much to Wisdom as to the Gross National Product, for this is better business; Wisdom has never paid very well. Thus they gain the world and lose their souls. For why should a university, one of the noblest of human creations, serve any ends other than its own? If it is better, let it be served, rather. Why should it measure its graduates to society's specifications?

Somehow we have lost sight of a grander ideal. This ideal assumes that the prime function of a university is not to serve society, but to challenge it; not to dispense information, but to raise questions; not to fear controversy, but to welcome it; and not to teach a student how to make a living, but to try to learn, with him, how to live. It agrees with Whitehead that the only significant education is that which leads to "activity of thought, and receptiveness to beauty and humane feeling." Scraps of information as Whitehead recognized, have nothing to do with it.

Sam Spark Speaks Out

That's Big Business

"I'm glad you could make it to our fair town, Ray. I understand from the B.B.B. that you have been sent here to inspect the establishments of our college town. As chairman of the 'Newspaper Writers of the Valley We Love', why don't I lead you on the tour of the business area of our . . ."

". . . fair town?"

"Yes, that's right. Now here we are at Grab's delicatessan. Just look at the plush carpeting."

"Oh, I can't look at the carpeting, not when the price list on the wall says a corned beef sandwich is—oh, I can't believe it—only 85¢.

"Well, Ray, we know it's unbelievable, but we make that litttle extra effort here in our college town to keep prices down to what they are and we've found that this policy of giving special attention to students more than pays off. Want a pickle with that sandwich, Ray? It's only a little extra."

"You mean a pickle doesn't come with it?"

"No; at first they put a big bucket of pickles on every table, but let's face it, Ray, how many pickles can you give away with a little 85¢ sandwich and still hope to break even. All other Grab prices are equally reasonable, including the specials: the 'money munch' and the 'tenspot tuna'. Well, let's move on down the street."

"Here we are at McCluk's Quarter and Half Store. They're having they're 53rd Birthday Sale this year."

"But I thought they opened up just over a year ago?"

"Yes, that's true, Ray. But McCluck's policy is to have a gala birthday sale once a week, every week. Keeps the customers coming in and the merchandise moving. That way, the customer's save."

"What way?"

I guess it's time to visit the record shop of Amherst, Harmony Coronary. Notice the fabulous sale, now in progress. It's the Wilson Pickett — Stevie Wonder —Aretha Franklin— Percy Sledge— Mitch Ryder Soul Special Sale. Pick any album, only $5.79.

$5.79. Isn't that a bit unusual.

I guess it is. But according to a few of the foremost authorities on the UMass campus, this is the type of music college audiences are demanding. So Melody Coronary figures to sell out this entire display in a matter of hours.

But really, $5.79 for an album?

You still don't believe it, do you? Actu reason they can afford to lower their p this sale is that they bought these albums quantity.

I see. Let's go to another fine Colleg Store.

"Ah, here we are at a favorite campus h spot, Orgie's Pipe and Tobacco Shop. H dents can peruse some of the world's grea ture, can obtain valuable study aids, and g smoking equipment at rock bottom prices

Student Leaders

To the editor:

The business of class government and the dissent that is now raging disturbs me. As a class officer, I am deeply hurt to think that some students of this university have no more faith in their class officers than to think that these representatives are out for their own good. Student leaders are not out for personal gain, but are concerned with what is best for their constituency.

As for the recent accusations directed, or should I say misdirected, towards Mr. Wood concerning Senior Week, I would say that all he is guilty of is sincerity and showing a true concern for the welfare of his class.

A Proposal for Curfews

To the editor:

The problem of second semester curfews has been discussed and debated by students, counselors, and faculty. All have agreed that curfews are archaic things. They are based on moral standards which long since have been changed. Fortunately our University has recognized this and has taken limited action. All upperclass women's curfews have been abolished and freshman curfews have been liberalized.

Although this action has been an advance, it is not enough. When the new freshman curfews were put into effect they were supposed to be open to revision, but as yet no action has been taken.

We propose that curfews for second semester freshmen be relaxed on the basis of the student's previous faithfulness to the curfew regulations. However, if any dormitory rules are broken during the second semester, the curfew may be reimposed at the discretion of the House Judiciary. These criteria eliminate the problems of a blanket removal of curfews and give responsibility where responsibility is due!

To the editor:

We wish to express our continued gratitude to the "Daily Collegian" for its excellent coverage of the swimming team.

The opinion stated by one individual of the team in his letter to the Editor on Dec. 6 does not represent the feelings of the majority of the squad.

We realize that a few mistakes are inevitable and the ones referred to in that letter are certainly of a minor nature.

The Daily Collegian has been sufficiently accurate and more than generous to us in the space alloted.

A major growth and diversification program is underway at United Fruit.

Last year, people spent close to $300 million dollars to purchase over 3 billion pounds of Chiquita bananas.

This success is due to a vast amount of research, planning, cultivation, quality control and advanced management techniques; our bananas today are a great improvement over what they were 5 years ago.

These improvements that United Fruit has brought to Chiquita bananas are only a part of the story. We have grown in many other diversified and exciting fields as well.

United Fruit has in its corner the Great White Fleet consisting of more than 40 refrigerated vessels; Compania Numar, processor of edible oils, in Costa Rica; Revere Sugar Refinery; J. Hungerford Smith Co., Inc., manufacturers of syrups, ice cream flavorings and toppings, and Baskin-Robbins, a leading distributor and producer of ice cream. We also own: A&W Root Beer Company and A&W Drive-Ins of Canada, Ltd.; Tropical Radio Telegraph which operates a public communications system between the United States and Latin American countries; and a 40% interest in MacMillan, Bloedel, United, Inc., suppliers of kraft linerboard for our banana boxing operations.

If you would like to be part of this excitement at United Fruit, we would like to meet with you.

Redmen Dominate All-Conference Team on Offense, Defense

KINGSTON—UMass Redmen, who successfully defended their Yankee Conference championship during the past season, have dominated the all-conference team by placing four men on both the offensive and defensive teams.

The selections were made by a vote of the coaches at the six New England state universities.

All six teams were represented on the two clubs and an indication of the better balance in the conference this year is demonstarted in that Rhode Island placed three men on the offensive unit and two on the defensive club while New Hampshire had two men on the offensive team and three on the defensive team. Connecticut had two players on each club while Maine had one defensive selection and Vermont one on the offensive team.

As expected, the offensive stars received the most support in balloting. Greg Landry of Massachusetts, who led in passing with 991 yards and was second in rushing with 728 yards was named to the quarterback spot. Bob Mitchell, who practically rewrote all of the UVM rushing records during a spectacular .three-year .varsity career and was the leading conference rusher with a total of 887 yards, was named for one halfback position while the other went to Bill Phillips of New Hampshire.

Brent Kaufman, URI's hard running fullback, who gained 590 yards and tied Landry for second place in the scoring race with 48 points, was named to the fullback position. Bill Estey, UNH's spectacular kickoff and punt returner, was chosen on the first offensive team as a specialist.

Frank Geiselman of Rhode Island who caught 48 passes for 774 yards and eight touchdowns, which with two pass conversions for extra points gave him the scoring title with 52 points, was a unanimous choice for one end spot while Redman Nick Warnock was chosen for the other. Jim Mitchell of Massachusetts and Steve Dixon of Connecticut are the tackles and Bob Santucci of Massachusetts and Roy Lawrence of Connecticut, the guards. Howie Small of Rhode Island was named center.

Defensively, Paul Mlinar of Massachusetts and Bill Vasilios of New Hampshire were selected for end spots with Kent Stevens of Massachusetts and Vince Martino of New Hampshire, tackles and Steve Smith of Connecticut, middle guard.

A four-way tie resulted in the voting for linebacking spots. Selected were Ernie Smith of Massachusetts, Ken Kuzman of Rhode Island, Pete Quackenbush of Maine and Henry Palasek of Connecticut. Mike McArdle of Massachusetts and Terry Hogg of Rhode Island were given the halfback posts and Kurt Vollherbst of New Hampshire the safety spot

The second team selections follow:

OFFENSE

DEFENSE

Ends, Leon Spinney, Rhode Island and Tom York, Massachusettts; tackles, Don Loranger, Maine, and Pat O'Reilly, Vermont; middle guards, Tom Ricci, Rhode Island and Bruce Gombar, Massachusetts; linebackers, Ed Kassak, Rhode Island, and Dick Gordon, New Hampshire; halfbacks, Bill Frye, Massachusetts, and Ron Grinage, Connecticut, and safety, Dave O'Donnell, Rhode Island.

Frosh Hoopsters Seek Third Win In Action Against St. Anselm's

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

Coming off two successive wins, the UMass freshman basketball team faces a tough test tomorrow as it travels to Manchester, N.H. to take on St. Anselm's freshman team.

The Little Redmen have had periods of both good offense and tight defense but have been inconsistent much of the time in their two games.

Coach Broaca said with caution, "A long three-hour trip plus a real fine opponent will add up to a tough game for us." The coach will be going with the same starting team of Lou Griffith, Ken Mathias and Jim Ryan up front, with Bob Dempsey and Bill Greeley in the backcourt.

St. Anselm's frosh which stand 0-1 are expected to be tough on their home court. The home of St. Anselm's has a foreboding reputation for visiting teams. Among the starters for the Saints will be 6'5 Jim Dunlay of Weymouth, an Eastern Mass. all-scholastic choice last year.

The Little Redmen will return home after this game to play two games, before breaking for the holiday and exams.

WMUA to Broadcast Action from Steel Bowl

This weekend's Steel Bowl basketball tournament at Pittsburgh will be broadcast live, both nights, on WMUA, 91.1 FM. The first round, with UMass meeting Pittsburgh, will be aired at 8:55 tomorrow night.

With mellow-voiced Glenn Briere at the mike, WMUA will broadcast either the consolation or the championship game Saturday night. If UMass beats Pitts tomorrow, then the championship game against the winner of the Air Force-Duquesne game will be carried Saturday night at 8:55.

Should the Redmen lose tomorrow night, then they will meet the loser of the Air Force-Duquesne game in the consolation game Saturday night. Air time will be 6:55.

I won't go into business when I graduate because:

- ☐ a. I'd lose my individuality.
- ☐ b. It's graduate school for me.
- ☐ c. My mother wants me to be a doctor.

Can't argue with c), but before you check a) or b)—pencils up! There have been some changes. Drastic changes in the business scene. But changes in the vox populi attitude regarding business . . . especially on campus . . . just haven't kept pace.

Take the belabored point that business turns you into a jellyfish. The men who run most of the nation's successful firms didn't arrive by nepotism, by trusting an Ouija board, or by agreeing with their bosses. Along the way, a well-modulated "No" was said. And backed up with the savvy and guts today's business demands.

In short, individuality is highly prized in much of the business world—the successful much. Even when the business is big. Like Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System.

We provide communications equipment for our Bell System teammates, the Bell telephone companies. This takes a lot of thought, decisions, strong stands for our convictions, (and sometimes some mistakes . . . we're human, every 160,000 of us).

Individuality pays off. Not only in raises, but in personal reward as well. Like an engineer who knew deep down that there was a better way to make a certain wire connector—and did. Or a WE gal who streamlined time-consuming office procedures, and saved us some $63,000 a year.

Rewards and accolades. For saying "No." For thinking creatively and individually. For doing.

Not every hour is Fun Hour, but if you've got imagination and individuality—you've got it made. With a business like Western Electric. We'll even help you answer b) with our Tuition Refund program. Come on in and go for President!

PITTSBURGH—Tournament time comes earlier than usual this year for the UMass basketball team as the Redmen travel to Pittsburgh for the two-game Steel Bowl tonight and tomorrow.

UMass meets Pittsburgh, one of the two local teams in the tourney, tonight at 9 p.m. in the first round. In the other first round game tonight, the Air Force Academy meets Duquesne of Pittsburgh.

The championship game between the winners of the first round contests will be played tomorrow night at 9 p.m., preceded by the consolation game at 7 p.m.

The Redmen have always done well in holiday tournaments. Last year they finished second in the Boston Garden classic losing only to BC and capturing the consolation trophy in the Oklahoma City All-College tournament by beating DePaul and Texas.

Tonight UMass will be favored to get past Pittsburgh into the championship round. The Panthers, who over the last three seasons have compiled a record of 18-52, lost their first game last Saturday to Rutgers, 100-74.

Pitt is relying heavily on sophomores with three expected to start tonight. Bob Petrini, a 6'2 guard from Washington, D.C., one of them, is rated as the best basketball prospect to have played at Pitt in a long time.

Petrini played his high school ball at DeMartha High School in Washington, which is known for being a hoop power in addition to producing Brendan McCarthy.

Petrini is a fine shooter who led last year's 13-4 frosh team in scoring with a 16.2 average.

The other two sophs are expected to give the Panthers added strength under the boards. Mike Patcher, a 6'5 center from Johnstown, Pa., is a very strong rebounder as well as an ambidextrous shooter who can score well with either hand.

Bob McFarland, a 6'5 forward from Michigan City, Ind., was the second leading scorer on last year's freshman team. In addition, Coach Bob Timmons is expected to use 6'7 soph Charlie Hunt up front quite a bit.

Pitt will also rely on three veterans returning from last year's 6-19 club. Ken Bollens, a 6'4 senior from Pittsburgh, was the second leading scorer and rebounder last season and will start at one of the forward posts.

Bollens came on strong in the second half of last season to wind up with 270 points for a 10.8 average and 182 rebounds.

At the remaining guard spot, the Panthers will go with either Pete Smith or Len Kalata. Smith, a 6'2 senior, is a good ball-handler and leader, but Kalat, a 6'3 junior who was third on last year's team in scoring, is a better shooter and should see considerable action.

Despite the record of the past few seasons, the Panthers are optimistic since they boast better speed, shooting, ball handling and depth. If they can hold their own under the boards, they may be tough. Pitt plays a rugged, rough-and-tumble game but the Redmen should have the edge in speed.

Air Force meets Duquesne in the first game of tonight's first round doubleheader at Civic Arena. Duquesne, which used to be a perennial eastern power, has seen its basketball fortunes slip in the last couple of years but appears to be back on the track and is favored to win the tournament.

Redmen Arrive in Pittsburgh, Work Out for Tomorrow's Game

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

PITTSBURGH—After finally arriving in town, the Redmen face a two-night tournament that will feature one of the best teams in the East.

UMass was scheduled to land in the Steel City at 4 p.m. yesterday afternoon, but weather caused cancellation of their original flight, and after being rerouted through Syracuse, they didn't touch down in Pennsylvania until 7:30 p.m.

Coach Jack Leaman had planned to run his charges through drill at the fabulous Civic arena but the late arrival made this impossible. Last night the Redmen did work out however, at the University of Pittsburgh Field House. . . . .

UMass is among four units entered in the Steel Bowl. Tomorrow night they face Pittsburgh at 9 p.m. while Duquesne, the heavy tournament favorite, meets the Air Force Academy at 7 p.m.

Saturday night the winners meet for the championship while the losers battle for consolation honors.

Pittsburgh, which was blasted off the court by Rutgers, 100-74 a week ago, is a tough, aggressive outfit. The starting line-up will consist of two seniors and three sophomores. Forwards Ken Bolens (6'4) and Mike Patcher (6'5) are the top players on the team. Patcher, a good shot, scored 22 points against Rutgers.

Two 6'2 guards, Pete Smith and Bob Petrini, will handle the play-making chores, while soph center Charlie Hunt, (6'7) is getting his first starting assignment.

UMass will use the same opening line-up it went with in the New Hampshire and Rhode Island games. Coach Leaman is hoping to run a little more than previous games, however, and will probably employ a zone press at strategic points in the game.

In the opening Steel Bowl contest, Duquesne takes on Air Force. The favored Dukes are a young team. They handled St. Francis (Pa.) and a good American University team, so they boast the only winning record of any tournament team. Duquesne has shot 51 percent from the field so far while dominating the boards against both opponents.

Ron Guziak (22.5 average), Phil Washington (19.0) and Moe Barr (18.5) are their leading scorers.

Air Force is led by 6'10 Cliff Parsons, who comes from just outside of Pittsburgh. Last year Parsons developed into one of the finest centers in the nation, boasting a 19.7 average. Aside from him, however, the Falcons are young and inexperienced. They split their first two games this season, losing to Colorado and topping Regis (Colo.) lo.)

"We came down to win, but we've got to get by Pittsburgh first," was Coach Leaman's final pre-tourney statement.

TOURNEY FAVORED

Coach Glen Dobbs of the University of Tulsa is in favor of a "College Super Bowl" game, according to a current article in a national magazine.

"Cut back the regular season to eight games," says Dobbs. "With a minimum of four playoff games, a team would play no more than 12 games in a season, which is just one more than most bowl-bound teams play now. I would fill a tournament field of 16 with the champion from each of nine or 10 major conferences and with at-large entrants from the ranks of the Independents.

Hale, Cellilli Named To All-Star Soccer Team

Senior Co-captains Dick Hale and Gerry Cellilli have been named to the Yankee Conference all-star soccer team following a vote of the six league coaches, and UMass coach Larry Briggs was named coach of the year, the Daily Collegian learned yesterday.

Hale, a 5'9, 158-pound physical education major from Sharon, won the fullback slot on the mythical squad, and Cellilli, a 5'10, 155-pound math major from Ludlow, earned the honor at left wing for the second year in a row. Briggs, who recently underwent an operation on his foot, completed his 36th season as UMass soccer boss.

Vermont and Connecticut each placed three players on the star squad. Halfbacks Jeff Taft and Bob Schroeder, along with center forward Peter Baldwin were selected from the Catamount squad, which won its third straight Conference soccer championship this year. For Taft, it was the third time that he has been named to the team.

Fullback Ray Strong, halfback Al Cowles and right wing Ferrington Langna were the Husky selections. Rounding out the 11-man squad were Rhode Island's Charles Samaras in the goal, Maine forward Swatulani Munthali and New Hampshire inside wing Dean Jackson.

The list of honorable mentions include forwards Marty Smith (UMass), Jim Wood (Vermont), Ahmed Hamid (Maine), John Sahnas (Connecticut), Kirk Renn (Rhode Island) and Harrie Price (Maine); halfbacks George Tucker (New Hampshire) and Sal Lonero (Connecticut); fullback Ray Rainville (Rhode Island) and goalies Walt Olson (Maine) and John Hilton (Vermont).

Icemen Travel to Maine for Action

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Coach Jack Canniff's hockey squad will take to the road this weeknd traveling to Maine to play Colby and Bowdoin. The trip will be their first road action of the year.

After an opening game loss to Vermont, the Redmen skaters won their next two games beating MIT and Amherst last Wednesday.

Colby promises to be the tougher of the two opponents. The Bears were picked to finish second in Division II of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) according to a preseason poll of 18 coaches.

They went all the way to the division finals last year before losing to Merrimac College, 6-5. They got their season off to a flying start by running against AIC, 5-3, last week at the Colby campus.

Bowdoin was seeded seventh in the pre-season poll. Their only game has been an 8-3 loss to Providence last week at Providence.

The Redmen will play Colby tonight at 9 and then meet Bowdoin tomorrow at 4.

Grand Canyon Exhibit Opens

by JOHN WOJNAS

The Grand Canyon Exhibit opened yesterday at Memorial Hall and in the words of Howard Bridgman, President of the Forestry Club, "the program seems to be a definite success."

The exhibit is owned by the nationally known Sierra Club and is sponsored by the Forestry Club, the Park Management and Arboriculture Club at UM.

People attending the exhibit are exposed to every facet of the Grand Canyon by a series of slides, a color film, photographs, literature and a staff willing to answer any question and complete the participant's journey through the "Grand Canyon of the Living Colorado."

According to the Sierra Club, most of the scenes portrayed in the photo exhibit will be destroyed if two proposed hydropower dams now being considered by the U.S. Congress and the Federal Power Comm. are built. The 75 year - old Sierra Club is a leader among groups seeking to preserve Grand Canyon and other wilderness areas in the U. S.

According to Mr. Stanley F. Mikelk, spearhead of this movement on campus, "our program is drawing people from all over the area and we are quite happy with the turnout." The exhibit is open to the public, free of charge, and will continue until Wednesday of this week from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

GRAND CANYON COMES TO UMASS—Memorial Hall is the site of the exhibit of the Grand Canyon this week. The exhibit is open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. until Wednesday.

The film and the slides are shown continually and emphasize such aspects as the animal, mineral and plant life of one of America's most dramatic natural wonders.

An emphasis was placed on the protection of the Canyon and national parks in the country. As the film's narrator stated, "There is only one Grand Canyon," and asked the question, "Can we afford to set up national parks in the country? Can we afford not to?"

Two Juniors Resign From Class Exec Council

By RON LABRECQUE

What has been termed a "power struggle" intermixed with personality conflicts among various persons in student government manifested itself at a meeting of the Junior Class Executive Council held in the Senate Chambers last night.

News Analysis

Discussion of Winter Carnival plans was halted when Jack Dean, editor of the Winter Carnival booklet, announced his resignation as editor of the booklet and as a member of the Executive Council.

Jack Dean

In his speech, Dean accused Junior Class Pres. Wayne Thomas of degrading himself and class government through "nonsensical actions" in what he termed as "anti-Collegianism." Dean is Managing Editor of the Daily Collegian.

Although Dean's speech was later called "two-bit theatrics" by Thomas it resulted in more than an hour of open debate which centered around Dean's accusations.

Ralph Stoddard, Vice-Pres. of the Class of '69, stated that the arguments presented were "petty" and "mostly personal, not involving the Collegian or classes as such." However, Executive Council interest in the matter led Thomas to open the meeting to discussion and orderly debate ensued.

Over the past few months there has been a split in student government resulting in the formation of what Dean last night termed "two camps." It is apparent that one "camp" is composed of Senate and Collegian members and the other composed of the junior and senior class administrations.

The "power struggle" concerns these two camps and in particular the desire of each to be a check on the other.

Evident throughout the past week in what may be called political conflict between there two groups has been a combination of argument ranging from personal accusations to theory of class government.

Last night's Executive Council meeting was one incident, but certainly not an isolated one. It was a concrete manifestation of a conflict in student government.

Wayne Thomas

Dean accused Thomas to be among a group of "student leaders" attempting to discredit the Daily Collegian. An example given concerned an attempt last week to expose Sam Spark, the Daily Collegian's satiric column, as authored by a particular staff member. Dean called this attempt a "childish and assinine trick of revenge."

College Young Democrats Endorse Senator McCarthy at Convention

BOSTON (AP) — The presidential candidacy of Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., an outspoken opponent of President's policies in Vietnam, was endorsed by a three-to-two margin yesterday at the convention of the College Young Democratic Clubs of Massachusetts.

About 200 delegates, representing clubs from 33 colleges in the state, took part in the convention at Boston University.

All of the officers elected by the convention went on record supporting McCarthy's candidacy.

Denis Kanin of Norwood, a senior at Harvard, was reelected chairman of the organization.

Roger Sillivan of Boston, a senior at Boston University, was elected vice chairman of the Eastern Massachusetts region.

Nicholas Akerman of Springfield, a senior at the University of Massachusetts, was reelected vice chairman of the Western Massachusetts region.

Maureen Thorton of Simmons College was elected corresponding secretary and Rosalyn Jordan of Emmanuel College was elected recording secretary.

Eric Copeland of Harvard Law School was elected treasurer.

Draft Protesters Faced With Two Alternatives

Hershey Clarifies Stand Of the Selective Service

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department plan for prosecution of protesters who obstruct the draft offers a choice rather than a substitute for reclassification and priority callup, the nation's Selective Service director said yesterday.

"Either one of the channels is open to the government," said Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the controversial, 74-year-old longtime boss of the draft.

He said nothing in the newest announcement changed his original directive Oct. 26 suggesting that registrants who interfere illegally with military recruiting or the draft could be classified for immediate callup.

But while the courts are handling a case, draft officials will not get involved, Hershey said.

He suggested in an interview that prosecutions could be directed particularly toward those too old or otherwise ineligible for the draft.

He stressed there is to be no retaliation through the Selective Service System for those who protest within the bounds of the law.

Deputy director Daniel O. Omer, general counsel to the Selective Service System, said that in his view if a violation were prosecuted in court it could not be used also as the basis for removing a deferment to which the defendant was otherwise entitled.

"I don't see how you could possibly run a guy both ways," Omer said in a telephone interview. "Either you try him or you put him through the delinquency procedure."

The October directive, issued five days after a protest march on the Pentagon, brought outcries that Hershey was trying to use the draft to punish dissent.

Geo. Washington Univ. Bars Military Recruiter

The president of George Washington University, Lloyd H. Elliott, suspended military recruiting on the campus because of the stand of Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the Selective Service director.

The suspension was ordered until Gen. Hershey's letter of Nov. 8 "has been rescinded, overruled or clarified," Mr. Elliott announced.

Maroon Keys To Sponsor Vacation Bus

The Maroon Keys are sponsoring a bus to New York City for the benefit of those students going there for Christmas vacation.

The bus, an express to New York City, will leave Thursday, Dec. 21, at 5:00 p.m., and will leave off passengers at New York's Port Authority Terminal.

Tickets will go on sale today at the S. U. Ticket Office. The price is $5.75 one way. Passengers are guaranteed seats as extra buses will be provided as need arises.

University Orchestra Debuts Tomorrow Night

The UMass Symphony Orchestra will present its first concert of the season tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The concert is open to the public without charge.

The 90-piece orchestra, in its fifth year under the direction of assistant professor Ronald Steele of the UMass music department, has been noted by critics for its brilliance and majestic handling of symphonic music.

The program will open with Handel-Harty's Suite from Music for the Royal Fireworks. The orchestra will continue with Cowell's Fuguing Tune No. 3 and conclude with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 5 in D Minor, Op. 107.

Harpist Anita Titsworth will be featured as soloist in Handel's Concerto for Harp and Orchestra. A former student of Carlos Salzedo, Mrs. Titsworth received her M.M. degree from North Texas University where she received the Theodore Presser and Mu Phi Epsilon scholarships.

She served as first choir harpist with the New Haven Symphony for five years and has also appeared in recitals and concerts with orchestras in the Southwest. She was also soloist with the Pioneer Valley Symphony during the 1965-66 season.

ANITA TITSWORTH

Conductor Steele, a graduate of the University of Michigan and a former violinist for the US Air Force Symphony orchestra, founded the UMass orchestra in 1963 as a 27-piece string ensemble Since then, the orchestra has more than tripled to its present number of 90 musicians from Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith College, UMass and surrounding communities

Senator-at-Large, gave the rational behind this action. He stated that the desire to name the author of the Sam Spark column came as a result of one of last week's columns in which a number of people felt that Richard Wood, Pres. of the class of '68 was maliciously alluded to.

Larry Marcus

Marcus said that if the column is written with malicious intent the author should sign his real name in order that he might be answerable to any questions concerning his column.

Another charge brought by Dean was an alleged attempt to "implicate me in some sort of kickback deal or other illigitimate transaction concerning the winter Carni Booklet." Thomas replied by stating that any person in a position of responsibility should be aware that rumors concerning unethical practices will arise and that person should take them as a matter of course. Dean later stated that he felt the rumor was of a serious and malicious nature.

The fact was brought out at the meeting that there have been a number of resignations by Executive Council members in the past week. Dean called for "courage" on the part of Council members to "resign along with those of us who can no longer pledge our allegiance to a person who seems to have lost all sense of values in order to further personal goals." Earlier in the meeting Linda Shriber asked that her name be taken off the role. She told the Daily Collegian that she "felt Wayne Thomas had done many good things as President but I'm upset by certain actions of his and can't perform for the class on the Executive Council as the Executive Council performs for Wayne Thomas."

Linda Shriber

Thomas called the debate "a resounding vote of confidence for class officers." It is a fact that the majority of the Executive Council seemed to back the class officers.

Some questions do remain unanswered. Bruce Balboni, Pres. of the Class of '70 who was present at the meeting stated he thought that there "is an aura and cloud of dishonesty and suspicion surrounding the class of '69 administration."

It appeared that no definite answer to the present problems of student government resulted in the evening's debate.

STATESMAN DEBUT

The Statesmen, the male vocal octet of the University of Massachusetts, will make their debut on Friday, December 8, 1967, at a Christmas Bazaar Concert at Mt. Holyoke College. The group is available for group or club functions. If your organization is interested in booking the Statesmen, please contact their Business Manager, Stan Rosenberg, at Brett House (6-6289).

Angel Flight Sponsors Best-Dressed Contest

Angel Flight is sponsoring the Best Dressed College Girl Contest on campus again this year. From all the co-eds on campus, one girl and a runner-up will be chosen to compete on the national level in New York. The contest will once again be nationally covered by Glamour Magazine.

The judges will be Mrs. Gonon, Dean Field, Kathy Kounjian, last year's winner, Dr. Arny, Miss Crowe, Maj. Oakes, Chet Weinerman and Mrs. Tunis.

Gift certificates have already been contributed by Peck & Peck, Ann August, Pied Piper, and Cohen's among others.

Deadline for applications is Tuesday. Nominations for two girls from each dorm, sorority, or fraternity should be left at Dickinson Hall.

Snowstorm Inconveniences Student

by STEVE LAVEROWICH
Staff Reporter

Prompted by the letter on snow removal (see page 5), The Daily Collegian contacted Richard T. Burke, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds and asked him about snow removal procedures.

He said that the situation of Wed., Nov. 24 arose because of the time at which the storm reached its intensity, about 8 a.m. Since the storm did not increase in intensity until most of the maintenance crews were on their way to the University, there was little that could be done in the way of countering the storm.

Burke continued that extra crews were not called out because the storm tapered off a short time later. He added that roads are plowed in order of how heavily travelled they are, which accounts for Orchard Hill's being plowed later in the day.

The inconvenience caused to students and staff on Wed., Nov. 24 was merely the result of poor timing on the part of the Weatherman.

Primary Sweep May Not Be Enough for Nixon

PALM BEACH Fla. (AP) — Two leaders of the Republican Governor's Association said yesterday that former Vice President Richard M. Nixon could be denied the GOP nomination for the White House even if he sweeps the presidential primaries next year.

Governors John H. Chaffee of Rhode Island and John A. Love of Colorado said primary victories alone would not guarantee the nomination of Nixon or any other candidate.

They said public opinion polls on the way the prospective candidates would fare in a race against President Johnson, enthusiasm within the party, and the possible position of the Republican governors would all be factors in determining who is nominated. The two governors said those items could overrule the primaries.

Beethoven Concert To Be Given Tonight

Master concert pianist Claudio Arrau will perform at the UMass Student Union ballroom today at 8 p.m.

Mr. Arrau's performance here is part of his 27th consecutive United States-Canadian concert tour. He is considered "one of the world's foremost virtuosos."

His specialty is Beethoven, and in the spring of 1959 he played most of the 32 Beethoven piano sonatas in Berlin, Hamburg, London and Zurich in a series of 16 recitals that won him great acclaim. He was the first major artist to give a series of four all-Beethoven recitals in the fall of 1962 at the Lincoln Center's newly opened Philharmonic Hall.

The Berlin Philharmonic honored him in the spring of 1964 with a special Arrau-Beethoven Cycle in which he was heard in all five Beethoven Piano concertos and the Choral Fantasy. Last spring, he played three Beethoven recitals in Carnegie Hall in celebration of the hall's Diamond Jubilee.

Mr. Arrau's program for tonight will include Beethoven's Sonata in C Major, Op. 53, Schuman's Fantasy in C Major, Op. 17 and Debussy's Estampes. He will also play three works by Liszt: Gnomenreigen (Concert Etude No. 2), Les Jeux d'eaux a la Villa d'Este and Mephisto Waltz.

Mr. Arrau's visit is sponsored by the University Concert Association.

ARVN—Part 3

South Vietnamese Army

As a Vietnamese colonel remarked to correspondent Merton D. Perry, "The North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong fight like lions, while our soldiers fight like rabbits." (Newsweek 10-9-67) Yet the rabbits come from the same stock as the lions. Often they even come from the same families. The discrepancy in performance seems obviously due to motivation. The VC believe in their cause, the ARVN do not believe in ours.

Our massive intervention in 1965 was ordered to prevent a victory by the "enemy". This very questionable goal has been achieved, now 700,000 armed forces of South Vietnam, 250,000 regulars, seem more a liability than an asset.

Corruption in the army is rife. "Our South Vietnamese division commander was recently found to have sold to the Viet Cong, rice that had been provided by a U.S. aid program" ". . . The district chief of Cu Chi, north of Saigon, was fired for his misdeeds, but soon surfaced again as chief of another province, having been promoted from captain to major." (Newsweek 10-9-67) Thieu's pledges for reform are just as hollow as Johnson's "peace talks".

The problems of the South Vietnamese Army are institutionalized and will tie down American forces in Vietnam for untold years to come, if plans for a military victory are not abandoned by Johnson and his successors. The new lowering of the draft age to 18 in Saigon is expected to trigger an outflow of Vietnamese to Cambodia, when the law takes effect next January. The loss of American lives due to Vietnamese in action or incompetence can only rise, as long as Johnson pursues his ill-conceived goals.

In addition to these other factors, ARVN is war weary psychologically. They have no one year rotational tours of duty, like our G.I.'s. These part-time soldiers often end up serving five years, unless they desert. Johnson has increasingly escalated the war in deference to the Vietnamese people's wishes, thus destroying their lives and those of Americans who are dying in vain for a political crusade that unrealistic.

The only success of the South Vietnamese forces has been in beating Buddhist demonstrators, while the success of the American forces lies in its ignoble efforts to repress the revolutionary aspirations of Vietnamese for reform.

What all this analysis boils down to is that the war in Vietnam is primarily an American affair now. Why should Vietnamese die for us at $15 a week, or at any price? Thieu and Ky desire our presence only to keep them in power. Now even the Vietnamese are becoming disturbed by America's overbearing role in the war.

If they don't like what we're doing over there, why don't they go back where they came from?

You, Society, and Duty

Primitivo Garcia is dead. His death is of importance to every one of us because he did what we should do. He cared.

Garcia came to Kansas City from Mexico. He was taking a naturalization course there—he wanted to become an American.

After class one night his teacher, 25 and pregnant, was attacked by some punks. Dozens of citizens were in the area but only Primitivo aided her.

"The punks with her purse joined those who had tackled the Mexicans and all danced around her. One pulled her legs from under her; others lifted her skirt and fondled her. Primitivo was outraged. Plunging into the group he knocked down one and punched another in the face. "Shoot him, shoot him" they yelled. The purse snatcher did just that . . . Not one of the respectable people around the school bothered to call the police or interfere in any way during the ten minutes the grisly scene took to be played out." (Time, Dec. 8)

Garcia had cared; he had tried to help a preson beset by criminals. No one else did and unfortunately most of us are like those people—like the 37 New Yorkers who watched Kitty Genovese die in 1965. We say "but I mustn't get involved, I have a wife, a career, a girlfriend, a mother. What if I get hurt?" Unless you get involved you, your girlfriend, your mother are not safe.

Concerned citizens in Harlem and Washington have formed neighborhood groups to combat crime in the streets; it is their obligation, even necessity, to get involved. You must care. Your fellow man must help you and you him. Next time, it may be one of your loved ones who is attacked, and you'll want a Primitivo Garcia to care to get involved.

Violence in the streets is America's number one disease, it strikes impartially, savagely. We must aid those who are attacked for if one of us is not safe, none of us are. There is a lot of emphasis today on "doing one's thing," but there can be no compromise, no opprobium toward cops when violence is the case. To protest the draft, etc., is good, but when a punk gets his kicks sexually molesting pregnant women you've got to interfere and you've got to call the cops. Only the people can protect themselves from crime and only by helping one another so that it will die.

You may say what's it got to do with me? I can get rich and move to neighborhoods where there are no hoods. But violence is anywhere. To stop it you must act as Garcia did. John Donne wrote, "any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind, and therefore never to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee".

Necessary Federalism

By Sue Wallace
Editorial Day Editor

About 15,000 meat packing plants in the United States were under state jurisdiction rather than federal because their products were sold within the states. Unsanitary conditions and low quality meat were often found. These plants produce 25% of all processed meat, yet until last week, the American consumer was almost literally unprotected from these inadequate health standards.

Now, Congress has passed the Senate-backed meat bill which, hopefully, will go far in raising the quality of meat sold, by making all meat packing and processing plants follow federal standards.

The bill provides for federal grants to the states enabling them to make their own systems at least equal to that of the federal government. The states have been given two years to correct inadequacies with a provision for a one-year extension on the recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture. Failure to comply with the law would result in federal inspection.

The Secretary of Agriculture, whose powers will be increased by this bill, has the right to act against an intrastate plant if their products are dangerous to public health. He will have access to the plants and their records and the right to make laboratory tests on their products. The Secretary will report annually to Congress.

This bill also affects foreign meat products which u

Observer: General Hershey Goes Soft

by RUSSELL BAKER

WASHINGTON — It is painful to disagree with Gen. Lewis B. Hershey. He has been a great Draft Director. Perhaps the greatest Draft Director this country has ever had. One wants to do him only honor. And yet it must be said, with all respect, that he is wrong in his attitude toward student antiwar demonstrators.

General Hershey wants to take away their student deferments and draft them at once into the Army. This is not punishment for engaging in political activity, he says. Military service, he points out, is a "privilege," and students drafted for it should be proud to receive it.

Flawed Logic

General Hershey surely cannot have thought this thing through. In the first place, it is patently unfair. Why should a bunch of rowdy troublemakers be given a privilege which millions of American men have had to earn the hard way?

Consider the obstacles the typical young man must overcome before he is admitted to the privilege of the draft. In this oozingly affluent society, he has to overcome enormous odds to avoid being born to parents who can afford to send him to college.

At present, of course, the draftee feels it was worth the struggle. Had he been sent to college, he would have had to suffer the rigors of 9 o'clock History lectures and Saturday night proms instead of experiencing the joys of mastering to-the-rear-march and scraping garbage cans.

Some boys, threatened by high family income with the loss of their draft privilege, have to overcome the American educational system's brutal resistance to failing anyone before they can win their way into the draft.

How will these boys feel when they see their hard-gained rewards passed out to every campus loafer sprawled on the draft-board floor? Most likely, they are going to begin grumbling that America isn't what it used to be.

In short, General Hershey's policy is bound to damage morale. Even worse, however, it threatens the nation's moral fiber. National self-indulgence has already softened the old American fiber. If the Government is to let college hooligans extort the privilege of being drafted by such paltry threats of force as draft-board sit-ins there can be no limit to the abuses children will be encouraged to practice.

If this sort of thing is not stopped, we may soon have a whole generation that thinks it is entitled to the benefit of ten years in prison merely for running a traffic light.

General Hershey's attitude reflects a weakness of will, a disturbing tendency to permissiveness that is entirely out of place in a man entrusted with the solemn task of bestowing one of the nation's highest privileges.

Reasons for Censure

To the editor:

Concerning my motion to censure Larry Marcus, I would like to state my reasons for this action. First of all, most members of the Convention and spectators at this meeting, I believe, were aware of certain attitudes and behaviors exhibited by the Senators and Class officers in attendance. I believe that the behavior of most people there was correct.

As a deliberate body, the Convention members had the responsibility of maintaining an attitude of respect for opinions offered at the Convention regardless of who was offering them or what their positions were.

I also believe that if any member of the Convention objected to certain points it was his duty to remain with the guidelines of Robert's Rules of Order regardless what his objection. Robert's Rules provides ample provision for a member of a body to defend himself and offer opinions on whatever matter is being considered.

Larry Marcus' actions at the Convention were, in my opinion, despicable. He was continually making snide remarks at speakers in an effort to defame them and prejudice the assembly against them. He was disruptive in the group discussions he involved himself in which took place while other members of the body were trying to make themselves heard. For these reasons I believe Senator Marcus to be censurable.

Resignation

To the editor:

Having been on the Class of 1969 Executive Council for three years and having been a Student Senator and thus very involved in student government I do not believe I have ever seen this government in such a futile state before.

No governing body, be it the Class Executive Council or the Student Senate can hope to accomplish anything substantial by dragging the other through the mud and thus ruining its effectiveness. Student government here has turned into a complete state of anarchy with the people that compose it running rampant with their egos. This condition will well be the ruin of Student Government at the University.

It is for the reasons above that I have resigned from the Executive Council of the Class of 1969. I can not in good conscience continue working in this capacity. Any efforts that I have made to correct the situation that prevails have had support but at top levels have disintegrated.

If the Executive Council had been working for and representing the Class rather than "yesing" the President whose ideas seem to have all been egotistically centered, I would never have considered such a move.

However, I can not continue working for Wayne Thomas rather than my Class.

We Were There

To the editor:

We feel that the recent Letter on Fraternity Parties was misleading. The type of girl who makes herself readily available to strange boys is taking the risk of getting involved in what could be a potentially bad situation. She is labelling herself "pick-up."

We were there that night, as we have been many times before, and we have always been treated well.

The Girls From Patterson

Lack of Snow Clearance

To the editor:

I would like to register a complaint which I am sure many students in my position will agree with. I, as one of the unlucky few, had to remain on campus the Tuesday night before Thanksgiving recess, and awoke at 7:30 Wednesday to find approximately five inches of fresh, heavy snow on the ground.

I should think that the University, would have seen to it that a snowplow went around before 12:55 p.m. If the University is going to make a few students stay on campus, the least it could have done was to think of us and our situation.

People Don't Care that We Are at War

To the editor:

In its lead article of November 9 the Daily Collegian claimed, with no element of doubt, that their poll showed UMass students to be "strongly opposed to the handling of the (Vietnam) war". While there may be justification for this conclusion, I find a far more significant attitude suggested by the poll.

Less than 15% of the student body participated in this opinion survey. Apparently only fifteen students out of every hundred attending the University found the issue of Vietnam relevant to their lives. Only 15% of us feel that the war has significance.

This most poignant statistic of the poll, overlooked by both the news and editorial staffs, suggests more than anything else why the present administrative policy has been able to continue for so long. If 85% of the American people (and I assume college students to be among the more concerned group of citizens) don't care that we are at war, then something is wrong.

In every previous war we have entered a majority of the public were at a high level of emotional involvement favoring that war. We did not enter WW II until after the invasion of Pearl Harbor. It took the sinking of the Lusitania to get us actively suppporting the Allies in WW I, and of the Maine to get us into a Spanish-American War.

We should be concerned, and if we're not, then Mr. Johnson ought to start wondering why. While certain governmental programs may be justified by only a 15% backing of the people, a treaty to go to war should have a far greater active support. If our Vietnam venture, as this poll suggests, has, at best, only passive support, then history will see it as one of the most unnecessary wars permitted by the American people.

Crucial Problems

To the editor:

I would like to applaud the editorial of Dr. Roberts French, "A Grander Ideal." Each semester students are compelled to retain voluminous and ever growing amounts of factual material, or suffer society's consequences. Consequently, we are learning words and ideas, but we are not being educated in the true sense of the word: our minds remain stagnant.

I truly hope that the learned administrators of this University, and most importantly, each individual student will realize these crucial problems, and take meaningful steps lest we lose sight of this "grander ideal".

shots to St. Anselm's 45. Yet, UMass could only hit on 22 for a weeful 34% while St. Anselm's hit 24 for 55%.

A long three hour bus ride could have been reason for this poor shooting exhibition. The usually sharp-shooting, hard-running frosh quintet looked stale and lifeless throughout.

Frosh coach Peter Broaca's only remark after the game was a terse: "I have no comment on that exhibition."

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY

Yuletide is almost upon us. Let's stop wasting time in classes and get on with our Christmas shopping. Following are a number of gift suggestions, all easily obtainable at your nearest war surplus boutique.

First, a most unusual gift idea, brand new this year and certain to please everyone on your list—a gift certificate from the American Veterinary Medicine Association! Each certificate is accompanied by this charming poem:

Merry Christmas, north and south,
Does your cow have hoof and mouth?

And your dog, fidele semper,
Here's a cure for his distemper.

Little kitten, cute and squirmy,
Bring her in. I think she's wormy.

To bunnies, turtles, parrots green,
Joyeux Noel! Heureux Vaccine!

Are you wondering what to give that extra-special man on your list? Stop wondering. Give him that extra-special shaving combination, Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades and Burma Shave. Each gift is accompanied by this charming poem:

Christmas merry, New Year bonny,
From your friendly blade Personny.

You will have the ladies fawning,
If you're shaving with Persawning.

Injector style or double edges,
Both are made by good Persedges.

And Burma-Shave in plain or menthol,
Leaves your face as smooth as renthol.

(NOTE: As everyone knows, renthol is the smoothest substance ever discovered. You may not know, however, that renthol is named after its inventor, Ralph Waldo Renthol, who developed it by crossing a swan with a ball bearing.)

(Interestingly enough, Mr. Renthol did not start out to be an inventor. Until age 50 he was a Western Union boy. Then fate took a hand. One day while delivering a singing telegram to a girl named Claudia Sigafoos, Ralph noted to his surprise that the telegram was signed "Claudia Sigafoos!" She had sent herself a birthday greeting!

(When pressed to explain, Claudia told Ralph a heart-rending tale. It seems that when she was only six weeks old, her parents were killed in an avalanche. The infant Claudia was found by a pair of kindly caribou who raised her as their own. They taught her all they knew—like how to rub bark off a tree and which lichens are better than other lichens—but in time they saw that this was not enough. When Claudia reached age 18, they entered her in Bennington.

(Unused to people, Claudia lived a lonely life—so lonely, in fact, that she was reduced to sending herself birthday greetings, as we have seen.

(Ralph, deeply touched, married Claudia and tried his best to make her mingle with people. It didn't work. They went nowhere, saw no one, except for an annual Christmas visit to Claudia's foster parents, Buck and Doe. To while away his long, lonely hours, Ralph finally built a work bench and started to futz around with inventions, as we have seen.

(It is pleasant to report that the story of Ralph and Claudia ends happily. After the birth of their two children, Donder and Blitzen, Claudia joined the PTA and soon overcame her fear of people. Ralph joined the Elks.)

But I digress. Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night! Ho-ho-ho!

Girls Defeat Southern Connecticut

Led by Marge Sims who won two events, and took a second and a third, the U-Mass Women's Gymnastic team fought back a late surge by Southern Connecticut, to win the meet 92.05-88.35, held Saturday at Boyden. The win was the second successive one for UMass.

Sims won the first event in the meet, the floor exercises, with a score of 8.35. Laurel Milch took a third in the event with a score of 7.50.

Miss Sims also took first honors in the balance beam event, by notching a 8.9. She took the second spot in the vaulting event, an event won by UMass performer Sue Clancy, scored a fine 9.0.

The points scored in these events were the points that won the meet. In the final event of the meet, Southern Connecticut tied for first place, picking up 24.80 points. However, a third earned by Marge Sims, stopped Southern Connetieut short of victory.

Handball Nears Climactic End

The Handball Tournament is coming down to the finals in the various flight brackets.

In the Fraternity Division Athenian Flight, Jim Foley of BKP, has won three straight matches and has to meet Greg Johnson of SPE. The winner will represent that Flight in the Campus Championship playoffs.

Roger Prefontaine of TKE, must play Ed Goltz of AEP, the winner of this match meets Steve Litchfield of TKE for the Spartan Flight toga.

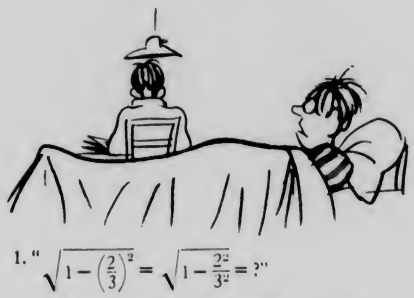
George Tokarczuk of KS won the Trojan Flight in three straight matches, winning the final from Ben Freitas, also of KS, 21-8 & 21-12.

In the Dormitory Division, perenial finalist in Handball, Mike Daley of the Thatcher Redwoods, has won and will represent the Northwest Flight in the Campus playoffs.

Dick Amazon of the Webster Rams won four straight matches, defeating Joe Foley in the final match 14-21, 21-15, & 21-19, to represent the South Flight.

The East Flight has not completed its matches. Gerry Dame of the Baker Buffaloes will meet the winner of the Fred Cheney (Greenough Giants) VS Dick Goldberg (Mills Birch) match, to represent this flight. These matches must be completed by Monday.

Elliot Klein of the Washington Terrors won the South Tower Flight in four matches. His only real competition came from Ed Freitas of the Washington Monuments, whom he defeated 21-17 and 21-14.



Bob Salvaggio of the James Comanchees won the North Tower Flight with little competition in three matches.

In the Independent Division American Flight, John Allison of the Dell Vikings won in three straight matches, out of a field of eight entries.

Unless the National Flight completes its matches by Tuesday, it will not be represented in the Campus playoffs. Four players are involved: Glenn Cummins, Mark Kriger, Dave Katz and Carlos Lascoutx.

The Graduate Faculty Flight was won by Franklin Sherwood of the Economics Department. He

Frosh Grapplers Roll

By BOB LUMADUE
Staff Reporter

MEDFORD—For the second time in one week the Redmen Freshmen Wrestling Team has shown unusual strength. On Saturday afternoon action was at Tufts and the team devasted almost completely the Tufts frosh, 46-3.

Last Tuesday night at Boyden Gym, the Little Indians had scalped the Coast Guard Frosh 49-0, and it appears as though this was some kind of a record at least as far as UMass wrestling is concerned.

Dwight Danser, Phil Davis, Howie Kaplin, Bob Freeman, Tom Andrewes, Bob Willman, and Scott Berry all registered pins on their opponents. Nick DiDomenico won a forfeit, and Mike Brauner, and Tom Young won decisions.

George Zguris wrestling at 191 lbs. suffered the only loss so far this young season for the Little Redmen as he went down by decision to a strong Joe Scalia for Tuft's only three points.

A statistic closely watched in wrestling by the Coaches and fans is the takedown, as it most accurately measures the success of a team. To date the UMass frosh have registered 21 takedowns to the oppositions 2.

The summary:

Nicholas DiDomenico, 115 won by forfeit
Dwight Danser, 123 pinned Bob Moore 1:28
Phil Davis, 130 pinned Rich Olie 2:50
Howie Kaplin, 137 pinned Bruce Kaplan 4:40
Bob Freeman, 145 pinned Bernier Soumoff 7:40
Mike Brauner, 152 decisioned Steve Giunta 8-4
Tom Young, 160 decisioned Bill Rittenhouse 7-2
Tom Andrews, 167 pinned Jack Male 3:56
Bob Willman, 177 pinned Fran Maher 6:25
George Zguris, 191 lost to Joe Scalia 11-1
Scott Berry, Unl. pinned Carl Johnson 3:00

St. Anselm's Wins, 63-52

Little Redmen Hoopsters Lose 1st

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

MANCHESTER, N.H.—Running into both a tight defense and ice-cold shooting hands, the UMass freshman basketball team was upset by the St. Anselm's frosh, 63-52, Saturday night.

A tense, tight defensive struggle, which saw the first half end in a 22-21 lead for St. Anselm's, was broken open by the home team, with the scoring of Jim Dunlay and Mike Mulligan being the spark. Dunlay led the Hawks with 20 points, 15 coming in the second half, while Mulligan chipped in 16. John Lukas added 13 points to the St. Anselm's attack.

UMass made a few runs at the home team in the second half but never could pull even. Jim Ryan was the key man in every Little Redman surge.

Ryan poured in 26 points in his finest effort to date. Bob Dempsey was the only other UMass player in double figures as he notched 13 points.

It was Ryan who brought the Little Redmen to within three points with 3:08 remaining, the closest they would ever come. The use of a zone press was a key aspect of this final UMass surge.

St. Anselm's, however, who had taken the lead with 15:35 remaining, quickly got a three point play from Dunlay and were never seriously threatened again.

A big reason for the UMass defeat had to be the fouls. 18 infractions were whistled against UMass, while only eight were called on the Hawks. St. Anselm's went to the foul stripe 25 times while the Little Redmen obtained only 11 charity tosses.

Ken Mathias, the fine 6'6 forward, had to be used sparingly throughout, as he was saddled by personals. Mathias picked up three quick fouls within the first eight minutes and finally fouled out with 6:38 to go.

However, the UMass shooting (?) was the main reason for defeat. The Little Redmen took 64

Trackmen Run in Tufts Meet

By RICH FRANKLIN

The Redmen varsity and freshman track teams traveled to Medford on Saturday for the Tufts Invitational Relays. Athletes representing twelve different New England schools competed in this meet to get a preview of what to expect in the upcoming winter season. Due to the early date of the meet, most of the team performances were far below par, UMass included.

There were a few bright spots, however. Charlie Lang took a second in the Special 2 Mile Run with a 9:38.3 effort. Brown's Chip Ennis beat him to the tape in a time of 9:33.8.

The frosh were able to win three events. Larry Paulson, Paul Taylor, Ron Wayne, and Leo Duarte combined to take the distance medley in 11:02. Cal Carpenter won the high jump with a leap of 6'2¼" and Walter Mayo set a track record for freshmen by winning the 50 yard dash in 5.5 seconds.

There's a lot of work to be done before the Knight's of Columbus meet in Boston on January 13. Coaches Bill Footrick and Ken O'Brien hope to have both teams ready by then.

OUR TRACKMEN'S MAIN MAN — Coach Bill Footrick leads his runners into action, as this year's track season begins.

Redmen Stung Twice in Steel Bowl Tourney

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

PITTSBURGH—The UMass Redmen arrived in Pittsburgh with a 1-1 record and high hopes of winning the 17th annual Steel Bowl, but left with a 1-3 chart after suffering two demoralizing losses at the hands of Pittsburgh and the Air Force Academy.

In the Friday opener, the favored Redmen saw a 20 point halftime bulge dissipated by a scrappy Pittsburgh Panther team and their own mistakes and when the final buzzer sounded, UMass had lost, 73-71.

Captain Billy Tindall's tap in got the Redmen off to a good start in the first game and they gradually extended their lead with Joe DiSarcina-led fast breaks. Ray Ellerbrook and Tindall put together a string of eight points midway through the half to give UMass a 28-15 advantage.

Despite losing the ball a number of times, the Redmen moved out to 38-18 edge at halftime. Pitt shot 31% in the first half.

After intermission, the Panthers began to show signs of life, however, as Bob Petrini, Ken Bollens and Len Kalata all started to find the range. Centers Pete Gayeska and Jim Sulesky, along with Tindall matched Pittsburgh hoop for hoop as UMass maneuvered for easy shots against the home team's press.

Sulesky's hoop with 6:31 to go gave the Redmen what seemed at the time to be an insurmountable, 65-49 lead. The Cats wouldn't give up, though, and continued to pour in 20 and 25 foters.

About this time, the crowd, which was made up mainly of Duquesne rooters and had been previously razzing the Panthers with cracks like, "first and ten, do it again" began rooting for Pittsburgh.

With 4:24 to play, DiSarcina fouled out leaving two sophomores, John Shockro and Ellerbrook to break the press. As the fans shrieked with glee, Pitt players pressured the Redmen into mistake after mistake. The margin kept on getting smaller and smaller until a Bollens hoop made it 69-65, UMass Gayeska hit Ron Nowakowski with a beautiful feed underneath and the Redmen were up 71-65 with only 75 seconds on the clock.

Pittsburgh just couldn't miss, however, and when they did, they were clawing the offensive boards, as their nickname implies. Baskets by Tony DeLisle and two free throws by Petrini tied the contest at 71-71 and then with 21 seconds left, DeLisie stole the ball and called time out.

Pitt set up Len Kalata for a 20 foot jump shot but he missed and as time ran out on the scoreboard, Bollens, who was in perfect position under the offensive backboard, tapped the ball up three times. As the buzzer sounded, the ball dropped through the cords and UMass was handed one of the most heartbreaking, demoralizing defeats in its basketball history.

Pittsburgh Coach Bob Timmons cited the vocal support of the Duquesne fans as a major factor in the Panther comeback. "More important," he added "was getting number 10 out of there. He could have broken our press with his ball handling."

Tindall led all scorers with 27 points while DiSarcina picked up 14. Pitt was led by Bollens, Kalata and Petrini who cha'ked up 20, 19 and 19 respectively. It's obvious that the invaders made innumerable mistakes when you look at the statistics which show them out-rebounding the Panthers 48-46, but getting off 26 less shots from the floor. UMass made 26 of 53 field goals while Pittsburgh canned up 29 of 79.

The action, particularly under the boards, was extremely rough and it may be that Pitt, a physically stronger team, wore down the Redmen.

Saturday night the big story in Pittsburgh was the meeting of the upstart Panthers and Duquesne, which had beaten Air Force 64-52 in the opener Friday night, for the tournament championship.

The Redmen were matched against the Falcons in the consolation bracket. UMass took the floor hoping to salvage something from the trip. As the players went through their warm up drills, the scoreboard flashed that nightmarish 73-71 score of the previous nite. The horn sounded and five players in red uniforms took the floor. They were there physically but could they perform at their best?

UMass grabbed an early 11-2 lead as Jim Girotti, Billy Tindall and Pete Gayeska contributed the points. Air Force's nationally rated center, Cliff Parsons and Bert Spear, the Falcon coach's son, brought the Colorado-based unit back with some fine shooting.

With the score 16-16, Parsons picked up his third foul and left the game, not returning until the second half. The Redmen had an excellent opportunity to build a good lead but their shooting was way off. Jack Gallagher's three-point play put UMass up 28-23, but from there it was all downhill as Spear and sub-center, Pete Halvonik pulled the Falcons ahead, 34-31 at intermission.

Parsons and Spear extended Air Force's lead early in the second half. Tindall countered a couple of times for the Redmen but precision bombing by Spear and Mike Kelly gave the Cadets a 57-44 edge with nine minutes to play.

UMass applied a press with some success but turnovers hurt once more. Two foul shots by John Shockro made it 58-52, but that was the best the Redmen could do.

Ray Ellerbrook, Ron Nowakowski and Shockro worked hard to pull a reversal of the previous night but it just wasn't in the cards. Air Force, shooting 53% from the floor, just wasn't to be denied and the final score read Falcons 71, Redmen 62.

BILL TINDALL
Tourney's Leading Scorer

JACK GALLAGHER
Stars in Sub Role

Tindall again led all scorers, popping 20 big ones. Ellerbrook, despite the fact that he was off in his shooting, picked up 10 while Gallagher, in his first extensive action, garnered nine.

Air Force was led by Spear with 18, and Parsons and Kelly who accounted for 17 and 15 respectively.

The shooting of 5'10" guards Spear, nine for ten, and Kelly, six for eight, was the big reason for the Falcon victory.

Joey DiSarcina, UMass' floor general, took ill and was only in the game very briefly. His absence and the absence of the Redmen's fast break, was no coincidence.

Duquesne, with some of the best personnel in the East, easily handled Pittsburgh, 100-66 to cop the Steel Bowl title. Bill Zepf, a 6'2" Duke guard, was named Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

All contests were played at the $22,000,000 Pittsburgh Civic Arena which seats 14,000 and boasts a retractable dome. The crowds for the two nights of 5,123 and 7,254 were considered quite good especially in the light of the fact that Thursday night the Pipers of the ABA had only 1,063 on hand.

Icemen Slip on Road

WATERVILLE, Me. — Scoring in every period, the UMass hockey team was soundly outplayed by the Colby Mules, 8-2, Friday night.

Colby scored early and then proceeded to pepper goalie, Pete Scoville, with 52 shots. Scoville kicked out 44 in a performance that coach Jack Camif termed "our only bright light."

UM managed to beat the Colby goaltender twice. Junior wing, Greg Stone scored his third goal of the year, while Bill Fallon also netted a score, his second of the young season. The Colby game was a case of a UM team being completely outplayed and only the great play of Scoville kept the score from reaching the double figures.

BRUNSWICK, Me. — UMass started fast against the Bowdoin Bears, but could not hold an early 2-0 lead as they were defeated, by Bowdoin, 9 - 4.

UMass held leads of 2-0 and 3-1, before the tide turned completely. Greg Stone again scored in this game.

Also scoring for the Redmen were Don Robinson, his fifth. Jeff Sanborn, his seventh, to lead the team, and Charlie Hanifan, his third.

Matmen Pinned by Tufts

By BOB LUMADUE
Staff Reporter

A fast maturing UMass wrestling team traveled to Tufts University last Saturday and almost pulled an upset.

As in the dual meet with the Coast Guard Academy, the Redmen went well ahead in points, leading 15 to 6 at one point, only to see the lead disappear when the light-heavies failed to come through.

Actually, all of the Redmen scoring came in just four weights. Paul Pearl remained undefeated at 130 lbs. when he decked Karl Bane in 5:35. Eugene Paltrineri, the Redmen Captain was again impressive with the fastest fall of the afternoon pinning Bill DeBarta in just one minute. "Mean Gene" wrestles at 137 lbs.

Mike McKenna gave UMass another five points when his opponent failed to make weight at 145 lbs. At this point UMass was enjoying the 15 to 6 lead when the roof caved in for the second straight time.

Urquhart, Fitzpatrick, Yurkus, Smith and Spousta failed to come up with the big win to ice the score and it was consolation only for Glenn Cummins and his individual admirers when he scored the Redmen's final points with his first victory and pin.

The summary:

Dave Wade, 115 lost to Steve Jones 4-0
Bill Goodwin, 123 lost to Steve Foldes 8-5
Paul Pearl, 130 pinned Karl Bane 5:35
Gene Paltrineeri, 137 pinned Bill DeBarta 1:00
Mike McKenna, 145 won by forfeit
Brian Urquhart, 152 lost to Lee Nordon 9-5
Fred Fitzpatrick, 160 lost to Tom Martin 9-1
Bob Yurkus, 167 lost to Jack Alkon 5:34
Ernie Smith, 177 lost to Steve Cary 6:00
Bob Spousta, 191 lost to Dennis O'Kula 7:15
Glenn Cummins, Uni. pinned Evan Weston 5:59

Gymnasts Tumble to Meet Win

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—Led by the individual performances of Dick DelGallo, Bob LeClair, Steve Brown, Mike Kasavna, and his brother Toby, and John Reed, the UMass Gymnastics team won a three way meet with Long Island University and Westchester State (Pa.). The UM team scored 159, Westchester State, 147, and L. I. U., 122.

DelGallo won the floor exercises and the rings, while LeClair took first honors in side horse. Reed tied for third in the floor exercises and third in the rings before being injured. Reed, the finest all-around performer on the team, is a doubtful participant in Saturday's meet at Temple.

Tom Adams and Dave March also had fine performances. Adams placed second in the trampoline, which was won by Redman Mike Kasavana, while March placed third in the parallel bars, win by Steve Brown. March also won the high bar.

Fred Babaklan took second place in the side horse, while Toby Kasavana took third in the long horse, as the Redmen dominated this triangular meet, against two fine rivals.

Frosh Puckmen Iced by UConn, 4-2

By RICH FRANKLIN
Staff Reporter

Two quick goals in the opening minutes of the first period were all that the Little Redmen could manage as they lost, 4-2, to the freshman hockey team from U-Conn. The loss at Orr Rink Friday night evened the frosh record at 1-1.

Paul Riley opened the scoring with only fifty-seven seconds gone in the game, the assist going to linemate Bill Weigle. Assisted by Mike Fallon, Ked Reddick scored the second UMass goal at 13:33 of the first period. From then on the game belonged to Connecticut.

The UConn frosh scored early in the second period to start their move. They followed this with another score in the second, and tallied two more in the final period. Their fourth score came on an open net in the waning moments of the game after Coach Ed Pochlopek had removed goalie Larry Walsh for an additional skater in an attempt to tie the game at 3-3.

Pochlopek was disappointed in the team's showing. Two scrimmages on Saturday and a long week of practice should help to remove some of the rough spots before the frosh meet a strong New Prep team this Friday night at Orr Rink. New Prep has previously defeated B.U. Frosh, 8-2.

Drug, STP, Control Is Considered

The Government has proposed to include the hallucinogen STP among the drugs controlled under the Drug Abuse Control Amendments of 1965.

The drug compound is the same as the experimental compound, DOM, developed by the Dow Chemical Company.

STP, or DOM, tablets have been sold or distributed outside regular drug distribution channels according to the Food and Drug Administration.

Tablets found on the East and West Coasts were analyzed and found to contain an active ingredient identical to the experimental material developed by Dow Chemical Company. The firm had not distributed the chemical

Its hallucinogenic effects were confirmed in studies sponsored by the FDA.

UMass-Boston Protests For Copley Square Site

By JOHN WOJNAS
Staff Reporter

"The whole concept of the urban university is at stake" were the words of Dennis McKinley, former editor-in-chief of UMass Boston's Mass Media in an interview with the Daily Collegian last night.

Today at 1:30 p.m. there will be a mass gathering of UMass Boston students showing support for the Copley Square site for the University of Massachusetts at Boston. According to McKinley, the purpose of the assembly is to "gather enough support" from the public to make the Governor and Trustees favor the Copley Square site. "No one has ever heard the UMass Boston side", he continued.

The coordinating committee of the gathering will outline their program to the students in a 1500 seat auditorium and plans have been made to line Copley Square in hopes of increasing public support.

"Now the students will carry the ball" McKinley stated. In the next four weeks such organizations as the Boston City Conference, and the Chamber of Commerce will be contacted, asking them to examine and openly support the Copley Square site. A resolution of a similar nature will be sent to Gov. Volpe, it was learned. The Trustees must make their decision by February as Volpe is submitting the capital outlay bill in his January address.

The only other possible locacations for UMass Boston are at Columbia Point and Wollaston. The coordinating committee emphasizes however, that these sites are "not in the city." Advantages to having the site in Copley Square include that the University needs the city as a classroom for cultural reasons as well as a social laboratory. Accessability points to Boston proper as 70% of all students come to the University by way of the MBTA; the city is also central to all the major highways.

From an engineering standpoint, the other sites are not as feasible as the downtown site. Mr. McKinley stressed however, the whole concept of the urban university. The school would be near other colleges and universities in the Boston area.

Recruiting Motion to Be Considered

The Student Senate will meet Wednesday, December 13 at 7 p.m. to consider a motion to suspend recruiting by agencies of the executive branch of the Federal Government.

This motion was part of an open hearing on picketing and was then passed by a straw vote of the members present. The motion states that "Recruiting by agencies of the executive branch of the Federal Government shall be suspended until such time as General Hershey's suggestions to draft boards on re-classification of objectionable dissenters are officially rescinded. The Senate makes no comment of the morality of the military, but only on the civil rights of demonstrators."

On last Wednesday afternoon, Student Matters passed a motion against recruiting on campus by any part of the Executive Branch of the federal government in protest over Hershey's statement.

OFFICE HOURS

President Lederle will hold open office hours today, starting at 4 p.m. All students who wish to meet with the President are invited. No appointments are necessary.

Proposal for Full-Time Night Classes Made

From the State House it was discovered that Rep. David M. Bartley, D-Holyoke, has filed legislation to ask trustees of the University of Massachusetts to study the feasibility of full-time evening undergraduate classes. The purpose of such a proposal is a hope that "the huge educational plant can be used more efficiently."

Rep. Bartley was not available last night for comment to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

McCarthy Takes Stand on Issue Of Middle East

LIBERTY, N.Y. (AP) — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy charged Monday night that the United States has a policy vacuum in the Middle East because of the Vietnam war.

The Minnesota Democrat also said that while there was hope four years ago for an easing of tensions with the Soviet Union, "Today much of this has been lost."

McCarthy, in his first major speech on the Middle East since challenging President Johnson for renomination, criticized administration policy and set forth his own ideas for a "positive" American Middle East policy.

He urged the United States to support and guarantee border adjustments necessary to insure

Report Favoring Individual Residence Policy Is Made

By DON LEBLANC
Staff Reporter

In a special report, the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs makes some "basic, and indeed, sweeping changes in the present regulations of resident hall life," with specific attention paid to open house policy for residence halls. The report urges the Faculty Senate to accept the policy of allowing individual dorm governments to implement their own policies on the frequency of open houses.

The report states that present college policies prolong adolescence by creating rules for the student. The new system would give the student the responsibility of governing more of his private and social life. The change would allow dorms to establish the frequency, duration, the open-closed door policy, and social conduct for each event.

Each open house would be approved separately by all house members. Periodic re-considerations would be made of the dorm's policy by all members, and the house governments would submit on request their policy to the Administration. This type of individual policy establishment applies equally to fraternities and sororities.

The report also answers various possible charges against its validity and efficiency. It drew from a recent survey, stating that 95% of the students favored "visits to the rooms by the opposite sex". The report mentions the proposal's unanimous endorsement by the Student Life Committee and Student Senate.

It also argues that open houses do not constitute a violation of privacy, and that they are psychologically necessary for couples seeking privacy. The authors of the report also do not believe that since the student's room "is a bedroom, the Open House policy would foster premarital intercourse." It is pointed out that the room is also an office, living, and an entertainment area, and that morality should not be forced on students.

National Student Film Festival To Be Held on East and West Coasts

NEW YORK, N.Y.—The Third National Student Film Festival, jointly sponsored by the Motion Picture Association of America, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts and the U.S. National Student Association, has been announced.

To provide wider national representation, the Festival and the awards presentation will henceforth be held alternately on the West and East Coasts. This year, the announcement of the winners, will take place on the West Coast at Royal Hall, University of California at Los Angeles, on January 19, 20 and 21, 1968.

Three months later, the winning student films will be presented in New York City at Lincoln Center's Philharmonic Hall on April 17, 1968.

Four $500 grants, contributed by the MPAA, will be awarded to each of the first prize winners in four categories: Animation, Documentary, Dramatic and Experimental films.

Judging will be done on the West Coast by a select panel of judges with extensive experience in all branches of the film industry and student film work in particular. The names of the judges will be announced shortly.

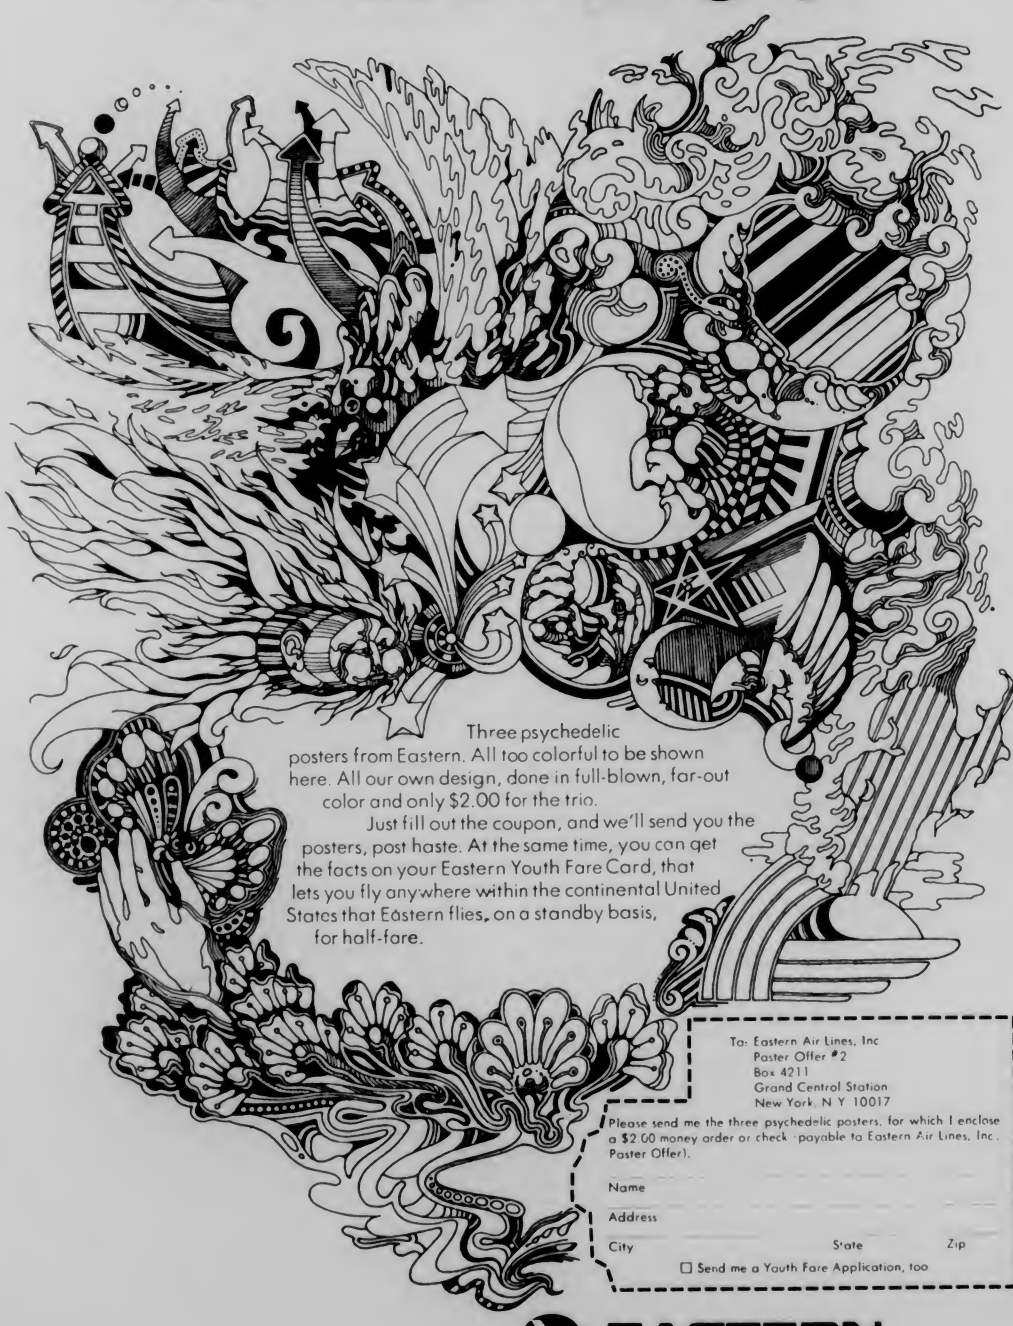
The sponsors of the National Student Film Festival, a national program designed to honor the artistry and skill of student filmmakers, to which all students at accredited colleges and universities are eligible, are now soliciting entries from students throughout the United States with expectations of receiving an even greater number of entries this year to this, the third annual student film-making competition.

Funds for Lincoln Center's participation in the National Student Film Festival are made available through the Lincoln Center Fund

"Hunh" Is Funny And Forces Thought

Thursday night F. Lee Eiseman's "Hunh" was presented in the Grayson Lounge. "Hunh" is a type of film described by Mr. Eiseman as "something that happens."

The pithy, pseudo, experience was a parody of the thinking process. According to Eiseman, It" pokes fun at the individual himself, his problems and hangups."



The movie itself was divided into three sections. The first was concerned with the problem of language and the contradictions involved. It was presented as a discussion between two gods, "omnipotent" and "omnicient," about to create the world of the individual.

The second section dealt with life. This, humorously, attempted to explain religion to the newly created individual, named "one". One is involved in a conversation with a nun in which the dialogue is of particular interest. It contained such lines as — "Whats wrong with questioning?" Ans. — "We just don't."

The final portion consisted of a conflict between heaven and hell. "One" samples hell and finds that he is forced to enjoy himself. Not sure this is what he wants, "One" then decides to try heaven. The film ends as his eye is removed, symbolizing the robbing of his powers of preception.

In a subsequent interview, Eiseman revealed that "Hunh" is his second film of this nature. He spent two years producing the movie, at a cost of over $5,000, and termed it a "success" at forcing people to think while being "funny".

Physics Speaker Will Talk About Present Frontier

Dr. V. L. Fitch of Princeton University, a world authority on high-energy experimental physics, will be the speaker for the second series of Commonwealth Lectures of the University of Massachusetts physics and astronomy department, department head Robert L. Gluckstern has announced.

The four Commonwealth Lectures on the topic "Experimental Aspects of Weak Interactions" will be held Dec. 13, 14, 19 and 20 at 4:30 p.m. in Room 126, Hasbrouck Laboratory. All are open without charge to interested persons.

Dr. Fitch is a McGill University Graduate with a Ph.D. degree from Columbia University. A member of the Princeton faculty since 1954, he is also a guest associate scientist at Brookhaven National Laboratory and has served as a consultant to the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

"The talks will start at a level which can be understood by all physics graduate students and will end at the present frontier of the field," Dr. Gluckstern said.

News Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate passed Monday the biggest federal aid to education authorization bill in history, a $14.2 billion three-year extension of the Elementary and Secondary Act and other school programs.

The final vote, 71 to 7, came after more than a week's debate and a compromise settlement with Southerners over civil rights issues involved in the bill.

BOMBAY, India (AP) — An earthquake struct southwest India Monday, shattering the mountain town of Koynangar and killing at least 100 persons, most of them women and children, officials reported.

Another 1,300 were injured in Koynangar and 5,000 were left homeless. A massive transport fleet began bringing out the injured and homeless from the town in the picturesque Ghats Mountains 150 miles southeast of Bombay.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-year, $4.16-billion extension of antipoverty legislation cleared Congress Monday. It was the longest time and the most money yet authorized for the embattled program—but it may not get all the funds.

The bill carries a much-debated provision putting community-action programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity OEO under the control of local public officials.

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP)— Folksinger Jimmie Rodgers was reported in "very much improved condition" Sunday following a second operation in which nearly one-fourth of his skull was removed.

"This is by far the smoothest day he's had so far," said Dr. William Donham. "If he continues to improve he should be off the critical list in three or four days.

Symphony Orchestra Performs Tonight; Accomplished Harpist to Be Featured

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Orchestra will present its first concert of the season Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The concert is open to the public without charge.

The 90-piece orchestra, in its fifth year under the direction of assistant professor Ronald Steele of the UMass music department, has been noted by critics for its brilliance and majestic handling of symphony music.

The program will open with Handel-Harty's Suite from Music for the Royal Fireworks. It will continue with Cowell's Fuging Tune No. 3 and conclude with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 5 in D Minor, Op. 107.

Harpist Anita Titsworth will be featured as soloist in Handel's Concerto for Harp and Orchestra. A former student of Carlos Salzedo, Mrs. Titsworth received her M.M. degree from North Texas University where she received the Theodore Presser and Mu Phi Epsilon scholarships.

Steele, a graduate of the University of Michigan and a former violinist for the U.S. Air Force Symphony orchestra, founded the UMass orchestra in 1963 as a 27-piece string ensemble. Since then, the orchestra has more than tripled to its present number of 90 musicians from Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges, UMass and surrounding communities.

Procedure Outlined For Student Parking

It will be necessary for each student desiring an assignment to a numbered controlled parking area for the second semester to proceed as follows.

1. Apply to the campus police for renewal if the student is presently assigned to a numbered controlled area, and if he has the same basis of need to retain the same area assignment. Except for first semester assignments which were based upon temporary physical disability, work problems, and course conflicts which no longer apply, renewal by the police will be automatic if the applicant has observed University parking regulations.
2. Apply in writing for a specific area assignment. This should be done by those students presently assigned to a numbered controlled area, but desiring a different area assignment or by those students initially applying for assignment to a numbered controlled area. The application should state the reasons such assignment is desirable, and should be addressed to Robert W. Kittle, 322 Whitmore.

The following timeable will be used:

All requests for automatic renewal for an existing assignment — by January 24, 1968 (apply to the campus police station)

All requests for new assignments or changes in assignment—requests to Mr. Kittle by February 2, 1968; decisions on applications made by February 9, 1968; stickers available from campus police, February 14, 1968.

Business School Invites Students To Coffee Hour

Juniors and seniors interested in exploring the possibility of careers in business are invited to attend a coffee hour, Thursday, December 14th in Room 206 of the School of Business Administration 10:00 a.m. to 12 noon.

Members of the graduate teaching faculty will be on hand to discuss the MBA degree. The program does not require that applicants already possess an undergraduate degree in business. The School of Business Administration welcomes applications from students from all disciplines.

Specific questions will be answered at the coffee hour and the application procedure will be explained in detail.

Disc Jockey Will Judge UMass Bands

Eight University of Massachusetts bands will battle for the $400 cash award for first place in the second annual Battle of the UMass Bands on Friday, Dec. 15 starting at 8 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Two WBZ radio disc jockeys, Dave Maynard and Ron Landry, and a third unnamed judge, will judge the bands on showmanship, musical talent, audience appeal and stage presentation at the annual Christmas dance sponsored by the Student Union Dance Committee.

The eight bands scheduled in ordered of appearance are The Maze, The Jury, The Incorporated Soul, STP, The Captain Soul, Lord, Sound Foundation and the Tweeds. In addition to the first place award of $400 the bands will be vying for a second place prize of $300 and third place prize of $225. The three winners will perform at the Registration Dance in January.

Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union and will also be available at the door.

An opportunity to be commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Army by taking only the two-year Advanced Course during the last two years at the University of Massachusetts is available.

To qualify you should apply for enrollment with the University of Massachusetts ROTC Detachment. If accepted, you will participate in a six-week summer training period at Fort Knox (training at Ft. Knox is in place of the Freshman and Sophomore Basic Course), after which you attend two years of advanced ROTC training. Total remuneration will be approximately $1300 for the two years.

When you enter the Advanced ROTC Program, you must agree to complete ROTC Training, unless circumstances beyond your control make it impossible to do so. For undergraduates, all academic requirements for a degree must be completed prior to commissioning and all advanced course ROTC students must agree to accept a commission, if it is offered, and to serve on active duty in the Army for a period of two years, followed by four years in a Reserve Component. An important consideration for undergraduates is that under current laws an ROTC graduate may request a delay in reporting for active duty in order to pursue a graduate degree.

Detailed information on the program and the requirements may be obtained by visiting the ROTC Detachment in Dickinson Hall today.

The Court and Equality

The Supreme Court made a decision last week that may have far-reaching effects in the area of Civil rights. By agreeing to review a ruling of the United States Court of Appeals concerning open housing, the Court brought this sensitive issue before its docket for the first time.

The case involved a racially mixed couple where the husband was a Negro. They had been denied the right to purchase a house and lot in a subdivision being developed in suburban St. Louis. The appelate court ruled that existing law provides no remedy for persons who say they were denied the right to purchase real property because of their race. In view of Congress' refusal to enact a fair housing law, the necessity of judicial decision on this issue becomes more and more apparent. The Justice Department acted in the role of "friend of the court" in support of the appeal. In this position "Justice" asked the court to rule that those who develop suburban land into going communities cannot legally refuse to sell to Negroes or members of other minority groups.

The appeal rests on two constitutional points. The first involves the long-forgotten Civil Rights Act of 1866 which stated that recently freed slaves should have the right "to purchase, lease, sell, hold and convey real and personal property." That Rights Act was passed to augment the 13th Amendment which prohibited slavery and since discriminaton in housing is looked upon as a vestige of slavery, the Court has the right to invoke the law and force compliance with it.

The second constitutional point involves the 14th Amendment which prohibits discrimination by states. The appeal's contention is that the suburban developers create new communities and must assume the responsibilities of states in installing sewers, paving roads, building playgrounds and other features traditionally provided by the state. It was pointed out by the Justice Department that "a private individual who is permitted by the state to perform an essentially public function assumes, along with the governmental powers of the state, its constitutional obligations" not to discriminate against Negroes.

The Supreme Court should overturn the ruling of the lower court and take this first step towards fair housing. This act decision in itself will not be enough, since it touches an area where few Negroes can presently afford to live. The problem must rather be attacked where it is most important—in the city. The sole solution to urban housing discrimination is by Congressional action. Only when effective legislative action is taken will the Negro gain the right to live where he pleases unhindered by archaic prejudices.

Bobby and the Future

The political position of Robert F. Kennedy in the 1968 elections is probably the most discussed, and least understood, aspect of the coming campaign. An extremely complex man, driven by bitter memories of the past and frustrated hopes for the future, Kennedy has been damned by the right-wing as a dangerous radical and by the left-wing as a power-hungry demagogue. The problem with both views is that they fail to consider the fact that Kennedy has undergone an almost total political transformation during the past ten years. As Jack Newfield observed in a perceptive article on Kennedy, "Ten years ago (his) heroes were Douglas MacArthur, Herbert Hoover and J. Edgar Hoover . . . Today Kennedy's personal heroes have become men like Thoreau, Jefferson, Lincoln, the Greeks, and Albert Camus."

(Boston Globe, Nov. 12)

It seems clear that the major influence in Kennedy's transformation was the tragedy of his brother's assassination. While he has candidly admitted the folly of John Kennedy's policy in Southeast Asia, he also believes that his brother was at least making an attempt to substitute a rational foreign policy for the moralistic and emotional policies of John Foster Dulles. He believes that Lyndon Johnson has reverted to the policies of Dulles, and that those policies will inevitably lead to a nuclear holocaust. Further, Kennedy feels that essential programs for poverty, medical care, civil rights and education are being eroded by the massive federal expenditures for the Vietnam War.

Yet, in spite of his deep disagreements with the Johnson Administration, Kennedy finds himself politically impotent. Last winter, he spoke with a representative of the National Liberation Front in Paris, who informed him that the government of North Vietnam was willing to engage in meaningful negotiations with South Vietnam and the United States. The only prerequisite for negotiations was an unconditional cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam. Kennedy returned to Washington and told President Johnson of the offer. When the incident became public, Johnson responded by escalating the bombing of the North, and he then proceeded to castigate Kennedy for "naive meddling." This episode convinced Kennedy that Johnson's response to Kennedy criticism would only result in a more rigid Administration posture. Beyond this, Kennedy was certain that the President would be re-nominated by the Democratic Convention and that he could not actively oppose his reelection. If Senator Eugene McCarthy can defeat Johnson in some primaries, Kennedy may be forced to challenge the President at the Convention.

The fact that Robert Kennedy does not quite fit any of the stereotyped images of either the left or the right in his greatest weakness, but also the source of his potential strength. Governor Reagan thinks he is soft on Communism. I. F. Stone sees him as a phony liberal. Many academicians who are supremely confident of the infallibility of their judgments on both the morals and the policies of politicians, but who cynically deny any obligation to become involved themselves in politics, are frightened by Kennedy's alleged mania for power. It is tragic that the man who, in Dr. Spock's words, "is America's last hope for peace," should not have the unqualified support of those who are truly committed to put an end to the war in Vietnam. And for those who wish to break the vicious and dehumanizing cycle of poverty in America, Kennedy presents the most rational and imaginative ideas for doing so. He is also one of the few political leaders who understand the deep frustration and despair of black Americans, and who is willing to offer positive programs of action in place of national days of prayer.

In his article on Kennedy, Newfield speculates on the possiblity of a future Kennedy Administration. "Robert Kennedy could become a radical, experimental President, in the activist tradition of Andrew Jackson and Franklin Roosevelt. But the question persists whether even that will be enough to save America from the social dynamite ticking away amidst the rats and rubble of every black ghetto. Robert Kennedy, by 1972, may inherit only the sterile ashes of another generation's madness. But so did FDR."

Quad Presidents' Statement

Serious objection is being voiced over A Proposal for Residence Halls 1970 which would place a facility for the housing of 1400 students in the center of the North Quadrangle. A petition opposing this position was signed by more than 88% of the total number of residents of the Quad. Objection centers around the following considerations. Such a residence hall will create an excessively high population density in this area. This high density will result in noisy, distracting conditions, which not only adversely affect studying and academic performance as well as sleeping and general health, but result in lack of personal privacy, which may well have harmful psychological effects.

Such a building will eliminate the sun-lit and grassy area in the middle of the Quad. The residents feel that this grassy area presently serves as a buffer between the dormitories, encouraging their independent functioning and yet promoting their voluntary co-operation. A building, such as the one proposed, in the center of the Quad may isolate the present dormitories from one another and yet force an involuntary and undesired uniformity throughout the entire Quadrangle. They feel it is likewise a mistake to raise the building upon stilts over the area, since this will result in an undesirably dark area; in fact, the proposal to raise it upon stilts itself constitutes an admission on the deliterious effects that this building will have upon the spirit and character of the Quad.

The strong objection taken by the residents of the area to this proposal stem not as much from an opposition to the new as from a desire to preserve the present character of the Quad. The Quad is quiet. It is spacious, green, and sunny, attributes which cannot be measured by any monetary standard. It has closely knit and independent residence hall units, each of which is encouraged by the character of the area to function individually. The residents prefer this present arrangement, this present spirit, to that of a large, dense, urbanized residential complex and furthermore feel that the existence of an opportunity for choice between these modes of university living is ess the University.

If it is felt that the Q in beauty, a reasonable would be the planting and greenery and the tion of open courtyar not the decimation of by a massive, overpow incongruous building. dents feel that it shou derstood that students ministrators, faculty, or must live in these d and that it is they, alone, who are forced t the unfortunate mistak by those others who nearly as directly aff these errors. Seasonal

EACH YEAR, AROUND THANKSGIVING TIME, we come around to sniffing the Christmas season. Everywhere, streets, along with shopkeepers and shoppers, brighten. Reflected in polished store-front windows, people's faces take on a childlike puffiness, reddened by bulbs and the cold, softened by whites and greens. Each city and town prides its own display of lights and tinsel, no matter how elaborate, no matter how crumpled or poor. People chat and laugh, weighted by gifts in the snowstorm, moving, it seems, on joy alone.

Through the blizzard, we see the Christmas season as a time that sends our blood sledding through our arteries, heading out. We have never been able to spike down exactly what happens when the eve arrives. We know Christmas has struck. We can trace patterns between the art of Christmas and the art of The Messiah. The music of Christmas blurts through the lungs of loud speakers or raises its voice through stereos and choirs.

In these times, it is d attach a meaning to much less Christmas. E in the midst of that pre snowstorm, we pass an man, red tie sticking overcoat, and toss a co cup, when we smile up woman dreaming the chimes of "Silent Ni sense some worth in w mas, like a pilgrim, whole season coming, leaving, fulfilling, ne wander along.

Consistency or Suppression

To the editor:

History has shown that censorship is the perfect answer to a sterile society. Censorship is a form of cancer and its aim is the destruction of creativity. The 'perfect' state of the future would be one where the population is totally artificially inseminated; true knowledge and understanding would lie behind a mask of decite.

Variation would be a thing of the past; each person would be a morror image of his neighbor.. He would think the same thoughts and live the same life. Could a society be more perfect?

The reason for this letter is a reply to the letter written by David L. Knowlton entitled "Academic Problems." I can not help but shudder at what his letter contained. By what it said, it can be assumed that the author would be a willing candidate for this 'perfect' society.

In his letter, he asked how a university could allow such wide discrepencies in teaching as that found in the Botany Department. He lists as these 'discrepencies', Drs. Putala and Drum. He further stated: "Is this consistent education? This inconsistency is a burden to many students and detrimental to almost all." How absurd can one get?

Does he want a university without variation or discrepencies, as he so callously states? Does he actually want the sterile, rewardless system he proposes? Does he want to walk into a classroom and already know what the teacher is going to say and how he is going to say it? Does he want a one dimensional world with one dimensional ideas? Does he want to be challenged and made to think or does he want to be an unchallenged sponge which only soaks up one drop of knowledge when there is a sea to devour? Is he truly satisfied with one drop or is he simply afraid to swim? As for myself, I would rather drown than be a member of his type of society.

Most of education is a game of exploring. You seek to find that which you do not know. With but one guide, you discover very little.

That is why it is extremely important that there are different techniques with which to explore. Different techniques breed different insights. Drs. Putala and Drum offer to their students two techniques of exploring. Both are vital; both are needed. I only wish we had more guides like them.

Yankee In Thailand

(The following letter from Burgess Needle was received by Mrs. Martha R. Wright of the English Department who suggested to us that the Daily Collegian might find it interesting enough to publish. Needle, who graduated last February, was Associate Editor of Caesura, the former literary magazine, and served as an undergraduate teaching assistant in the Remedial English Program of the English Department.—Ed.)

Dear Mrs. Wright:

Some time has passed since I last saw you and I thought you might be interested in what has transpired since then. I trained in Pepeekeo, Hawaii, with a group of Peace Corps Volunteers called 'Thailand XVIII' for three months, then flew from Hawaii to Japan to Manila and finally to Bangkok.

In Bangkok we were briefed on our assignments and given background information by the Thai Ministry of Education on the educational system of their country. The initial group of 62 volunteers had narrowed to 44 teachers and four secretaries by the time the assignments were given out. Few of us realized that within two weeks of our landing in Thailand four volunteers would leave for home.

One simply loked at the countryside and asked permission to fly back. Another came down with malaria. A third injured his back while cutting grass (or something else equally prosaic). The fourth felt his services weren't being sufficiently utilized and left feeling both his personal interests and those of the Peace Corps would best be served if he returned home.

My town of Nangrong is located in the Northeast section of Thailand near the city of Buriram which is the largest city in the area and a Chungwat capital (Chungwat=district). My school has 288 students and ranges up to the MS 3 level which is about on a scale with our junior high school. I teach English to all the MS 1 classes and help out with the English Club, some of the less strenuous sports, and clumsily arrange flowers when they have a banquet.

About one month after I arrived they had a ceremony honoring the teachers called 'wai khruu'. It was very formal and reinforced my impression that the average Thai student is far and away more respectful of teachers than his American counterpart. When addressing a teacher a student automatically 'wais' and bows his head. When a teacher rides by on his bicycle, the students stand at the side of the road, the boys at attention and the girls wave.

My training at Hawaii was so thorough that the actual job of teaching became fairly easy to pick up and I feel I am pretty well adjusted to the situation at this time. My major drawback is the language. Three months of study did not really give me more than the most basic outline.

Thai is a tonal language, having five tones of varying pitch, and the right word at the wrong pitch is, in fact the wrong word. A word like 'mai' may, depending on its position and tone, mean: new; not; or indicate a question is being asked. A word like 'sooway' means: unlucky; pretty; and tribute. Conversations are apt to get kind of tricky as you may well imagine.

There are also, of course, quite a few conventions of behavior that must be observed like watching where you point the toe of your shoe; however, the people are just about the most friendly, generous, and graceful I have encountered.

My school master worked out a deal where-by I was given a house of my own on stilts) and I have at least several students at my beck and call for any errands that pop into my brain. Right now the food is still a problem and I believe I'm about 20 pounds slimmer. I like chicken soup, but at breakfast time it still makes me uneasy. My palate is still numb from chili.

Yet, all in all, the countryside and the people are so interesting, so beautiful, that when I wake in the morning under coconut trees and the sound of my next door neighbor singing Cambodian folk songs I know I wouldn't trade positions with anyone else on earth.

Unusual Tactics Needed

To the editor:

Senator Brad Johnson, according to the Daily Collegian of Dec. 8, is proposing a censure motion directed at Larry Marcus, Senator at Large, Class of 1969. This charge is that Marcus heckled the speakers on the floor at the last constitutional convention meeting and failed at times to be attentive. Anyone at that meeting could very easily see that unusual tactics had to be used to be heard above the gobbling.

In fact, we feel that Senator Marcus was more restrained than any of us could have been, considering the frustration one must have felt at being labeled "Student Senator," when in fact the convention that night could have been improved with a little help from a local turkey farmer.

True Talent

To the editor:

Seeing as the entertainment for Homecoming '67 received so much publicity this past fall with its psychedelic light show of questionable taste and the alleged poor talent shown in the Mitch Ryder concert, I feel that the Simon and Garfunkel concert deserves more than equal time. I cannot believe that their excellent talent has received almost no comment whatsoever in the Daily Collegian.

I personally enjoyed that concert more than any other I have ever seen at UMass. They were good performers; they had great material; and they sang a combination of familiar and unfamiliar songs. The poetry moved me very much. To me, Simon and Garfunkel are two men who see life very clearly and they express these sentiments just as clearly. They definitely deserved a show all their own.

The representatives of the Class of '70 who ran S.E.N.D.-O.F.F. should be congratulated also for the excellent entertainment they provided.

"Cool Hand Luke" Features Paul Newman In One of His Greatest Performances

by ALAN SPONBURGH
Staff Reporter

Cool is the only word for "Cool Hand Luke", a definite must for moviegoers and Paul Newman fans alike, now playing at the Twin Cinema in Amherst.

As Luke, Paul Newman offers perhaps his finest performance ever and may finally have a good shot at the long awaited and well deserved Oscar.

The story is the old chain gang and the brutality of unemotional guards and a sadistic warden; but the beauty is in the presentation. Luke gets drunk and knocks the tops off a row of parking meters. Sentence; two years for malicious destruction of municipal property.

Luke and rules go together like brandy and ginger ale. To Luke the prisoners' rules are just as ridiculous as the warden's rules. Whether playing poker, working on the road or eating 50 hard-boiled eggs on a bet, Luke smiles and plays a cool hand. This wins him the adulation of his fellow prisoners and the respect of the prison bully who later becomes his only true friend.

When Luke's mother dies, it seems that there's no longer any reason for him to serve out his sentence. Three times Luke escapes and each capture brings him a more cruel beating. The last time he is shot and the warden is in no hurry to get him to a hospital. Luke dies, cool and smiling.

Whether Paul Newman is Hud, Harper, Hombre or Cool Hand Luke, whether he laughs, cries, shoots or kisses, Paul Newman is one of the best actors in America. In "Cool Hand Luke", Newman displays a broad range of emotions.

He's warm and understanding to his mother, but must be tough and unwavering under the sadistic beatings of the guards. At times he's childish and playful with the prisoners; other times serious and searching for meaning and a God to believe in. Here you see a bloody and sweaty face of pain and there you see the cool smile and blue eyes of Cool Hand Luke.

Backing up Newman are a number of good characterizations including the prison bully played by George Kennedy. At first the brutish "leader" of the prisoners, he later comes to respect Luke for his spirit. The final tragic scene when Luke is shot demonstrates the real ability of Kennedy, which has been obscured in his "heavy" roles in "Charade" and "Harper". The deep respect and affection that he felt for Luke comes alive as Kennedy whimpers like a child at his death.

If you're an Academy Award watcher, don't miss a nominee for best actor, and maybe the winner.

WMUA Schedules Live Exam Review Sessions

This year UMass students taking 100 level courses will have the opportunity to ask their professors questions one or two nights before the final exam, through a new service provided by WMUA, the student radio station.

WMUA has scheduled a review session with professors from seven departments, during the final exam period in January, according to David Meyer, WMUA publicity director. Each program will begin with a professor giving a resume of his course to be interrupted at any time with answers to questions called in to the station by students. Each course will be given between an hour and a half to two hours air time.

The projected schedule for these programs, according to Meyer is: Geology 101, 102, 103, January 3, 7 to 9 p.m.; Physics 101, January 3, 9 to 11 p.m.; Sociology 101, January 4, 7 to 9; Government 100, January 11, 7 to 9; Government 150, 160, January 11, 9 to 11.

WMUA is running this program on an experimental basis, Meyer said. "The continuance of this program will depend upon its success during this final exam period," he said. Some other schools have had much success with this type of study aid during finals, he indicated. According to Meyer, the faculty members who have responded to WMUA's invitation to participate have indicated that they are willing to do so as long as this experiment is a success.

The purpose of the award, created in memory of UMass forestry professor J. Harry Rich, is to encourage interested students to enter the wood technology field.

Faculty Cellist Presents Program

Joel Krosnick, assistant professor of music at the University of Massachusetts, will perform in a solo cello recital on Wednesday, December 13 at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The program, sponsored by the UMass music department, is the third in a series of faculty recitals and is open to the public without charge.

Mr. Krosnick will open the program with Roger's Suite No. 2 in D minor, Op. 131c, followed by Bach's Suite No. 6 in D major, BWV 1012. Schuller's Fantasy for Cello Solo, Op 19, Karlin's Music for Cello Alone, and Kodaly's Sonata for Cello Solo, Op. 8 will be presented in the second half of the program.

Educational Researcher Lectures On Bargaining This Afternoon

Dr. Myron Lieberman, director of educational research and development at Rhode Island College, whose books have stirred considerable controversy both in and out of education circles, will speak at UMass today.

The public is invited to attend his 2:30 p.m. lecture on collective bargaining in the School of Education auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by the Applied Research Training Program of the UMass School of Education.

Three of Dr. Lieberman's books that have enjoyed wide circulation are Education as a Profession, The Future of Public Education, and Collective Negotiations for Teachers. He has also been influential in strengthening the American Federation of Teachers as a representative for the educator.

Dr. Lieberman is a 1941 graduate of the University of Minnesota. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Illinois.

His teaching experience includes the University of Illinois, the University of Oklahoma, Hofstra University and Yeshiva University, where he served as chairman of the department of education. He assumed his present position in 1965.

Dr. Lieberman has served as director of basic research for the educational research council of Greater Cleveland and educational consultant to the Rand McNally Company.

This year he became the second recipient of the distinguished alumnus award of the College of Education of the University of Illinois.

Dr. Lieberman is a negotiator and consultant on collective negotiations to many school boards, school board organizations, and teacher organizations including the Cranston School Committee, the United Federation of Teachers, Florida School Boards Association, Chariho School Committee, and the Huntington Teachers Association.

A consulting editor to the Scott Foresman Series on Collective Negotiations in Public Education, he is also a member of the panel of arbitrators of the American Arbitration Association.

In addition to the six books of which he has been the author or co-author, he has written more than 30 articles for professional journals and magazines.

Dr. David Clark Co-authors Textbook on Poetry Study

Professor David R. Clark of the University of Massachusetts department of English has written a new book, "Reading Poetry," in conjunction with Dr. Fred Millet of the University of Chicago and Dr. Arthur Hoffman of Syracuse University.

The purpose of this revised edition, published by Harper and Row, is to train young people in the intensive reading of literature. Its approach is non-historical, focusing on the poem itself. Discussed in the text are poetic technique, analysis of poems and poetic genres. Included is an anthology of 200 English and American poems, stressing the period between 1940 and 1965. Questions presented in the book are fashioned to draw from the student a broader, deeper, and more diverse understanding of poetry.

Dr. Clark received his Ph.D. from Yale and has taught at Smith College and the Universities of Indiana and Michigan. He joined the UMass English department in 1951. He has been Fulbright Lecturer at University College, Dublin and the University of Iceland, Reykjavik.

Dr. Clark is an author of "A Curious Quire" (with Leon O. Barron, Stanley Koehler, and Robert Tucker, all of the UMass English department), "W.B. Yeats and the Theatre of Desolate Reality," and a volume of poetry, "Dry Tree." He is co-editor of "Irish Renaissance," "A Gathering of Essays," "Memoirs," and "Letters from the Massachusetts Review." He is a frequent contributor to professional journals.

Dorm Counselors Trained

By JOHN SHOEMAKER

The University of Massachusetts is slowly implementing a program for residence hall staff training. As expected by the administration, the program is not up to the desired standards and has aroused mixed emotions to its objectives.

However, officials are working to improve it, realizing it may take several years.

The program has four basic parts. First, the entire staff can discuss the general problems of student body. A reading list, including such books as the Art of Loving, The Arrogance of Power and Black Like Me, was distributed to counselors for summer reading. These books represent some of the specific issues confronting college students.

Second, the program attempts to familiarize the counselors with the different administrative offices and services available to students. It also includes third, discussion of recurring problems confronting the counselor on the job. Male counselors see damage and noise as their main problems; while female counselors see stealing as the problem of main concern.

Finally, the program attempts to provide human relations training and encourage counselors to be more perceptive of their surroundings.

The program is conducted in weekly sessions of one hour each. The residence hall staff are divided into groups with at least one Head of Residence in attendance. An effort is being made to evaluate changes in attitude so that the necessary adjustments can be made.

According to Mrs. Alice Sargent, director of the counselor training, the program is not completely successful. However, she was quick to point out, the program has just started and it "takes about three or four years to implement a program like this."

The program consists of discussion groups — not lectures. The counselors want easy, direct answers. But, Mrs. Sargent stated that "the adult world" does not have "black and white answers" for everything.

In the past the counselors were policemen or authoritarians, according to Mark Noffsinger, Associate Dean of Students. Gradually the system changed to laissez-faire and now injects democracy into an entirely new approach for student betterment. However, the program has created much confusion, he and Mrs. Sargent said.

One counselor told the Collegian interviewer he found the discussions a waste of time and without any clear answers. Another felt the program was quite inspiring and interesting. Still another did not care, one way or another.

Dr. Noffsinger said that a great deal of confusion in counselors' minds results from an ambivalence as to what their role should be. "We have not done the best possible job in the past," said Noffsinger. One objective of the training program is to "build a favorable behavior role of the counselors, and to build their prestige," he said.

Counselors are "best able to relate most closely with the students," said Dr. Noffsinger. He went on to say that counselors are effective in communicating attitudes of students to the administration. "They are the front line," he said. However, he was careful to explain that they are not a "bunch of goody-goody administrators." He added that if the underpaid counselor is really fulfilling his role much good that will never be known to others will be accomplished.

AC Lecture

FORUM, the student lecture committee at Amherst College, will sponsor appearances at the College next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday by representatives of the Russian, Israeli and Arab diplomatic corps in the United States.

Each of the three speakers will confront the problem of his country's role in international politics, with particular reference to the current Vietnam, Middle East, and overall Cold War crises.

Mikhail Trepykhalin, Second Secretary of the Soviety Embassy in Washington, will open the series Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Babbott Room.

On Wednesday, Chaim Hadomi, Counsel for Cultural Affairs of the Consulate General of Israell in Boston, will speak at 8 p.m. in Mead Auditorium.

The Arab view will be presented Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Babbott by Tahsheen M. Basheer, Senior Staff Member of the Arab States Delegation office in New York.

Mr. Basheer, an Egyptian, has had wide diplomatic service at the United Nations, the 1964 Non-Aligned Conference and the Second Arab Summit Conference. He has done graduate work at Princeton and Harvard and was one of the foremost Egyptian student leaders when at the University of Alexandria.

All of the lectures are open to the public without charge.

Avant-Garde to Come To Campus Thursday

Two internationally known artists will participate in an avant-garde music performance on Thursday, December 14 in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Miss Charlotte Moorman a classic cellist and Nam June Paik, composer and pianist, perform HAPPENINGS, Concerts, Action music in Concert Halls, art galleries, television shows, radio broadcasts, lofts, and open air concerts in city parks, churchyards, and on main city thoroughfares. Nobody knows how to label their work.

Their programs defy all traditional names; they have all the characteristics of the formal concert and theatre, yet their work is a unique and separate art form with its own clothes that would not fit any other form.

Miss Moorman is not only a leader of the newest experiments in music but also plays under Leopold Stokowski in his American Symphony Orchestra and is a member of the Boccherini Players. She was born in Little Rock, Arkansas. She began to study the cello at the age of 10 and received a Bachelor of Music and a Master of Music degree majoring in cello and went to the East to study with Leonard Rose at Meadowmount and Juilliard Schools of Music. She also studied cello with Horace Britt and Luigi Silva and chamber music with Horace Britt, Claus Adam and Lillian Fuchs.

Nam June Paik was born in Seoul, Korea, in 1932 and graduated from the University of Tokyo, Japan and then studied musicology in Freiburg with Wolfgang Fortner and did experimental work in electronic music studio in Cologne, Germany.

In Paik's "Variations on a Theme by Saint-Saens", Miss Moorman wears a cellophone formal and plays "The Swan" to the hall-way point, stops, dives into a tank of water and returns dripping wet to finish. During a performance of John Cage's "26'1.1499 For a String Player", she plays in addition to the cello, whistles, bells, a cymbal, a garbage can top, glass chimes, wood chimes, door buzzers, animal calls, tapes sounds, records of jazz and rock 'n roll, breaks glass, screams, hits Paik, cooks and eats hot dogs, plays Paik as a human cello, drinks coca-cola, shoots a gun, reads the weather report, etc., and while she is ending the piece a film of herself and Cage is being shown, of the beginning of the piece.

There will also be an underground film presented by Norman Berg. Everyone is invited and there will be no admission charge.

Scholarship Limit Clouds Grid Future

By PAUL LONGO
Staff Reporter

Bound by the Yankee Conference scholarship limit, the future status of UMass football continues to be an unsolved and puzzling situation.

LEDERLE McGUIRK

While enrollment increases at UMass, the number of full athletic scholarships remains at 20 under Yankee Conference rules. This is far below the number given by UMass' non-conference foes.

Football schedules must be made six to ten years in advance. This fall's schedule was drawn eight years ago, at a time when it was not known that there would, in 1967, be a limit of athletic awards. UMass has in recent years played such well-respected teams as Harvard, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Boston College, Boston University and Buffalo. Next fall the Redmen will add a 10th rival, Delaware.

These schools are not limited in scholarship funds. They are able to attract a greater depth of talent, according to UMass Dean of Physical Education Warren P. McQuirk.

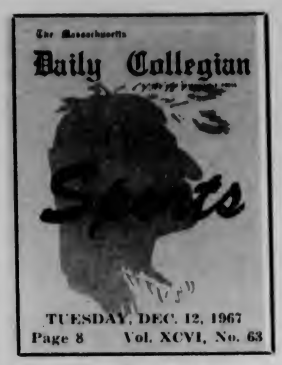
Each Yankee Conference school is allowed 80 athletic scholarships to be distributed evenly over the four classes covering baseball, basketball, football, soccer and track. At UMass about 48 of these are devoted to football. Most of the scholarships are broken up into partial awards to cover the basic fees of tuition and board.

Although the athletic directors are in agreement that the limit should be increased, Dean McGuirk said, the main ruling body, the presidents, are not. A proposed increase of scholarships was voted down in June, 1-2, by the presidents. UMass President John W. Lederle and Dean McGuirk say they are "optimistic" about the results of future meetings, but they cite no indication that major revision is probable.

The reason for disagreement about scholarship limits lies in the difference between the schools. The Yankee Conference is, in President Lederle's words, an "unequal conference." The only common factor of the schools is that all are New England state universities. They differ in size, resources, background and goals.

For example, a smaller university such as Vermont, has no desire to compete with the New England football powers. The growing University of Massachusetts, however, with a much larger student body and greater depth of resources can afford to compete with B.C., Holy Cross and Dartmouth.

"In all fairness we want our player personnel to be given an equal chance," said Dean McGuirk. It is reasonable to feel that, with good coaching, we have a chance to excel to the point of actually winning.



"We may lose, but we would like to think we are accomplishing our job, our responsibility. We possess responsibility simply by being a large and growing state university. No matter what we compete in with other schools, whether it be corresponding departments of study or a debating team, we should strive to become the best, and athletic competition is no different."

The scholarship limit has left UMass in a predicament. Will UMass continue to bring the top New England schools to Alumni Stadium to offer the Redmen ripe competition? Or will the school's growing student body and alumni feel satisfied to play such schools as A.I.C. and Springfield College?

In the end, depth is the deciding factor. Unless UMass is allowed additional aid in attracting student-athletes, according to some observers, future Redmen squads may be overmatched with teams like Dartmouth and Boston College.

There has been speculation in recent years that a league comprising the eastern independents may be formed. Included in such a conference would be both state and private schools, including UMass. Others mentioned have been Holy Cross, B.U., B.C., Rutgers and Conference member Connecticut.

But because of the long-term scheduling commitments, any grouping like this could occur only in the distant future. Meanwhile, President Lederle and Dean McGuirk say they will go to the Conference meetings in June to make another attempt to raise the scholarship quota.

$520,000 Expansion

New Athletic Facilities To Replace Livestock

By MARTHA CURRAN
Sports Day Editor

Within the next three years, cries of "play ball" will resound where the sheep pens and piggery were located on Old North Hadley Road near Boyden Physical Education Building. The animals are being moved to South Deerfield to make way for a $520,000 expansion of the UMass athletic facilities.

Does the College of Agriculture mind the move? "Not at all," said Dean Arliss A. Spielman. "In 1961, we purchased 360 acres of land in South Deerfield to establish instruction and research facilities." Plans and designs are being drawn for the new facilities and the animals will be moved by next year.

Warren McGuirk, Dean of the School of Physical Education, reaffirmed the rapport between the athletic department and the College of Agriculture and added that the acquisition of farmer farm property is part of the master plan for the University. In fact, the Athletic Department must relinquish half of its present tennis courts when the proposed extension to Joseph W. Bartlett Hall moves westward.

Fifty-two acres in front of Boyden will be developed as part of a nine-year plan involving a total of 80 acres to establish a multi-use athletic field which, when completed, Dean McGuirk says, will be one of the best in the country.

General grading begins this month on Old North Hadley Road. The road, minus the pens and piggery and two homes of area residents will be renamed New North Hadley Road and relocated to provide cloverleaf access to the sewerage treatment plant operated by the Town of Amherst and to the UMass field houses.

Concurrently, a nine lane Olympic track will be constructed. A much-needed facility, the track will conform to Olympic standards and be the widest track in New England.

A regulation baseball field and a general purpose varsity field for freshman lacrosse in the spring and soccer in the fall are also planned.

"In this complex of fields directly across from Boyden," McGuirk said, "will be five regulation soccer fields, 16 tennis courts, five regulation lacrosse fields, two football fields with additional lights to supplement the intramural gridirons and a golf driving range with a bank of ten tees." During the Spring it will be possible to lay out 36 softball diamonds for use in the intramural program.

Three walled squash and handball courts will be located on the west side of the tennis courts. All these improvements will take shape within two years —and will accommodate general physical education, intramural and intercollegiate athletics. Moreover intercollegiate athletics will be expanded and junior varsity, for the first time, will have space for competition.

A site for the long-awaited hockey arena has been selected on the northern edge of the department acreage, parallel to the intramural gridirons. The rink will not be started for at least three years.

"In New England, artificial ice should be available ten, possibly eleven months a year. A rink could be used by the entire student and faculty population. It would be open from 6 a.m. to midnight daily to service general physical education, intramurals, free skating, a possible Skating Club and area high schools," Dean McGuirk added.

The contract has been awarded and the $520,000 first phase will be launched sometime this month. A planned $300,000 expenditure will complete the all weather tennis courts. When the proposed athletic improvements and additions are completed they will give UMass one of the finest athletic facilities in the country, said McGuirk.

Varsity sweaters for Stockbridge soccer players are available at the equipment issuing window in the Boyden Building.

Distant Foes Offer Somber Season's Greetings to Redmen

By TOM FITZGERALD
Sports Editor

'Tis the season to be jolly. Tell it to Jack Leaman, John Canniff and Homer Barr, whose basketball, hockey and wrestling teams lost a total of five games this weekend. Coach Erik Kjeldsen's gymnastics powerhouse was the sole survivor, winning a three-way meet at Long Island University.

Pittsburgh's Steel Bowl should have been called the Steal Bowl as far as Leaman's hoopers were concerned. They lost to Pittsburgh Friday on a last second tip-in, 73-71, after holding a 20-point lead at halftime and a 16-point bulge with six-and-a-half minutes left. The buzzer basket by Ken Bollens was Pittsburgh's most dramatic moment since Bill Mazeroski's homer beat the Yanks in the '60 Series.

For the consolation game against Air Force Saturday, the Redmen were as psyched up as a group of Hashbury hippies between pot parties, and they lost, 71-62.

Leaman, who said yesterday, "I wish we could cry for a week to get it out of our system," must rally his forces for tomorrow's game against Fordham, which he considers the best college team in New York City. But he's just as worried about the Maine game Saturday afternoon at the Cage, a game that the Redmen must put under their belts to keep their Yankee Conference hopes alive.

The loss to Pittsburgh was even more heart-breaking than last year's 62-59 defeat at Providence, Leaman said. "It affected the kids a lot more." The Redmen were punished physically as well as emotionally in the game. Leaman plans to start junior college transfer Jim Sulesky at forward against Fordham to lend some beef to the backboard brigade.

The trip began ominously for the Redmen. Their scheduled flight from Bradley Field in Windsor Locks, Conn., was cancelled, and as they waited for another flight they were treated to a horror movie entitled The Rhode Island Game at a nearby motel. They finally hopped on a plane, made a 40-minute stop in Syracuse and reached the Iron City at 7:30 p.m., long after their scheduled arrival time.

After their second and third straight losses, the Redmen probably wished they'd stayed home and taken their chances at Las Vegas Night.

Leaman was pleased with the showings of reliable Bill Tindall, Pete Gayeska, Ray Ellerbrook and Jack Gallagher. Joe Di Sarcina left both games early. Fouls put him out of the Pittsburgh game, and the junior field general departed from the Air Force game because of illness. Leaman is well aware that without Di Sarcina, U Mass' game is like Bonnie and Clyde without Clyde.

Meanwhile, in the backwoods of Maine, the U Mass hockey team's record dropped to 2-3 with an 8-2 loss to Colby Friday in Waterville and a 9-4 setback to Bowdoin in Brunswick Saturday. Sophomore goalie Pete Scoville had 44 saves in a sensational performance against Colby.

Caniff said that the first line of Charlie Hanifan, Greg Stone and Bill Fallon performed creditably at times, scoring a pair of goals each night. U Mass could have had four more goals against Bowdoin, the coach said, since it had that many break-away opportunities.

While the first and second lines appear set, Canniff is trying to form a steady third unit for Thursday night's game at the West Springfield Coliseum against A. I. C., which is reportedly recruiting more Canadians than the Royal Mounted Police.

"It was the most we've scored and still lost since I've been here," said second-year wrestling coach Homer Barr, whose charges lost to Tufts, 27-20, at Medford Saturday. He praised the showings of Gene Paltrineri, Paul Pearl and Glenn Cummins, who each registered a pin. Cummins' unlimited match brought the fans to their feat, as he and his opponent carried their battle into the seats several times.

U Mass led, 15-6, after the 145-pound class, but then dropped two decisions and three pins. "We have to get tougher," said Barr. "That's all there is to it." The highly-regarded Mass. frosh team scored an eye-catching 46-3 victory over the Tufts freshmen. "That'll get them something to think about this summer," said Barr.

Although the gymnastics team upended Lond Island University and Westchester State, 159-147-122, a wrist injury to all-around man Joe Reed makes him a question mark for Saturday's meet against Temple at Philadelphia, the squad's first Eastern League competition. "We're going to have to be at our best," said Coach Kjeldsen, noting that Temple scored 185 points in a recent victory over Springfield.

Reed was injured in his floor exercise routine, but several other performers took up the slack. Dick Del Gallo scored a personal and team high for the season with a 9.25 rating on the rings. Kjeldsen said, that Bob Le Clair and Fred Babakian, who both performed well on the sidehorse, "handled themselves like very experienced gymnasts, and I'd like to see the rest of the team react in this way."

"Mike Kasavana and Tom Adams did their best jobs to date on the trampoline," the coach added. U Mass garnered two of the top three places in five of the seven events. Clutch first-place showings by Dave March in the high bar and Steve Brown on the parallel bars clinched the victory for the Redmen, Kjeldsen said.

LBJ Attacks GOP; Wants Labor's Aid

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—President Johnson told a cheering AFL-CIO convention Tuesday night that he will stand firm in pressing the Vietnam war while pursuing peace "regardless of the polls or regardless of the elections" in 1968.

"I am not going to be deterred," Johnson said, "by a bunch of political, selfish men who want to advance their own interests."

The AFL-CIO, already pledged to total support of Johnson in his .Vietnam .and .homefront social policies, has some 14 million members. "And we are going to need all of you," Johnson said in referring to next year's presidential and congressional elections.

Johnson praised AFL-CIO President George Meany, calling him "Mr. Labor," for his strong support in Vietnam and other administration programs.

"I thank him, and I thank you from the bottom of heart," Johnson said.

Johnson, in his speech to the delegates, again foreshadowed an upcoming campaign for reelection next year and summed up his feelings on one great issue—Vietnam.

"For as long as I have borne the reponsibility of conducting our foreign policy, I have known that it is easier to protest a policy than to conceive one," he said.

But it was at the GOP—by name—that the President slashed hardest, in a campaign-style speech tailored to get the applause that came.

"You know, I know—and the voters know," Johnson said, "that the old Republican buggy can go one way — backward downhill.

"The only program that Grand Old Party offers is the remains of what they have backed into and run over on the road—THE BITS AND PIECES OF WHAT SOMEBODY ELSE BUILT."

Drawing a bead on the GOP, he ticked off more than half a dozen major bills on which he said "members of the other party lined up like wooden soldiers of status quo" to try and shoot them down with votes to kill them.

He said that 47 Democrats who helped write an historic legislative record in the 89th Congress fell before 47 Republican nay-sayers and "America's advance has been checked."

Dropping word that a bill to control rats in cities was passed "because a nation's conscience cried out louder than Republican laughter," Johnson said that "we've all got to get together and work for next November."

The delegates didn't leave much doubt that most of them would be in his corner. But Johnson had word of admonition, too, for the AFL-CIO, just as he had in a speech a few days ago to business leaders. He called on them for restraint in seeking excessive wage increases, as he had businessmen to try to hold down prices and profit margins, so that all America will not suffer from a wage-spiral.

The delegates didn't applaud there.

As for Vietnam, Johnson said that it is easy to agonize, moralize and pin your heart on your sleeve or a placard and think you are helping stop war. But it never is that easy or that nice, he added.

"Ending war," the President said, "is a hard and ugly duty. I only wish that those who bewail war—those good-hearted but misguided critics who condemn the men who seek a swift and honorable end to war — I only wish that one of them would bring me just one workable solution for peace."

"It must be a solution that does not call for stepping up our military efforts to flash point, where we risk a larger war today."

The President, touching on challenges of the future, said, "We still have to meet the great tests of our time, improving our educational and medical systems, rebuilding our cities, providing jobs for all who can work, ending lawlessness in the streets, uniting our people in common and progressive purpose."

Johnson also told the labor leaders, "The American soldier thanks you, from the bottom of his heart. He knows even if some others don't, that your expressions of support are not just flag waving words."

Johnson said that American labor is making an all-out effort to back the war in Vietnam. "I know that many of labor's sons have left their homes to risk their lives in Vietnam. I know that is torture for you, as it is for me. I know that you regret every dollar spent on war-dollars that should be spent on the works of peace. But you and I know that we must persevere. The torture we feel cannot beg the truth."

Student Poll Reveals Opposition to War Policy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A poll of students in 19 universities in New England and the surrounding area revealed that 75 per cent of the participating students do not have confidence in President Johnson's handling of the war.

The results of the referendum were announced Tuesday by Kim Marshall, a Harvard senior who heads the non-partisan organization responsible for the poll.

Of the 20,560 students participating in the poll, more than half 57.8 per cent of the students advocated stronger attempts at a negotiated settlement, while only 3.2 per cent felt that the present policy should continue, Marshall said.

The referendum was conducted by New England Universities, Referendum on Vietnam.

Percy Narrowly Escapes Injury in V.C. Attack

SAIGON (AP)—Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., safely through a Communist attack on him and his party during an unescorted visit to the site of a Viet Cong massacre, said Tuesday: "This is closer to action than I got in three years of World War II."

U. S. Army helicopter gunships summoned by his wife Loraine and the crew of their chartered helicopter rescued Percy and four men who had gone afoot with him into fire-ravaged Daksen, where 202 Montagnard tribesmen are estimated to have been killed by a raiding Viet Cong battalion Dec. 5.

None of the men were hit, though some of five mortar rounds exploded within 15 or 20 feet of the senator and about 15 bullets whined overhead. The Communists shot from concealment in jungles around the hamlet, near the Cambodian frontier 80 miles north of Saigon.

The Americans, who carried only two weapons, never spotted them.

Percy packed a snub-nosed .38-caliber revolver. Dennis Smith, a U.S. refugee official, was armed with a carbine. Others in the party were Kenneth Schmid, a Chicago friend of the senator's; Scott Cohen, his foreign affairs adviser; and Fred Ward of Look magazine.

Percy got some small scratches on his arms as he crawled behind some wood huts for cover. His clothes were still muddied and there were spots of blood on the lower part of one of his pants legs when he appeared at a news conference in Saigon.

The trip to Daksen resulted from an impromptu decision when the senator found he had time to while away after inspecting a refugee village 20 miles north of Saigon.

Percy said he had never obtained a military escort for any of his field trips and the thought of an attack "never really occurred to me."

"We circled the village five or six times," he said. "There seemed to be no sign of life, so we took the chopper in."

The two crewmen put the craft down on the outskirts. The other men walked about 100 yards into the hamlet. Mrs. Percy stayed with the helicopter.

The attack flared just as Percy emerged from one of the bunkers in which many of the Montagnards were trapped by flame throwers and grenades in the Viet Cong raid.

With the first explosion, the helicopter took off for Song Be, three miles away, to call in military help.

Mrs. Percy said: "I grabbed the photographic equipment and papers lying on the floor of the helicopter and the crewmen grabbed hold of me. We took off straight over the trees."

They were back in 20 minutes with four or five gunships.

Investigation Follows Theft At SW Commons

The University Treasurer's Office has reported the theft of over $1000 from the snack bar of Southwest Dining Commons #7. The break, discovered Monday morning, was assumed to have occurred "sometime Sunday" according to sources and consisted of the weekend's receipts.

The Treasurer's office quickly announced that the amount was "less than $2000," and a Bonding Company, which covers the University, in such matters has been given information to begin an investigation. The robbery will result in "no loss of funds for the University," according to Treasury officials.

Internal auditor Ovide Flannery of the Treasurer's office had "no comment at all" on the matter while Associate Director of Food Services Joel Stoneham stated only that a "substantial amount" of money had been taken.

A special meeting was held to give Dan Melley of University News Service information of the incident. University Police are presently on the case.

Johnson Says No Progress Too Dear

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — President Johnson moved through the Southland Monday snorting at the fearful and the doubters and rejecting any idea of a small pocketbook approach to education, space or other national programs and problems.

Johnson was off and winging in the style of a political campaigner before he barely got started on his first speech of the day at Killoen, Tex.

He fired away at complainers, critics and doubters. He contended that they were trying to tear down vital American programs the nation, he said, can afford.

"With your stomachs full," he inquired sarcastically, "has it pressed your heart out of position where it no longer cares?"

Soldiers in uniform from nearby Ft. Hood mingled with the civilian students. Out in the crowd, three demonstrators began shouting and waving placards. Soldiers and students swarmed to them and tore up their signs.

Johnson told an audience of thousands at a new Texas college that 'progress in America can never be too expensive."

And at a vast space material assembly near New Orleans, he said that in this field: "We have started a journey from which there can be no turning back."

Santa Claus Arrives Early To Visit Christmas Sing

"Come All Ye Faithful . . ." to the Christmas Sing sponsored by the Class of '71 at 8 p.m. Sunday, December 17.

The Sing lead by the "Musicales", trumpeters, Southwest Patriots, and Revelers, will begin simultaneously at George Washington Tower and at the center of Orchard Hill at about 7:30 p.m. The two groups will then proceed from dormitory to dormitory gathering carolers who will assemble at the Southwest Terrace of the Student Union.

The Maroon Keys will light the boufire while free hot chocolate and cookies are served by members of the Freshmen Executive Council.

Singing will be interrupted by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, who will be greeted by Freshman Class President Joseph Tobacco. Santa and his wife assisted by their elves, the Scrolls, will distribute candy canes to the carolers.

Following the Christmas Sing, everyone is invited into the Ballroom, where entertainment will be provided by the "Musicales", "The Jug Band", and Jerry Bussiere.

WASHINGTON STATE UNIVERSITY: Two students were injured in a shooting accident in Goldsworthy Hall here at WSU.

University Police Chief Ernest Schrenk said that Charles H. Lindgren, a freshman, was showing Alfred Pearson and Jerry Johnson his shotgun and how it worked. A shell was in the chamber and when the gun was snapped shut it went off.

The pellets bounced off the floor and struck Pearson and Johnson in the legs. Both were able to walk to a waiting ambulance.

Dean Arthur McCartan stated that he plans to call a meeting of house presidents and review the university's regulations on firearms.

"The rule is now that the students can keep guns in their rooms but they must be secure or broken," he said.

WINTHROP COLLEGE, S.C.: Antiques aren't the only things that become valuable, so do "Sign-Out" cards here at WC.

"Sign-Out" cards of 30 resident women were stolen, and reports show that someone is selling these cards to the girls' beaus at Clemson University.

This could call for blackmail to girls who have not been faithful to their unsuspecting steadies.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY: The Illinois attorney general's office has decided not to prosecute the Northwestern students and faculty members involved in an alleged marijuana party. The assistant state's attorney said charges were dropped because of lack of evidence.

Also on the NU campus; the Associated Women Students are proposing changes in the housing rules for women. Among the changes is an extension of the freshman closing hour at 12:30 on week nights.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS at AUSTIN: Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity denied last Wednesday a charge that it had been involved in an act of racism, stating that a resolution presented in the House of Delegates Tuesday was "unjust".

In the House meeting, Dick Reavis, delegate from the University Socialist Committee, accused the fraternity of committing a racist act when it included a figure of a Negro minstrel on a riverboat in the Aggie Sign Contest.

The resolution to censure Phi Kappa Sigma was defeated.

INDIANA CENTRAL COLLEGE: Is this a new step in housing students? Tentative plans concerning the construction of a new co-ed dormitory are being studied by the Administration.

Standing five stories, as now planned, the dorm would house 250 people, 125 of each sex, plus two housemothers. Actually the structure would be two buildings connected by co-educational lounges.

Moore, Moran View Graduate Student Code

by DOUGLAS HINCKLEY
Staff Reporter

"The basic issue, as I see it, is whether there should be such a code at all," said U-Mass Graduate School Dean Edward C. Moore in a letter to the Collegian (Nov. 6). He was writing about a furor that had arisen around a proposed graduate student code.

Such a code would state the acts which are prohibited to graduate students and would also specify the judicial procedures and punishments which would follow violations of the code.

Vice-President of the Graduate Student Senate, Geoffrey Moran said, "Neither the Graduate Student body, was notified that the preparation of such a code was in progress or invited to express their views on the matter prior to the meeting of the Graduate Council Committee, the occasion on which this proposal was first made public."

Specifically, Moran is opposed to Section II, Article 6, of the proposed code which terms it an offense "to refuse to identify one's self to any properly identified official or member of the University staff, when in the exercise of his charged responsibilities he judges such identification to be necessary."

Moran also takes exception to an area of the code which deals with off-campus offenses. The code states that although the "university may impose additional sanctions or penalties . . . such actions shall not constitute double jeopardy". Students found guilty of such civil offenses as draft card burning and refusal to be inducted, "must not only expect severe penalties at the federal level, but risk, unless it pleases the Graduate Dean, the gravest penalties at the academic level," says Moran.

Dean Moore bases his support of a code on the three points of due process protection which such a code would afford. The code should concern itself, he says, with:

"1. The procedures under which an inquiry into an alleged violation would be conducted, with particular attention to the notion that such as inquiry should protect the rights of the students to a full and fair hearing.

2. An account of the offenses under which a student might be charged, so that in the event a charge is placed a procedural right of the student to know the exact terms of the charge could be satisfied.

3. The right of protection against 'cruel and unusual' penalties would suggest the desirability of indicating what appropriate sanctions and penalties might be imposed."

Moran believes, "It is not a quantitative change in the Graduate School, but an expected qualitative change," that has prompted the graduate dean to prepare a code: "expecting something that will not appear."

Cheerleaders! '71 Needs You

The Class of 1971 would like to establish a unified support section at basketball games. According to President Joe Tabacco, "the Freshman basketball team lacks support but the spirit of the class seems to be very high."

Any freshman girls who have an interest in forming a cheerleading squad are asked to attend an open meeting on Monday, December 18 at 8:30 p.m. in the Worcester Room of the Student Union.

Tabacco said that the idea has been dead for a few years but the class seems to be quite favorable to reviving a cheerleading team.

As Tabacco stated, "We're looking for a spirited crew."

Pass-Fail

Starting next semester a hallmark of creative innovation will be instituted, allowing any eligible full-time junior or senior to exercise a pass-fail option in one course, except for those courses needed to satisfy a school or University core or distribution requirement, courses in his major, or courses in which the department will not allow students to be admitted on a pass-fail basis. A pass-fail course successfully completed earns graduation credits but does not count in the quality point average; but a failure in such a course is included in the quality point average.

So why isn't everyone cheering? After all, there are just three minor exceptions to the option. Wait a minute, are they so minor? With a second inspection it would appear that they are not. Well then, what is the trouble? Perhaps the administration has fallen in love with its own words; we know what a wonderful thing language is—it can replace thinking and analysis. For the present distribution requirement shifts emphasis erratically, achieving little continuity, coherence, or momentum.

Diminishing returns come into effect with predictably tedious results. By requiring a buckshot smattering of courses instead of a logical and coherent introductory survey in the social, biological, or physical sciences as Amherst has done, we never learn the lesson of the single viewpoint, which is fatal to our interpretation of the curriculum's meaning.

Without such a pass-fail survey type of education, we are expected to compete on an equal basis in different areas without regard to the fact that grades indicate interest primarily and intelligence only very secondarily. With a pass-fail system there is no fear of bringing one's cume down with a hard course. With a pass-fail system we are able to eliminate the asininity of taking courses as requirements (such as introductory English, speech, government, and languages) which in many cases have already been taken in substance during high school.

The prime problem now is that the administration has tried to reconcile individual autonomy with academic solidarity, found the task insoluble by routine methods, and resorted to the trend-oriented foolishness of the requirement system. The present innovation is revealed as merely a bone thrown to the dogs. The necessity of requirements versus the number of required courses that are necessary is increasingly assuming priority over either the problem or the solution.

It is clear that the requirement system has outlived its usefulness, it fails to recognize that any viable academic system must allow the individual to see all the facets of his spectrum and must not allow the hierarchy to impose its own synthesis upon the individual.

A workable solution would be to have more interdisciplinary courses in place of some of the required courses, with the remaining required courses retooled to show their usefulness in other areas of living.

The administration has a rare chance to secure for itself a place in the pantheon by establishment of this hallmark of enlightened liberality. The solution will come neither from the student sector nor the administrative sector, but from both working for the common good. Now it only remains for the older liberals to act in order to further the egalitarian thrust of University policy.

Hershey Hangs On

U. S. Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey and U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark have now announced that draft registrants who engage in "lawful protest activities" need not fear that they will be called up for military service ahead of time.

That this assurance had to be given at all is a tacit indictment of Gen. Hershey and his flagrantly illegal efforts to use the Selective Service Act as a club with which to punish draft-age citizens for protesting against the war in Vietnam.

Two years ago Gen. Hershey was sternly rebuked by the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit for having two University of Michigan students classified 1-A by local draft officials because of opposition to the war. Wrote Judge Harold Medina for the court: "It is not the function of local (draft) boards to punish registrants by reclassifying them 1-A because they protested as they did over the Government's involvement in Vietnam."

Yet even now Gen. Hershey is unrepentant.

He says the new announcement does nothing to change his Oct. 26 directive to all local boards. Under this directive, reclassification was urged for those who engaged in activities "contrary to the national interest." It has already been used as the foundation for the call-up of a number of men who have not been legally proved to have engaged in anything other than "lawful protest activities."

Gen. Hershey has outlived his usefulness if he thinks that local draft boards rather than the courts, are the appropriate agencies for determining whether citizens have violated the law.

Issues in Education—5

Travel Study

(The following is the fifth in a series of articles about philosophy, problems and possibilities of education. The intent is to begin to focus the dialogue about education in a way such that all people committed to education can contribute. We must be continually trying to redefine education in terms of the changing world and needs of the people. If you are at all concerned about education you will want to participate in the dialogue. — Ed.)

Students, Awake! A revolution is at hand! You—who have imagined the University of Massachusetts to be the be-all and end-all in education, are in for a shock. Innovation is taking place—elsewhere; radical experiments are being tried—in other schools—and they are working! For the first time a plan has been created and put into effect (not just intellectualized) which provides a startling new approach to relevent education for people living in our 1967 "global community." Imagine what it might be like to take part in this "travel-study" program...

"If a world society is to be born, a revolutionary change of attitude toward the nature and function of the educational process is of absolute necessity. What is needed is a concept of World Education, education that has made of itself a relevent search for universal truth appropriate to our age. It was in this spirit that the Friends World Institute was established two years ago.

This is clearly the first college-level institution to employ the world, literally, as its campus. It embraces the concept of several Centers of World Community, each bearing its local designation. For there is no natural cultural center on the face of our sphere. Community must grow as from the joints of a web, tying by its filaments all mankind into a sense of oneness. The plan for a world campus is to send students systematically around the earth with six-month stops at each of seven centers and to engage in thousands of miles of study-travel in each of seven regions. They are loosely defined, largely for convenience sake, as Africa, South Asia, East Asia, North America, Latin America, West Europe, and East Europe.

The program of study breaks with the traditional subdivision of curriculum into subject areas: seeks the basic unity of all knowledge in common truth; seeks knowledge not as an end in itself but as a means to human goals; and is based on direct and vicarious experience in recognizing, defining, and solving major problems in our crisis culture. The curriculum evokes and grows out of the continual reconstruction of experience.

This problem-solving approach is uniquely appropriate for World Education. By focusing on the common problems of men everywhere, World Education will bring the humanly significant contributions of the various disciplines into an integrated pattern, a single focus. The experience of the student is thus made meaningful through a pe of this pattern, and the human problems engages a creator of value and social change.

Yeah Coach!

By Joel Fox

After 13 rigorous but enjoyable years, track coach Bill Footrick is retiring. The coach who built up the UMass track teams from average status to New England powers, has decided to move on to another job.

Footrick's cross-country teams finished with an overall mark of 74 wins and 41 losses in 13 years. Four of these squads were Yankee Conference champions (1960-61-62-66), and five more placed second in the conference meet.

Only three times in the 13 years did his teams finish out of the top five in the New England Cross-Country Championships. In 1961, his team captured the New England title for UMass. Footrick called this championship, the "biggest moment" of his coaching career.

Winter track at UMass has also been successful under Footrick. His teams since 1955 have compiled a 37-23 record for a winning percentage of .617. The four-year old Yankee Conference Indoor Championships have twice been copped by Footrick's men, in 1966 and 1967.

In outdoor spring track, he has built up fine teams without the help benefit of an outdoor track. Despite the coach's efforts, UMass has been without a track for a number of years. As a result, the Redmen have to face the grind of travelling to all of their dual meets. And yet the "Trackless Wonders" have won the Yankee Conference crown twice in the last two years.

Footrick's protege and successor, Ken O'Brien feels that the success of the retiring coach can be attributed to the fact that he had the interest of his boys at heart.

"He showed interest in kids, continually showing in both their campus liv academics," said O'Brie never shortchanged anyo gave them one hundred p His trademark was that h take a boy, no matter ho ability he had, and get th out of him. He would ne anyone from his teams."

"Mother" and Me

To the editor:

There has been much controversy over the recent publication, The Mother of Voices, as to its content and right of publication. Administrators have been quick to denounce the paper, whereas students have been more or less in uniform support of the publication.

I stand somewhat in the middle between those who utterly condemn it, and those who ardently support the paper.

The jest of the whole dispute seems to be over the publications unlimited use of unsavory four-letter words. I am the first to condemn the paper for this routine practice which it seems to have adopted. There are just too many more appropriate ways of placing emphasis on desired points other than the flagrant use of profanity.

The sad part about the whole thing is that the purpose of the publication; that is, the primary intention of the publishers is great as can be witnessed in many of the paper's articles. But the profanity takes so much away from this as to sometimes completely cloud this primary intent.

I, for one, would very much like to see The Mother of Voices come into its own as a free and responsible press recognized by all as a valuable asset to the free expression which students desire so much to have. And I believe that the Mother of Voices is perfectly capable of this.

Draft Protests

To the editor:

In the December 7th issue of the Springfield Union an article was carried indicating that Northampton was in for more draft protests. Certainly this is dismaying to many residents who were led to believe that the "dialogues" that are presently taking place would placate both the pro and con draft demonstrators. Now it is learned that one faction is not satisfied with the verbal "give and take" and plans to take to the streets.

To protest certainly is within the rights of all citizens and although many rallies and demonstrations are obnoxious we do allow them. Such was the case of the demonstration which began October 16th in Northampton. Unfortunately many anti-draft demonstrators failed to acknowledge the right of local citizens to be critical of the demonstrators. The respect of the right to dissent has to be reciprocal between all groups and individuals or our republican form of government will perish.

Northamptonites should be credited with keeping a cool reserve during this period. This reserve was kept although the anti-draft demonstrators exceeded good taste.

If another demonstration is held my fellow townsmen will again respect the rights of the protestors. We certainly will support the police in whatever action they deem necessary. Hats off to them for the way the last demonstration was handled. And who knows perhaps the community will be spared further demonstrations when some kind soul lets these activists in on a secret that has not been too well kept. Here in the U.S.A. we prefer to use what is called a ballotbox. But it does take more sophistication to use it than blocking traffic.

Dunking the Ball

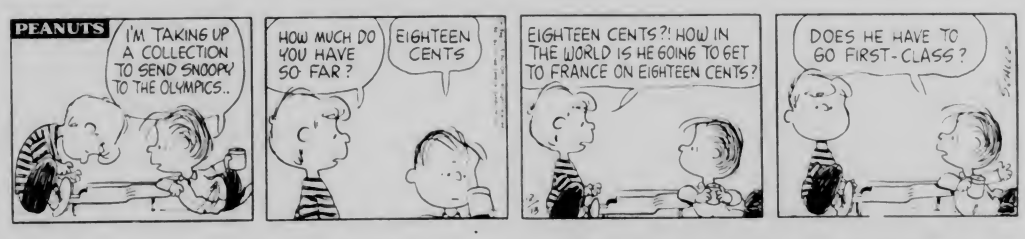
To the editor:

I wish to clarify a paragraph in Tom FitzGerald's column in Daily Collegian, concerning the rule banning the "dunk" in basketball.

First, let me explain that I am stating facts, and they do not necessarily represent my personal opinion. To the best of my knowledge there is no rule prohibiting the placing of an arm or hand over the basket before or after a basket is made—as long as the basket is not touched and the ball is not interfered with, if it is in the area.

Now, for the reasons for banning the "dunk" shot.

1—A large number of injuries to the hand, wrist, forearm, and even the head have occurred since "dunking" became popular.



2—Equipment has been damaged, e.g., bending of rims, separating the rim from the backboard, snapping the rim at one of its supports. Most of the damage has occurred during the practice periods. Many games have been postponed because the school did not have spare equipment. In some cases this has occurred during championship games, and the psychological build-up of the players was destroyed.

3—The "dunk" is virtually impossible to defend without the defender receiving a broken hand for his efforts. Remember, this rule only applies to amateur ball, where you do not have six or seven players near the seven foot tall mark on one team who can jump high enough to look down on the basket and "dunk" the ball with no danger of hitting the rim.

4—According to rule (9) section (11) on page 32 of the Official Collegiate Basketball Guide Rule Book it is a violation to "(a) touch the ball or basket when the ball is on or within either basket; or (b) touch the ball when it is touching the cylinder having the ring as its lower base; or (c) touch the ball following a field goal try while it is in its downward flight entirely over the basket ring level and has the possibility of entering the basket in flight. If the ball has touched or been touched by a player before it began its downflight or if the ball has touched the ring the restrictions in (c) do not apply."

According to this rule "dunking" has been illegal ever since its inception, and why it hasn't been called a violation before now is as questionable by me as it may be by you. I believe the rule has been in the rule books longer than "dunking" has been in the games.

A Labor of Love

New Mace Symbolizes UMass Authority

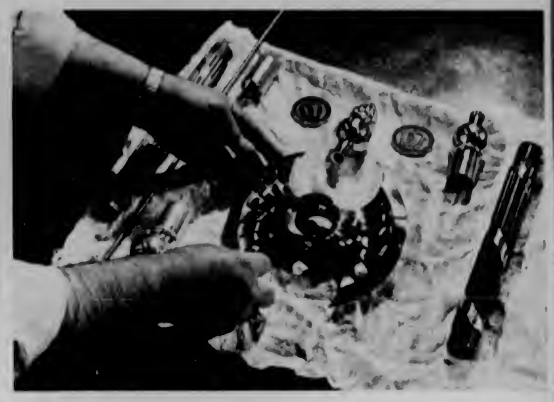
UMass needed a ceremonial mace, symbol of power and authority in many colleges and universities, to be carried in academic processions at convocations, commencements and other formal occasions.

Roger Roche, graphic artist in the Office of University Relations, prepared a simple but forceful color design that received enthusiastic approval from the University administration.

Using the University seal as a focal point and unifying element, Roche designed a shaft of 14 rods of black walnut, symbolizing the 14 counties of Massachusetts. They are held together by a gold band, signifying their unity. Maroon and white tassels, hang from the shaft.

The head of the mace, topped by the flame of knowledge, is a series of complex curves radiating from the hub in which the seal is centered. The face reflects light in constantly changing patterns, symbolizing the many facets of University life.

When the design was sent out to commercial firms to get cost estimates to produce, the results were deemed inordinately high, and the project was shelved temporarily.



Armand Costa, associate professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Massachusetts, uses calipers to convert artist Roger Roche's rendition of the University mace to a mechanical layout.

Then, Armand J. Costa, UMass associate professor of mechanical engineering, came to the rescue. He agreed to use his vast skills to machine the intricate parts of the mace—on his own time. The project became a labor of love for him. He spent endless hours last year working on lathes, milling machines and drill presses until the 17 pieces of brass were perfectly smooth.

The brass parts were then sent to a commercial firm to be gold plated. When they were returned, he buffed them to a high sheen and assembled the parts to complete the mace.

The Class of 1967 picked up the expenses of creating the mace and presented it as their class gift to President John W. Lederle. To date, the mace has been used twice, at last year's commencement and the convocation this fall. It is borne by those who have received the UMass Distinguished Teacher of the Year award.

The 17 pieces that compose the mace are arranged by Prof. Costa prior to assembly. The handle is hand buffed black walnut. The college seals were hand etched. Prof. Costa is now designing a wood display case to exhibit the mace in UMass President John W. Lederle's office .

The assembled mace, almost three feet in length, is held by Prof. Costa. The mace will be used during commencement exercises, convocations and special events at UMass.

Rockets Test Danger Of Radiation to Astronauts

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—American spacemen will try for a tricky two-in-one launch today, hoping to get the best information yet on just how dangerous the sun's radiation will be to astronauts.

A Delta rocket will attempt to drill the radiation-hunting Pioneer 8 spacecraft into orbit around the sun while dropping off a communications payload en route as a satellite of earth.

Drum-shaped Pioneer 8, scheduled to blast off at 9:08 a.m. EST, is to rocket into a sun-circling orbit between that of earth and Mars, where its instruments can radio information about cosmic rays, magnetic and electric fields in interplanetary space, and the solar wind.

The second spacecraft—called TTS for Test and Training Satellite—is to pop out of the engine compartment of Pioneer's sleek Delta booster rocket, springing into earth orbit to become a relay station that can exercise America's Apollo man-in-space global tracking network.

The eight-sided communications payload is designed to receive earth-to-space signals on the same radio frequency used in Apollo flights. It is to return signals to earth on radio wavelengths which will be used to report spacecraft and astronaut status.

Pres. Lederle Pleased with "Open Office"

President Lederle, in a phone interview, expressed his pleasure at the open office hours held yesterday for the benefit of U-Mass students. Although the open office hour was supposed to run from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m., it actually lasted until well after six o'clock. Lederle spoke with fifteen to twenty students who discussed everything from curriculum to campus planning. He said that all the students were serious and that he "learned a lot."

When asked about the possibility of regularly scheduled open office hours, President Lederle replied that he has an open door policy and is willing to see students any time he is available. The deliberate announcement of the open office hour was to encourage students to come up to his office who might be otherwise afraid to do so.

Should Infirmary Dispense 'Pill'?

The third in the series of public debates will take place tonight in Mahar Auditorium at 8 p.m. The topic of this evening's debate will be resolved: That the University of Massachusetts infirmary should dispense birth control pills.

Participating in this evening's debate will be members of the University debate team. Taking the affirmative will be Wendy Paige, a member of the Class of '71, and her partner Neal Whitman, former vice-president of the debate team and present chairman of the Student Union Governing Board. Taking the negative position will be Bob Rutkiewicz and Phil Doyle, both of the Class of '71.

Stiffer Sentences Are Being Given To Draft Law Violators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convictions for draft law violations doubled in the past year, and judges handed out stiffer sentences, federal court figures showed Tuesday.

Figures from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts showed 748 persons were convicted during the fiscal year that ended last June 30. This compares with 372 during the 1966 fiscal year.

The average sentence meted out to the 666 persons who went to prison was 32.1 months, compared with 26.4 months in 1966 and 21 months in 1965. The sentences averaged 21-23 months for the 10 previous years and hit 29 months during the Korean War in 1953.

Of those imprisoned last year, 58 received sentences of 5 years or more, 291 got 3 to 5 years and 270 a year and a day to three years.

The figures show also that the Justice Department has obtained convictions in about half the cases it prosecutes.

PURSUING PERFECTION—UMass crewmen Bob Kiley (left) and Glenn Chaple take a turn at the rowing tank as part of the team's off-season conditioning drills in Memorial Hall.

Crew Members Follow Rugged Winter Grind

By MARTHA CURRAN
Staff Reporter

It used to be a bowling alley; now the dip and feather of oars in a rowing tank over-ride the echoes of strike and spare. And every 15 minutes someone yells, "Move," as teams of two shift from push-ups to sit-ups or from pressing weights to jumping rope.

Coach Dave Clarke and his 40-member crew team have transformed the basement of Memorial Hall to the training center for the UMass crew. Nine rowing machines donated by Amherst College and MIT have replaced the bowling alleys.

A large tank made of plastic construction liner held rigid by the weight of the water within it stands at one end. It is outfitted with convertible sliding seats so that two crew members can alternate rowing port and starboard.

Winter practice involves three afternoons a week, an hour each on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Members row for style and conditioning, using the tank, alternating full and half power for half an hour. They run a mile in Curry Hicks cage and follow an established routine of exercises and weight lifting at nine specific stations. The routine is patterned after the training program used by Western Germany's world champion Ratzeburg crew.

In the spring, practice moves back out on the Connecticut River, where UMass shells are stored in a nightclub - turned - boathouse and dock facilities are shared with Amherst College. The oarsmen row four days a week. By the end of April, the varsity, junior varsity and freshman teams practice seven days a week. Junior Mike Faherty, an accomplished sculler in his own right, coaches the frosh team.

Last season the oarsmen competed in six regattas against 34 crews. As a member of the small college program, UMass rounds out its season in the Dad Vail Regatta held in Pennsylvania. Last year, all three UMass crews placed in the top 10 of the Dad Vail. They rowed against URI, Wesleyan, Trinity, Amherst, Marietta, Notre Dame, Holy Cross, Georgetown, Clark and Michigan State.

Although crew is not full financed by the athletic department, the sport has had a long and storied history at UMass. In 1871, UMass had the top crew in the country. The team defeated Harvard and Brown over a three-mile course in Springfield. The oldest athletic trophy at the University is that winning shell, which is hanging in Curry Hicks Cage.

Joshua Ward, coach at that time, was the first paid crew coach in the U.S. His modern counterpart, Dave Clarke, is a senior. A member of the Union Boat Club of Boston, he has competed in national championship regattas and traveled to Yugoslavia in 1966 with the United States team.

"In two years of intercollegiate rowing," Clarke said, "we have become one of the top small college crews in the country; with continued and increased recognition by the Athletic Department, UMass can have one of the best crews in the country."

He usually spends 20 hours a week on crew during the winter and double that amount in the spring. The team, still growing, has an envious "esprit de corps."

The equipment is begged or borrowed. Apparatus, including the tank, is homemade. Clarke has received donations from class governments and the Student Senate for the development and continuation of the crew, and bought shells and oars to supplement equipment donated by the U.S. Naval Academy, Amherst, MIT, Harvard and Yale.

Rowing is a stimulating sport, both mentally and physically, said Clarke. Bob Natusch, sophomore oarsman, said, "It's like sprinting 220 yards and lifting weights at the same time, but I like it."

DiSarcina May Miss Tilt With Fordham Tonight

Redmen Hope to End 3-Game Skid

By GLENN BRIERE
Assistant Sports Editor

Hoping to rebound from one of its worst starts in recent years, the UMass basketball team travels to New York City tonight for a game against the strong Fordham Rams. Game time is 8.

The condition of play-maker Joe DiSarcina is a question mark for the Redmen, and Coach Jack Leaman is undecided over one forward position with Jim Sulesky and Jack Gallagher vying for the starting slot. DiSarcina has been ill since the Steel Bowl consolation game against Air Force. If he is unable to play, senior Gary Gasperack will take his place.

The other starters will be Captain Bill Tindall at forward, junior Pete Gayeska at center and sophomore Ray Ellerbrook at guard.

The Redmen will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak before they enter Saturday's vital Yankee Conference game against Maine at the Cage. But as Coach Leaman said yesterday, "We're down in the dumps right now." A last second tip-in cost the Redmen in Friday night's Steel Bowl encounter with Pittsburgh.

Fordham is one of the best if not the best college team in and around New York. Coach John Bach has most of last year's team back, and the addition of some talented sophs makes the Rams almost sure to go to the NIT this year.

Fordham is 1-1, losing to Yale in its first game and beating Seton Hall Saturday. Both games were on the road, so this is Fordham's first game at its home in the Bronx.

The Rams have a good blend of speed, shooting and height. They are especially tough off the boards.

Fordham's offense revolves around one of the best players in the east, senior forward Bill Langheld. Langheld was the leading scorer on last year's team. The 6'3 native of Newark, N.J., has a jumper that he can hit on from anywhere in the forecourt. Although a little slow on defense, Langheld is aggressive and is tough under the boards.

JIM SULESKY
Possible starting forward

At center will be 6'7 junior Dennis Witkowski. Fordham took a gamble when it recruited him, since he did not excel in high school. However, Witkowski has matured into a fine ball player and can score as well as grab his share of rebounds.

The other forward will be 6'5 sophomore Bob Kellert, a good rebounder.

In the backcourt, the Rams will go with Ken Parker and Frank McLaughlin. Parker, a 6'1 senior, is the best defensive player on the team. A good all-around performer, Parker is also able to work his way inside to grab rebounds.

McLaughlin, a 6'1 junior, is a local boy from the Bronx who represents the Rams' chief outside threat. He is a smooth ballhander who can both hit from the outside and drive inside.

The Rams have some additional bench strength in 6'0 guard Phil Tama and 6'3 forward Pat Raftery.

Puckmen to Challenge AIC Tomorrow

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

American International College will provide the opposition for the UMass hockey team when the Redmen travel to the Eastern States Coliseum in West Springfield to battle the Yellow Jackets tomorrow night at 8.

UMass coach Jack Canniff's team will be trying to break a two-game losing streak and even their record at 3-3.

AIC will be playing its home opener after three games on the road. The Yellow Jackets lost to Colby, 5-3; Salem State, 5-4, in overtime, and ripped mighty Army, 6-3.

Seeded fourth in Division II of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference in a pre-season poll of coaches, AIC will provide tough competition for the Redmen.

Leading AIC will be Captain Bob Coutts, a left wing, who led the nation in scoring with 68 points two years ago. Coutts, who was an All-ECAC selection is backed by juniors Gary Socha and Jeff Burgess.

Socha, also an All-ECAC team member, scored 58 points last season and was one of the top scorers in New England. Burgess is AIC's number one defenseman and a former All-Western Mass. schoolboy pick at Chicopee High.

In the goal for the second year will be junior Gary Young of Ottawa, Ont. Two other likely regulars are Mike Egeroff and Len Bucko, who according to AIC coach Bill Turner, "have great promise, but are both a little rusty."

Bucko, returning to the ice after nearly four years, is a former standout at West Springfield High. Egeroff is one of several Canadians on the team.

Young Greek King Stakes Crown on Military Coup

Constantine Calls People to Revolt

ROME (AP)—King Constantine of Greece called his people into revolt Wednesday against the military dictatorship that has ruled the nation eight months.

King Constantine claimed Wednesday night the loyalty of 90 per cent of Greece's military forces.

The claim was in a broadcast from Larissa, the town in central Greece where the king was directing a countercoup against the Athens military regime.

The broadcast said a new prime minister had been appointed and that five members of the Athens military junta had been fired. None of the five was named.

Athens radio, controlled by the military, said seven hours later: "The plot has failed completely, and it has been crushed."

Direct communications with Athens was cut off after The Associated Press bureau there reported early stages of an attempted coup countering the one last April in which three colonels gained control over Greece.

From Salonika in the north, the king appealed by radio to his countrymen to fight with him to oust the military junta and restore democracy. He vowed to crush all opposition. Some segments of the military, especially around Salonika, were supporting the king, at least at the start.

Other accounts said the 27-year-old king had set up a new government at Naousa, 45 miles west of Salonika, with former Defense Minister Peter Caroufalias as premier. But Athens radio, heard in Istanbul, said the king was "fleeing from village to village."

A statement broadcast by Athens radio claimed "adventurers misled the King and forced him to turn the April revolution."

Later the Athens radio said: "The plot has failed completely, and it has been crushed. Official reports being received state the military forces remain loyal and take orders from the national revolutionary government of April 21. Calm reigns throughout the whole country."

Constantine Flees to Rome; Junta Says Coup Smashed

ROME (AP) — King Constantine of Greece flew to Rome with the royal family early Thursday while the Athens military regime claimed the young monarch's attempt to overthrow it was smashed.

The 27-year-old king declined to say anything on arrival. All members of his family looked distraught as they got off their plane at Rome's Ciampino military airport.

The king Wednesday had claimed control of most of the armed forces and a broadcast had said his troops were advancing on Athens in an attempt to oust the 8-month-old colonels' regime.

The king also had set up a rival government.

But defiantly the colonels had deprived Constantine of his constitutional powers and named a regent or viceroy to replace him as reigning head of state, the Athens radio said.

Junta-controlled broadcasts had claimed the king was "fleeing from village to village" and that his attempted coup had turned into a fiasco.

The king and his family arrived in Rome in a royal turbojet plane in the middle of the night.

Looking wan and walking unsteadily, the king stepped out, followed by his Danish-born queen, Anne-Marie, their two small children, and Queen Mother Frederika.

Asked by a reporter if he had any comment on the situation in Greece, the king declared: "Not at this moment."

Earlier reports indicated attempts were being made to avert civil war.

Behind the scenes of troop movements and formal government changes, negotiations were going on, according to Washington reports, between representatives of the king and leaders of the military regime to resolve the crisis and avoid much bloodshed.

But lines also were obviously drawn for civil war—the first in Greece since the bitter fighting of the late 1940's when the nation

Student Senate Burns Midnight Oil As Semester Nears Conclusion

By RICHARD S. KLINE
Daily Collegian News Editor

What could be the final session of the semester for the Student Senate took place last night, leaving many bills untouched.

Although the session was extremely productive, it was still necessary for senate president Jim Collins to request another meeting for Tuesday night. The concensus was, however, that a quorum might not be in attendance just two days before vacation.

Starting the meeting off on a somewhat sour note, three senators resigned. One of the resignations was for personal reasons and the other two were Laura Jenkins and Donna LaConte, a protest against "the child-like antics" of the Senate.

It was announced by Collins that the CIA, scheduled to appear on the UM campus in five days, had decided to cancel the appearance. He further explained that it was not a move made on the UM campus only, but all over the country.

In a move to shorten the agenda, two bills were withdrawn at the start of the meeting, one of which was a letter to the editor of the Record American. Sponsored by Sen. Treas. Paul Silverman, it stated, "It is the feeling of the University of Massachusetts that your article concerning the light show of Oct. 26, 1967 at the University was slanted and in poor taste."

Reporting on a private meeting between key Daily Collegian and Senate personnel and class officers, Silverman stated that questions of ethical and legal spending in certain areas had arisen and that "until it (the investigation) is finished, it should not be let out." He said that it is now going to the ways and means committee of the Senate and the information will be presented to the class executive council and to the general court for disciplinary action.

Coming to one of the most important pieces of legislation of the evening — recommendations on open houses and the open house policy—Dean of Students William Field was invited by the chair to speak and present his views on the proposal.

Junior Class Announces Winter Carnival Events

By SANDRA BORNSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Plans for the three major events of the Junior Class were outlined last night by Junior Class President Wayne Thomas. The first one is Winter Carnival to be held February 21 through the 25. The second event is the class trip to Washington. The last event outlined was the tentative spring trip to Wentworth Hall, a New Hampshire resort.

The meeting was held last night in Bowker Auditorium to discuss these activities. The first event, the major part of the agenda, was introduced by a movie of last year's Winter Carnival. Class President, Wayne Thomas, then gave specifics on every part of the five day carnival. He also briefly talked about the trip to Washington and about a tentative spring weekend at Wentworth Hall.

The theme of Winter Carnival, which opens Feb. 21, is "Our favorite things." The atmosphere will be in the 1920's. To enhance this mood a bar will be opened at the Student Union selling Winter Carnival souveniers; the boys will get shot glasses and the girls a garter.

Saturday is the big day of Winter Carnival. Judging of sculptures takes place in the morning. The afternoon starts the olympics. Saturday evenings feature is the Johnny Carson Show.

The Carson Show is the only event definitely planned. After seven months of negotiating the contract was finally signed on Thanksgiving day. According to Thomas "Johnny Carson is the number one name in TV."

Carson will present two shows at $3.75 per ticket, with accompaniment by the full NBC orchestra. While he is performing in the cage, a dance will be conducted at the Student Union. Those who hold tickets for either Carson show can have free admittance to the dance. All others must pay $1.00. At the second show the Carnival Winter Queen will be crowned.

A rally for the basketball team will open Winter Carnival

Poetry Is "In" Says Poet Tucker

By PRISCILLA MULLEN

"Poetry today is in on the movement, even where hardening of the arteries has begun", poet Robert Tucker said in an interview with the Collegian. The UMass faculty member feels the new, younger poetry—and poets—are influencing the older. And he thinks this is great.

Although Dr. Tucker feels that the quality of popular music, which he describes as "beautiful and free', exceeds that of the lyrics, he says together they make for new "rhythms of sound". Dylan's poetry in particular, he feels, is "strong, great . . . beautiful."

"Poetry is meant to be vocal," the faculty poet says. The fact that today's poetry largely is accounts, in part, for its popularity. Ferleinghetty, Ginsburg and others, in their readings across the country, have been responsible for a "more direct interchange between the poet and his audience", he states. This closer contact, Dr. Tucker feels, has led to greater public interest in poetry.

"Differences in style are the same thing as differences in the generations themselves," he says. "There are now some fairly extreme examples and in the middle of them you'll find real poetry. Students are interested in the extremes of their generation and try to emulate them."

". . . boats of mine are boating . . ." R. L. Stevenson

Free verse readings alone aren't the cause, however. W. H. Auden, without a doubt a conventional poet, filled the Student Union when he came to the campus last winter, Dr. Tucker notes.

The faculty poet also attributes encouragement of more creative writing in the elementary grades to a greater interest in poetry and learning how to write it.

"Poetry is a very heightened, accurate and economic use of language. Combining thought and feeling in as few words as possible requires training," the poet states.

As for the growing use of free verse, Dr. Tucker is careful not to underestimate it. "Free verse doing what it should do requires hard work to act like a poem."

Whether the poetry of our time is free verse or conventional, Dr. Tucker feels that "the real poet wants to find a form that's just for his time, and he must find his own form if he or his words are to mean anything to his age."

CONSTANTINE . . .

WINTER CARNIVAL EVENTS . . .

1968 on Wednesday, Feb. 21. Following the rally, which will consist of a bonfire and fireworks, there will possibly be an electric circus held in the Student Union; negotiations are now going on. This circus is entitled "The Greatest Trip on Earth"; and will consist of electric bands, wild electric lights, and the star of the trip will be Muggs the monkey. Estimated cost for the circus is a $1.25 per ticket.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, will start off with a pancake breakfast which will be followed up by planned activities throughout the day. Some of the events are: sleigh rides, fashion shows, and many other attractions.

That Evening the big Basketball game of the season will be played—UMass vs. Rhode Island. The half time show will provide for the presence and introductions of the Winter Carnival Queens. Five finalists have been chosen, they are: Linda Brown, Stephanie Bourbonnais, Gail Epstein, Lynn Wells, and Dael Chapman. Balloting for the Queen is open to the entire university starting towards the end of January or beginning of February.

On Friday outdoor activities will be held, highlighted by the building of igloos. In the evening the Silver Garter Night Club will open in the Student Union. The club is modeled after Your Father's Moustache (night clubs in New York and Boston). Each show will cost about $1.75.

The Carnival will conclude with a Righteous Brothers concert. Ticket for this are approximately $2.50. The entire week should cost about $50,000. $18.50 is the estimated cost per couple.

The next topic Thomas talked about was the Junior class trip to Washington. "We will be staying in the Hotel America, just about the plushest hotel," said Thomas.

Four days and three nights will be spent in Washington. Scheduled are: coffee hours with Senator Kennedy and with Congressmen, free tours of many government buildings, and free bus tours around the city.

Lastly, Wayne Thomas outlined a tentative plan for a spring weekend. The class will have free run of the exclusive Wentworth Hall. The resort has 500 rooms which are at our disposal plus a swimming pool and all other facilities. The weekend will probably cost $18.00 for everything.

almost fell under Communist control and the United States moved against the Reds with the Truman Doctrine.

The king went to Larissa with the queen by car Tuesday night and launched his broadcast appeal for revolt on Wednesday.

Widespread arrests of right-wing politicians were reported in Athens soon after the king launched the insurrection. The Athens radio, heard in Istanbul, said three army generals were among those arrested.

Air force jets, apparently loyal to the king, buzzed Athens in formation Wednesday afternoon, according to reports in Washington.

The junta was said to have moved troops to the 60th kilometer—37th mile-mark on the Lamia highway north of Athens for a stand against any advance by the king's forces.

The clash between army and air force units was said to have occurred at Elefsis air force base southwest of Athens, where several buildings were reported on fire. Two commando captains who tried to take a plane and fly to the royalists were said to have been killed.

Movie Review: "Tony Rome"

Frankie Makes Tony Run

By ALAN SPANBURGH
Staff Reporter

"Tony Rome", a new detective thriller soon to close at Cinema 3 in West Springfield, features a solid performance by Frank Sinatra.

The beautiful Miami background, the usual ingredients of bullets, booze and broads and Frank Sinatra's fast tongue all help push "Tony Rome" to the top of the great heap of spy and detective thrillers that Hollywood is stacking up for movie fans.

Tony Rome isn't a superspy in the tradition of James Bond or Our Man Flint. Rome runs from crooks if they're too strong for him and never takes on two at once if the can avoid it. Though equipped with a cabin cruiser, money (when he can stay away from the horses) and good looks, Tony Rome never gets the girl. He drinks only beer or gin, not scotch or rye. And, of course, his sportscar is nothing more than a beat up '57 Ford.

But there's something special about Tony Rome. He fast-talks as well as Bond, if not better. While we might rather dream of ourselves as a Bond, the character of Rome is more earthy, much easier to believe possible.

Then there's Sinatra himself. There is a lot of the Frank Sinatra legend wrapped up in Tony Rome. Sometimes you almost feel as though Rome is going to say "Let's get the booze and broads and get the hell outa here." Beneath the exterior of Rome there is a certain warmth that sometimes shows through. Once he almost crushed the knuckles of a guy who had just needlessly beaten up a girl. Rome seems to be the sole person responsible for keeping an ex-fighter from becoming a bum. Periodically, Rome buys the ties the fighter sells at five dollars and gives him a generous tip.

One of the main criticisms of the movie is that Sinatra has taken an easy role. Some critics feel the role is beneath his talents. They also feel that Sinatra is commercializing and living off the fat of reputation.

Because Rome is a different character from the usual spy stereotype, the first charge is unfounded. He has done such a good job in the role that his acting reputation should be enhanced. It's not an easy role for a serious actor; Sean Connery himself has taken other roles to give him a better chance to express his true ability. For Frank Sinatra to come across as an actor, rather than as some sort of superhero, is an achievement of some degree.

The charge of commercialization is somewhat true. During the movie, more than once, the actors drink only Budweiser beer, and none too subtly. Also there are a number of Miami restaurants, hotels and gas stations whose names are in plain view. Maybe it was a little overdone, but what movie have you seen lately that wasn't a commercial for some product or service?

But Sinatra's solid performance offsets this minor fault.

A Perfectionist at Work: No 'Rest' for Pianist Claude Arrau

By TERRY SWIFT

Claudio Arrau, noted master pianist, sat down Monday night, waited for silence in the big Student Union Ballroom, cleared his throat and then played to a tranceful, on-the-edge-of-the-seat audience. Without hesitation, the Steinway piano responded to his commanding fingers, sending forth Beethoven's "Sonata in C Major".

The last note played, Arrau stopped, dropped his hands to his lap and sat still while the silence was broken by applause. Pausing, he raised his hands, lowered his angile fingers to the keyboard and slowly fingered out Schumann's "Fantasy in C Major".

The piece completed, the hand-clapping acknowledged, the pianist quickly but quietly disappeared into the small Suffolk Room next door for intermission.

Claudio Arrau spends his intermission studying the pieces for the second half of his performance.

What does an artist do during intermission? For 15 minutes, does he rest on a sofa? or does he talk with a few select guests? or does he quench his thirst and satisfy his stomach?

Claudio Arrau was neither resting, talking, drinking nor eating. He was seated, bent over a white tablecloth-covered dining table, on which were spread music sheets of compositions by Debussy and Liszt—pieces which he was to play for the second half of the evening performance. But now, he was studying them, studying pieces which he had played and studied many times before.

Claudio Arrau, master pianist, had no time during intermission for a break. He greeted my entrance with a nod, permitted himself to be photographed at work and excused himself from answering any questions — "I'm sorry. I'm busy right now".

Outside, a man smoked, a lady scanned her program sheet and someone remarked with what ease Arau played.

SENATE...

Field stated, "I must oppose the faculty senate report at the meeting tomorrow (today)." He said that the committee is committed to change" and that it would permit daily open houses (which in the bill presented is a possibility) but would be more effective if attached to an open door policy.

"Many of us feel," the administrator said concerning open doors, "that it is not as much as an intrusion as it is at times made out to be." The report will be in the hands of the faculty senate today and will then head for the Board of Trustees Committee on student life.

Defending the report's recommendation on allowing closed doors, Treas. Silverman compared the current "outdated" law to that of the current alcoholics rule which he called "a mockery." In a roll call vote, it was 59 for the report, two against and three abstentions.

If the bill stands as is through the remainder of its trip to law, each residence hall will be allowed to "determine its own unique policy on the frequency, duration, door policy and social conduct with respect to open houses.

After long debate on another important bill, "Policies on Demonstrations on the University Campus," it was passed and sent on to the faculty senate. It was decided that demonstrations could be held inside main lobbies and outside University buildings, but not inside corridors or classrooms. This does not, of course, pertain to the S.U. where the Student Union Governing Board has jurisdiction.

Sen. Vice-Pres. Fran Boronski moved that a section of the bill stating that "The University police shall not use physical force" against demonstrators, be stricken. She was quickly supported by fellow Senate officer Silverman who stated that "This is the worst thing that I've seen before the senate. Knock them or not, they are police. . . ."

Further controversy over the bill concerned a section that states: "If the University Police are unable to cope successfully with the infractions, then the duly constituted authorities may request assistance from the State Police." It was argued that "State Police" should be changed to "outside authorities" and when a vote was taken, a tie resulted. Breaking the tie, Pres. Collins voted against the change but was quickly rebuked when a revote, called for by Sen. Fred Hartwell, Chairman of the Student Government Association Committee, showed 34 for the change and 28 against.

In what Collins called a "test case" the Senate voted against the allocation of funds to the judo club. Leading the attack against passage was Brad Johnson, chairman of the budgets committee.

"Talk about the senior tax... if the students ever knew about this...," said Fred Hartwell concerning the allocation of funds to the group. Sen. Larry Marcus supported Hartwell and stated that the club was too limited. Following the advice of the opponents of the bill, the entire budget was defeated. Allocations for the Scuba Club and the Crew Team to buy new equipment were passed while a proposed loan to the Heymakers was tabled after some debate. Allocation of funds for Yahoo was passed unanimously by the body.

In the final action of the meeting, which ended after midnight, the Senate voted unanimously to express to the administration and the Board of Trustees its vehement opposition to the construction of residence halls in the central area of the North Quadrangle (See editorial page, Tue., Dec. 12 Daily Collegian).

UMass Credit Union Plans Savings Program for Members

Savings deposits for the U-Mass Employees Federal Credit Union may be deducted from payroll checks beginning January 1, according to announcement this week by Credit Union President Guy C. Lucia.

Arrangements for payroll deductions for all staff and faculty who are members of the Credit Union have been finalized through Gerald J. Grady, University business manager, Lucia said.

"This means that the dozens of our shareholders who have signed up for payroll deductions will be starting their systematic savings plan just after the first of the new year," Lucia added.

Pointing out that all employees of the University, as well as students and organizations, are eligible to join the Credit Union, Lucia said that the Credit Union office is open five days a week in the basement of Draper Hall.

The nonprofit group is financed and administered by its members for the purpose of lending each other money at nominal interest rates and to foster habits of thrift.

Office hours are 10:30 to 12:30 on Tuesdays and Thursdays; and 12 to 2 p.m. and 3:00 to 5:00 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Information about the Credit Union is available by calling 549-0423.

The Picketing Resolutions

For the last month, the Faculty Senate has been "considering" a group of resolutions dealing with the subject of "Picketing and Other Forms of Demonstration on the University Campus." The matter of urgency in adopting these resolutions has also been mentioned for the last month. At the last meeting, action on the picketing resolution was again postponed.

The illusive resolutions are as follows:

1. That members of the University community have a right to demonstrate outside University buildings so long as they neither block free entry nor exit from buildings, nor interfere with the free movement of any person on University grounds, nor interfere with the normal conduct of University affairs.
2. That demonstrating inside University buildings is prohibited.
3. That interference with demonstrating by other than duly constituted authorities is prohibited.
4. That the penalty for violation of above rules may be separation from the University or such lesser sanctions as may be judged appropriate. The determination of guilt and penalty shall be by due process.
5. That procedures to be followed by duly constituted authorities in the event of the infraction of rules governing demonstrations are as follows:
   - A. A verbal attempt will be made to persuade the demonstrators to desist from practices in violation of the rules.
   - B. If the demonstrators fail to respond in accordance with the rules, they should be warned of the consequences and be given a reasonable period of time to desist.
   - C. After expiration of the reasonable period of time, duly constituted University authorities may request names of those who are acting in violation of the rules.
   - D. If persuasion and warning fail, the University police may be employed to put an end to the infraction of the rules.
   - E. If the University police are unable to cope successfully with the infractions, then the appropriate authorities may request assistance from the State Police.

The Faculty Senate has at least discussed these resolutions under the parliamentary cloak of "a committee-of-the-whole", which does not commit the Faculty-Senate-as-a-whole to anything at all.

One of the reasons for postponement of action by the Faculty Senate was that the Student Senate had not yet considered the resolutions. Try to bear in mind that these resolutions are Faculty Senate ones, not Student Senate.

A note of clarification for those unfamilar with standard Faculty Senate procedure will be introduced at this point. The following four plateaus, although simplified (but not overly so), can usually be distinguished in the Senate's mode of operation.

1. Find a controversial and worthwhile area to legislate in.
2. Set up a committee to investigate.
3. When the committee reports, discuss the results at great length.
4. Don't do anything rash. (This last can be accomplished in several ways, which allows for choice and variety.)
   - a) receive the committee report (Which means they neither approve, nor disapprove, the report.)
   - b) table the report (Which means that they're sorry they ever started the whole thing, and let's just forget about it.)
   - c) postpone action on the report until someone else has done something

The Picketing Resolutions are in the process of illusive action "c". The Student Senate should have considered the resolutions on Wednesday, December 13th, just in time to allow the Faculty Senate to act on the 14th.

The issue is not whether the Student Senate approves or disapproves of the resolutions, and it is not whether the Faculty Senate approves or disapproves of the Student Senate action. The issue is that if the Faculty Senate wants to investigate an area with the purpose of formulating a policy, they should be able to gather enough courage and conviction to decide that policy, to make a decision one way or the other. If not, what is the use of investigating at all—to increase the knowledge of the faculty in that particular area?

Brotherhood of Man

Despite adverse popularity polls and worldwide protests, the administration still has the upper hand—if power is measured in material terms: power to deploy and increase military forces, power to influence communications media to favor the war, power to pretend, as a last resort, that the national safety is at stake. Yet, despite its control of the outer circumstances, there is one thing it does not have and which it can neither buy nor extort by force nor propaganda, that is, an effective concept of the Brotherhood of Man. This is all the more ironic because the administration professes to have high ideals in pursuing the war (or did until these proved quixotic, at which time they were abandoned without comment). Yet whatever else the Johnson administration has done, whatever justifications its domestic supporters may placate their consciences with, they abandoned—from the fatal moment when military interference in Vietnam was decided upon—that direction which had been the most hopeful and optimistic promise of the 20th century, the direction toward a new vision of the potentialities of men to work in council.

At least a sensitive minority of the American people suffers deeply through this conflict because they cannot tolerate the abandoning of that direction and they are completely unable to understand their governments motives in so doing. They feel that the world cannot afford to wait until the Johnson administration feels it is safe to give any more than lip service to such things again. One of the more acrid domestic fruits of a purportedly idealistic war is the present hardening mood of this country -- seat of the United Nations — in which a more and more openly chauvinistic kind of nationalism steadily reduces the possibility of any intelligent communication between those for and those against the war.

Instead, it is fairly obvious at this stage that communication cannot be re-opened about the war itself. It will proceed. The civilian casualties are not much mentioned in the news; it is all the more distressing to be reminded by the documentary film that the North Vietnamese population consists of real live people, parents, children; that they have hopes and fears and the normal human problems as well as some abnormal ones; yet that they seem to have the gentility to distinguish between the American people, whom they still believe to be humanitarian (that has indeed been our reputation up to now) and the American government which bombs them quite routinely. The crisis of the American character is revealed when one considers how tenderhearted Americans are in regard to the welfare of children. The school bus with its flashing lights and signs to protect its precious passengers is an object of the greatest respect to the motorist, and rightly so. In the film (in a sequence made by Japanese newsmen) one sees, against the background of a smoking village, the reddened, bloated corpse of a North Vietnamese child killed in a fire-raid. Can the above-mentioned American motorist possibly believe that, in human terms, American "interests 'in SE Asia are worth the life of this child and the agony of its parents?

In the affluent, politics-as-usual atmosphere of the American city, the war is an abstraction, thriving on American Legion bravado which hides behind the most sophisticated war-machine the world has ever seen. Would the administration's foray into Asian internal affairs still appear tolerable to the American people if the whine of foreign bombers carrying napalm and anti-personnel ordnance filled the air over every American city and town, while nothing but surface defense could be mustered against them?

The most ironic tragedy of the whole war, from the point of view of the Brotherhood of Man, is the dismal failure of the broad American public, the most educated urban public in world history, to imagine—or, apparently, to care—how it feels for a civic agglomeration of ordinary human beings — old and young, good, bad and indifferent to be sure, but all with basic psychological and biological needs and rights—to be on the receiving end of hideously destructive terror weapons which obliterate civilized life. To express disapproval of the political bent of another nation or group in this way is categorically unacceptable in the second half of the twentieth century when the Atlantic Charter is an international document. The reasoning that we must deny the basic human rights to others in order to protect them for selves is not only invalid, despicable. Every human on the globe has the right to be bombed and burned his political beliefs.

We live in a sweaty night watching President Johnson in and year out rhetorically ging someone to offer him a ternative course of action. own soul is so tragically bu he should put his "think t on the job, or feed the pi "respect for life" instead "search and destroy' to his puters. Campus Comment

Yes, Virginia, Van Meter Exists

Everyone talks about the wonderful program of expansion currently devastating the campus of UMass., and we can't understand it. We are speaking as residents of that long forgotten mausoleum in the sky—VAN METER. Van Meter? Van Meter, what is that you ask? Van Meter is the museum which houses outstanding relics of the University's past history.

Let us take you on a tour back into the ages—.The artistic ability of the early inhabitants is immediately visible upon entering the dorm; the hundred year history of UMass. passes before your eyes. You must marvel at the unusual hieroglyphic patterns upon the walls. Entering the reception room, you notice the initials of Abe Lincoln (among noted others) carved so delicately upon the elegant design of the chipped Chippendale desk.

Messages are carried upward by pony-express. These riders must fight their way through the savage hordes of those girls from the original class of '63 still waiting for a phone.

The downstairs rec-rooms bear marks of the University's red (green, blue, and yellow) tape. This furniture was to have been replaced back in the fall of '66 (1866?). The T.V. set is one of our most prized possessions? It's most unusual feature is the channel selector, which we're still looking for. Before we leave, we are attracted to the superb textiles making up the curtains. They are old glory-ous originals which Betsy Ross graciously donated.

Anyone can create the contemporary atmosphere shown in the design of South West and Orchard Hill, but imagine the sheer genius involved in recreating this authentic scene from early Americana. We hereby extend an invitation to all those interested in taking individual or group tours through this historic site. This includes housing and especially Mr. Welles. Perhaps, Virginia, he will restore your faith that there really is a Van Meter.

Nomination Game

To the editor:

Senator Robert F. Kennedy is probably facing the most difficult and important decision of both his political career and his life. That is whether to challenge President Johnson for the democratic nomination for the presidency. So far, Kennedy seems to be basing his decision along the lines of expediency, or in other words, the decisions incurring the least negative sanctions. Granted Kennedy will lose support from some of the more adamant doves by not challenging for the democratic nomination, but far less than the support he would lose from the entire democratic party, if he were to run with the possible consequences of splitting the party.)

It can further be argued that this is the legitimate decision or, by some stretch of the imagination, the moral one, for after all, he is a democrat, and if he were to challenge the democratic party would assuredly be weakened with a strong possibility of a Republican nominee being elected to the presidency. However, is this in fact a legitimate decision for a man who is unequivocably opposed to the Johnson administration's handling of the war and is also challenging the moral justification for our involvement?

Can Robert Kennedy, in all sincerity, allow Johnson to get the nomination and support him as his choice for our next president? The question lies much deeper than Robert Kennedy, for it involves every democrat who does not believe in our involvement in Vietnam. Can he conscientiously support Johnson? I should hope in our country that a man owes his allegiance to his conscience before his party.

If Kennedy does not challenge for the nomination, he will add further credence to the argument that he is merely a political opportunist biding his time until the nomination plays into his hands. Robert Kennedy would do well to heed the words of the venerable Chinese philosopher Mencius who said:

> To repress the prince's perversion may be called reverence to him . . . For one whose place is near the throne not to remonstrate is to hold his office idly for the sake of gain.

4:00 a.m. Sunday morning. The phone rings.

I pick it up, groggy. . . .Hello? Mike Prusky?

. . . yes . . .

Hi! I'm taking a survey. What are you wearing right now?

. . . huh?

I said what have you got on right now?

. . . . . who is this?

Oh, you don't know me. I just picked your name at random from the phone book.

. . . . uh-huh . . . . who is this?

Does it really matter?

. . . Well, I don't want to seem rude or anything, but it's 4:00 in the morning, and I was sleeping . . .

You don't want to tell me what you're wearing, do you?

Frankly, no; not if you refuse to identify yourself . . .

Hmmm . . . well, I'll just have to put you down as nude, then.

Thanks, anyway.

Travel Study

Ed. note—Continued from yesterday's "Issues in Education."

The graduate of such a program will have had a truly liberal education in the sense of a liberating education. For he will have shed, hopefully, all provincialism and nationalism and will make, in whatever areas he works and moves, a decisive contribution toward the realization of world community. For only through the creation of world citizens can we move toward world community. This, then, is the role, the vision of World Education, as conceived by the Friends World Institute — an expression of the conviction that schools should become agents of wise social change through making students and faculty learner-seekers, as together they grope toward tomorrow's potential design."

I am not proposing that the University of Massachusetts adopt this plan, for obviously that would be impossible, but—note the implications presented here:

1. Study-travel is necessary as there is no "natural cultural center" for adequate integral education in the world.
2. Knowledge must cease to become an end in itself, and instead become a means to human goals.
3. An adequate program might be based on problem-solving and direct experience.
4. Faculty and students must join forces to become "learner-seekers."
5. Required courses hinder the education process.

What might happen if students, faculty and administrators were to take some of these points seriously in critiquing our present education system? Might we want to institute some of these principles, or if not, can this model at least stimulate much needed evaluation and revitalization of the UMass situation?

Women's Affairs

Sign In—Sign Out

In mid-October, The Women's Affairs Committee held an open meeting to solicit opinion on the present sign in-sign out procedure used by Freshman women at the University. As a result of this meeting, it was decided to form a Women's Affairs Sub-committee to re-evaluate the sign in—sign out procedure. The sub-committee was comprised of representatives from the Northquad, Southwest, and Central Areas. Mrs. Ann Silva (Coolidge Middle) represented Heads of Residence and Mr Walter Silva, Assistant Area Coordinator of the Northeast Area, represented Area Coordinators.

Under the Chairmanship of Maureen Rynn, the sub-committee met weekly to discuss the curfew system and to devise a new procedure or changes in the present procedure which would result in a more beneficial implementation of this curfew system.

The committee's purpose was not to abolish or modify the curfew. The closing hours for women's residence halls (curfew) is a University regulation which is not originated by University officials but recommended to the administration by the Women's Affairs Committee. The sub-committee accepted the fact that a curfew was a University regulation, however, it could determine a more effective and efficient procedure by which to enforce the curfew.

The first task of the sub-committee was to define the terms curfew and curfew system. As defined by the committee, "a curfew is an obligation of freshman women to be in the residence hall at a certain hour. A curfew system is a procedure which indicates that this obligation is fulfilled."

Before devising a procedure which would indicate that the girl was in the residence hall, the sub-committee sent letters to Freshman women asking for suggestions on a sign in—sign out procedure which would be most effective and convenient to them. Heads of Residence and Graduate Assistants were also asked for suggestions.

The sub-committee than combined the results from the Freshman letters, Daily Collegian editorials, petitions, and the open meeting and set them along side the definitions of curfew and curfew system. The purpose for using this method was to make sure that the new proposals would be consistent with the definition. The committee completed its work on Tuesday, December 12th. The proposed procedure is in the form of a sign in sheet which will require Freshmen to indicate that they are in the residence hall by signing their signature on the sheet. Freshman women will not be required to indicate that they are out of the residence hall. The procedure will be operated by counselors or House government officials as determined within each residence hall.

The sub-committee's recommendations will be submitted for review to the Student Matters Committee who will in turn submit them to the Student Senate. The final acceptance of these recommendations will be made by Dean Field. It is the hope of the sub-committee that the University realize that these operational changes are necessary for the proper functioning of the curfew and curfew system.

Affairs Subcommittee

In fact, the retribution deservedly expected by the Johnson administration is not likely to come from Chinese missiles. The breakdown will come from within, not overly deplored by various outside powers who might normally be our friends but who see in the simplistic anti-Communism of the United States an unforgivable disqualification for being arbiter mundi. There is already adequate precedent for blind destruction, for seemingly causeless asocial nihilistic conduct right within our own borders. USIA "Why Vietnam" Film Set For Campus; Likened to "1984"

In George Orwell's world of Oceania in 1984, one of the purposes of the efficient Ministry of Truth was to rewrite history.

DEATH OF A SALESMAN

"Now the information agencies of our own State and Defense Departments, the USIA and the CIA, seem bent on creating an American Ministry of Truth and imposing upon the American people a record of the past which they themselves write.'

This excerpt, from Henry Steele Commager's "On the Way to 1984," an article appearing in the Saturday Review, April 15, 1967, sets the stage for a damaging attack by Professor Commager on the USIA in general and on the Defense Department film "Why Vietnam", in particular.

Commager goes on to say that this film, narrated in part by President Johnson and Secretaries Rusk and McNamara, is "well below standards of objectivity, accuracy and impartiality which we are accustomed to in newspapers and on television; needless to say, as scholarship it is absurd."

To promote a better understanding of our government's position, the Faculty Group on Peace and War is sponsoring several showings of this film on campus. The hour-long film, which will be followed by a discussion of its main features, will be shown today in Grayson at 6:30 p.m.; Dec. 18, Newman Center at 7:30 p.m., and Dec. 19, Engineering East Auditorium at 8

DIVING FOR GLORY — UMass swimming team plunges into Boyden pool. The Mermen (record, 1-1) face Wesleyan at home today at 4:30.

UMass Mermen Meet Wesleyan

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

"Dives should be our strong point today, David Larson and Rick D'Andrea should do well," Joe Rogers, coach of the varsity swim team said. The Mermen meet Wesleyan University today at 4:30 in Boyden Pool.

Wesleyan, a top favorite in the race for the New England swimming crown this year, defeated Amherst College, and could be UMass' "toughest competition." Amherst defeated UMass Dec. 6. The Mermen record is 1-1.

Rogers is expecting top performance from captain Bob Asquith and Fred Andersen in the backstroke, Philip Morton and Mark Miller in the sprints, Dick Donoghue in the fly, and Al Northrup in the breaststroke.

Mermaids End Winning Season

UMass Mermaids, undefeated in collegiate competition, close out their season today at Marymount College, Tarrytown, New York.

Home season ended last Thursday as the Mermaids defeated Connecticut College for Women, 71-26, in the Women's Phys. Ed. pool.

Placing for UMass were: Debbie Gernes 1st, Sue Letourneau, 2nd, 50 yard freestyle; Marilyn Houdelette, 1st, Sue Letourneau, 2nd, 50 yard backstroke; Jan Yorke 1st, Jane Boddy, 3rd, 25 yard butterfly; Sue Berger, 1st, Jean Lusignan, 2nd, 50 yard breaststroke; Jan Shockley, 1st, Debbie Gernes, 3rd, 100 yard individual medley; Marie Witwicki, 1st, Pris Stewart, 2nd, 100 yard backstroke; Diane Allen, 1st, Jan Karcher, 3rd, 100 yard freestyle.

Jan Shockley, 1st, 50 yard butterfly; Sue Berger, 1st, Jean Lusignan, 2nd, 100 yard breaststroke; team of Marie Witwicki, Sue Berger, Jan Shockley, Diane Allan, 1st, 200 yard medley relay; team of Diane Allan, Debbie Gernes, Sue Letourneau, Marie Witwicki, 1st, 200 yard freestyle relay; Jane Jaworski, 2nd, Jane Karcher, 3rd, diving.

Breaking six pool records in their wake, the women's swim team placed first in an invitational meet held Sunday at Green Mountain College, Poultry, Vermont. UMass competed against Green Mountain, Castleton Vt. State College, Plattsburg, N.Y. State Colege, and Albany, N.Y. State College.

Scoring for UMass were: Debbie Gernes, 2nd, 50 yard freestyle Marie Witwicki, 1st for pool record, 50 yard backstroke; Jan Yorke, 2nd, 25 yard butterfly; Sue Berger, 1st for pool record, 50 yard breaststoke; Jan Shockley, 1st for pool record, 100 yard individual medley; Marie Witwicki, 1st, 100 yard backstroke; Diane Allan, 2nd, 100 yard freestyle; Jan Shockley, 1st, 50 yard butterfly; Sue Berger, 1st for pool record, 100 yard breaststoke; Wendy Young, 2nd, diving.

Team of Diane Allan, 200 yard freesyle relay; team of Diane Allan, Debbie Gernes, Jan Yorke, Marie Witwicki, 1st for pool record. The former record for the 200 yard freestyle relay, set in 1966, was held by Kay Aldrich, Linda Pirog, Lynn Russell and Annette Robichaud of UMass.

INDIAN FILM

The Indian Association of the University of Massachusetts will present a famous Indan film, "Sahid Bibi Aur Ghulam," Saturday evening, Dec. 16, in Mahar Auditorium.

The public is invited to attend the 7 p.m. screening, which has English subtitles. The film stars Meena Kumari and Waheeda Rehman. Tickets are $1.25 and will be available at the door.

UMass Puckmen Aim at AIC; Redmen Hope to Even Record

American International College plays its first home hockey game tonight at 8 p.m. against UMass at the Eastern States Coliseum in West Springfield.

A pre-season poll of coaches placed AIC fourth in Division II of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference. The Yellow Jackets have a 1-3 record. AIC captain, Bob Coutts, who plays left wing, ranked first in national scoring two years ago with 68 points.

UMass Redmen, under coach Jack Canniff will be out to break its two-game losing streak and even their record at 3-3.

Fordham Foils Redmen's Upset Bid, 77-66

Score Tied, 59-59, with 5:37 Left

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

BRONX, N.Y. — A nine-point stream by Fordham, after UMass had rallied to tie the score at 59-59 with 5:41 left to go in the game, gave the Rams their second straight win and the Redmen their fourth consecutive defeat before 3,000 fans at Fordham University Gymnasium, last night.

UM, down 44-32 as the second half began whittled away at the home team's lead behind the shooting of Ray Ellerbrook and Pete Gayeska. Mistakes cost the visitors dearly though, and it wasn't until 13 minutes had gone by that they finally knotted the score on a three-point play by Ellerbrook.

Dennis Witkowski put the Rams back ahead as he converted a one-and-one opportunity only to have Billy Tindall tie the score once more with a jumper. Bob Kellert's basket was countered by Tindall again to make it 59-59, but that was the Redmen's last gasp as Fordham proceded to pour in nine straight points, six of them coming in from 6'1 guard Frank McLaughlin.

From there the Bronxites coasted to a 77-66 victory.

Foul trouble was a key factor in the contest as a number of Redmen got in early problems with the refs. UM's three biggest players, Gayeska, Tindall and Jim Sulesky all eventually fouled out.

Jump shots by Ellerbrook and Joey DiSarcina gave UM an early edge, but the outside shooting of Kellert and McLaughlin brought the Rams back and then into the lead.

By intermission, Fordham's superior foul-shooting and long-range bombing had given the Rams a 42-32 advantage.

Kellert hit on six of nine from the floor in the opening period for 12 points, while McLaughlin picked up 11.

For UM, Ellerbrook was five for 10 and Gayeska 3 for 3.

Turnovers hurt the visitors again as the Redmen threw the ball away on occasion and were called for five travelling violations.

The second-half rally failed, but on the whole the game was a moral booster for the Baystaters.

Sophomore Ellerbrook was the leading scorer in the contest with 22 points as he hit time and again on his quick jumper. Gayeska also had his finest game before fouling out with 8:19 left in the clash. The 6'9 junior canned seven of nine field goal attempts and swept 15 missed shots off the boards. Capt. Tindall, despite a poor shooting night, was also in double figures in scoring and rebounding.

For Fordham, which entertains UConn Saturday, McLaughlin was high man with 20 markers. Bill Langheld followed with 17, while Kellert and John Zanzilari had 16 and 12 respectively.

UM out-rebounded their opponent 57-44 and shot 39% to the Rams 36%, but Fordham had 15 more shots at the hoop and was also accurate from the line.

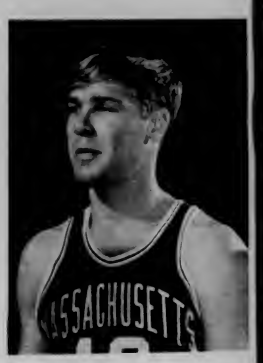
Redmen Rantings—UM coach Jack Leaman praised the efforts of the hard-working Gayeska, saying that his departure signalled the Redmen's downfall. "They just kept coming at us," Leaman said of the Rams well-balanced attack.



He added his customary fine words for DiSarcina, who he said "feels stronger now" after battling illness since the weekend trip to Pittsburgh. . .

Fordham coach John Bach added more praise for DiSarcina, "Parker (Ken) doesn't let too many people by him, but that DiSarcina did it quite a few times." He also said that without Gayeska to block the inside, U M had trouble stopping the Rams many inside layups. "U M is a fine team," Bach added. . .

Conspicuously absent for the Redmen were forwards Ron Nowakowski and Greg Rand, both of whom reportedly have quit the team.

Redman Honored in Boston

"Bulger" Lowe Award for Landry

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

CAMBRIDGE—Joining a list of immortals that includes Harry Agganis, Jerry Welchel and Bobby Leo, UMass quarterback Greg Landry was last night awarded the 29th annual George "Bulger" Lowe Award by the Gridiron Club of Greater Boston at the Fantasia Restaurant before 450 people.

The award is given annually to the outstanding college football player.

Landry, who set numerous school records, was extolled and praised by all speakers, in a great tribute to a great ball player.

Praise for Landry was impressive, Dean Warren McGuirk stated, "This is a tremendous honor for the University. We are all proud."

Head Coach Vic Fusia stated, "We are all proud that Greg won, but as far as the University family is concerned, there was no other choice."

Assistant Coach George Karras said, "No other individual in New England has meant more to a winning team than Greg Landry."

Coach John Bamberry added "This is the greatest single achievement the school has had since Jerry Welchel won the same award in 1964."

Final comment from the University family was offered when backfield coach Jack Delaney who had as close a personal contact with Landry as any other staff member, stated simply, "If my son grows up I want him to be like Greg Landry."

Greg's high school coach Charles "Buzz" Harvey stated with obvious emotion "I'm the second proudest person in the hall, next to Greg's father."

Proud father, Mr. Alvin Landry, exulted "I'm thrilled. I want to thank all these gentlemen who made this honor possible for Greg because they have made me the happiest and proudest Dad in the world."

An interested observer, former "Bulger" Lowe Award recipient and Boston Patriot Head Coach, Mike Holovak said of Landry, "I must look upon him as just a pro prospect; he's a good one."

Finally, the winner himself. With modesty and emotion, Landry thanked every one responsible. He offered his gratitude to his parents, his high school coach, Coach Fusia and his staff, Dean McGuirk, and the team of 1967. Landry said simply that he thanks all the people who made this honor possible.

To Greg Landry we say: "Thank you for the pleasure of watching you perform, and congratulations on a great honor and a great tribute."

UMass Wrestlers Score Upset; Varsity and JV Pin Amherst

UMass varsity wrestling team upset Amherst College 26-19, last night in Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

Outstanding performances were turned in by Bil Goodwin, who upset John Marwell, at 123.

Fred Fitzpatrick, wrestling at 160, surprised veteran John Davidson, pinning him to the mat, with a double arm bar, at 2:06 of the second period.

Alan Sgroi, a surprise substitute for regular Bob Yarkus, clinched the victory with a great performance when he pinned a veteran "Jeff" wrestler, Peter Dorland.

Dave Wade started things rolling for UMass for his second win when he pinned Amherst lightweight, Mike Takemoris. Captain Gene Paltrineri made the score 11-5 UMass when he decisioned Andy Hemenway, 9-2. Mike McKenna wrestled one of his finest bouts as he pinned Larry Cranch in the third period.

This was only the second time the Redmen have defeated Amherst College and the gym was jubilant with the unexpected upset.

The summary: 115 lbs. Dave Wade pinned Mike Takemori in 4:07. 123 lbs., Bill Goodwin decisioned Jim Manwell, 7-5. Paul Pearl, 130 lbs., was pinned by Jack Levin of Amherst. Gene Paltrineri decisioned Andy Hemenway, 137 lbs., 9-2.

Mike McKenna, 145 lbs., pinned Larry Cranch in 6:56. In the 152 lb. weight class, Brian Urquhart was decisioned by Bob Sucsy, 4-1. Fred Fitzpatrick pinned John Davidson in 4:06. Alan Sgroi pinned Peter Dorland in 3:04. Ernie Smith was decisioned by Tom Ryan 2-1.

Bob Spousta was decisioned b Rich Sullivan 12-6, and Glen Cummins was pinned by Kim du Riel in 1:55.

A weakened but spirited frosh wrestling team continued its winning ways last night, rolling up a decisive 43-3 win over the little Jeffs. Several subs entered the UMass lineup and scored impressive wins.

The Summary:

Nick DiDeminico pinned Uyehara in 1:35, in the 123 weigh class. Rick Tyma pinned Bliss i 4:18. Rich Brittingham pinned DeWitt in 3:20, in the 137 weigh class. Dan Plunkett decisioned DeBree, 145 weight class, in 3:20

152 lb. Bill Green pinned Adam in 3:16. 160 lbs. Guarino pinned DeWitt in 7:20. Dennis Mulligan 167 lbs. was decisioned by Fischer, 10-7. Bob William pinned Smith in 6:03, 177 lbs. Harry Berjik pinned Talbot in 3:41, in the 191 weight class.

GREEK KING AND QUEEN ARRIVE IN ROME—King Constantine of Greece arrives at Ciampino airport in Rome from Greece yesterday with his wife Queen Anne-Marie. The royal family fled to Rome after the military government in Greece appeared to have defeated a counter coup led by the 27-year-old king.—AP Wirephoto.

World Reaction Unfavorable To New Military Greek Government

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The military government ruled Greece unchallenged Thursday after crushing a royal countercoup that sent King Constantine fleeing to Rome and exile. But victory only increased Greece's isolation from its Western allies.

With the flight of the king, the State Dept. in Washington said the U.S. is withholding recognition of the military regime. The U.S. previously has shown its displeasure with last April's army coup by withholding all arms shipments to Greece, an ally in N.A.T.O.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson said in London that British diplomatic relations with the military government are no longer valid because the king has left the country.

The fast breaking events in Greece—over in less than 24 hrs. —left the fate of the monarchy and Greece's 104-yr.-old royal dynasty in doubt.

Col. George Papadopoulos, the new premier and strong man of the regime that seized power in a military coup Apr. 21, said Greece would continue to be a "constitutional monarchy," but with a regent instead of a king.

Appointed as regent was Lt. Gen. George Zoitakis, a relative unknown with no royal blood.

In a broadcast, Papadopoulos told the nation: "The antinationalist conspiracy has been crushed. The conspirators have been ousted."

Athens appeared calm and normal. It showed no indication that history had been written overnight.

The only reports of fighting Wednesday were between royalist air force and army units at Elefsis AFB southwest of Athens and on the big island of Crete.

From informed sources and from Papadopoulos himself came this account of the events that shook Greece Wednesday:

About 10 a.m. a note personally written by Constantine was delivered to the army chief of staff. This was after the king had flown to northern Greece.

The note said the king was taking over the rule of Greece, that he also was taking over the armed forces.

Troops loyal to the junta surrounded all government buildings in Salonika, the northern city where the powerful 3rd Corps was reported ready to go over to the king.

The king and his entire family had flown to Kavalla in the northeast.

By midnight, Constantine knew he had failed. He boarded the royal plane for Rome.

U.S., Russia Reach Agreement On Space Rescue Pact

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —The United States and the Soviet Union resolved all their differences Thursday on a draft agreement for the rescue and return of astronauts forced down on foreign territory, U.S. sources reported.

The legal subcommittee of the U.N. Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space met in a special session to consider the agreement presented in rough form by the two space powers.

The sources expressed the hope that other nations could be persuaded to accept the agreement so that it could be approved by the U.N. General Assembly before it adjourns next Tuesday.

1500 Students Demonstrate for UMass-Boston Copley Square Site

By LINDA SITEMAN
Staff Reporter

"We can and will get Copley."

With this prediction, UMass-Boston Student Council president James E. Smith drew an enthusiastic response of approval from the estimated 1500 students who gathered to support the selection of the so-called Copley Square area as the site for a permanent Boston campus.

The wildly enthusiastic, but responsible group gathered in the present UMass-Boston quarters, the old Boston gas building at Stuart and Arlington Sts., to launch a drive for a quick core city decision.

They cheered their support as student leaders stressed their determination to "educate everyone of political importance" on the advantages of a South End site.

The arguments for an immediate decision in favor of the core-city location according to Dennis W. McKinley, head of a 45 member coordinating committee conducting the drive, are:

1.) A postponement of another year would increase construction costs by 4 percent.

2.) Thousands of qualified students would be rejected because of lack of space. (Of 15,000 students who applied to the university last year, 12,000 qualified for admission, but only 3800 could be accepted.)

3.) Convenience, not only for the 75 percent of the students who hold outside jobs, but for those city workers and residents who might wish to take extension courses. The convenience of access to public transportation was stressed, noting the time and expense involved in commuting to a suburban campus.

4.) The great importance to students of being close to cultural facilities as well as libraries, mass media centers and both city and state governments.

In addition to the convenience factor, one student, Robert White, remarked, "involvement in the city can be the most exciting experience any student can have—exciting because you have a chance to walk out the classroom door and test the theories you learned in that class."

The benefit of interaction to the city through the contributions which both faculty and students would make by participating in the development of Boston was stressed by the speakers. While the students could benefit by a core-city location, the downtown area would also benefit from the presence of the university and its facilities.

The coordinating committee is pushing for a quick decision to include the proposed site, described by McKinley as "the last core city site within the realm of realistic possibilities," on the January budget. The hope is that the governor will ask for capital outlay for a new school at that time.

Brooke Says Don't Count Rocky Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Gov. Nelson Rockefeller is emerging as the ideal compromise of Republican moderates for the GOP presidential nomination and he would probably accept it," Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said Thursday.

"It's becoming more and more apparent that Nelson Rockefeller is the one to step into the breech if Romney falters," Brooke said in an interview. "And I sense that Rockefeller is becoming more and more congenial to that position."

Brooke stressed that Gov. George Romney should not be counted out until results of early primaries are in.

But he said Republican moderates should shake themselves out of their inertia and prepare for the eventuality of a Romney loss.

Brooke said his opposition to former Vice President Richard M. Nixon is more political than philosophical.

"Nixon won't be able to win," he said.

On other topics, Brooke said:

He would deplore any American military decisions to carry the Vietnam war into Cambodia.

Any move away from civil rights by the Republicans "would be morally and politically wrong."

Massive Drug Problem Discovered In Eastern Mass. High Schools

By DON EPSTEIN
News Day Editor

"It is getting so there are more drug users coming into this court than alcoholics. When I first became judge, we used to get one narcotics case a year and now the court is crawling with them."

With those words, Chief Justice Elijah Adlow of the Boston Municipal Court summarized the recent alarming increase in the number of people arrested for narcotic violations.

This past week, attention was focused on several Eastern Massachusetts high schools where wide-spread reports of drug abuse originated. The most serious problem so far has been in Wellesley, where discovery of drugs —presumably marijuana—in a locker at Wellesley High School has lead to the suspension of several students, including at least one girl.

In addition to the drugs found in the school, it is understood that a parent of one student turned in some of the drugs to police.

Those involved are reported to be juveniles, although at least one is over 17.

Yesterday, Wellesley School Supt. John B. Chaffee admitted that he is aware that the use of drugs by students has become a serious problem. In an official statement, he said that a "very thorough" investigation would be conducted.

Chaffee said that "The School Committee is not so naive as to believe that Wellesley or its teenagers can be sealed off or isolated from the drug disease. We do believe that we can and should educate our parents and young people as to the dangers of the problem, be vigilent to detect any additional instances of drug use, and deal with such use in a fashion which respects the need of the individuals involved and our school system as a whole."

Dist. Atty. George Burke of Norfolk County has disclosed that his office and the State Police have been conducting a major investigation to determine the source of the drugs. At this time, the probe is being carried on principally in the Wellesley area.

Meanwhile, other Boston suburbs have joined the ranks of those school systems admitting drug incidents. Arlington School Supt. Bert A. Roens said two high school students have been suspended for distributing marijuana, and that six others have admitted "sampling" the drug.

The investigation was touched off by rumors among students of drug activity. However, Supt. Roens said there was no evidence of drug sales or distribution in the school buildings. He said a spot-check of school lockers last week turned up no narcotics. In addition to the marijuana, a small amount of LSD was involved in Arlington.

UMass Trustees To Consider Law School

A proposal to establish a law school on the University of Massachusetts campus here will be discussed at the next trustees' meeting Monday at 1:30 p.m. in the new Whitmore Administration building.

Reports from committees and the establishment of a marine science program on a site north of Boston will also be discussed.

Cape Town, South Africa. Doctors report that Louis Washkansky may be home in time for Christmas. The 55 year old South African who underwent history's first successful heart transplant has recovered sufficiently enough so that he is able to sit up in bed. Doctors expect Washkansky to leave his bed by the end of the week. On Dec. 3, a 30 man surgical team replaced Washkansky's diseased heart with a healthy heart from a 25 year old accident victim.

UMASS-BOSTON . . .

Commenting on the proposal, John W. Haigis, Jr. of Greenfield, chairman of the UMass. Buildings and Grounds Committee and a member of the Board of Trustees said in a Collegian interview last night "there is no question that the Board of Trustees is for a core-city site," but he added that there are other possibilities besides the Copley Square district, such as the Park Square area and Columbia Point.

"Nothing has been recommended by the Building and Grounds Committee, nor will there be a recommendation by the committee at its meeting Monday," he added.

McKinley's committee had planned to send a representative to this meeting, but Haigis said he doubted if they would attend now in view of the fact that no recommendation will be made at that time.

"This is not a negation or an indefinite pushing-off," he added. "The committee merely wants to examine all sites in depth before making a recommendation."

Haigis stressed, however, that he believed the committee and the trustees were "definitely in favor of a core city site" in the general cultural section, though several suburban sites are still under consideration.

McKinley could not be reached for comment on future plans.

College Freshmen State Their Views On Timely Issues

WASHINGTON (AP)—A nationwide survey of college students shows that more than half of today's freshmen believe they should have a say on faculty promotions.

At the same time, however, 85.3 per cent of freshmen polled agree that faculty members are more competent than students when it comes to choosing the curriculum of studies they will pursue.

The survey results were announced by the American Council on Education, a Washington association representing 1,500 colleges and universities.

Some 185,848 freshmen in 252 colleges and universities were questioned.

Asked what they consider the chief benefit of a college education, 56 per cent replied that it increases earning power following graduation.

On the subject of student protest movements, 51.2 per cent of men students and 43.6 per cent of women students believe college officials have been too lax in dealing with them.

Only 39.5 per cent said that college administrators have a right to bar speakers supporting extreme views from the campus.

The survey showed also that 25 per cent of the freshmen queried think women should be subject to the draft.

'Bahama Getaway' Set For Sophs' Spring Trip

By RICHARD S. KLINE
News Editor

The details of a Bahamas trip sponsored by the Class of 1970 were announced today by class President Bruce Balboni and Vice-President and Chairman of the trip Glenn Mangurian.

Called a "Bahama Getaway," the trip is planned for the spring of 1969. According to Mangurian, "For a little over $200, those attending will be able to spend eight days and seevn fun-filled nights at the luxurious Grand Bahama Hotel and Country Club on the exciting Grand Bahama Island."

The price, according to the chairman, includes triple room accommodations, round trip air transportation via a chartered Eastern Airlines Boeing 727 jet, meals, complimentary refreshments on flight, and transportation to and from the airport. The meals are a full course breakfast and dinner daily at the hotel.

President of the class of 1970 Balboni told the Daily Collegian a partial list of the activities tentatively planned for the week, all included in the one price. 1) A "Welcome rum cocktail on the night of arrival." 2) A special buffet dinner. 3) Volleyball, shuffleboard and putting contests. 4) An open hour cocktail party. 5) Bingo and movies several nights during the week. 6) A luau under the stars with Bahamian dancers. 7) A limbo show and contest. 8) A steak and fish fry at poolside. 9) A beach party and "all the swimming you can do and all the tennis that you can play in eight days."

Balboni also said that those who wish to go off by themselves could "enjoy such activities as golf, skeet and trap shooting, scuba diving, renting a glass bottom boat or a Chinese junk, or just lounging around trying to forget your worries."

According to Mangurian, "A vacation like this would normally cost over one hundred dollars more on an individual basis, but the Class of '70 wants to offer the students the opportunity to really enjoy themselves for eight days at a menial price."

An information table will be set up in the Student Union lobby during the first few weeks of the second semester.

was removed from his junior high classroom in a critical state of drug intoxication. He suddenly arose from his seat, proclaimed himself an "invisible man" and tried to walk through the wall. He had more than 100 pep pills in his pockets. This incident marked the third time in recent days that a youth has been removed from a Chelsea classroom because of drug-controlled actions.

Chelsea Police have reported that the vice squad has made several arrests recently in cases involving youngsters selling or using drugs in public.

In Danvers, Police Chief Edward Farley called for a drug seminar at Danvers High School in the wake of the arrests of four youths on narcotic charges.

Wakefield School superintendent, Dr. Thomas D. Wade has said, "any community that does not recognize that a lot of young people are dabbling with drugs probably has a real drug problem on its hands."

Meanwhile, an editor of the Brookline High School newspaper has asked for permission to conduct a survey to find out how many of the school's 2,400 students have used marijuana or other narcotics.

The request by Stephen Kinzer, 16, has been taken under advisement by Dr. Bertram A. Holland, headmaster at Brookline High.

Owen B. Kiernan, State Commissioner of Education, warns that the crisis must be met "head on," and urges emergency measures "to move in now" with crash programs on drug-abuse education.

Southwest College Maze To Be Opened to Tourists

By SHAREN GALLANT
Staff Reporter

The Southwest master's staff has come up with a service to supplement the tours that Arcon supplies to the rest of the campus. The master's staff is offering guided tours through the mazes of Southwest Residential College.

These tours given by the master's aides each Monday through Friday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., include presentation and explanation of all the physical aspects of the complex, as well as information concerning the social and cultural facets of life in Southwest.

So far, the best attendance has been on Saturdays and occasionally during the week for visiting faculty and staff members. Eric Goldman, coordinator of the tours, anticipates an increase of demand on the High School Days.

Individual or group tours can be arranged by appointment by writing to: Southwest Tours, Master's Office, Coolidge Tower, University of Massachusetts, or by phoning 545-1552 one-half hour before the desired time of the tour.

DEMONSTRATIONS

The Faculty Senate meeting yesterday passed a motion dealing with demonstrations on campus. The final motion would allow demonstrating only outside of University buildings. The faculty Senate adjourned after passing the demonstrations motion without considering the report of the Student Affairs Committee which called for a liberalized open house policy.

A complete report will appear in the next regular issue of the Daily Collegian.

Movie Review

Latest Liz Flick a Bust-- Says 'Golden Eye' Reviewer

By BOB JAMES
Staff Reporter

Any picture that stars two former Academy Award winners supported by two other well-known actors is bound to be worth the viewing. Right? Wrong, and this is the movie to disprove that too widely-held illusion that Hollywood so often capitalizes on.

"Reflections", which supposedly takes place on an army base in the southern United States involves two officers, their wives, an enlisted man, and a Philippine houseboy.

What there is of a plot barely begins to unfold, however, before the viewer realizes that each of these characters rather belongs in some perverse circus: Elizabeth Taylor, as the promiscuous wife of a sexually impotent officer (Marlon Brando), alternates between horseback riding with and making love to his best friend (Brian Keith), whose own wife (Julie Harris) has been declared "neurotic" after cutting off her nipples with a pair of garden shears. She, in turn shares an uncertain relationship with her homosexual houseboy. And all the while, the enlisted man, when not horseback riding in the nude, is standing outside Taylor's bedroom window.

And a circus it is, merely displaying these various perverse exhibits to the viewer with little in the way of plot to add meaning to them. It seemed at times that the film was more concerned with displaying Elizabeth Taylor's bust than the two-time Oscar winner's acting talents, and Brando's performance was hardly worthy of his name. In one scene he responds to the sexual taunting of his wife in a manner more suitable to a Shakespearean tragedy than a contemporary drama. Keith and Harris provide their usual good performances, but as supporting actors they were hardly in a position to save the film.

Recently, the increase of sex in films has been defended as adding to the realistic quality of the art form, and so it did in "Blow-up" and "Dear John": But we ought to pay heed to what Time Magazine said of the New Cinema: "Love scenes are not necessarily better because they are nuder. By getting closer to graffiti, movie dialogue does not necessarily get closer to the truth." "Reflections in a Golden Eye" has, I am afraid, fallen to the temptation to substitute sex for quality, and the overall product is quite disappointing.

'Mother' Cited For Emotional Dissent by Dilkes

By CHARLOTTE BOYD
Staff Reporter

Mother of Voices was described as "Sophomoric" in a lecture given by Dr. Thomas Dilkes of the UMass History Department Monday in Noah Webster Lounge.

Dr. Dilkes said that he had anticipated Mother of Voices to be a probing, reflective intellectual stimulant for its readers. Instead he found it to be "an expression of sophomoric dissent, emotions and values".

Mother of Voices offers an opportunity for anyone—to express himself in an uncensored manner. It is an "underground" paper criticized by University officials who object to its constant use of certain four-lettered Anglo-Saxon words.

Dr. Dilkes described the paper a vehicle for the expression of a sense of personal unease. He was not disturbed by the first edition's use of four-lettered words for shock value. However, he did think the wordage lost its initial value after constant repetition.

Dr. Dilkes does not consider Mother of Voices a "hippy" paper because of its commitment to local and national politics. He does believe the paper asserted the dissension of the generation gap.

Emotional dissension runs wild throughout Mother of Voices, he said. The tone and style of the paper reflect personal feelings that ramble on with very little context or meaning, he said. The meaning that is present is camouflaged by verbiage and flowery description, in his opinion.

Dr. Dilkes said that the paper showed signs typical of a romantic revolution in which intense needs for personal freedom develop into confusion as emotions become repetitive. He believes Mother of Voices exemplifies a revolution demonstrating the nihilistic emotions of the time.

'70 Volunteers To Hold Party For B'town Kids

The class of '70 is sponsoring a party for the children from the Belchertown State School this Sunday. The party features a play, food, and gifts from Santa, and will last from 1:30 to 3:00. Members of the class of '70, the Belchertown Volunteers, and other interested people are working to give each child the opportunity to meet an adult from outside the school on a person-to-person basis. Volunteers are meeting at 12:30 to decorate the Commonwealth Room. Girls working on the party are asked not to wear slacks.

Newman Club Plans Holiday Festivities

With Christmas Day just a little more than a week away, the Newman Club has planned a number of Holiday Happenings.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. there will be a Tree-Trimming Party in the lounge. In addition to the usual tree decorating and fireside carols, toys and other presents for underprivileged children will be wrapped. Refreshments will also be served.

At 9:00 p.m. there will be a break from the party for the annual Christmas Concert, given by the Newman Choir in the Chapel.

On Saturday, December 16, at 2:30 p.m. the Club will sponsor a Christmas Party for the underprivileged children of the Springfield area. Two groups will leave Newman for Springfield to assist at the party—the first at 10:30 a.m., the second at 12:30 p.m. If you are interested in helping out, or have a car for transportation to Springfield, please contact Denise Drechsel in Rm. 305 Dwight.

A second Christmas Party is planned for Sunday afternoon, December 17, at 2:30 p.m. in the Social Hall. This party is for the children of our married undergraduate and graduate students, and faculty members.

The weekend will conclude Sunday evening with the Living Rosary and a High Mass. The Rosary will be held at 6:30 p.m. by the University pond, on the southwest terrace of the Student Union. All those who are planning to participate are asked to bring flashlights for the event.

(To the tune of "Barbara Fritchie")

Traditionally, a lusty, rousing fight song is de rigeur for every worthy cause and institution. But we wrote a song for Sprite anyway. We'd like you to sing it while drinking Sprite, though this may cause some choking and coughing. So what? It's all in good, clean fun. And speaking of good, clean things, what about the taste of Sprite? It's good. It's clean. However, good clean things may not exactly be your idea of jollies. In that case, remember that Sprite is also very refreshing. "Tart and tingling," in fact. And very collegiate. And maybe we'd better quit while we're ahead. So here it is. The Drinking Song For Sprite. And if you can get a group together to sing it--we'd be very surprised.

Roar, soft drink, roar!
You're the loudest soft drink
we ever sawr!
So tart and tingling, they couldn't keep you quiet:
The perfect drink, guy,
To sit and think by,
Or to bring instant refreshment
To any campus riot! Oooooh--
Roar, soft drink, roar!
Flip your cap, hiss and bubble,
fizz and gush!
Oh we can't think
Of any drink
That we would rather sit with!
Or (if we feel like loitering)
to hang out in the strit with!
Or sleep through English lit' with!
Roar! Soft drink! Roar!
Yeahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh, SPRITE!

Wilson's "Tax"

The campus state of mind has undergone strain recently on the question of taxes. In the midst of the controversy over the Senior Week subsidy, a group of self-styled "older, married, commuters" have made known their protest.

In sum, their view is that the older, off-campus student does not benefit from student taxes and should not have to pay them. They also have interjected the opinion that student government (which levies and approves student tax appropriations) as presently set up cannot serve the adult student better than the University administration.

Optional payment of taxes is undeniably an appealing proposition. However, those who advocate optional payment of student taxes either have to show that commuters are a special group of students, which we feel can't be done, or else have to show that optional payment is justified for all students, which we believe is impractical.

Why There Are Taxes

The reason for having student activity taxes, in the words of the Senate Financial Policy Statement, is "to allow the existence of activities which will augment the students' University career educationally, intellectually, and/or socially." The activities supported are open to all undergraduates. Without taxes on students, by the student government or by the administration, many of these activities could not exist, such as WMUA, which would then have to compete for contributions with the other local FM stations.

The Burden of Proof

The argument—that many commuters are "older" students set apart by age and interest from on-campus residents — is a belief which lacks justification. One could just as easily assert that most commuters are former campus residents who moved off to take advantage of private bedrooms and a well-stocked liquor cabinet or to take advantage of the study facilities of apartments.

We believe that commuters are a integral part of the University and University life. We also feel that this complete University life is more rewarding and richer for the student activities tax.

Administration Can Do It Better

Another of the arguments for pulling out of the sudent government is that the administration could better do whatever the Student Senate does. An opinion on this assertion can be formed immediately without further research. The administration administers the following fees among others: the $15 per semester Athletic Fee, the $1 per semester I.D. Fee, the $1 per copy Transcript Fee, the $10 per senior Commencement Fee. The justification—whatever part of it is made public—for these fees is not better than or on a par with the justification of the student activity tax.

At least the concern of the students can hold down the student activities tax. But there is not as much hope that the concern of the students can hold down or reduce or better direct the Athletic Fee or the Commencement Fee. There should be concerted pressure against these administrative items which seem to be joined by other additional fee items each year.

System Condemned Because of Mismanagement

A third argument which some commuters seem to be making is that at present there are some groups receiving student taxes which should not receive them at all or not to the extent that they do. There are certainly organizations funded now in a manner that can't be justified—but there are also strong indications that the budget for next year will be one which has weeded out these unnecessary appropriations. Wednesday of this week the Senate defeated the Judo Club budget on the grounds that the members could and should support themselves by increased dues.

An indication of the willingness of people to support the idea that they should not pay taxes came in the election of Ray Wilson to the Student Senate. However, Wilson attracted only 79 votes out of a commuter population of nearly 2,000.

The majority of commuters, given that there was no great campaign to get them out to vote, did not grasp at this possible manner of expressing their opposition to being taxed. It is extremely doubtful that most commuters consider themselves a group apart from on-campus students, or believe that the administration could better administer student taxes or that taxes might be altogether abolished, or that because there are presently groups funded which should not be, none should be funded in the future.

The first task for those who want out is to marshall forces. It would seem, however, that these activists could accomplish greater good by staying within the student activity tax system and improving it. But, in any event, their protest will encourage defenders of the status quo to make that status quo more tenable.

The "Think Tank"

One of the better things to come out of Washington is President Johnson's plan for the Institute for Urban Development, the "think tank", to aid in urban studies, now being conducted in large part by the universities. If it succeeds as currently planned, the "think tank" could advance solutions to city problems by creating greater communication between educational institutions.

One of the major problems in research studies conducted by universities is that they are often unaware of advances made in other institutions. The creation of the "think tank's" data bank would act as a kind of clearing house for information. In this way, researchers will have an up-to-date-central facility providing the latest facts on urban problems.

The institute is being planned outside the control of the Federal Government in an attempt to assure members of universities that participation in this work will not cause them to compromise objectivity.

Observer: The Founding of a Business Mira

by RUSSELL BAKER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 — In reply to the many children who have written asking how Santa Claus got started in the toy business, here is an excerpt from "Santa, My Boy," the book written many years ago by his father, Harvey Claus:

"Santa was the youngest of my three sons and from early boyhood he was the malcontent of the family. Long after his hot-tempered brother Henry had gone into barbering and his sad brother Samson into hardware, little Santa would lie around the house grousing about the quality of life available to a child who wanted to fulfill his individual needs.

A Chubby Lad

"His habit of lying around the house grousing —grousing gives a boy no exercise whatsoever— coupled with a natural tendency to stoutness made him a chubby lad. By the age of fourteen, he already weighed 207 pounds, though he was scarcely five feet tall, and since virtually none of it was muscle, his belly, when he laughed, shook like a bowl full of jelly.

"I reproached him one evening about his figure. 'Santa,' I said, 'you are dangerously overweight. When you start to work how do you expect to impress your superiors and win a vice-presidency with all that fat on you?'"

"'Why should I be bullied into dieting and exercise merely because of some idiotic business fad for trim, athletic executives?' Santa asked. 'I'm going to get me a job where fat is an asset.'

The Asthenic Image

"'Keep talking, lard tub,' said his hot-tempered brother, Henry the barber. 'No business in the world wants its image weighted down by a fat man.'

"'Then I'll start my own business,' said Santa. 'I'll be independent.'

"'You'll be just as slavish as all the rest of us, Santa,' said his sad brother, Samson Claus the hardware man. 'You'll learn to wear grim old black-and-grey suits to make you look like everybody else, and you'll march off with the herd every morning in the 8 o'clock rush hour and march back with them every evening at 5 o'clock, and you'll look and feel just like several hundred million other people.'

"'Not me,' said little Santa. 'I won't go into any business where a man can't be fat and can't go to work in a bright red suit.'

"'Santa,' I said, 'you've got to make compromises in life. If you don't want to look like everybody else, everybody else will get very scared and angry and they'll laugh at you until you ta hint and quit trying to be yourself.'

"'From the way you talk about ever else,' Santa said, 'it seems to me they n good laugh. In my business I'll give them thing better than fear and anger to laugh a

"'You give me a big pain,' said his b Henry Claus the barber. 'When the unions you up to the facts of life, you'll be glad t merge yourself in the solidarity of the mas

"'In my business,' said little Santa, 'ther be no undignified mass solidarity.'

"'Then the unions will shoot you down Henry Claus. 'You won't be permitted to human labor.'

"'In my business,' said little Santa, 'I use humans. I'll use elves. And I'll tel something else. I won't go into any bu that makes the world an uglier place to li

"'But don't you see, Santa,' said Samson 'that business has to make the world uglier just to distribute your product you would trucks, or trains, or planes, and they mak world hideous with diesel fumes, asphalt, and noise.'

"'In that case,' said little Santa, 'I won any of them. I'll use eight tiny reindeer t to a sled.'

"I tried vainly to reason with the lad. 'Sa said 'unless you give up these childish fa you'll never latch onto a big job with a co tion that will retire you at 55 so you can Florida and play shuffleboard until you d

"'Who wants a job that you're going kicked out of for getting gray-haired?' ask tle Santa.

Flabby, Subversive Ingrate

"'So,' cried his hot-tempered brother Claus the barber, 'the American dream good enough for you, ingrate! I'd like t you under my razor one of these days flabby little subversive!'

"'In my business,' said little Santa, 'n will ever have to have his face scraped wit by men with short fuses. I will wear a be long that little children will want to play Then little Santa turned to me and asked seriously, "Father, where would be a good to start such a business?"

"I shrugged hopelessly, thinking he would out of it with time and said, jokingly, 'the Pole.'"

The Guest Editorial by J. L. Benson, "Brotherhood of Man," in yesterday's Daily Collegian should have been prefaced by this note: The article was written after Mr. Benson had viewed the documentary film, "Voyage of the Phoenix," the Quaker relief ship to North Vietnam.

Ceremonial Mace

To the editor:

In regard to your story on the University's new "ceremonial mace" featured on December 13, I was amused to note that rather than being a true mace—which usually resembles a club-like object—it has an amazing similarity to the Roman fasces that were adopted by Mussolini for Fascist Italy in the 1920's. Does this indicate something about the nature of the University?

Society's Norms

To the editor:

An article appeared in the December 5 issue of the Daily Collegian entitled "Merrigan Calls Four Letter Words 'Lousy' Way for Student to Protest."

Merrigan said that the type of material that appeared in the "Mother" is not "consistent with the norms of society in general." I agree with this statement but would like to take issue with Mr. Merrigan's compliance with the general norms.

The general society norm emphasizes the use of proper language in a publication by students, in this case, The Mother of Voices. Several of the articles have been concerned with the recent demonstrations in Northampton, the Vietnam War, the Drug problem and Civil Rights.

When people are backed against a wall either by force to be beaten because of their views, or emotionally because they can not change what they consider to be a hopeless situation, they try to communicate using perhaps unconventional language.

Parents yell, "keep it decent, kids" even though these kids are the ones who demonstrate for civil rights and will be in Vietnam. Mr. Merrigan tells the students to keep their language decent when describing in my opinion, the lousy War, the lousy riot ridden-ghettos and the lousy norms that allow these phenomena to continue to exist.

Library Hours

To the editor:

With an increase in open houses, comes a decrease in weekend night study. Very few spots exist for studying as is and the most logical one—good 'ole Goodell—is closed at 5:00 on Saturday night and not opened until 2:00 Sunday afternoon.

The concensus seems to be that a majority of girls stay in on Saturday nights (for early Sunday mass) and to the surprise of Goodell officials would like at least the option of public studying.

Early mass is over by 9:00, dinner by 12:30; if even one section of the library were opened at 10:00 I'm sure that, especially near the term paper end of the semester, it would be filled.

A Clause Analysis Test

To the editor:

How does a teacher select what questions he has to set to ensure adequate coverage of material? How can a student be helped to read his teacher's mind and be able to guess with some precision the kind of question to expect? Are examinations a true test of knowledge?

As always, this semester is fast drawing to a close with its inescapable finals underway. My colleagues and I must fret as we speculate what a D or an F can do for our grades.

I have always wondered how a teacher goes about selecting what examination questions to ask. What happens if he siphons out a very narrow range of questions?

I once attended a modern grammar school (modele britannique) where, for one great term, Mr. Toogood, my math teacher ingrained into me a strong dose of general mathematics by C. V. Durell. At the end of the term I had mastered approximately 90% of the material and was definitely sure of passing. But to my consternation, Mr. Toogood picked a substantial percentage of his questions from the 10% of the material I had decided was peripheral to the core of the course. Unavoidably, I failed and had to repeat the whole thing over.

That same term, a fellow student was taking a course in English grammar and essay-writing. He too failed because, his teacher, having contracted the entire exam into a "Clause Analysis" test, left him with no alternative but to fail and then repeat or otherwise quit school.

This unfortunate happening is not limited to the math department where a whole semester's course may boil down to a test of a student's knowledge of Pythagoras' theorem or to the English department's example cited above. There are overtones of this almost everywhere.

In deciding which question to set for an exam the teacher invariably pursues that one which suits his appetite or ability (yet one man's essentials are another man's trivia), and consciously or unconsciously eludes the gist of the matter. Meanwhile his student, with eyes glued to the text book, is perusing what the author emphasizes in bold type or italics. If he is unlucky and overlooks the particular section set for his examination, he must fail.

How about trying my formula of "un peu de tout"? Suppose short essay questions are set to cover the root of the matter in each chapter or verse, will not the chances of passing be much more enhanced than if one has to write a sermon on one topic out of the 1000 in the text book?

CAPETOWN, SOUTH AFRICA (CUPI): Editors are having their share of troubles, even in South Africa.

Chris Pritchard, editor of the Varsity, University of Cape Town newspaper, was expelled last month for "bringing discredit upon the university" by publishing certain articles.

The articles in question are two editorials, a report of a Swedish "happening" and a report of a campus religious symposium.

Protests against the expulsion were registered by the Student Council president and the South African National Student Press Association.

A Capetown Sunday newspaper studied the articles in question and said they could not see any justification in expelling the editor.

Pritchard may return to classes next year, but a student council vote prohibits him from holding student office for the rest of his academic year.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT AUSTIN: The Registrar's office confirmed last Thursday, Nov. 30, that three men arrested Saturday in Mexico were University of T at A students.

The students were charged in Piedras Negras with possession of 123 pounds of refined marijuana. No other details were available.

Apparently the Beatles aren't the only ones who can claim to be Eggmen, so can Tom Cotner of U of T at A.

Cotner lined up 50 hard-boiled eggs to test the authenticity of Paul Newman's performance in "Cool Hand Luke."

His conclusion was that there was "no way" to eat that many eggs. "It's not that I couldn't hold 50 eggs," Cotner said. "My mouth was just too dry to eat any more than 39".

He ate the 39 in two hours—eating 25 in his first 50 minutes.

CENTRAL MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY: Is George Washington still alive? He might be lurking around CMU with his trusty hatchet.

Police are searching for the person or persons responsible for the chopping down of two maple trees on the campus recently.

According to Vernell Davis, chief of the Security Police, the trees were vandalized before the Thanksgiving recess.

Davis estimated the loss at between $300 to $500 per tree. This offense carries with it a maximum sentence of four years imprisonment or a fine of $2,000, or both.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA: Some students here at USC are finding unusual extracurricular activities.

Three USC students were arrested by the FBI for alledgedly stealing a car and transporting it across a state line, according to Dean of Men, L. Eugene Cooper.

Three other students were charged with theft at Beik's Department store. The three are up before the disciplinary committee for conduct unbecoming a University student.

In separate cases, three students were reported for showing an obscene film in a residence hall; one student was charged with drunkeness and fined $10; and another student was charged with reckless driving and fined $50.

UMass Chorale and Chorus to Present Winter Concert in Bowker Auditorium

The University of Massachusetts Chorale and Chorus are preparing for their Winter Concert, on December 17, 1967.

The concert will include cappella pieces by the Chorale and Chorus. Also performing will be the Chamber Singers, The Madrigals, and the Girls' Chorus. The concert will be directed by Dr. Richard duBois, Director of Choral Music, and Mr. Alan Harler, Assistant Director of Choral Music.

The Chorus will perform such pieces as "Thee With Tender Care" by Bach, "Nicholas and the Pickled Boys" by Benjamin Britten, and "Kyrie Eleison". The Girls' Chorus will present "Winter Cantata" by Fersichetti, which will be accompanied by flutes and a marimba. This cycle of songs is actually Japanese poetry set to music and should prove to be very beautiful.

The Chorale, a select group of sixty singers, in its third year under the direction of Dr. Richard duBois has shown that it has the ability to perform with a "grace that comes from paying attention to tonal blend and melodic continuity."

The Chorale will perform several a cappella pieces which range in variety from a selection from the Poulene Mass, "Gloria", to the "Paper Reeds" by Thompson, to "The Beals at Gueyer". Other pieces included are: "Exultate Deo", "Froste Mich Wieder", and "Schaffe In Mir Gott".

The Chamber Singers, a small group which performs madrigals from different periods, will present "There is no rose" (13th century), "Verbum Caro" (15th century), and a selection of Five French Noels.

This free Winter Concert should be a compelling, unique performance; everyone is welcome on December 17, 1967, at 4:00 p.m., in Bowker Auditorium, University of Massachusetts.

The University of Massachusetts Chorale conducted by Dr. Richard duBois will present a Winter Concert on Dec. 17. Also performing will be the Chamber Singers, The Madrigals, and the Girls' Chorus.

ROTC Recruits 2.0 Students For Advanced Training Program

ROTC is now offering an opportunity for any interested upperclassmen to be commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Army. To qualify for the Advanced Program, students must apply for enrollment with the University ROTC Department. The program includes a six-week summer training at Fort Knox followed by the two-year Advanced training.

Students entering this Advanced Program must agree to complete the training unless circumstances prohibit.

For undergraduates, all academic requirements for a degree must be completed prior to commissioning and all advanced course ROTC students must agree to accept a commission, if it is offered, and to serve on active duty in the Army for a period of two years, followed by four years in a Reserve Component. An important consideration for undergraduates is that under current laws an ROTC graduate may request a delay in reporting for active duty in order to pusue a graduate degree.

Students with a 2.0 or higher, who are physically and mentally sound and are at least 17 years old and not more than 28 years old when commissioned may qualify for this program.

Detailed information and requirements may be obtained at the ROTC Department in Dickinson Hall.

Chamber Choir To Perform

The Hartford Chamber Choir, under the direction of Robert Gronquist, will perform this Sunday, December 17 in Southwest Dining Commons No. 7 at 8:00 p.m. The program is being presented by the Southwest College Council.

The Hartford Chamber choir is a professional singing group from the Greater Hartford area and it will present a large variety of Christmas music.

Following the program, a reception will be held for members of the choir and all members of the university community. This program is free of charge.

London Market Falling Down

LONDON (AP)—Gold buying in London was reported to have broken all records Thursday amid confusion and uncertainty about new international moves to curb speculation in the metal.

One dealer said 120 tons of gold changed hands on the London bullion market. There was no confirmation of this, but if correct it would surpass the turnover records set last month after Britain devalued the pound and the American dollar came under pressure through demand on gold.

There was no evidence of direct pressure on the dollar Thursday from sellers. The price in foreign exchange markets held steady. But the British pound, a pillar of the international monetary system with the dollar, hit a post devaluation low of $2.40265, or about one-quarter of a cent above parity.

The new gold rush was set off by reported maneuvers by U.S. and European central banks to block speculation in gold.

Press reports Wednesday, later confirmed officially, said members of the gold pool—the United States, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Britain and Switzerland—had decided to scrutinize all requests for gold and would refuse to supply speculators. France has dropped out of the gold pool.

Bright Future Ahead for Track Team

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

"This could be one of the best teams we've ever had," says Coach Ken O'Brien of his winter track team. "We'll be stronger than usual because of team depth."

This year's varsity will be well represented in all events except for the pole vault. The dashes will be well-manned by Co-captain Steve Burrell, Yankee Conference 100 yard champ, Steve Chase and Dave Marble. With the return of John Anderson, second in the Yankee Conference 600 yard dash who missed cross country, coupled with the abilities of Diego Gonsalas, the Redmen will have a strong pair.

The 1000 yard will be manned by Ron Ryan and Dave Evans. Yankee Conference champ Paul Hoss and Co-captain Greg Bowman, second in the Conference mile, will lead the Redmen in the mile.

Two-milers Charlie Lang and Marc Gelinas, top cross country men, look like a tough combination to beat. Coach O'Brien feels that this contingent should again dominate the Yankee Conference.

O'Brien noted that the Redmen have depth in the hurdles this year. Marc Lefever, undefeated freshman last year and Peter Moryl should chalk up hurdling points this year.

In the high jump, UMass will be represented by Conference champ Bill Tindall when the basketball season ends. Backing up the 6'6 jumps of Tindall will be John Ariasen and Paul Nyman, both 6'2 jumpers. In the weight department, junior Bill Wilen will handle the chores. The pole vault is the UMass weakness with no entries at this time.

O'Brien feels his team will be well-represented in the mile and two mile relays. Bob Hasselbaum, John Anderson, Steve Chase, Greg Bowman, Dave Evans and Steve Burrell will battle for positions on the four man team. Bowman, Evans and Anderson will also vie for positions on the two mile relay.

Coach O'Brien's team faces a short three dual meet schedule and three invitation meets: K of C in Boston; BAA in Boston and the IC4A in New York. The Yankee Conference meet will be held in Maine. O'Brien's team should do well in all three competitions this year. When asked how his team might possibly do in the Yankee Conference, Coach O'Brien said, "We'll go in as underdogs like last year because of our lack of strong depth in the field events, but I think our runners will help us to win again."

The Little Redman track squad should also fare well with its collection of talent and high school champions.

The frosh will be strong in the sprints with Walter Mayo, Class A champ from Boston Latin, Ed Heywood, Class C titlist from Randolph, and Joe Burrell, who looks like he might follow in the footsteps of his older brother Steve as a sprinter.

The 600 yard dash will have state champ Clarence Gaynor from Rindge Tech and Paul Taylor, a very capable performer from Stoneham. The 1000 yard dash will be manned by Elliott Stevens, state champ from Randolph in the 600 event, and Larry Paulsen, who was fourth man on the highly successful cross country team. Ron Wayne was the New England cross country champion in high school and Phil St. Pierre, Catholic school mile champion from Bishop Stang.

The two milers will be Tom Derderian from Milford, third man on the frosh cross country, Dave Eiken, a local boy from Amherst and state outdoor champ Leo Duart from Martha's Vineyard. Hurdling for the frosh will be the state champ Jerry Spellman from Randolph and Hudson from Wakefield.

The high jumpers will be Cal Carpenter, a 6'3, who was Class A champ from Medford, and Mark Eaton, 6' from Scituate. The frosh have three good pole vaulters which is a change for UMass. Emerson Hiller, Mike Paricione and Peter Konarez have all gone 11'6.

The weight men will be George Ball, Dave Robinson and Bill Auston. All three should score well this year.

Coach O'Brien feels that if he can keep all the boys on the team, he will have a very good freshman squad. He has an all around team with good depth in all events.

Prospects for this year's winter track team look bright indeed.

Frosh Hoopsters Seek Second Win Against Westfield State

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

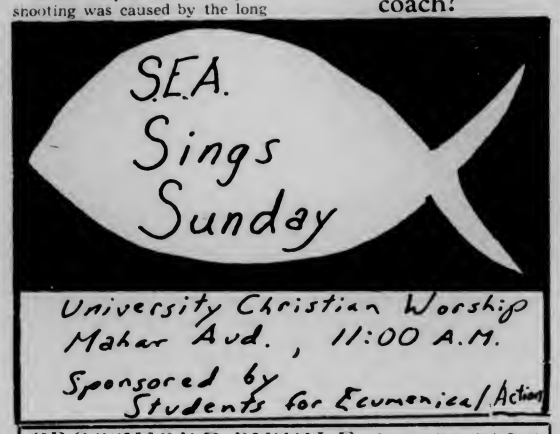
Stunned by their first loss, the UMass freshman basketball team hopes to get back on the winning trail when it takes on the Westfield State junior varsity at the Cage tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m., in the second meeting between the two teams. The Little Redmen won the first encounter Dec. 5, at Westfield, 72-52.

The frosh will be hampered in this game by the absence of 6'5 forward Lou Griffith, who averaged 16 points in his first two games, scored only four in last Saturday's loss. It was learned, however, that Griffith was playing even though he was ill.

Griffith has been absent all week from practice. According to Coach Broaca, he will definitely miss tomorrow's encounter and probably Tuesday's tilt with Chamberlayne Junior College.

The coach is undecided as to whom will start in Griffith's place up front with Ken Mathias and Jim Ryan. Coach Broaca is also undecided on his backcourt alignment. Jon Kruper is fully-recovered from his leg injury and is ready for full time action.

Coach Broaca is concerned not only with Griffith's illness which he feels will hurt them more in the game against Chamberlayne than Westfield, but also with the poor shooting of the team. Broaca said, "I'm still disappointed by our play Saturday and and have been disappointed by our play in practice."



Broaca hopes that the poor shooting was caused by the long bus trip on Saturday. The coach stated, "I have never had a freshman team win after a long trip."

The coach said that his frequent absences due to scouting assignments have also been damaging. "When I'm here one day and gone the next, it can only hurt the team," he stated.

Westfield was outmanned by the Little Redmen in the first contest. Even with the loss of Griffith the UMass frosh are a definite favorite.

Chamberlayne will be much tougher than Westfield, though. The junior collegiates from Boston have one of the best teams in years. They have already beaten St. Anselm's this year while the Little Redmen lost to them, 63-52.

Who will be the next B.C. coach?

Afternoon Tilt in Cage As Redmen Return Home

By GLENN BRIERE
Assistant Sports Editor

In the first afternoon game to be played at the Cage in years, the UMass basketball team returns home tomorrow to play Maine in a 2 p.m. Yankee Conference tilt. The daylight engagement will be followed by a game between the UMass frosh and the Westfield State V's at 4.

The Black Bears, who last year shared the Conference cellar with Vermont, once again face a winter in which they might as well hibernate. Although this year's team is faster and stronger, Maine is 1-3, beating only hapless New Hampshire.

The Black Bears have little height and have also lost last year's leading scorer Terry Carr, through graduation. However, Maine usually gives UMass trouble.

Coach Brian McCall uses a unique 1-4 offense in which one guard plays in the backcourt and sets up four forwards. Maine's offense revolves around 6'3 junior forward Jim Stephenson who scored 20.8 points per game last season.

Stephenson, the captain, is a good shooter who can also work his way inside for rebounds. Most of his scoring will be done from about 15 feet, particularly to either side of the key. If the Redmen can stop him, they will stop Maine's offense.

The other three forwards are all 6'4. Hugh Campbell, a junior, will probably be used at one of the posts. He was not used much last year. Campbell, who didn't play freshman ball, is a good rebounder who can score on a left-handed hook.

Another forward is senior John Eisenhard, who saw action in most of the games last year but only averaged 5.9. Eisenhard, despite his thin frame, is a very strong rebounder and has been improving on his jump shot.

The other forward is sophomore Greg Burns, one of the better newcomers to the Maine squad. Burns, who played frosh ball at Maine two years ago, sat out last season but is back this year. He is a fairly good rebounder and has good speed.

The lone guard is the smallest player on the squad, 5'8 senior Dave Smith. His main task will be to set up the forwards, since he does all of the ball-handling. Smith is often used to break an opposing team's press.

For bench strength, McCall will rely on guards Tom Farrell, 5'10, and Mike McGuire 5'10" along with soph forward Russell Vickery, 6'3.

Although 1-4 on the season the Redmen showed signs of promise in Wednesday's 77-66 loss to Fordham, and they are expected to start the same lineup of Bill Tindall and Jack Gallagher at forwards, Peter Gayeska at center and Joe DiSarcina and Ray Ellerbrook at guards.

After tomorrow afternoon's game, UMass hosts Rider College of New Jersey Tuesday night, and then plays in the UConn Classic at Storrs during Christmas vacation against TCU and William and Mary.

Tomorrow's game will be one of two afternoon games played by the Redmen this season. The other will be a televised contest at Yale January 27.

Landry Named to Small College All-America Football Team Roster

Greg Landry adds another title to his already long list as he was named to the backfield of the Small College All-America football team announced yesterday by the American Football Coaches Association.

The selections, which include offensive and defensive teams, were released by Bill Murray, secretary of the AFCA. It is the first year that the coaches organization has picked such a team. Darwin Gonnerman of South Dakota State was also named to the backfield.

Other members of the first team offensive backfield are Haven Moses, 6' 3, 196-lb. senior from San Diego State, who caught 54 passes and scored seven touchdowns as a halfback and fullback Donald Hass, Montana State who averaged 125 rushing yards per game this season.

Others on the offensive team include ends: John Fason, Florida A&M, 6'4, 220 lb., a senior, who caught 17 touchdown passes; John Koontz, San Francisco State, 6'3, 190 lb., a senior, who caught 18 touchdown passes.

Tackles include: Steve Duich, San Diego State, 6'3, 248 lb., senior; Oscar Lubke, Ball State, 6'3, 248 lb., senior.

Guards include Robert Diem, University of Texas at Arlington, 6', 221 lb., senior and Jim Schmedding, Weber State, 6'2, 240 lb., senior.

Named as center was Vic Bender, Northeast Louisiana, 6'2, 230 lb., senior.

The first team defensive unit includes ends Rodney Verkey, University of State of New York at Cortland, 6'4, 220 lb., and Tyrone Calwell, South Carolina State, 6'5, 255 lb. Tackles are Claude Humphrey, Tennessee A & I, 6'5, 265 lb. and Marvin Upshaw, Trinity University, San Antonio, 6'4, 242 lb. and middle guards, Edward Joyner, Lenoir Rhyne, 6'2, 230 lb.

Linebackers are Jim Ferge, North Dakota State, 6'2, 230 lb. and Bob Beers, Montana, 6' 2, 220 lb. Cornerbacks are Major Hazelton, Florida A&M, 6'4, 190 lb. and Dick Farley, Boston U., 6'1, 190 lb; safeties include Paul Vallerga, University of California at Santa Barbara, 5'11, 185 lb. and Robert Wilbanks, University of Texas at Arlington, 6'1, 195 lb.

Pucksters Handed 6-1 Loss by AIC

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

SPRINGFIELD—A balanced scoring attack was led by American International College to a 6-1 hockey victory over UMass at the Coliseum before a few hundred fans last night. Pete Scoville was outstanding in a losing effort for the Redmen as he made 56 saves.

George Dorin got the Yellow Jackets off to a flying start knocking in a rebound at the 4:06 mark in the first period. Gary Socha's first goal of the game was a 20 footer into the left corner. The score stood 2-0.

Bill McMann scored UMass' only goal of the night by firing a low slap shot past the AIC goalie Gary Young at 13:20 of the first period.

Tom Knowlan and Yves DeRone notched the AIC goals in the second period. AIC also had two goals disqualified in this period because of a man in the crease.

After Young stopped Jeff Sanborn on a breakaway, Bob Cotts knocked in a short shot on the left side at the five minute mark of the third period.

Socha closed out the scoring by batting in a lose puck right in front of the net with six minutes to go in the game.

Most of the 56 saves Scoville made were of the sensational type. At least five were on clean break aways. AIC goalie Young made 27 saves but most of them were on long, easy shots.

The game was rough, especially in the last two periods with several near flair ups in the last period. Jim O'Brien and Len Bucko went out for roughing midway through the last period, and three minutes later Charlie Eaton and Bucko went out for high sticks.

Don Robinson suffered a cut late in the second period but returned to action in the third period after having the cut bandaged.

Overall, the failure of the UMass defense to clear the puck from their own zone led to the defeat.

Legislature to Act Today on Bill Controlling Federal Funds for UMass

By JAN CURLEY
News Day Editor

UMass could be "put out of business" if a bill is passed by the legislature today that would make it necessary for all federal grants and aids to state colleges and universities to pass through the state treasurer's office before being allocated to the schools.

The bill will cost us $30 million a year and literally put us out of business," according to one University official. The funds are presently held in the university's treasury.

The bill comes up for action today and University officials are hoping for a postponement of action. University Secretary Robert McCartney stated that the State Board of Higher Education has "consistently opposed the bill." He stated that the state chancellor would probably request a conference with Governor Volpe on the bill.

Should this happen, University officials would gain an opportunity to make their feelings known to the legislature. State colleges would probably be included in the conference also.

A University spokesman said, "Recovery of funds from the state treasurer's office takes at least 11 different steps." An amendment stipulating that such funds would be held "in trust" for their recipents by the treasurer was deleted from the final version of the bill. The bill is virtually assured of passage today having already gone through three readings in both the House and Senate. Dean Leo Redfern, the UMass legislative consultant, won a unanimous vote from the board of higher education for veto or modification of the bill. But only a two-thirds negative vote of the house, a prospect not likely, can keep the bill from going to Governor Volpe's desk.

The legislation would require that federal grants and aids be directed not to the universities but to the state treasury. "This would come to around $30 million a year," said one university official.

Most officials agreed that the results would be disastrous to the status of the University. "You can just imagine the impact of that loss on the academic community in the state," said McCartney.

A spokesman for the University said that that bill would tie-up building funds, dormitory rental and dozens of other programs annually. He added that it would be "virtually impossible" to build or run the med school at Worcester under such restrictions.

Plans to construct the Medical School also suffered another delay in Washington. Dr. Frank W. McKee, director of the division of physician manpower for the U.S. Health Department, said his division already has a backlog of requests for funds totalling more than $100 million.

He said that the UMass application "would have to receive awfully high priority to get money within a year". Dr. McKee's comments followed a closed door meeting of federal, state and university officials to iron out confusion surrounding construction of the medical facility.

The national advisory council had previously turned down a UMass bid for $17,424,871 to be used for construction of a science research building and a medical library at the Worcester site.

It was also announced last Thursday that there was another $7,361,832 request for support for scientific research at the med school. Construction money had been rejected because the Federal Government was not satisfied with the blueprints.

UMass officials have until Feb. 29 to submit new plans. Dr. Lamar Soutter, dean of the Medical School, said that after the meeting both sides were closer to an agreement. He stated that the architects would go over the designs while considering the suggestions of the Federal Government in an attempt to eliminate some of the extras that had been subject to objection.

University President John W. Lederle said the medical school would be opened in 1970 "funds or not."

Constantine Lists Conditions For Return from Exile to Greece

ATHENS (AP)—The military government yesterday discussed King Constantine's conditions for a return to Greece. But informed sources said the regime would not bow to the young monarch.

From his exile in Rome, Constantine, 27, laid down several conditions. Among these, said informants, were immediate free elections and a halt to the revision of the constitution. The amended constitution would make the king a mere figurehead.

The king's terms were believed to have been relayed to the regime by Foreign Minister Panayiotis Pipinelis, who returned from Rome Saturday after talks with the king at the Greek Embassy there. The king and the royal family flew to Rome Thursday after the collapse of his counter coup against the military junta that seized power April 21.

Pipinelis reported to Premier George Papadopoulos, the regime's strongman, immediately on his return.

This was followed yesterday by an emergency meeting of the Cabinet that lasted two and one half hours. There was no official announcement afterward.

The military regime said Saturday the king might return at any time, but it was obvious that he would be a mere figurehead—not the monarch who had played a decisive role in Greek political fighting.

The king and the royal family spent a leisurely day in Rome. The king's only meetings were with his mother, Queen Mother Frederika: his royal chamberlain, Royal Grand Marshal Leonidas Papagos; and the ex-mayor of Athens, George Pietas. Pietas was fired by the regime after the king's attempt to overthrow the junta Wednesday.

The embassy in Rome hung out the Greek royal flag for the first time since the king arrived there, perhaps in recognition that Constantine was still king of the Hellenes.

The king reportedly was told Saturday by two go-betweens—the Orthodox primate, Archbishop Ieronymos, and Pipinelis—that he is free to return to Greece anytime but under dictated conditions.

General elections were scheduled for May of this year. The army take-over in April wiped them out and turned Greece into a military dictatorship.

However, the regime has said repeatedly it would restore democracy after a plebiscite on the new constitution and general elections at an undisclosed date.

MAROON KEY BUS

Due to student demand, the Maroon Keys announced that the New York Express bus has been changed from Wed., Dec. 20, to Thurs., Dec. 21. Tickets are $5.50 and may be picked up at the Student Union ticket office.

Survival Kits

William F. Field, Dean of Students, warns students against "survival kits":

"It has come to our attention that parents of University students are being solicited through the U.S. Mail to purchase "survival kits for final exams." These kits contain an assortment of perishable and non-perishable snack foods and a "surprise."

The University in no way supports this solicitation nor do we have any knowledge as to the health and ethical standards used in packaging the food. Further, the price for the contents is considerably in excess of the value received.

While it is impossible to stop individuals from using the "Student Directory" for such unauthorized solicitations, your parents should be cautioned about the risks in responding."

Government Professor Publishes A History of Chinese Communism

Communism in China is traced from its beginning and interpreted for its domestic and international import in a new book entitled "A Short History of Chinese Communism," by Dr. Franklin W. Houn, associate professor of government at UMass.

Dr. Houn, a leading Sinologist, discusses the social and cultural forces that led to the birth of a Chinese Communist ideology and closely follows the Chinese Communist Party's evolution from a small, Soviet - directed movement to the establishment of the People's Republic in 1949.

He examines the cultural, social and economic policies of the Peking regime since 1949. The power struggles, strategies, internal structure, ideological development, and accomplishments of the Chinese Communist Party are assessed from officially released figures and newspapers from China combined with Houn's own knowledge of the country.

Born and educated in China, Dr. Houn served in the Chinese government from 1946-1948. He has taught Chinese politics and comparative government courses at Michigan State University and the University of Nebraska and has been research associate at the Hoover Institute at Stanford University.

He has written the books "Central Government of China, 1912-1928," "To Change a Nation: Propaganda and Indoctrination in Communist China" and "Chinese Political Traditions," as well as more than 40 articles in both English and Chinese journals on political science and Chinese affairs.

Dr. Houn calls the book the first history of Chinese communism from the origins in the 1920's to the present Culturul Revolution. It has been chosen as a source book on Red China by the national league of Women Voters.

Dr. Houn ends the 245-page history with a short concluding chapter in which he states his conviction that despite Red China's interest in promoting the communist system elsewhere. China appears to have no territorial designs on any of her neighbors.

The UMass Sinologist also concludes that the present Cultural Revolution appears likely to enable Mao Tse-tung to preserve the revolutionary discipline and elan which he deems necessary for the rejuvenation and modernization of China.

Christmas Party Given For Underprivileged Children

By STEVE LAZEROWICH
Staff Reporter

Some 120 residents of John Adams Middle House and their sister dorm, John Quincy Adams Middle, made the Christmas of sixty underprivileged children just a little bit brighter than it might have been Saturday.

The House Councils of John Adams Middle and JQA Middle under their presidents Paul Healy and Donna Schumaker, arranged with Steve Camara and the Northern Educational Service to have the 60 children from the Springfield area bused to the University for an afternoon of games, food, gifts and Christmas spirit.

Each child was "adopted" for the afternoon by the "foster parents" of JAM and JQAM. The girls made up Christmas stockings and both parents provided their child with several gifts which were placed under the tree in the lounge on the twelfth floor of Tower 5. When the boys of John Adams Middle could not find a Santa to hand out the gifts, Steve Kinnal came up with a different approach--Spiderman.

As one J A M resident said, "You look at the gleam of happiness on these kids' faces and you just know that it really is better to give than to receive."

Engineers Honor Society Initiates

Saturday Dec. 9, the UMass chapter, Delta Eta, of Eta Kappa Nu, the national honor society for Electrical Engineers, initiated seven new members.

Candidates for Eta Kappa Nu are selected from the top one-third of the senior class and the top one-fourth of the junior class in the Department of Electrical Engineering. In addition to scholarship, new members are considered for exemplary character, breadth of interest, adaptability, and unselfish activity.

Those members who are initiated Saturday are Juniors Bruce Benwood, Bradford Mason, and Joseph Tringali and Seniors Jordan Cohen, Athanasios Denis, Patrick Noone, and Robert Pajak. Following the initiation, a banquet was held at the New Weldon Hotel in Greenfield.

Volpe Supported By Majority of Insurance Co.'s

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner C. Eugene Farnum said yesterday the majority of insurance companies selling motor vehicle coverage to Bay State motorists support Gov. Volpe's financial responsibility proposal.

Farnum said in a radio interview on WEEI's Bay State Forum, "I think the majority of the insurance companies are satisfied that something must be done relative to insurance rates in Massachusetts.

"The companies that write 80 to 90 per cent of the liability insurance in Massachusetts are in favor of the Governor's plan."

Farnum said Massachusetts motorists will probably pay the same insurance rates in 1968 that they have paid this year.

Farnum said the governor's proposed responsibility law, now under consideration in the legislature, "is the most effective reform in the entire 50 states. It can lead to a reduction in rates," he added, "and can become a real merit system."

UMass Hosts Sixteen Exchange Students

Sixteen students from the University of South Florida, Florida State and the University of New Mexico got a taste of New England this semester while attending classes at UMass.

The students were participants in the Intra-American student exchange program sponsored by the University in cooperation with the three schools. Some 130 students have spent a semester at UMass since the exchange began in 1962.

According to James White the program which was initiated by the UMass School of Education to help teacher trainees gain a better understanding of sectional education differences, has been expanded to include arts and science majors. Thirty U-Mass students are spending this semester at one of the cooperating institutions.

"Students take courses that are similar to the ones they would take if they were at their own institutions," White said, "and they are encouraged to participate in extra-curricular activities whenever possible."

White indicated that other institutions are interested in joining the program although no definite arrangements have been made yet. "Different environments supplement the educational experiences of the students," he said, "providing them with a better understanding of American culture and setting."

Many students stay on for a second semester in the exchange program, completing their full junior year at a cooperating school.

GSS to Collect Cancelled Stamps

After Christmas, Gamma Sigma Sigma will be sponsoring a stamp drive. These cancelled stamps are sent to foreign missions where they are cashed in for money. This extra money is greatly appreciated and needed.

Bring back to school your cancelled stamps from Christmas envelopes. If possible, leave ¼" border of the envelope surrounding the stamp. U.S. stamps of any denomination will be accepted. Look for the flyer and attached plastic bag and deposit your stamps.

German Professor Receives Knight Commander's Cross

Dr. Hermann J. Weigand, professor of German at UMass, has been awarded the Knight Commander's Cross of the German Order of Merit.

Professor Weigand came to UMass in 1961 after his retirement from Yale, primarily as an advisor for graduate programs in German.

Sterling Professor Emeritus of Germanic Literature at Yale University, he is a recognized authority on Germanic studies in the United States. The award was presented on behalf of German President Heinrich Luebke by the German Consul General to Boston, Dr. Edgar von Schmidt-Pauli.

Dr. Weigand joined the Yale faculty in 1929 after teaching at the University of Pennsylvania. Director of graduate studies in Germanics from 1939, he was appointed a Sterling Professor in 1955. Dr. Weigand received his Ph.D. from the University of Michigan.

Dr. Weigand has written many books, essays and articles on German prose and poetry, primarily about Goethe, Heine, Schiller and Mann. He was honored by Yale in 1957 with a Festschrift—a collection of essays in his field of study dedicated to him. He also holds the Goethe Medal of the Goethe Institute of Munich, Germany.

Dr. Weigand is a former president of the Modern Language Association.

Operetta Guild Elects Board; Plans Made for Spring Show

The Operetta Guild held a reorganization meeting in South College to elect an executive board and to discuss plans for a spring production.

Elected to the executive board of the Guild were John Callahan, Business Manager; Glenna Fickers, Personnel Coordinator; Karen Connolly, Publicity Chairman and Bob Rivard, Technical Director.

Rick Kaplan was elected assistant to the Business Manager, Mary McNamara assistant to the Personnel Coordinator and Jay McAuliffe, assistant to the Publicity Chairman.

"L'il Abner" was selected as the production to be staged in the spring. The musical comedy is based on the cartoon character created by Al Capp.

Steve Rosoff, who graduated from UMass in 1966, has been signed to direct the show. Auditions will be announced at a later date.

Amherst Professors Granted Sabbatic Leaves by Trustees

Sixteen members of the faculty at Amherst College have been voted sabbatic leaves in recent action by the Trustees of the College.

On leave during the second semester this year will be: George W. Kidder, Stone professor of biology; and James E. Ostendarp, professor of physical education and varsity football coach.

Those granted leaves for the 1968-69 academic year were: John Cameron, associate professor of English; Henry Steele Commager, the Winthrop H. Smith professor of American history; Richard M. Foose, professor of geology and chairman of the department; Joel E. Gordon, associate professor of physics; Alfred F. Havighurst, professor of history (first semester); and William E. Kennick, professor of philosophy.

Also, Allen Kropf, associate professor of chemistry and chairman of the department; Ralph C. McGoun, Jr., professor of dramatic arts (second semester); Lewis S. Mudge, minister to the College and associate professor of religion and philosophy; Rose R. Olver, assistant professor of psychology; William H. Pritchard, associate professor of English; and Edwin C. Rozwenc, the Dwight W. Morrow professor of American history and chairman of the department of American studies.

Australian Prime Minister Feared Drowned

MELBORNE, Australia (AP) — Anxious inquiries from around the world poured into the national capital, Canberra, including telephone calls from President Johnson and Queen Elizabeth II of Britain. British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said his government "heard with shock and distress the news from Australia this morning that Mr. Holt is missing."

U.S. Ambassador Edward Clark said: "I cannot express my distress at the news of the disappearance of my dear and personal friend. My heart goes out to Mrs. Holt and her children, with whom we share the terrible anxiety of this tragic development."

Death Toll Rises in Bridge Collapse; Derrick Pulls Cars from Ohio River

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va. (AP)—A towering derrick with a clam shell scoop scraped a car containing three bodies from the Ohio River bottom last night, raising the death toll of the suspension bridge collapse to 10 known dead and 28 persons missing.

It was almost a certainty that the death count would mount. The West Virginia governor's office reported the sighting of a partly submerged car near the Ohio bank with "at least" three bodies inside. It was crushed by the steel girders of the bridge.

The 1,750-foot span, built in 1928 between Point Pleasant and Kanauga, Ohio, toppled during rush-hour traffic just after 5 p.m. Friday afternoon. Most estimates placed 50 to 75 cars on the bridge when it fell 80 feet to the near-freezing waters of the Ohio River.

Workers with underwater torches labored over another car trapped in shallow water on the Ohio side. Reports from Civil Defense spokesmen said there were five or six bodies in the car.

Four floating derricks roamed the 1,500-foot-wide stretch of the Ohio, probing the river's 40-foot depth for other cars and trucks. Some of the cranes were equipped with monstrous grappling hooks while clam shell scoops dangled from the steel cables of others.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which has jurisdiction over the river, closed locks between Pittsburgh and Point Pleasant. This move did not reduce the river's water level but slowed its six-mile-per-hour current to three knots to allow scuba divers to work.

They had complained that the normal current was sweeping them downstream and they were having to use metal shields to deflect the current and create still-water pools.

Another big problem facing the Corps of Engineers was that of barge and transport traffic backing up because of the closure of the river. There are indications that tonnage had backed up for long distances along the Ohio, a major national inland artery.

Curiosity seekers at the scene, both at Point Pleasant and across the river, dwindled with police and Civil Defense teams sealing off the area from spectators. It was a quiet Sunday in Point Pleasant, a light industry town of 6,000 about 55 miles northwest of the West Virginia capitol city of Charleston.

West Virginia Gov. Hulett C. Smith and Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes both sped to the scene of the disaster Friday night to confer. Each pledged the full cooperation of his state to aid stricken families and to determine the cause of the bridge collapse.

Draft Deferments for Grads

Although some observers believe that the recommendations for the next academic year limiting draft deferments of graduate students will be modified, bitter feelings have been expressed against "an anti-intellectual narrowly technocratic view of society," reports New York's leading newspaper.

According to the recommendations of the Federal Interagency Advisory Committee on Essential Activities and Critical Occupations, deferments of new graduate students should be confined to the natural sciences, mathematics, engineering, and health. Following these guidelines, the graduate students in humanities and social sciences would be drafted.

Two basic objections against this method of limited graduate deferment have been raised by university and college leaders. On the one hand, there would be a shortage of graduate teaching assistants for today's undergraduates; on the other hand, there would be a long-range setback to doctorial study preparing tomorrow's teachers of undergraduates.

Naturally, the non-science people are protesting most strenuously, and the charges of technocratic views have resulted.

But the current recommendation and plan have kept the debate going on the whole question of how do you draft and whom do you exempt. Admitting that automatic academic deferments are morally unjustified, university groups including the Council of Graduate Schools have made the following substitute proposals:

- induction should come "at natural times of transition"—after high school, after college graduation or after completion of graduate study.
- a student should be allowed to complete one level of education without interruption, once he is in it, but then return to the draft pool before moving to the next level.
- no disciplines should be labeled as "more important or more critical than others." The implication is that students be selected by lottery, either from the total mix of all fields of study or, in fair proportions, from each of the disciplines, possibly with special deferments in specific fields with immediately critical manpower shortages.

The above proposals are in the best interests of the country—unfortunately engaged in the present war—especially because the proposals are in the best interests of higher education.

Thos we are concerned about dissent at home would do well to remedy areas of that dissent by support of these draft reforms.

Is Mankind a Mistake?

To the editor:

The world is a beautiful place on the surface, and Gena Corea is hardly the only person wh been overcome by this beauty. But what happens when you look below this surface! "The Evil," i words of one more glib than I, "that lurks in the hearts of men . . ."

Our first scene is my room, one of the gathering places of the guys on the floor. "Rock" blares, though quietly, from a stereo.

I have just finished reading about a CIA-sponsored coup in Guatamala, back in 1954, and I am understandably upset. The military dictatorship that "we" installed to replace the previous government made Soviet Russia look like paradise! It took 800,000 acres of land away from the Guatamalan peasants and gave it to United Fruit (the Chiquita Banana people.) It dissolved the labor unions of the coffee workers (trying for a raise from 40¢ a day!) and the banana workers (who were doing slightly better at $1.36 a day...). A secret committee arbitrarily declared 72,000 people "communists or sympathizers" — these people could be imprisoned without trial, and could not even own radios! And to top this off, the illiterate—70% of the population —lost the right to vote they had even under the communists!!!

As I finished reading one of the guys comes in. A few minutes of polite conversation. I relate the story of the Guatamala coup. My guest appears unaffected.

"Well?" I ask after about a minute.

"So what?"

I sit still for about another minute, stunned. "Don't you feel anything for these people?"

"No." He pauses. I remain silent. He decides to continue: "If one of these peasants stood in front of me with his pitchfork in his hand and I had anything to gain from it at all, I would shoot him."

Change of scene. It's Monday night. Bitter cold. Windy. Freezing rain. For various inconsequential reasons I'm hitch-hiking to Syracuse, N. Y. I have been standing outside a gas station for about an hour without any luck. My beard is caked with ice. The wind has removed any hint of a part from my longer-than-standard hair.

I approach the gas station where four men, three younger and one about middle-aged, sit waiting for customers. One of the younger men spots me coming and jumps up to open the door.

He welcomes me in, and cigarettes light up all around. Very warm, friendly conversatio or ten minutes pass.

One of them asks the tion: "What do you th the War?"

A Little Bit Of Soul, Mr. Charlie

To the editor:

After the Battle of the Bands Saturday night there seems to be a need for a unified movement for equality on this campus. The judges were typical of white soul(?). Rather than pick well-performed soul, the judges preferred to pick a poor imitation.

To ask where good Negro entertainment is at the various concerts on campus would sound silly. Since there is an abundance of white imitation, (not good, but white) there is no need to supply real soul on this campus. When you soul folks learn to appreciate and understand what soul really is, when you are willing to accept good en ment, and not some sorry tion, then and only then really be what you want soul.

So why Black Power? F sons that are typical of day night: Mr. Charlie is his boy will someday be gi opportunity to excel in where people judge a man ent, not on the color of h

Reknowned (sic) Coverage

To the editor:

This letter is in regard to the lack of Daily Collegian coverage of some activities of the campus.

Thursday night, December 11, I attended a performance of Claudio Arrau, in the Student Union Ballroom. Claudio Arrau, to quote the 1967-68 Concert Association Program booklet is "the greatest pianist...a renowned man in every music center of the world; from London to Berlin, to Tel-Aviv, to Tokyo, to New York..."

Wednesday, I searched through the Collegian in vain for a critical review. To my disgust, I found a photograph of Mr. Arrau stuck in a corner of the front page along with the astute observation that "Claudio Arrau, world reknowned pianist, performed last night in the Student Union Ballroom to a large audience." Incidentally, "reknowned," according to the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, is spelled "renowned."

The most indescribable feeling of gratitude surged through me that I was so privileged to have been in that "large audience." Congratulations Daily Collegian on your stimulating age of such an important campus event.

I have noticed for several months, oth cidents of that fantastic Collegian jour which gives equal space to all important c events regardless of the feelings which a the editors may have towards particul ganizations or people.

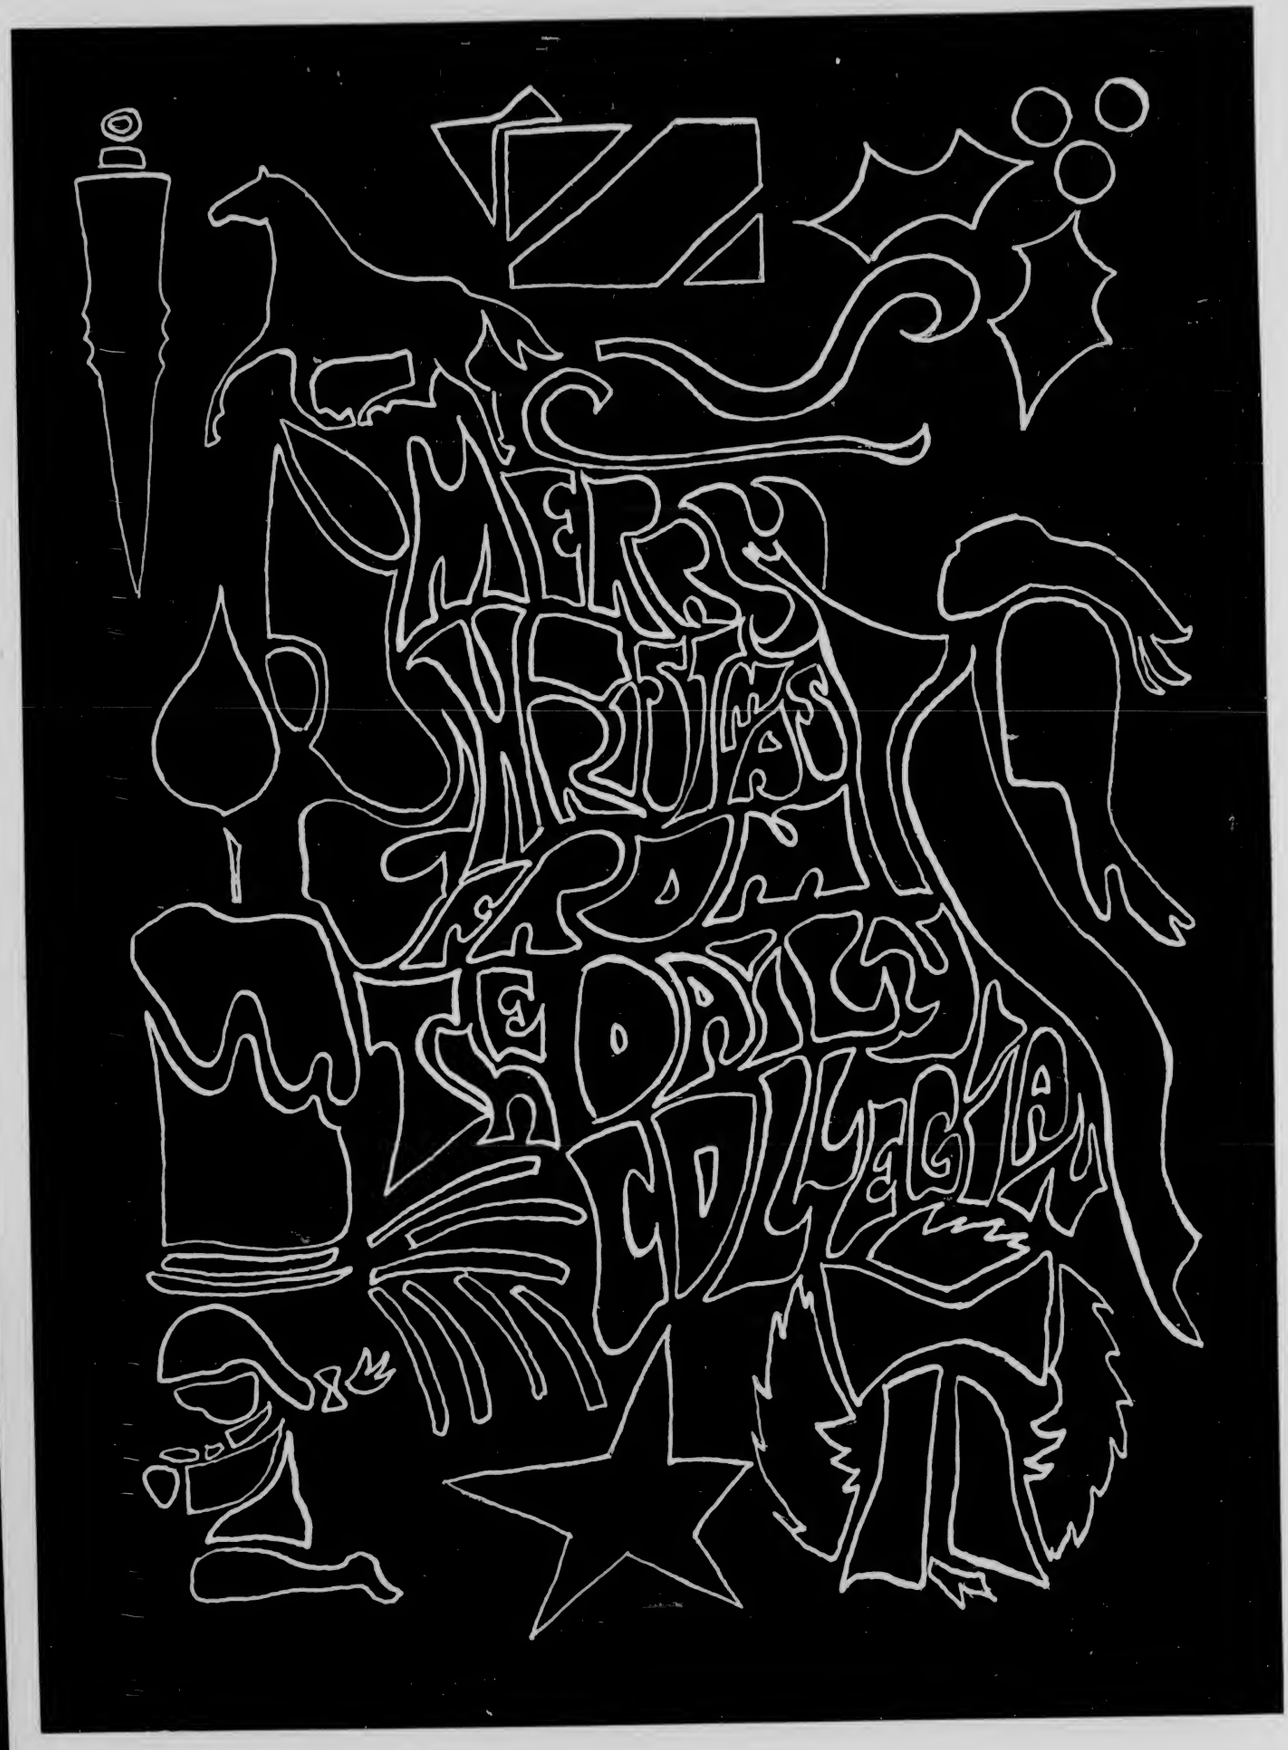
Only One View Was Presented

To the editor:

Last Thursday night I had an opportunity to view the film Why Vietnam and to participate in the discussion that followed at Grayson House.



Although I was quite interested in such planned activity, I was greatly disappointed by the sponsoring group known as the Faculty Group on Peace and War. It appears that the main purpose of the meeting was to provide this group with an opportunity to present their viewpoint.

It was obvious that the group was prepared and that most of the students were not equipped to answer some misrepresented views offered by the Faculty Group on Peace and War.

I would suggest that a reasonable number of officials defending our involvement in Vietnam be present rather than t stitution of a film which respond to the criticisms by a live audience.

Most Students Stuck Here 'til Thursday

by GERALD W. VIGEANT

The great majority of UMass students are waiting until the last day of classes before departing for Christmas vacation. In a poll conducted by the Daily Collegian, 41 of 52 students polled (29 males, 23 females) reported that they are leaving for vacation Thursday.

The great majority of UMass students are waiting until the last day of classes before departing for Christmas vacation. In a poll conducted by the Daily Collegian, 41 of 52 students polled (29 males, 23 females) reported that they are leaving for vacation Thursday.

The explanations for staying until the bitter end were diverse, but the most frequently cited reasons were hour exams and no-cut classes. The fortunate few who are leaving before then were more vague in their explanations. The desire to "get out of here as soon as possible" was most frequently named.

Here is a sample of the comments in answer to this question: Why are you staying until the last day of classes?

Freshman: "I can't cut my gym class."

Freshman: "I'm waiting until Thursday for my boy friend."

Sophomore: "I have four exams this week, including one on Thursday."

Sophomore: "You're out of your mind if you don't get out of this place early, but as for me — I have an hour exam Thursday."

Sophomore: "I don't plan on attending classes Thursday. I have to wait for a ride home."

Junior: "Those last few classes toward the end are valuable. The profs usually give information about finals."

Junior: "Because E = MC², that's why!"

Junior: "I have some teachers who are giving finals before Christmas. They have permission to do this."

Senior: "I've been invited to a Christmas party Wednesday night."

In answer to: Why are you leaving campus early?

Freshman: "I want to go to a hockey game at home."

Sophomore: "I just want to get out of this place."

Sophomore: "I only have one class Thursday, and I really want to get home."

Sophomore: "A few more classes won't make any difference."

Junior: "Why stay here? I wouldn't go to classes anyway!"

Senior: "I have three exams that week. When they're over, I'm not sticking around here."

A few students took this opportunity to express their opinion of the new school calendar. "That only leaves us two shopping days until Christmas!" one sophomore exclaimed. The sly comment of another sophomore summarizes the feelings of all UMies at this time of year: "Have fun studying at your New Year's party!" he moaned.

Guitarist Mira Gilbert Highlights Chanukah Celebration

by PAULA SWENSON

The annual Chanukah celebration at UMass Sunday was highlighted by the appearance of Mira Gilbert, folk guitarist from New York.

About 250 students and faculty members from UMass area schools gathered at the North Dining Commons to join in a celebration sponsored by the UMass Hillel Foundation.

The program began with a symbolic lighting of the Menorah, followed by a dialogue on the meaning of Chanukah, or the festival of the lights. Chanukah, which begins Dec. 27, is celebrated each year in commemoration of the regaining of the Temple of Jerusalem from the Syrians.

The program continued with refreshments served to a background of Israeli music. The highlight of the program came when Miss Gilbert sang a repertoire of Hebrew festival and folk songs. This was followed by dancing.

Invitations were sent to faculty and students at Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst, University of New Hampshire, American International College and Springfield College, according to Anita Menovich, co-chairman of the holiday committee.

Deserted UMass Campus Will Still See Activity

by ROXANA ADAMS

Although the campus minus 15,000 vacationing Umies may seem relatively lifeless to most, the Christmas break is one of the most industrious times of the year, according to Kenton Billings, superintendent of grounds at UMass.

This is the time of the year when the fewest students are about, and therefore the time to do substantial amounts of work which otherwise could not be accomplished.

With most of the dorms empty, crews can change furniture, replacing old pieces such as wardrobes, with new or better ones. The floors regain that shine they had in September, and general repair work is done.

One of the main tasks, Supt. Billings stressed, is the removal of snow before the students get back for classes.

Outside construction slows down considerably, or even comes to a halt, with the freezing of the ground. This gives the crews more time to devote to indoor tasks, such as repairing and overhauling the familiar machines which are used in the fall.

Only one major outdoor project is planned during this vacation because the ground will be frozen. A new riding ring will be constructed, weather permitting. Due to the increased work in the dorms, some of the ground crew will assist the regular custodians.

Despite its deceptively quiet appearance, UMass even during Christmas vacation, still gets a lot done.

UMass Protestant Chaplains Explain Views of Christmas

by PATRICIA WATSON

In the hustle and bustle of the commercial side of Christmas, many people pause to consider the significance of this holiday. They remember that beneath all the ritual tree trimming and gift giving there is a solemn religious event which is laden with meaning for all Christians, the birth of Jesus Christ. This is what Christmas means to some of the University of Massachusetts Protestant chaplains.

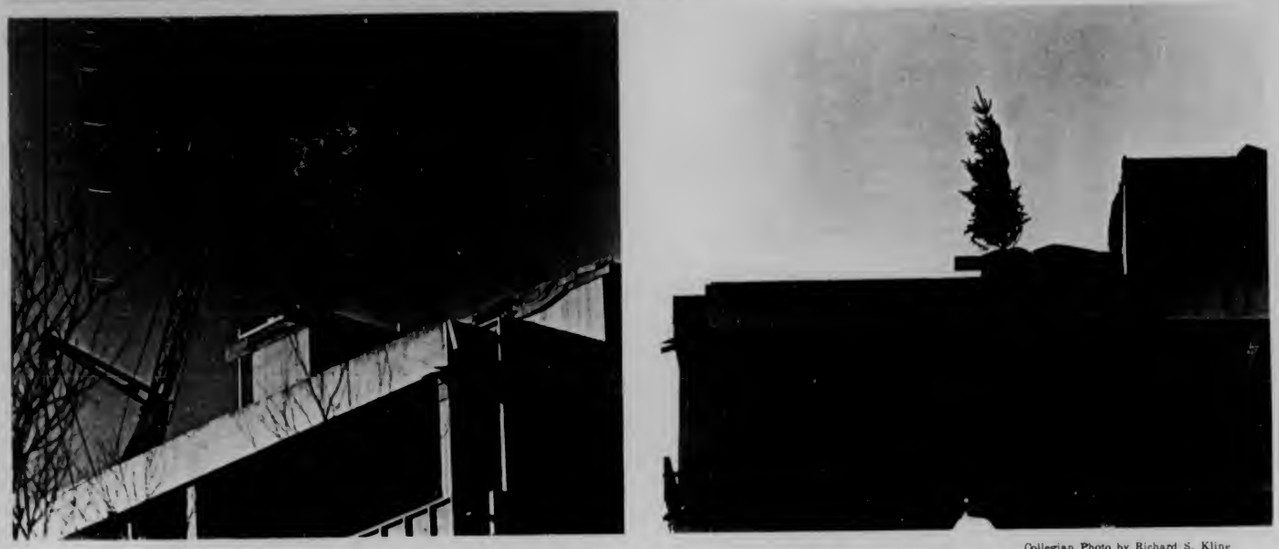
To Rev. Ewald Mand, "Christmas means primarily the event by which God made Himself known to man in the Coming of Christ." In Christ, says Rev. Mr. Mand, God has disclosed part of the true nature of Himself in answer to the wondering and asking of man. The Coming of Christ represents the continued self-disclosure and mystery of God.

Christmas means to Rev. John L. Scott:

"The birth of Jesus speaks of the highest mandate made known to man. Jesus is the Prince of Peace and to celebrate his birth is to re-affirm that peace is the highest condition of humanity. It is a life style which rejects war and domination. Christmas, the historic reconstruction of His birth, calls for a radical recognition of the preciousness of human life and existence."

Rev. Thomas Lindeman said that Christmas must represent the entire life of Christ, not just his birth. It stands for the suffering of the grown man as well as the birth of an innocent babe.

Rev. David A. Purdy told what Christmas means to him:



"Christmas is the celebration of the fact that all things and people have value. That's what the 'word made flesh' means, that's what the savior born in a barn signifies.

"Christmas is not only a celebration. It also stands as an address for man calling us to recognize the value of the neighbor, though we may neither agree with him nor like him; calling nations to share their wealth and resources with one another though our nation may have ideological differences with others; calling them humbly to live in peace though we are so sophisticated in our practice of war. Without this kind of address the celebration of Christmas is reduced to a hedonistic ritual of self - righteousness and corny cliches."

"... And visions of exams danced in their heads"

by JEAN OVSINI

Finals may be the dream substitution for sugar plums this Christmas as UMass students begin cramming for final exams over vacation.

In previous years, the fall semester has had a "lame duck" period of two weeks following Christmas vacation. However, this period serves almost no academic advancement, states Hills Skillings, schedule officer. Therefore, the Academic Matters Committee of the Faculty Senate last year proposed that the two-week period be eliminated and a period of two reading days be provided for review. This year, finals begin Jan. 4, as opposed to Jan. 13 of the 1966-67 fall semester.

Some students have expressed adverse opinions about the elimination of the two-week period. It is generally agreed that Christmas festivities are not conducive to studying.

"Christmas won't be the same vacation it used to be—these two weeks are needed for a reading period which we don't get before finals," states Beth Pyenson, '69.

"This is a time of religious significance and you can't enjoy it with the thought of exams looming ominously over your head," according to Carolee Abbot, '68.

Although not in favor of the new semester schedule, Marjorie Sylvester, '70, noted that new plans frequently meet with opposition before they have been tried.

Mark Katz, '70, states that he likes the idea of not having any classes for approximately a month, since classes end this week and do not begin again until the second semester resumes Jan. 25. However, he added, having to study for finals over vacation "might wreck" the vacation for most students.

Janice Nickerson summed up her feelings in one short sentence: "I think it rots!"

Alternatives to the new schedule, such as finals before Christmas vacation, are virtually impossible, states Mr. Skillings. "By going to school on Sunday and starting in the middle of August, we might be able to do it," he quipped. On a more serious note, Mr. Skillings stated that provisions must be made for Counseling Day, legal holidays and for 14 to 15 weeks of full course meetings during a semester.

Adding to the fact that students are not motivated to study over Christmas vacation, Dave Baker, '70, states, a person has commitments to spend time with his family and relatives, leaving little time for study. He also states that many students work over Christmas vacation and therefore will not be able to spend time studying.

Sherry Gilman, '68, one of the many who will be skiing over the vacation, states, "It will be hard to study on the chairlift!"

'Lame Duck' Period Eliminated

by DICK GEIKIE

"The lame duck week of classes between Christmas vacation and finals had to be eliminated."

William C. Venman, assistant to the provost, made this statement in an interview last week, and an increased number of faculty complaints was given as the cause for the change.

"Only two possible alternatives," Venman said, "would eliminate the problem. They are: a) have finals end before Christmas, or b) have finals directly following Christmas."

In order to have finals end before Christmas and still satisfy the UMass Faculty Senate ruling that each semester have 84 teaching days, we would have to start classes in mid - August. Therefore, he said, the second alternative was the only plausible one.

"Under our present semester system," according to Venman, "the setting up of a yearly calendar is relatively mechanical." In it must be included the 84 teaching days, three days of registration, the legal holidays, nine days for final exams, one or two reading days, and counseling day.

The length of the reading period, and whether or not a counseling day is necessary, are the only sections of the calendar that avail themselves of any variation.

To acquire more than a one or two day change in the length of the semester would require a major change in our system. Three of the most common calendar systems are: a) the trimester, b) the quarter system, or c) the 4-1-4 plan.

Venman said he was "99 and 44/100 per cent sure that we would not switch to a tri-mester system."

"The quarter system would not be as objectionable as the trimester system, but it would be voted down by a margin of about 3 to 1," according to Venman. The main objection to the quarter system would be the, "turn - around time," required, that is, the time required between semesters to get all the grades recorded, punched out for the IBM, and finally sent out to the students. Venman felt that this could be done in a minimum of nine days.

The 4-1-4 plan isn't new, but is used at very few schools. In this plan a student will take four courses in a September through December term. The month of January will be spent doing concentrated study in one course and the four course load will be resumed in the February through May term.

Besides the fact that only 27 credits can be earned per year with this plan, Dr. Venman felt that, "there is no indication that such a plan will be adopted at UMass in the foreseeable future."

With all the requirements and alternatives considered, the only feasible system, which would eliminate the problem of faculty complaints, is the one adopted this year.

"I know that a lot of students are complaining," Venman said, "but I don't think the change will hurt the class averages at all, and I welcome any suggested alternatives which will satisfy the semester requirements."

"There's always something to do"--Lederle

by JOHN GRAIFF

"It's a little relaxed, and it's quiet and pleasant to walk around the campus." This is how UMass Pres. John W. Lederle has talked of the holiday vacations.

He will be using most of his vacation to catch up on back work. "I will always be at the office," said the president, "for there is always someone to see, or something to do.

"This will give me a chance to get to the bottom of the pile of papers," he said.

Among Pres. Lederle's more important business over the Christmas vacation, he said, will be the reviewing of recommendations for 10-year promotions and merit increases for the professional staff.

Stating that he might even be working on Christmas Day, Pres. Lederle expects to have Christmas dinner at a small family gathering, including his daughter and his son.

On New Year's Eve, Dr. Lederle expects to be busy working, but he plans to attend a party at the home of a faculty member and bring in the New Year relaxing a little.

LYNDON, THE GREATEST PRESIDENT

(tune: Rudolph the Red-Nosed Raindeer)

Lyndon, the greatest President,
Was a very brilliant man;
And if you ever saw him
You would say he had great plans.
All of the demonstrators
Used to laugh and call him names.
They never loved poor Lyndon,
Or any of his silly games.

Then in bloody '67
They all came to say:
"Lyndon, with your power so great,
Won't you save us from this hate ?
Then all the folks would love you,
And they'd shout it out with glee —
Lyndon, the greatest president,
You'd go down in history !"

A UMass Christmas Carol . . .

(Editor's Note: The dissappearance of Doctor Ebeneezer Scrooge from the UMass Economics Department in December, 1966, had many puzzled. The Daily Collegian dispatched Wayne Soini to investigate. From interviews and a long-distance telephone interview with Dr. Scrooge himself in Lima, Peru, a full story was gathered. Here is the report.)

GOD was dead, first of all. Dead as the nails they pounded into him. And yet it was over him that the hubbub continued.

"Rubbish, rubbish! Intolerable rubbish!" shouted Doctor Scrooge as he peeked between his Venetian blinds at students standing at the bus stop with suitcases.

"Did you call, sir?" asked sad-eyed Rumstead Mimms, the so-called Boy Wonder of Machmer, running in from the next room.

"Not unless your name is rubbish, Mimms!" Scrooge barked. The young graduate assistant quaked. Scrooge snarled, "And I suppose you're leaving early like the rest, Mimms?"

"N-no, sir that is, that is," the boy hesitated, "that is, unless you want me to, sir."

Scrooge's ashen face glowed a cherry red. "Want you to, Mimms! Want you to!" He choked, unable for a second to speak. His arm speared forth, the index finger opening like a jack-knife. He ranted, "You go to Hell, Mimms, with my blessing! Go, Mimms, Begone, MIMMS!"

"T-thank you, sir," the graduate said as he rushed out with a pile of books, his coat and a heavy suitcase. He scarcely got out the door of Machmer Hall in time to make the bus.

The door slammed shut. Scrooge was alone in Machmer, alone on campus. His brow furrowed in anger as he tried to concentrate on end-of-year profit-cost ratio graphs. He at last could contain himself no longer.

"Damnation! This school! Fifteen thousand retarded and frequently drunk spectators of a circus! Great buildings and the Roman forum of sports! And the frivolous head-nodders and talk artists. Artists, artists, artists! Thieves of valuable money, time, energy, material! Sappers of the wealth and leeches on the nation! Rubbish!"

THE COLD room was quite warm when he had done breathing fire and burning to ashes, as he did every Christmas, all of the things that he despised, all of the accumulated rubbish of the year.

He rubbed his eyes and shook his head, "Oh, Srooge, poor Scrooge, poor Scrooge. Born into Babylon."

Getting slowly into his coat and wrapping his scarf around his neck the aged professor was sobbing.

"Rubbish," he said weakly as he walked out the door, graphs in hand. Turning to lock the door, he stopped to look at the sign.

It was then that an eerie thing occurred. To his old eyes the letters no longer read "Ebeneezer Scrooge, Ph.D." but "Wimbert Stipple."

Scrooge nodded, blinked. The letters did not reform. They remained "Wimbert Stipple." He opened the door. Light streamed into the office. There were no Venetian blinds. And—there, where his desk had been, stood a Victorian desk. Behind it was Scrooge's old professor, Wimbert Stipple, dead these 20 years. It was room 200, South College, circa 1910.

"Come in, Eb, come in," the good-natured fat man urged with a pleaant toothy grin. A breeze blew the door shut. Professor Stipple resembled a well-shaven Santa Claus without the red suit.

"Have a seat, man," he said, "And don't look so bad. You passed your doctorate. And, I think you have a career in economics. The other three passed but with great effort. Yours was not a Christmas gift."

Scrooge sat down in the Civil War era chair and saw a Collegian in his hands, young non-rheumatoid hands. The Collegian date was December 10, 1910. He was 20 again.

"What's got into you, lad?" the good professor asked. "Are you drunk, Scrooge?" he asked in mock sternness. Kindly laughter followed, "I can't say that I wasn't the day I passed."

"Can I go, sir?" Scrooge asked.

"Surely, sir, surely," the fat gent waved his hand.

Scrooge could hear his laughter as he bounded down the wooden stairs of South College to the steps. No one was outside. He hollered, "Rob! Bill! Stinky!"

Three snowballs knocked his hat off in reply and Scrooge was quickly being dragged, carried, pulled toward the glazed-over pond. Rob, Bill, Stinky, and Scrooge were shouting and laughing hysterically. Scrooge was soon swimming and laughing, hollering in mock anger as he swam for shore. But his eyes grew blurry, things went black.

HE AWOKE in front of Alumni Hall. He could see the Student Union, Machmer, frame-trussed Chapel. He was back in 1966. He walked into the Hall, whose corridors echoed with hammers being pounded. He walked toward the sound.

"Well, that's overtime, Hank," said a workman.

"Yeh. Scrooge's only bequest." Both laughed.

They walked away, their clattering steps and punctuating laughter echoing till at last all was silent. Scrooge drew up to the wall. There was a bronze plaque. It read: "Ebeneezer Scrooge 1890-1966."

That was all. That was all he would leave.

Scrooge shuddered.

Soon he was running. He ran outside and kept running until he fell, weeping in the snow.

He felt himself grow numb, then all was warm again. He was in his office. Piles of paper, graphs, books were all around him. He could not help himself. He started laughing.

Drawing the blinds, he opened the windows, shouting "Merry Christmas!" to students at the bus-stop, who shouted back. He would leave more than a bronze plaque! And, by Jove, he would do more than say Merry Christmas! The typewriter keys hummed as he typed out several letters. Two of them he tacked immediately to the Economics bulletin board. They read:

ALL students:

The Economy Department will forego its final examination, scheduled for 6 a.m. January 1. All students will receive instead an automatic grade of A, to count one-half of the semester grade.

Merry Christmas!

E. Scrooge

ALL students:

The Ec Department wishes to make note here that any University course may be substituted for departmental requirements. It is hoped that all Ec majors will take advantage of this scheduling flexibility.

Happy New Year!

E. Scrooge

The other letters were messages of good will and hope to many students he had treated poorly in the past. In the hearts of all he had met Scrooge now endeavored to kindle a new spirit. He also resolved to meet others, many others.

HE LOOKED the very spirit of Christmas as he strode across the snow to President Lederle's house with resignation and suitcase in hand, and a letter of recommendation for Rumstead Mimms to become the new department head. He accepted nothing less, and the president agreed. (Mr. Mimms, alas, has not continued the glorious reforms of Dr. Scrooge.)

So off he went. Scrooge has sent postcards to college officials at various times in the past year, each time with different post-marks. The Collegian managed to catch up with him by telephone last month in Peru where his last words were the same as on each postcard, a message he said he was carrying around the world:

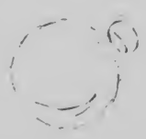
Peace on Earth, Good-will to men,

Merry Christmas!

Swing-Shifters Soon to "Make the Scene"

By BETSY GOLDMAN

It's that time of year again for UMie co-eds: the end of the first semester is near. The co-ed is getting bored with the clothes that only four months ago seemed so new. Her enthusiastic plans for finally making a 3.0 cum have degenerated into an attitude of "Please, please, let me just pass." And worst of all, her boyfriend is getting bored with her . . . or rather, he scents something new in the air.



Men of freshman class unite! Again, as it has happened for the past three years, their tenuous grasp on the outer fringes of UMie social life (e.g. those daring freshman females who d e f i a n t l y date FRESHMEN males) is in peril.

But what causes this undertone of panic? The advent of the new Swing-Shift Class of 1971.

Beginning second semester, this year's crop of summer freshmen will arrive to infiltrate and assimilate into the University community. With freshly laundered clothes, smiles and enthusiasm for College Life, they pose a kind of threat to those in sophomore slump, with junior jitters and in senior panic.

Freshman girls, perhaps unaware of the serious threat to state, don't see the problem.

Only upperclass boys come out on top. As the Swing-Shift girls congregate together in the Hatch, both fraternity man and independent come to check out the scenery.

This year, 342 Swing-Shift their spectacular social success, don't recognize the problem: they are not quite jaded. Freshmen boys, in the same ignorant freshmen have pre-registered for second semester, as oppposed to last year's number of 314. It would seem, from figures cited by Dr. Venman, director of the summer program, that their first semester cum will be greater than those of previous years. Beginning in 1964, the Swing-Shifters of the Class of '68 produced a 1.997 first semester cum. The Class of '69 upped their cum to 2.005, while the Class of '70 reached 2.114. It is interesting to note, however, that although the differences between regular and Swing-Shift first semester cums for the first two years are relatively small (a small difference of .091 and .196 respectively), the regular, freshman, first semester cum of the Class of '70, was 2.436, a .322-point difference.

One hundred seventy four girls, 168 boys: all smiles, but perhaps a little scared. One hundred seventy four girls, 168 boys: some have remained, others have left. Those who remained will be here on Jan. 24 for registration. Wise upperclass co-eds will be kind to them, if only to share "surplus" dates.

Who Has Seen the Spirit of Christmas?

by Viola Osgood and Anne Symanyk

THE students at the University of Massachusetts will not be visited by Santa Claus this year. Why? The reason is fairly simple and self-evident. Santa has gone on strike.

He was last seen in the vicinity of the Student Union, accompanied by his eight faithful reindeer and a group of his workshop elves. Santa was dressed in his regulation North Pole uniform and he carried a picket sign. Santa and the other North Polians feel that they have just cause to picket.

In a Daily Collegian interview, Santa said that while he was hard at work in his North Pole Gift Shop, he received from the University the list of all the things that students had asked for this Christmas. "Then," Santa lamented, "I started reading that list."

One airplane ticket to California, one boy named Tommy, six requests for engagement rings, one letter from John, eight requests for a majority of the votes for best-dressed-girl on campus, three requests for dates with guys from Sig Ep, one request to be able to walk along North Pleaant Street without having to pass a certain frat house, one request for "an A on my Latin American government final," 49 requests for steady boyfriends, two requests for new Johnny Mathis albums, 14 requests to pass "my" pledge exam, 14 requests for 15 hours of service without having to work on projects that I don't like, and five requests for a half-decent basketball player for a certain frat team.

"People think that just because you're Santa Claus you can work miracles," poor old Santa weeped.

WHILE Santa and his helpers marched to and fro in front of the Union, we decided to interview some of the students who had decided that this is the year to "hit Santa hard." We asked: "Why did you ask for———?" The responses were horrendous.

"I want an airplane ticket to California because I want to visit my boyfriend at USC in the spring."

"What do you mean why do I want Tommy? I've had a crush on Tommy since we were in high school." "I want an engagement ring because I'm tired of sticking holes in my sweaters with this stupid fraternity pin. Besides I need something to show off to my friends."

This selfishness is the sort of thing that poor Santa has had to put up with since he took over for John Jay Generosity who died of double pneumonia on Dec. 25, 1902. Dressed in the same red suit (which is fading from many washings), and jolly old gent has faithfully jolly old jent has faithfully made his rounds for the past 6½ decades. He has never complained nor asked for anything for himself. He has always been trustworthy and not once has he shown up late. Santa has gone through many sleds and many generations of reindeer to keep us all happy and gay.

CHRISTMAS is a time for giving and sharing. At least once a year we should forget about what we want and do things that will make others happy. All of those interviewed asked for something that would make them happy this year. Not a single peron asked for something nice for someone else.

Has the spirit of Christmas died? Have we all become so selfish that the joy of giving is but an abstraction to us? Man is a vain and selfish beast by nature. We have all forgotten rule number one for happiness. Is it not better still to give than to receive?

"Well," protested one of our many interviewees, "what about the group of kids on campus who collect toys for the toy drive, and the service fraternity and the service sorority?" We were so delighted at the prospect that the true meaning of Christmas had not been totally abandoned that we charged over to the Union. Santa was still carrying on the most orderly demonstration since the march on Washington. We related our joys to him.

"That," said Santa through chattering teeth, "is very good." We waited for more response as we could see that he was quite cold. His once warm red suit was worn quite thin with age. The sting of the wind seemed to whip right through to the very bone. "Is that true Christmas spirit?" Santa asked after a while, "or is it merely the desire for recognition? One can never be quite sure. Go seek out some of these people and ask them what 'they' want for Christmas."

We found several of the more charitable people on campus and asked what they wanted for Christmas. We found in them desires similar to those of their fellow students. Everyone wanted something for himself it seemed. The campus theme for Christmas this year should be 'My' Christmas.

IF YOU see a heartbroken and sad old man marching in front of the Union for the next few days, don't be surprised. We're telling you that he's there. He's disappointed. He's sacrificed so much for so long and he's been helped so little.

He's a sincere little man, he's abstemious. He's carrying a cardboard sign. He's not in a labor union, his task is not selfish. He's trying to reawaken the spirit of Christmas. He borrowed a pencil from one of the more generous grad students to write on his sign:

Come forth O Christmas spirit,
Return from your long, long sleep,
Revive in the students here,
The true meaning of Christmas this year.

"These hippies, they're all the same..."

by John Healey

GRUMBLING complaints about the length of the sermon, he filed to the back of the church to pay his respects to the minister who had just ended Christmas services with a prayer for peace.

"I wish it wasn't so damned hot in here, too," the man whispered to his wife. Changing his countenance as he approached the minister, the man cheerfully rendered, "Good sermon doctor. Let's hope the Commies will agree to extend the truce till New Year's."

"Let's pray that the truce can become a lasting peace," smiled the minister as he extended his Yuletide greetings.

Once outside the church the man dropped his smile with a bitter complaint of the cold weather. As he strolled from the church, he turned to his wife, glanced back to ensure adequate distance between him and the preacher, and said "He's crazy. Lasting peace. Peace! You'd think we could get by on faith or something."

UNATTENTIVE to the direction in which he walked, the man bumped into a young man who was passing the church. "Pardon me," said the young man in a gentle voice.

"Why don't you watch where—oh, it's one of you bearded creeps. You're just like all the rest, irresponsible. What's the matter, on LSD or something?" And with a guffaw that started him coughing he reached into his coat and extracted a cigarette.

"No," replied the young man, "I don't use drugs."

"Well, I suppose you smoke marijuana, like all the rest." With a gold-plated Zippo, he lit his cigarette.

Again the young man answered in the negative and, with a qualification, said he didn't need smoke to give him a boost.

Perceiving the rebuttal to be a jab, the man became irate. "I suppose you don't believe in going to church either. Do you go to church?" And with a leer, "Or is God Dead?"

"God," replied the young man, "is very much alive. He is everywhere; you don't have to go to church to find Him: you feel Him."

The man's wife stiffened with righteous indignation when she heard the young man's remark and retorted, "Today is Christmas; you have to go to church on Christmas; every decent person does."

"Christmas," he replied, "is no different from any other day in the year. God is as much with us in July as on December twenty-fifth. However, today is the anniversary of the birth of Christ. It is a time to reaffirm our faith and pray even harder for peace and joy to all men."

"PEACE!" bellowed the man, "I suppose you spend all your time carrying signs at peace demonstrations instead of doing something constructive."

"I have attended peace demonstrations because I believe there are enough people who want peace. If there are enough such people, we will bring about peace."

"Don't give me that crap; you people are just afraid you'll get killed if you have to go to war."

"Nobody wants to die, but I would rather be killed than kill another human. God said, 'Thou Shalt Not Kill'; and we are all bound to live by His word."

Looking up as if to ask God to pity this poor misguided lad, he answered, "You people just don't realize that times have changed. Just because you wear beards and sandals doesn't mean you can live like Christ," and with a guffaw, complimented himself for having made such a clever joke.

His wife, shocked at the attitude of the young man interrupted, "There must be some way you celebrate Christmas. Decent Christians give gifts and celebrate."

"Gifts are merely a symbol of offering faith. The greatest gift you can give is the gift of faith; it is more important than all the material possessions in the world."

"Well, the least you could do is wear some decent clothes so you can let people see that you know it's Christmas."

"I feel no need to advertise my faith. I love God and He knows it. What's left?"

"AH, the trouble with you is you have all these crazy ideals that won't get you anywhere. Why, if I had not fought my way up, I would have been crushed long ago. You have to fight your way in this world."

With a sympathetic smile, the lad replied, "If you have faith, you don't have to fight anything"; and with a reverent, "May God bless you," he left.

"These hippies, they're all the same; all have these crazy ideas. Come on, let's go home: I'm hungry."

Amherst's Own Christmas Tree

Exchange Students Compare Customs

By JOAN FITZGERALD

Mistletoe is a strange Christmas decoration to Liu-Mai Chiang, an exchange student from Taiwan. And Norma Rivera, a graduate student in home economics from the Philippines, was amazed by the number of Santa Clauses on New York street corners.

According to both girls however, Christmas customs are much the same in the United States and their own countries. In Taiwan and the Philippines, families decorate Christmas trees and the streets are brightly lit. Gifts are exchanged. The mailman's bag is heavy with Christmas greetings and letters to Saint Nick.

Although Miss Chiang is not a Christian, her family celebrates Christmas because her "mother thinks the decorations are pretty," and the small children love the presents brought by what they call the Old Man of Christmas.

"Christmas is great at home. It is for the children and the church," says Miss Rivera. Since most of the Filipino population is Catholic, the religious aspects of the holiday are stressed. Beginning Dec. 8, midnight Masses are held nightly in all the churches.

Norma, a protestant, misses the church activities in which she participated at home—Christmas parties for children, religious pageants and caroling. Singing in the Philippines, explains Miss Rivera, is done to raise funds for church building. The singers dress in choral robes and carry candles. Sometimes a small organ is transported from place to place by car.

The government has banned cutting down pine trees so the Filipinos have had to improvise. Although some families buy tinsel trees, others are more imaginative. A very popular substitute for the evergreen, says Miss Rivera, is a tree constructed of driftwood, sometimes painted silver or gold. Another variation is a tree of chicken wire shaped into a cone and stuffed with cotton balls. Lights inside the frame shine softly through the cotton.

Liu-Mai's family does not have a Christmas feast, but the Rivera's eat Chinese ham, chicken and homemade bread. "And," exclaims Norma "chestnuts Christmas would not be complete without the chestnuts."

Miss Chiang will spend her first American Christmas in New Haven Conn. with another student from Taiwan who is studying physics at Yale. She says with excitement, "I will have to tell my friend about the mistletoe."

Miss Rivera will be visiting relatives in New York, which she says she doesn't like. She considers Amherst, however, "really beautiful in wintertime".

Southwest Residential College Abounds with Holiday Activity

By MARYBETH GIBB

The social committees of Southwest Residential College would make ideal "Santa's helpers" if a labor shortage ever develops in the frozen Northlands.

The past few weeks have found these and other residents planning and producing some new and successful holiday events in that corner of campus.

Being a brother-sister dorm has taken on new significance as joint festivities fulfill the program's purpose of providing opportunities for the residents of such dorms to get to know each other.

Last Thursday, JFK Lower and Coolidge Lower climaxed their innovative brother-sister angle on secret Santas with a party at JFK.

The same evening, a tree-trimming combined with folk singing faculty fellows united John Quincy Adams Lower and John Adams Lower in a brother-sister Christmas party. The next evening, Friday, John Adams had a dance open to the campus.

On Saturday, Crampton and JFK Upper joined forces at a closed party featuring a live band. And Sunday morning, the brothers from JFK were served breakfast by their sisters at Crampton.

Also on Saturday, traditional Christmas melodies were carolled throughout the campus and Amherst by the residents of George Washington Upper and Patterson House. After completing the two-hour route, which wound up in Southwest, the carollers had a dance at Patterson.

Feeling that Christmas is for children especially for orphaned children Melville and James Houses gave a party for 21 children from a school in Springfield Sunday afternoon, at Melville. They had obtained food, toys and transportation largely through donations of local merchants. The party proved to be "a successful effort to do something for someone else for a change," as one resident of Melville put it.

Finally, George Washington Middle and Coolidge Upper had an evening at Hatfield Barn Monday as the main event on their Christmas agenda.

In addition, throughout Southwest, and all over campus, each dorm has been trimming trees, decorating doors, playing secret Santa and partying as a dorm, as a corridor, and even individually, in the spirit of the season.

Lucia Explains Dorm Protection

By JOHN SHOEMAKER

When you go home for the Christmas holiday, will you feel secure about the safety of your possessions?

Are you afraid someone will steal your stamp collection; or your new book on unconventional sex behavior that you cannot bring home because your mother would die of shock?

Fear not, for Guy C. Lucia, security housing director, has taken all necessary precautions to protect your valuables. Security receptionists who are students at the University, will be on duty in the three dormitories that will be open during the holiday. Crabtree, Prince and Brett.

The residence halls are divided into six general areas. A fire and security guard will patrol each of the residence halls daily between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. The guards, whose duties include responsibility for fire and security protection in residential and adjacent areas, enforce applicable rules and regulations. They are also in radio contact with a sergeant on duty at the police station. The sergeant is in radio contact with University police cruisers which can be dispatched to assist in any area.

All arrangements allow for maximum security in each residence area throughout the night.

University police are on duty 24 hours a day.

Lucia told the Daily Collegian there has been no trouble in the past and does not expect any this year.

However, one small request is in order—please lock your doors before leaving campus.

Campus Police Must Remain

by SANDY BORNSTEIN

With Christmas vacation nearing, the main topic of conversation is: "When and how are you going home for vacation?" The campus for the most part will be barren, but the campus police must remain here.

The force maintains a skeleton crew on the premise that "there is hardly ever any trouble," according to Chief Alexander Blasco. Nevertheless, the campus must be covered for theft and fires.

There are always students remaining on campus, usually between 200 and 300 over the Christmas holidays. The two dorms that remain open must be patrolled periodically. In addition, the occasional conferences here keep the few police on duty relatively busy. "There's never a dull moment," says Chief Blasco.

During the longer vacations, a rotation system of work is set up. Those who had worked earlier holidays this year probably will get off for Christmas. Most likely an officer who worked Christmas 1966 will have the day off this year. Moreover, many officers have the opportunity to take their vacation at this time, since only the bare force is needed.

A Few Good Tips

Bad Weather Driving

Washington, D. C. (ED) — If there was one rule during bad weather days of early automotive history it was this: When it rained or snowed you didn't take the car out. Because tires of those days had no treads and because most drivers knew virtually nothing about the workings of their "horseless carriages," it was all too easy to get stuck in mud or snow.

Today, many motorists are still figuratively driving in the era of the Model "T." Misconceptions about bad weather driving are popular because some drivers haven't kept up with the wide range of available automobile accessories and modern rules for defensive driving in the snow or rain.

For instance, it may surprise you to know that instead of dreading rain, many professional drivers welcome it. They believe it breaks the monotony of driving on a dry, traffic-jammed highway. However, they realize a rainy driving situation calls for extra caution. As soon as rain starts falling, you should switch on your lights. Because rain and mud spatters tend to camouflage cars, your auto may be almost invisible unless other drivers see your lights.

In all kinds of bad weather, you should drive as if you had no brakes. Sudden braking in rain or snow will cause skids—so use your brakes sparingly. If you should go into a skid, do more than follow the standard advice of trying to steer into it. Pump the brakes in the following way: Stab the brakes for a split second, then stab the brakes again. Keep following this stab and release pattern and you'll be able to control the car a little better each time the brakes are released. And you'll stop sooner and more safely.

Safe tires are the most important accessories you can have for bad weather driving. According to the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Association, the Men Who Know Best, retreaded snow tires are a most economical and safe choice. Because each tire is carefully inspected before it's retread there's little chance of failure. And when the new treads are put on, you're sure of enough traction for bad and good weather driving.

Studded tires are another choice for winter driving. One of the most recent developments, these tires have tiny metal studs inserted into the treads to help them grip icy and snow-covered roads. Recent studies have proven that with studded tires, a driver's stopping distance on glare ice can be improved as much as 60%. Studded tires are accepted in most of the United States as a safety feature with only one snow tire state, Virginia, having legislation against it. Now, however, with the wealth of information proving the worth of studded tires, some states are considering revising their laws.

For safety's sake, you should brush up your automotive know-how before the first snow falls. If you're not sure of what to do in bad weather situations, here's a quickie quiz, prepared and researched by The Men Who Know Tires Best, your independent tire dealer. Give yourself 10 points for each correct answer:

1. If you're going 20 m.p.h. on glare ice, what's your stopping distance?
   (a) 151 feet (b) 161 feet (c) 171 feet
2. When is driving in the rain most critical?
   (a) during the first ½ hour (b) after the first ½ hour (c) after the rain is over
3. What is best for driving out of a snow bank?
   (a) keeping the car in low gear (b) rocking fore and back to get traction (c) melting snow by spinning tires
4. When is it more advisable to ride on a flat than to stop?
   (a) when it's raining (b) when the tire's been punctured by a nail (c) when there's no escape shoulder on a high-speed highway
5. What's the best way of checking tire treads yourself?
   (a) with a penny (b) with a magnifying glass (c) with a tape measure
6. If the edges are feathered on the side of each tread on your tires
   (a) your air pressure is too high (b) your air pressure is too low (c) front wheels may be out of alignment
7. Driving conditions are most hazardous on wet or icy roads at
   (a) zero degrees (b) 32 degrees (c) 38 degrees
8. Tires should be rotated
   (a) every 5,000 miles (b) every 10,000 miles (c) every 15,000 miles
9. Retread tires can be driven
   (a) only under 40 miles an hour (b) only under 50 miles an hour (c) at any safe speed
10. If you should go into a skid
    (a) try to steer in the direction of the skid and use a stab and release brake pattern (b) jam on the brakes and try to stop short (c) race the motor until the tires "grab"

ANSWERS

1. (b)
2. (a) During the first ½ hour when the rain mixes with oil from the road to create a slick condition.
3. (b) Use your motor from low to reverse to get enough traction from a rocking motion to get out of the snow bank.
4. (c) When there's no escape shoulder on a high-speed highway.
5. (a) Using a penny, insert it into the tire treads. If the tread is worn you'll be able to see Lincoln's head.
6. (c)
7. (b)
8. (a) The National Tire Dealers & Retreaders Association suggests you rotate the tires every 5,000 miles.
9. (c) Retread tires are fine at any safe speed.
10. (a)

Is There Really a Santa Claus?

By CHARLOTTE BOYD

Is there really a Santa Claus?

In introductory philosophy classes many students have learned that Socrates believed that nothing could exist without the mind since the mind was the site of existence. The word "mind" here means the area of thoughts, life being generated through the thought processes. Socrates felt that when a subject was being thought upon, then, at that moment, it was in existence. If this master philospher was asked the question, is there really a Santa Claus? he would have no doubt to the answer.

Before he answered, Socrates would have restated the question. Does Santa Claus Exist?

According to Socrate's theory Santa Claus definetly exists one month every year-December. At this time every greedy little child is vividly thinking about jolly old fat Santa Claus loaded down with a bag of toys and candy. When Santa Claus is being thought about he is then in existence.

If we admit Santa Claus does exist then, are we contradicting ourselves in saying that he does not exist. No, usually Santa Claus is not thought of other than in the month of December. When he is not being thought of then he does not exist. Therefore we can conclude that Santa Claus is non-existent January thru November unless there is an epidemic of greedy little children.

Is there really a Santa Claus? It all depends on what time of the year it is.

Quad Displays Seasonal Signs

By DOUGLAS HINCKLEY

If you'd like to know "what's happening" on the college scene for Christmas, just take a walk through the Quadrangle and notice some of the window displays. In order to avoid being picked up as a Peeping Tom, however, be discreet in your window watching.

For those who believe that the Quad's only claim to fame is its half-lighted Christmas tree, perhaps a brief run-down of this year's crowd pleasers will dispel those doubts.

Things have been moving rather slowly down at Johnson, Hamlin, and Leach Houses, but snowflakes and frosted windows are much in evidence. Dwight House has added a Christmas wreath over the main entrance and a few strings of lights. Does that explain the mystery of the vanishing Christmas tree lights?

The girls of Knowlton House are really in the spirit (though perhaps not the Christmas spirit) with their road sign — "Men Working in Trees". There must be some deep psychological meaning to that one.

The men from Thatcher Hall are noticeably missing from this list. Perhaps the example of their feminine neighbors will prompt them to improve upon that single red light on the fourth floor.

The Season For Travel

Redmen Head for Connecticut Classic

By RICHARD LANE

The Yuletide season is here again, and for the University of Massachusetts basketball team that means tournament play and travel time. Varsity Coach Jack Leamon has already announced his team's plans to play in the Connecticut Classic at Storrs on Dec. 28 and 29. Opponents will be William & Mary and Texas Christian University.

This year's tourney schedule is more limited in distance and competition compared with last December when Leamon's squad went to the Boston Garden ad Oklahoma City.

The varsity leader who says he has a real fine basketball team, stated in an interview with the Collegian, however, that he still expects to meet "excellent" opposition and will face the tournament cautiously "as you always do."

He pointed out that Southern Conference William & Mary is expected to have "its best season ever, while Texas Christian (of the Southwest Conference) has "everyone back" from last season's club.

Another factor to be considered is that the Redmen will be facing their tourney opponents for the first time, having only scout's reports to go by. Leaman stated that this would affect his "matchup" of individual players and he will "plan accordingly."

"It wil be rough," he added. But "we hope to do alright, being close to home."

While teams and tournaments change, Leamon emphasized, one aspect of holiday basketball does not. This is the fact that the Redmen will be home for Christmas Day itself.

After their home court encounter with Rider College tonight the team will break up until the 26th, when they will practice, and go to Storrs the following day.

"We always spend Christmas at home," the coach commented. "There is never a tournament at Christmas itself anyway," Leamon added. He did point out that the latest he has kept a team before Christmas was the night before itself.

Coach Leamon stated that his players don't mind playing ball during their vacation. "Athletes like to compete. My boys would as soon play basketball as do anything else."

Furthermore, "It's a nice time (for them) and fills in the vacation well."

Tournaments are good for "other things besides basketball —they are a "tremendous learning experience for the kids."

He pointed to the sightseeing (during the earlier Steel Bowl Tournament in Pittsburgh the "Dapper Dan" Club provided a movie and tour of the city for the teams), travel (the first airplane flight for some) as well as the chance to discuss with players on the opposing team different athletic and academic programs.

Leamon listed three reasons for participating in the Connecticut Classic and other tournaments.

A tournament, at least for the Redmen, breaks a long layoff. Without the Connecticut trip, Leamon's squad would be out of court action more than a month, Dec. 19 - Jan. 25.

It also serves as a financial gain.

Finally, a tournament is a reward for the "kids hardwork."

And the players are not the only ones who like the idea of these tilts, "Coaches enjoy them as much as the boys," stated Leamon. "They are the real fun part of basketball."

But all is not fun and travel. With "no books" during the tourney's play, the team is able to "think of nothing but basketball," said Leamon. "It brings the team closer together as a family and develops maturity in them."

When Jack Leamon goes to Storrs after Christmas he has set four aims for himself and his team.

First of all, they will be out to win; second to play with "100% ability," and next to gain "a good learning experience." Lastly, the Redmen five will be out to "enjoy ourselves."

Would tournament success in Connecticut be in turn a Merry Christmas gift for Coach Jack Leamon?

"Gosh, yes. For the coach, boys and everybody there is nothing like winning. It's the greatest feeling in the world," he laughed.

And that goes for any contest, any time of year, according to The Man.

YOU'D BETTER NOT MARCH

(tune: "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town")

You'd better not march, you shouldn't protest,
Or carry a sign, I'm telling you why —
General Hershey's coming to town.
He's making a list, checking it twice,
Gonna find out who's naughty and nice.
General Hershey's coming to town.

He sees you when you picket,
He knows who burns his card,
He knows if you've said, "I want peace."
So shut up and play it smart.

Oh, you'd better not march, you shouldn't protest,
Or carry a sign, I'm telling you why —
General Hershey's coming to town.

University Bookstore Offers Unique Gift Selections

by GEORGE F. CERULO

The University Bookstore has been undergoing the onslaught of yule-spirited buyers.

"Cards, paper decorations, records, stuffed animals and school-stamped items are the biggest sellers this year," says Manager Winthrop L. Cummings.

The Daily Collegian has noticed the unusual selection of stuffed toys that the store has on display. They include:

A goat named Billy — spooks that look "willy," Droopy eared cockers and penny bank witch doctors.
The worry wart dog — and hanging green frog,
Beatniks that dangle and "watchamacallit fangles."

Cummings anticipates bigger sales this year because of the increased student enrollment. "The week of the 18th," he said, "will probably be the biggest week." He has made adjustments in the store employee work schedule in order to handle the added number of student shoppers. A free gift wrapping counter is available to all students who make purchases.

Arrangements were made by Cummings to have the 10th annual Book and Print Fair in December to give gift-minded students a wider selection of books, prints, frames, posters and records at discount prices. "Most of the items were ordered especially for the fair," said Cummings.

In an effort to give students an opportunity to buy last minute gifts, the store will remain open until the 22nd, according to Cummings. After then, the store will close for inventory.

Basketball, Hockey Teams To See Holiday Action

by WALTER STACHURA

All members of UMass athletic teams will spend at least Christmas day at home during the vacation period, according to their coaches.

Besides the basketball team, only the varsity hockey squad will see action during the holidays. The rest of the teams, except track, will be off until the start of the second semester.

Hockey coach Jack Canniff's skaters will see action in two holiday tournaments. The first is the Cod Fish Bowl at the Boston Arena Dec. 20-21 with Boston State, Salem State and Ohio University participating.

The Yankee Conference Tournament will take place Dec. 27-28 at the University of Vermont. UMass will face New Hampshire in the opening game.

Canniff indicated that the team will break up after the Boston tournament to spend Christmas at home. The players will return for one practice Dec. 26 before going to Vermont.

Freshman hockey Coach Eddie Polchopek said his team will have no practices until intersession in preparation for a Feb. 1 game at Salem State.

Varsity and freshman tracksters will prepare for the K. of C. meet at Boston Jan. 13. However, Coach Kenneth O'Brien plans no practice during vacation and only informal workouts during the exam period.

Gymnastics Coach Krik Kjeldsen reported his team will not practice until the intersession break in preparation for a Jan. 27 home meet against Penn State. He added that the same schedule will hold for freshman and women's gymnastics.

Varsity and freshman wrestling are in the same situation as gymnastics. These teams will resume practice during intersession, the varsity journeying to Williams Jan. 27 while the freshmen will face Central Conn. Feb. 3 at home.

Varsity swimming Coach Joe Rogers plans a similar schedule of practice. The varsity's next competition will be Feb. 10 at Vermont.

Fraternity Row Shows Spirit

by JANICE ALBERGHENE

Fraternity row has looked undecided until this weekend about Christmas this year. The houses which decorated early maintained Christmas spirit with traditional motifs.

Sigma Sigma Sigma, with a candle and cheery red lettering, wishes the campus a Merry Christmas. Next door, Theta Chi celebrates Christmas with a tree lighted in blue and blue candles. Sigma Delta Tau displays its tinseled tree in a window, as does Iota Gamma Upsilon, located a few streets over on Lincoln Ave.

Tau Kappa Epsilon is decorated with a window featuring multicolored blinking lights. Across the street, Lambda Chi Alpha is complementary with its own lighted window and ornamented tree. Q.T.V. also has a tree in the window, along with red candles on its front door.

Alpha Chi Omega and Kappa Kappa Gamma, on Nutting Avenue, are among the many houses with lighted candles in their windows. The large green wreath on Alpha Chi's front door, and the tree in Kappa's window, provide additional Christmas decoration.

Obligated But Unable

To the editor:

I cannot believe that the present discussion of the Vietnam War is really aimed at that war.

There is a far wider issue involved, and I think it is this: Is the U.S.A. able and willing to assume the world leadership once wielded by Britain, now that Britain is no longer able to wield it?

Discussion about the Vietnam War is nothing but the cover under which that wider issue is being debated. Those who favor continued U.S. action in Vietnam are people who, consciously or subconsciously, react positively to the question asked above. Opponents are demonstrating their negative reaction to the same question.

A desire for world leadership has been visible throughout U.S. history. This trend has always been opposed by isolationism, and at times the latter has been the stronger. Thus, at the end of World War II, the U.S.A. virtually had world leadership thrust into its hands. It refused to take it up, and in the process invented all kinds of excuses for the refusal. As I see it, much of the political degeneracy that is now so visible in this country has been deliberately created by people bent at all costs on preventing this country from assuming global leadership.

But then it may be asked: Is the U.S.A. really able to lead? My answer is yes and no; economically and militarily yes; morally no. And why the negative reply on the last count? Because the religious and philosophical foundations upon which this nation was built are inadequate.

Is this country bound to be indefinitely mired in the impossibility of being both obligated and yet unable to lead? My answer is no: the way out is that of a revision of religious and philosophical foundations. Philosophers and historians, sharpen your pens.

The responsibility of the historian to be impartial and fair, swayed neither by the interests of nationality or class, religion or government, demands that he understand his opponents so much better than they do themselves as to be able to improve their case for them.—Lord Acton

So keep your poor imitation of soul, and keep your white supremacy and your stagnated world of "free" people, but remember that when one boy makes it another will follow. He may not be Black, but he will be different, and he will enforce his power as you enforce yours. So be cool baby!

'Union' Makes Mistakes, Too

To the editor:

It is flattering, of course, to find that someone reads our dowdy little publication, The Springfield Union. Mr. Alex Newhall's letter of Dec. 13 to the Collegian, however, leaves me to doubt his reading consistency.

Mr. Newhall states, in part: "The Union carried an article indicating Northampton was in for more protests..." The demonstrations were supposedly to come in reprisal for Mr. Faulkner's refusal to appear on a panel at a "dialogue" meeting. So far, so good. The article did appear on Dec. 7. But the New York Times can be wrong, and so can we. The article stemmed from a misunderstood quote. The next day, Dec. 8, an article of equal length appeared in the first section, stating, "There is not, nor have there ever been plans to resume demonstrations in Northampton."

We'll suppose Mr. Newhall neglected to read the Dec. 8 edition.

The truth is there is very little dialogue of any consequence going on simply because the draft board refuses to take part in it. And so Newhall, I ask you, do the "residents" really believe in a dialogue in preference to misunderstanding? If the demonstrators were unreasonable, in the beginning, to demand the resignation of the board, who is being unreasonable now?

Prof Enlightens Student

To the editor

In regard to Dr. Kern's letter concerning the University's new "ceremonial mace," featured in the Dec. 15 Daily Collegian, I too was quite amused (over the letter that is). "Enlightened" may be a more appropriate term to characterize my position.

You may find this hard to believe, but I was never aware of the fact that the University's new mace was not a true mace at all but rather an object having "an amazing similarity to the Roman fasces that were adopted by Mussolini for Fascist Italy in the 1920's."

To the editor:

I would like to compliment the supervisors at Dining Commons #7. The breakfast on Thursday was well worth attending. I think it was a great idea to give the students some meat to go with the eggs. If there were more breakfasts like this one, I am sure that I would attend breakfast more often. Thank you.

Westfield St. Are Victims

Frosh Win Comeback 72-68 Victory

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

Roaring back from a 9 point deficit with 3:59 to go, the UMass freshman basketball team defeated the Westfield State junior varsity, 72-68, Saturday afternoon at the Cage. Ken Mathias paced the Little Redmen scoring with 20 points, while Victor Anop of the losers led all scorers with 28.

UMass found itself in quite a tough situation as the Westfield shooters were red-hot from outside. The frosh were also hampered by the absence of Lou Griffith, due to illness and the loss of Bob Dempsey, starting guard, due to an ankle injury, suffered in the second half.

However, the sparkling play of two substitutes, Frank Shaffield, who started in place of Griffith, and Jon Kruper, who seeing his first extensive action of the year, subbed for the injured Dempsey, plus the successful employment of a zone press spelled victory, for the frosh.

Westfield State led from the outset, never trailing until UMass took the lead with only 1:15 remaining in the ballgame. The Westfield team held nine-point leads on two occasions in the first half, with the scoring of Kruper and Mathias keeping the Little Redmen close. Westfield led at halftime 39-33, the scoring of Victor Anop being the spark.

The second half saw Westfield maintain their hot shooting and this, coupled with the injury to Dempsey, had the Little Redmen on the ropes.

With about seven minutes left, Coach Pete Broaca employed a 3-1-1 zone press. However, Westfield was still able to hit their outside shots, running off six straight points, to take a nine point lead with only four minutes left. Jon Kruper also fouled out at this time and the Little Redmen seemingly were headed for their second consecutive loss.

However, UMass had the talent to pull this game out, with a clutch, last-ditch effort. Bill Nelson did a fine job filling in for Kruper and Jim Ryan provided the clutch scoring.

Ryan hit a foul shot with 1:49 left to cut the lead to one. The Little Redmen had previously gone on an eight point run to get back in the ballgame. Mathias and Bill Greeley supported Ryan.

Finally with 1:15 left, Ryan hit a 20 foot jumper from the left corner to put UMass ahead to stay. Foul shots by Mathias, Greeley and Ryan iced the game in the closing seconds.

Frosh Puckmen Are Iced By New Prep, 5-3

By RICH FRANKLIN
Staff Reporter

Dropping their second straight game at Orr Rink Friday night, the UMass Freshman hockey was defeated by a strong skating club from New Prep 5-3. The loss leaves UMass at 1-2 on the season.

New Prep struck early and fast. They put three scores in the net before Mass could get untracked in the first period. Finally, Jerry Burke broke loose at 3:56 to beat Prep's goalie for a score with Brian Corkery helping out. UMass' second tally came with virtually no time left on the clock as Burke scored his second of the night, assists going to Mike Murray and Paul Riley.

Trailing, 3-2, in the second period UMass tried to even things up but they could not sustain any kind of attack. New Prep didn't let any chances slip by and put two more goals between the pipes to lead 5-2.

The frosh managed one more score in the third period. At 1:57 of the period, Ken Reddick closed out the scoring on an assist from Mike Fallon.

The Little Redmen have gotten off to a dismal start of what appeared to be a good season. They don't play again until February 1, when they make a trip to Salem State so they have some time on their hands to try to regroup.

real strong and experienced C. Madison.

Denny, who hails from Westford, Mass., put up a great fight but dropped a 5-3 decision. Bob Willman, from Teaneck, N. J., continued to exhibit powerful control of his opponents at the 177 lb. class and defeated a stubborn M. Talbert 8-3.

George Zguris from Shirley, N. Y. did quite a job on R. Borges in the 191 lb. class before pressing his shoulders to the mat.

Frosh Gymnasts Defeat Temple

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Led by a strong all-round effort by Norman Vexler, the UMass freshman gymnastics team defeated Temple University, 130.70-93, in action on Saturday. It was a fine performance by the UMass team.

Vexler, in a superb show, scored 46.25 points himself, almost a third of the entire team total. He was especially strong in the side horse, rings, and high bar events in which he scored over eight.

In the rings, Steve Margil gave ample support to Vexler. He did well enough to outscore Vexler. The long horse was also well-filled, with Ed Jones scoring 8.05.

In the parallel bars, Mike Pelaquin and Bob Henry scored valuable points for the Little Redmen. The floor exercises saw two UMass performers tie with identical 7.08 scores. They were Ken Perkins and Glenn Sildert.

The entire side horse team, in the words of Coach Julius Gundershein, "did an outstanding job". Tim Chase scored a 7.0, Rick Riley scored a 7.5 and Norman Vexler scored a 8.1.

The next freshman gymnastic meet will be February 3 at West Point, New York against the Army Plebes.

Hoopsters End Loss Skein, Ellerbrook Pours In 22

By STEVE ROSS
Staff Reporter

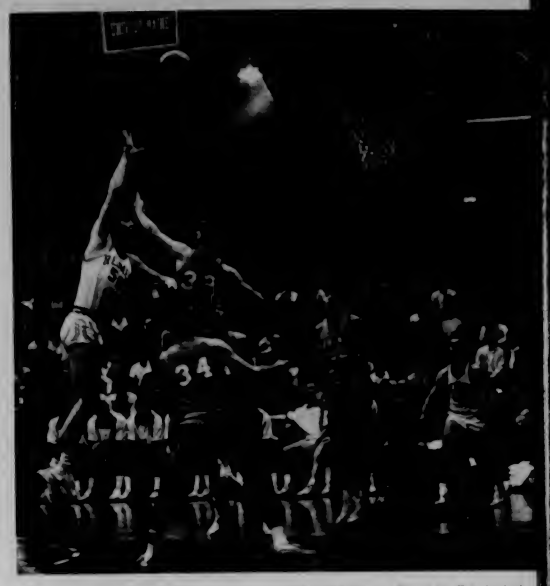
An afternoon crowd of 1400 saw the Redmen end a four game losing streak as they toppled Maine, 78-39. In a game that saw many unusual occurances, Massachusetts dominated the backboards to score a convincing win. The Redmen are now 2-4 overall and 2-1 in conference play.

e-sadv ructiv me(2tLt csxcocoo

In the first half the Redmen didn't shoot well, but they shot often. The outside shooting was handled by Ray Ellerbrook. It wasn't unusual to see the Redmen take two or three shots before scoring. UMass shot for a .356 percentage while Maine was slightly poorer with a .353 mark.

Ellerbrook, Joe DiSarcina, and Peter Gayeska combined to give the team an 18-8 lead in the first nine minutes. Maine used a zone that was quickly solved by Ellerbrook. The Redmen worked the ball into the post and out until Ellerbrook was open in the corner. It usually resulted in two points.

The Redmen also employed a double low post to take advantage of their huge height advantage. Bill Tindall and Gayeska played to either side of the lane. UMass left the floor with a 37-27 lead.



Maine was awful in the second half. They missed 30 of 34 field goal attempts, and failed to score for the final eight minutes. On the other hand the Redmen made a startling discovery in that they have another good big man in Dave Samuelson.

Samuelson's play was necessitated by the ejection of Gayeska with 11:11 to play. Gayeska was struggling for a rebound with Maine's Hugh Campbell, and in the process found his arms wrapped around Campbell's head. Campbell angrily shoved Gayeska, and Peter retaliated with a backhand slap. Referee Stan Benjamin invited Peter to view the remainder of the game from a front row seat.

He saw quite a show.Samuelson from TEP and frat brother Ellerbrook were tossing them in from everywhere, and the Redmen outscored the Black Bears 24-5. Ellerbrook finished with 22, Gayeska 14, DiSarcina, Tindall, and Samuelson 10 each. Tindall had 15 rebounds and Gayeska 12. Samuelson played only 11 minutes.

Redmen Rantings— Jack Leaman said, "I'll get off a losing streak any way I can. I'm glad that it's over." No one liked performing in the afternoon. Rick Perkins summed it up when he said, "We're geared for night action. None of us have played in the afternoon since high school." Samuelson said "I was playing over my head today"

Leaman singled out Samuelson and Ellerbrook for their play while Maine coach didn't feel like talking at all.. UMass tying their all time record. They pulled in 78 caroms.

WATCH THE HAND I GET FOR THIS ONE—Pete Gayeska (50) hooks over the outstretched hand of Hugh Campbell (32) for a score. Maine players include Jim Stephenson (34) and Greg Burns (52). Rick Perkins (20) moves in for any rebound.

BOB LECLAIR
Side-horse winner

Gymnasts Are Defeated, 183-66, By Temple U.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Performing without its finest all-around performer in Joe Reed, who was sidelined with an injured wrist, the UMass varsity gymnastics team was defeated by Temple University, 183-166 in a meet held on Saturday. Temple is ranked as one of the two top teams in the East.

The UMass team was able to garner three first places. Senior tri-captain, Bob Leclair won first place in the side horse competition, scoring a fine 9.15. Dick Del Gallo took first place in the rings competition, scoring a 9.2. Both Del Gallo and Leclair are undefeated in their events this season.

The other Redman first place was won by Michael Kasavana, as the sophomore won the trampoline event with a 8.55 score. No other Redman were able to finish in the top two spots.

Coach Eric Kjeldsen was not completely disappointed by the defeat. He said, "It was a reasonably good performance considering, that we were without our all-around performer."

Temple was also hampered by the loss of a fine all-around competitor, Pete Difierio, who had an injured knee. Coach Kjeldsen had this to say about the Temole team. "They have a lot of depth and should be either number one or two in the league.

The gymnasts go into action on January 27 when they face Penn. State at Curry Hicks Cage.

Frosh Wrestlers Deck URI, 43-8

The frosh wrestlers continue undefeated as they decked the URI frosh in convincing fashion, 43-8, at Boyden Gym as a prelim to the varsity action last Saturday night. The Little Redmen recorded six straight pins in the lightweight action before losing two bouts in the middle weight, then continued with three wins in the heavies.

Wrestling at the 115 lb. class, Nick DiDomenico from Belleville, N. J. wasted little time finding M. Steiman's weakness and pinned him in 1:45 of the first period. At 123 lbs., Rick Tyma from Levittown, Pa. struggled with a strong opponent in F. Martin, but caught up and pinned him in the third period.

John Paltrineri, brother of varsity captain Gene Paltrineri, of Wellesley, Mass. showed real aggressiveness and made R. Muller of the Rams look like a novice as he pinned him in 4:40 of his 130 lb. bout. At 137 lbs. Sam Norod was all business as he punished G. Helmken for 4:34 minutes, the time of the pin. Sam is from Dover, N. J.

Wrestling at 145 lbs. Dan Plunkett, from Mineola, N. Y. showed some classic leg wrestling on his opponent T. Squlers, and finally pinned him with a guillotine in the third period. Marc Jacobson who halls from White Plains, N. Y. met a stubborn T. Koskowski, but scored freely leading 9-2 when he caught him with a body press in 5:36 minutes.

Jim Guarino's record evened at 1-1 when he was pinned by the Ram Frosh in the third period of his bout. Jim is from Revere, Mass. Dennis Mulligan, wretling at 167 pounds met a

Grapplers Pin URI, 29-18

Showing more confidence each time they take to th mat, the varsity wrestlers' Saturday showing against Rhod Island was the most solid effort by the Redmen in the la couple years, as they won 29-18 at Boyden. The Redmen, le by Captain Gene Paltrineri, put the pressure on the Ram with their aggressive maneuvers and scored three pins, forfeit, and three decisions to three pins and one decisio for the opponents.

The UMass lightweights continued their domination of the opposition by building up a 16-3 lead by the end of Brian Urquharts 145 pound bout. Fred Fitzpatrick's 18-6 decision win and Alan Sgroi's second straight pin in the clutch made the score 24-8 and the Redmen were out of reach after the 167 lb. class.

Sgori stepped into the lineup against Amherst last Wednesday in an effort to bolster the middle weights. UMass lost twelve consecutive times at the 167 pound position before Alan stepped in to score two consecutive clinching pins.

Dave Wade got the ball rolling for the Redmen at his lightweight position with a pin over veteran R. Smith in 18 seconds of the second period. The bout was scoreless until Dave made his surprise kill from the top position. Bill Goodwin won his second straight match by decisioning G. Backstael in a convincing 8-2 manner.

Paul Pearl ran into a Ram a little too tough to handle and came out on the short end of a 19-8 decision. Paul, a beginner this year, shows great strengt and stamina, but could not co with the skill of his opponen

Captain Gene Paltrineri ran i to a stubborn opponent in 1 pound T. Frey and had to wo hard for a 5-0 decision. In one the best contested bouts of t evening, there was no scoring the bout until "Mean Gen scored a near fall late in t third period, and two minut riding time for his five point

Brian Urquhart and Mike M Kenna traded weight classes, a perhaps they also traded a of fate at the same time. Bri dropped to the 145 lb. class a won his first bout of the year a convincing fashion pinning Pearce in 7:00 minutes.

It looked like a good thing f Mike McKenna when he mov up to the 152 lb. bracket for t first time as he completely d minated G. Champlin for t first three minutes of his bou Leading 5-0 and putting on t pressure Mike made a mistak and got caught in an overhe body press.

Fred Fitzpatrick scored t points in the first, five in t second, ten in the third, plus t points for riding time for a fi 18-6 decision over an experienc M. Thomas. Alan Sgroi then p the meet on ice with his stu ning pin in 49 seconds, the fas est pin for any Redman t year.

Ernie Smith continues to r into studs at the 177 pound cla and C. Regula a bigger and mo experienced foe caught Ernie a body press midway in the s ond period. Ernie was traili 6-0 at the time.

Dick Gnatek subing for the i jured Bob Spousta wrestled wh was probably his best bout of h young career but couldn't ke up to the strong and experienc D. Nordstom. It was all counte ing for Dick as he was traili 13-4 when Nordstom caught hi in a body press with 1:19 r maining in the eight minute bou

Glenn Cummins never bro a sweat, and he seemed to most enjoy it that way, as h arm was raised for a forfeit the Rams couldn't provide heavyweight opponent.

UMass Trustees Propose Dental and Law Schools

By RICHARD S. KLINE
News Editor

The UMass Board of Trustees met yesterday at Whitmore Hall in their first meeting since a meeting a month ago at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston.

Among the problems and issues discussed were: the fiscal autonomy of the University, a new marine science lab for the University, a dental school as a part of the med school in Worcester, policies on picketing, and the possibility of establishing a law school at the University.

It was reported that UM Pres. John Lederle and others went to Washington last Friday and spoke with Sens. Edward Brooke and Edward Kennedy and Rep. Silvio Conte concerning grants being withheld from the UM Med School in Worcester.

Explaining the situation of the med school was its Dean, who reported that the school now owns two warehouses in Worcester which will be used for academic purposes. It was further reported that the reason for the most recent refusal of funds by the federal government was that the space allocated for the faculty of the school (for research and lab facilities) was too large.

Pres. Lederle stated that, unfortunately, the State legislature does not understand what the Trustees bring to them. Therefore, when a bill which is brought to the legislature comes out changed, the University cannot get federal grants. "We cannot," the president said, "get federal grants if the legislature keeps its restrictive attitude."

Concerning the fiscal autonomy of the University, Dean of Administration Leo Redfern pointed out that if the University did not have it then it would no longer control physical expenditures, and that the judgments of the State officials would be able to override the findings of principal investigators on University projects.

Also pointed out by the Dean was a point of legality. "Federal grants," he said, "are not funds for the Commonwealth, but for the individual institution to which they are granted." He also pointed out that no other state university is hampered in such a way. Approximately $25,000 in UM money would be immediately affected.

The board gave the go-ahead to the administrators of the University to negotiate for a marine science lab station with the U. S. Coast Guard at Dolliver Neck in Gloucester.

The action followed a report by UM Grad School Dean Edward Moore, listing the advantages of the site as a base for the University's new grad-level Marine Sciences program and other related studies.

The site could be acquired from the Coast Guard at no cost to the University. The station, comprising less than two acres and housing three buildings, is scheduled to be phased out as a Coast Guard Station.

The proposed agreement calls for the Coast Guard to phase out its operations at the site and the University to phase in over a five year period. According to Moore, "As it now exists, the site could be used at once by research teams of stu-

Air Force Jet Crashes Into Arizona Store

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—An F4C Phantom jet from Davis Monthan Air Force Base crashed into a crowded supermarket here Monday evening during the rush hour.

Five persons were reported dead in a report to the Arizona Daily Star.

The plane had just taken off from the base on a routine practice mission.

Firemen at the scene said the plane exploded upon impact and the market was in flames. There was no estimate available on the number of persons inside.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE COMMITTEE OPEN HEARINGS

To give every member of the University community the opportunity to raise questions, contribute ideas, make suggestions and discuss proposals of the University College Report, the University College Committee has scheduled an open hearing for today at 8:00 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. All students, faculty and staff are invited to attend.

Copies of the University College Committee Report are available in the Office of the Provost.

UMass Debate Team Wins 68% of Matches This Year

The weekend of December 9, the University Debate Team brought home 7 trophies. In total, the team scored 27-15 on a win loss record to wind up one of the most successful semesters of debating in many years.

Heading the list of accomplishments are the names of Steve Daggett and Marlene Fine. Attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Invitational Debate Tournament, Marlene and Steve swept the whole tournament to win over schools such as William & Mary, Western Reserve, Duquense and in the final round clobbered West Point in a unanimous 7-0 decision of the judges to win the tournament; Steve also placed as second best tournament speaker and was awarded a silver mug. The coach of the team was also awarded a trophy for being the best of the coaches. Also attending the same tournament were John Putnam and Sue Zwilling who established a respectable record for themselves at M.I.T.

At St. Anselms College, Bob Rutkiewicz and Phil Doyle scored a 4-1 record to place second negative team for the tournament. Of the 68 debaters at the college Bob came in second speaker and Phil scored as fourth. Also attending the same tournament were Tim Hynes and Kevin Cronin who defeated Suffolk University.

At Iona College, Jim Tripp and Matt Novak went defeated in six debates on the affirmative. Matt was awarded second place speaker for the tournament. This team was awarded second place silver bowl. Wendy Paige and Don Albano won four debates and lost only two. This score compiled with Matt and Jim's 6-0 record brought this unit to 10-2 record. With this score, the unit placed third for the tournament and received a trophy for their efforts.

This ends the debating for the first semester with a total of 72 wins and 49 losses which is a 60% winning record.

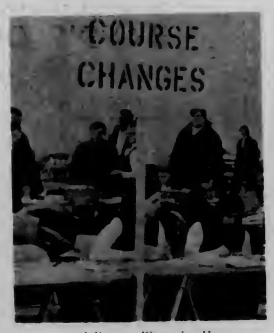
New System of Registration To Go Into Effect This January

Students will get a break next semester and the Scheduling and Registrar's offices will also breathe a little easier with the introduction of a two-day registration program.



Scheduled for January 23 and 24, the two day program will divide the tasks of initial registration and the course-change phase of the semi-annual operation into two days.

The first day

According to assistant registrar, Leslie Turner, the growth of the University has necessitated the change from one to two days. Turner also noted that the new schedule will also benefit the students by reducing confusion and allowing a twenty four hour period between initial registration and the add-drop phase for students to decide what courses, if any, they have to change.

Turner said, "This fall we handled between 800 and 900 students every half-hour in the auxiliary gym at Boyden. That was the maximum. Now the entire registration procedure will be in the large gym over a two day period.

Students will go to Boyden Tuesday the 23rd to complete the initial registration forms in the main gym. Students who wish to change their schedule will return to the main gym on Wednesday to consult with department representatives. Classes will begin on Thursday the 25th.

The second day

It was also noted that the registration procedure of rotating the reporting times on an alphabetical basis will also be continued. The only change is that reporting times will be assigned by the first digit of the student number.

He said that the same schedule of reporting will be used on both days in order to distribute the advantages of early course adding or dropping. Turner pointed out that all students get a crack at both early and late registrations during the four years at UMass.

Turner said that registration information and the time schedule for reporting will be mailed to student during intersession.

Liberal Abortion Bill Filed in State Legislature

By MARTY GLENDON
Staff Reporter

Law-medical expert, Neil L. Chayet, has filed a bill with the Massachusetts House which clearly defines lawful abortion for the first time in this state's history.

The bill, modeled after recent British legislation, contains two unusual provisions that would: 1) permit abortion if pregnancy would seriously impair the future well-being of the pregnant woman and/or her children. This clause would also allow abortion for the inability to afford a child, and 2) protect the attending physician against malpractice "accusations if he has conscientious objections to the performance of such an operation.

In another provision, a doctor would be obligated to abort a woman to save her life or prevent serious impairment to her physical or mental health.

Further unique provisions would permit abortion if: pregnancy resulted from any form of felonious intercourse including illicit relations with a girl below age 16.

Chayet's bill restricts justifiable abortions to licensed physicians and provides that "no abortion shall be performed unless two physicians, one of whom may be the person performing the abortion, shall have certified in writing the circumstances which they believe justify the abortion."

At present Massachusetts written law is virtually silent on abortion. The current laws declare unlawful abortion illegal without defining unlawful abortion.

To Our Subscribers

We are aware that delivery has been rather irregular lately, and herewith offer an apology.

We also wish to clarify a statement made in our last notice which, due to awkward wording, inferred that our mailing difficulties were caused by the Amherst Post Office. Stated more clearly, it would have been evident that the problem was at this end. Our apologies to the Amherst Postmaster.

Hope you'll be with us again next semester.

Faculty Group on Peace and War Submits Resolution on Campus Recruiting

(The Faculty Group on Peace and War has submitted the following resolution on suspending military recruiting on the UMass campus until Gen. Hershey rescinds his letter of October 26 to the Provost. The petition, signed by 138 faculty members, will be considered by the Faculty Senate at its meeting of Jan. 4.)

"We faculty members and professional staff of the University of Masachusetts request that you suspend all recruiting on campus by the military services until the Government gives assurances that students who demonstrate against them will not lose their draft deferments. Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey in his letter of October 26th to all members of the Selective Service system recommended that local boards upon receiving information of those who "in any way interfere illegally with . . . recruiting or its related activities" "may reopen the classification of the registrant, classify him anew, and if evidence of violation of the act and regulations is established, also declare the registrant to be a delinquent and to process him accordingly" (New York Times, November 9). At a news conference on November 2, General Hershey clarified this portion of the letter. "anyone liable to the draft who was caught interfering with recruitment would be offered the choice of military service or jail" (Ibid.). Since recent events make it appear likely that such demonstrations will take place here and since General Hershey's recommendation is clearly punitive and in violation of our students' rights to free speech and equal protection, we call upon you to suspend all military recruiting until General Hershey withdraws his recommendation.

"We wish to point out further that on November 21, Dr. Grayson Kirk, President of Columbia University, responding to a similar petition of 150 faculty members, suspended all military recruitment on the grounds urged in this petition. And immediately following the news release of General Hershey's letter, the College Council of Amherst College, a student-faculty advisory group, directed a letter to college president Calvin H. Plimpton, requesting that campus military recruitment be suspended "until it is made clear (by the Amherst College legal counsel) that the jurisdiction of local draft boards does not extend into civil law and college policy." On November 20, a petition to President Plimpton signed by 15 faculty and 429 students supported the College Council's recommendation, and last week the Amherst faculty voted as a body to support this resolution. Military recruiting has been rescheduled and suspended on the Amherst campus.

"We trust that the University of Massachusetts will not become a party to a policy which seems likely to be unconstitutional and is unjust to students, and which could injure our University."

WMUA Offers Programming For Final Exam Study Aid

As a service to our listeners, WMUA will present special programming during final examination week. This will consist of instrumental music to study by, and a series of special course reviews. Beginning on Wednesday, January 3, and continuing through Wednesday, January 12, WMUA will air interviews with professors in introductory level courses such as Government. These programs are intended to aid students who are studying for final exams in these subjects. During the review the professor will present a short lecture summarizing the main points of the course and answer telephone calls inquiring about course material. Listeners are invited to call in any questions pertaining to the course.

The dates for the course reviews are:

Wed., Jan. 3 7-9—Geology 101, 102, 103
Wed., Jan. 3 9-11—Physics 101
Thurs., Jan. 4 7-9 — Sociology 101
Fri., Jan. 5 7-9 — English 125, 126, 128
Mon., Jan. 8 7-9—Special 101
Mon., Jan. 8 9-11—Economics 125, 126
Wed., Jan. 10 7-9—Government 100
Wed., Jan. 10 9-11 —, Government 150

It is hoped that this special programming will be an aid to the students of the University so that WMUA may better serve them through final examinations week.

TRUSTEES STORY . . .

dents and staff interested in marine-oriented investigations. With subsequent development, this site could easily become one of the finest university-operated marine stations on the east coast.

A resolution on picketing which emulated from the Student Senate, was passed by the Trustees after some discussion and remarks by Student Senate President Jim Collins.

The bill coming out of the Student Senate (as reported in last Thursday's Daily Collegian) gave permission for protestors to demonstrate in lobbies of buildings and outside of them. The Faculty Senate changed this to allow demonstrations only outside of buildings and this was the way it was passed by the Board of Trustees. Collins said, however, that the matter would again be brought up before the Faculty Senate.

The possibility of establishing a UMass Law School was temporarily delayed as the trustees referred it to an investigation by the State Board of Education and the UMass administration.

In regard to the Law School, it was made known that Boston lawyers feel that there is a need for a law school in Wstern Mass. and in fact, a new law school in general. It was pointed out that few states don't have a public law school and that the basic regulation of allotment of proper space for the school can easily be met by the University.

"Having a dental school in Worcester would put teeth in the operation," said Provost of the University Oswald Tippo kiddingly concerning the proposed addition of a dental school to the planned Med School in that city. Others also felt that it would be a good idea and the resolution was referred to committee.

In other actions, the Trustees approved a $20,220,000 physical outlay program at Amherst for 1969, although this sum is subject to change. It was also noted at the meeting by Provost Tippo that the administration had received a petition signed by 150 faculty members requesting that all government recruiting on campus be temporarily suspended. This issue will be discussed at a later date.

Finally, accepted by the Trustees were the resignations of five people at UM-Amherst and requests for leaves of absence of two. The leaves of absence were granted to Prof. Robert Archer of the Civil Engineering Dept. and Mary Klonda of the Zoology Department.

The accepted resignations were those of Marie-Antoinette Bruaire of the Romance Language Dept., Robert Doherty of the History Dept., Florence Easly of the Uganda Project, Eugene Putala of the Botany Dept., and Robert Schweiker, a visiting lecturer in the Education Dept.

Nine Pledges Initiated by Alpha Zeta Honor Fraternity

On Dec. 9, Alpha Zeta, the honorary fraternity of the College of Agriculture, held its initiation for the Fall Pledge class. Those students accepted for membership in the fraternity must exhibit high qualities of scholarship, leadership and fellowship, and express an interest in promoting the progress and development of the field of agriculture.

Those initiated were David Almstrom, animal science; John Bagdon, plant & soil science; Charles Flinkstrom, forest management; John M. Greene, forest management; Peter MakHambera, animal science; Joel Stone, wildlife management; Edward Toth, wildlife management; James Thomson, agricultural economics and Donald Weagle, agricultural economics.

Following the initiation ceremony a banquet was held at the Grist Mill.

Presenting The Drinking Song for Sprite:

"ROAR, SOFT-DRINK, ROAR!"

(To the tune of "Barbara Fritchie")

Traditionally, a lusty, rousing fight song is de rigeur for every worthy cause and institution. But we wrote a song for Sprite anyway. We'd like you to sing it while drinking Sprite, though this may cause some choking and coughing. So what? It's all in good, clean fun. And speaking of good, clean things, what about the taste of Sprite? It's good. It's clean. However, good clean things may not exactly be your idea of jollies. In that case, remember that Sprite is also very refreshing. "Tart and tingling," in fact. And very collegiate. And maybe we'd better quit while we're ahead. So here it is. The Drinking Song For Sprite. And if you can get a group together to sing it--we'd be very surprised.

Roar, soft drink, roar!
You're the loudest soft drink
we ever sawr!
So tart and tingling, they couldn't keep you quiet:
The perfect drink, guy,
To sit and think by,
Or to bring instant refreshment
To any campus riot! Oooooooh--
Roar, soft drink, roar!
Flip your cap, hiss and bubble,
fizz and gush!
Oh we can't think
Of any drink
That we would rather sit with!
Or (if we feel like loitering)
to hang out in the strit with!
Or sleep through English lit' with!
Roar! Soft drink! Roar!
Yeahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh, SPRITE!

Sprite

SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The government declared the prime ministry vacant Monday night and Australian officials prepared to receive President Johnson at a memorial service Friday for Prime Minister Harold E. Holt.

Johnson will fly 10,173 miles to Melbourne to pay his respects to the man who led Australia as a strong supporter of U.S. policy in the Far East. The President will leave Washington at noon Tuesday and arrive about 30 hours later—Thursday—in Australia, on the other side of the International Date Line.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) —Doctors expressed concern Monday night for Louis Washkansky, the first human heart transplant patient, whose condition deteriorated after he seemed on the way to recovery.

Dr. Christian Barnard told an Italian interviewer that Washkansky was being treated for double pneumonia. In another statement to newsmen, Barnard indicated Washkansky's body may be rejecting the alien heart.

"We are disturbed about the patient's condition today," said the doctor who headed the team that performed the historic transplant Dec. 3.

Music Grads Present Recital At Bartlett

Three University of Massachusetts music majors will present a graduate recital on Tuesday, Dec. 19 at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

Donald L. Craig will be featured on the clarinet; Carol L. Van Nostrand will play the piano; and Margaret V. Wilmeth will play the cello.

Among the works that they will perform are Hindemith's Sonate, Debussy's Premier Rhapsody and Stravinsky's Three Pieces for Clarinet Solo. Following the intermission, the students will combine for four movements of Brahms Trio for Piano Clarinet and Cello, Op. 114 (1891).

Joanie Meets Santa At Christmas Party

by SHARON GALLANT and RON LABRECQUE

A children's Christmas party. Roget and Webster would find it a trying task to describe Joanie's delight in meeting Santa, to recreate in word the warmth of laughter and song, or to relate what the UMass volunteers felt as they watched the nurses help their young guests board the departing bus.

Joanie was one of 23 children from the Tagell Nursery at the Belchertown State School who were guests of the Class of '70 at a Christmas party held in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union Sunday.

Scenes of the party recurred at other spots on campus as the Sophomores joined a number of other student organizations who gave of themselves in order to brighten what might be the less than happy Christmas for some children in the Amherst area.

As each child arrived, he was "adopted" for the afternoon by a volunteer equipped with an endless supply of ice cream, cookies, and enthusiasm.

Many of the children could not express themselves in words, but even words became meaningless when compared with smiles such as the one of the little boy who gazed at the Christmas tree carefully touching each ornament.

Synonomous with a child's Christmas is Santa Claus. Sunday proved no exception to the rule of a "mob scene" at the sight of the red-suited man from the North Pole. Complete with a bag of gifts for the children, the Sophomore Santa found it more than he could handle to keep intact his identifying characteristics of beard and bushy eyebrows, the victims of curious tugs and pulls.

Expressions of appreciation took on many forms, but one seemed to stand out. As the carolers from the Operetta Guild who had been serenading the group were leaving with a chorus of "We Wish You a Merry Christmas", the last singer turned in the doorway to wave whereupon a little girl ran over to him, raised her arms to be lifted, and kissed him goodbye.

One volunteer spoke for all when he said, "I don't know who had more fun, the children or us."

Red Fliers See Dogfights With American Planes

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes hammered key North Vietnamese targets again Monday after Red jet pilots, flashing unusual skill and aggressiveness, shot down two American planes Sunday. A third plane was downed by ground fire and U.S. pilots claimed only a probable MIG kill.

No details of the new raids were announced, but the North Vietnamese radio asserted eight more U.S. planes were shot from the skies — five over the capital of Hanoi two over the port of Haiphong and the eighth between the two cities. There was no confirmation in Saigon.

Only one of the five American fliers aboard the three planes shot down Sunday was rescued, the U.S. Command said. Air Force officers appeared grim in announcing the U.S. losses.

Since a freakish break in monsoon rains opened the gates for new U.S. air raids on the North, MIG pilots have shot down three U.S. jets in five days ending Sunday.

Briefing officers reported the Communist fliers have abandoned their tactics of lurking along the edges of U.S. flight formations to pick off stray planes. They have actively sought dogfights with the Americans.

One Communist pilot in an old and slower MIG 17 shot down a U.S. Air Force F4 Phantom, the speediest plane in the U.S. arsenal in Vietnam. An F105 Thunderchief was shot from the skies by the faster MIG21.

The U.S. raiders Sunday scored hits on two important airfields.

Engineers, Mathematicians:

you should consider a career with NSA

. . . if you are stimulated by the prospect of undertaking truly significant assignments in your field, working in its most advanced regions.

. . . if you are attracted by the opportunity to contribute directly and importantly to the security of our nation.

. . . if you want to share optimum facilities and equipment, including one of the world's foremost computer/EDP installations, in your quest for a stimulating and satisfying career.

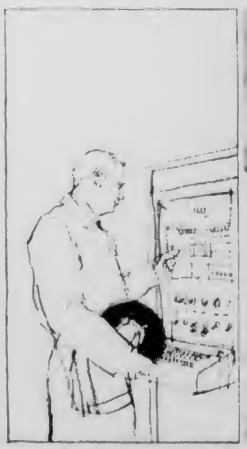
The National Security Agency is responsible for designing and developing "secure" communications systems and EDP devices to transmit, receive and process vital information. The mission encompasses many aspects of communications, computer (hardware and software) technology, and information recording and storage . . . and provides a wealth of career opportunities to the graduate engineer and mathematician.

ENGINEERS will find work which is performed nowhere else . . . devices and systems are constantly being developed which are in advance of any outside the Agency. As an Agency engineer, you will carry out research, design, development, testing and evaluation of sophisticated, large-scale cryptocommunications and EDP systems. You may also participate in related studies of electromagnetic propagation, upper atmosphere phenomena, and solid state devices using the latest equipment for advanced research within NSA's fully instrumented laboratories.

MATHEMATICIANS define, formulate and solve complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra, and combinatorial analysis are but a few of the tools applied by Agency mathematicians. Opportunities for contributions in computer sciences and theoretical research are also offered.

Continuing your Education?
NSA's graduate study program may permit you to pursue two semesters of full-time graduate study at full salary. Nearly all academic costs are borne by NSA, whose proximity to seven universities is an additional asset.

Salaries and Benefits
Starting salaries, depending on education and experience, range from $8,000 to $13,500, and increases follow as you assume additional responsibility. Policies relating to vacations, insurance and retirement are liberal, and you enjoy the advantages of Federal employment without Civil Service certification.



Another benefit is the NSA location, between Washington and Baltimore, which permits your choice of city, suburban or country living and allows easy access to the Chesapeake Bay, ocean beaches, and other summer and winter recreation areas.

Campus Interview Dates:

February 1, 2

Check with the Placement Office now to arrange an interview with NSA representatives on campus. The Placement Office has additional information about NSA, or you may write: Chief, College Relations Branch, National Security Agency, Ft. George G. Meade, Maryland 20755, ATTN: M321. A Young Face

Of course there's no Santa Claus, you say.

Well, let's suppose—just for the sake of argumentation—that Santa Claus has a very young face. This prospect is quite likely, since Santa Clause will exist for children as long as children exist, and so he hasn't lived very long in relation to how much longer he has left to live—which is to infinity.

Now let's suppose that Santa were to shave his beard during the off-season. And imagine too, if you will, that the guy does wear semi-normal clothes during the regular year. Naturally, he's been wearing his boots and wide black belt all season, because they are definitely 'in.'

O.K. So here you've got a young, normal-looking semi-hippie. Now ne must do something with his life other than delivering toys one night of the year. I mean, it's the elves who get stuck with making the toys all year. Besides, Santa's just got too good an organizational mind to let it freeze up in the North Pole, 31561. It stands to reason he probably is studying for a degree in business administration. And why shouldn't he study for that degree in a climate conductive to his effective academic achievement —which would be a place like Massachusetts.

Now we know that Santa Claus may indeed be living on a campus—maybe right here—as a business major. He might well be living in a dormitory or a fraternity . . . may be yours.

If you've noticed a guy who hasn't shaved lately, who's generous all year round, loves people, would give you the shirt off his back, is honorable and, above all, gently humble, you are probably—no, you are definitely—living with Santa Claus. No kidding.

No matter what Time magazine says, treasure him . . . and love him. He's a rare kind of man, but he does exist . . . especially if you've devoted any time to searching for him.

Down This Way

Letter from New York

Unseasonably warm here. The wind carries along Fifth Avenue, whipping up scarves, skirts, and Christmas cheer, exhilarating thousands who pack the streets bundled in last-minute affairs. Not a trace of snow yet, as if the weather knew that, in this city, Christmas is plenty present without it. The big department stores are aglow, day and night. Sidewalk Santas and Salvation Army people adorn the curbs, "ho-ho"ing and ringing.

This season, in the welcome abundance of light and spirit, we are again reminded of how it takes only one star (now, Christmas), alien yet pervasive, to unite millions. For example, we accosted a stranger about to leap at a "Walk" command and asked where X store found. He told us and, halfway across the stopped, and yelled back, "Hey! Try Y great store!" When, except in this sea where, in this or any city, would such a proffered, especially in the runway of a lunatic cabbies?

Everyone here knows that the peak not in the hustle-bustle, but in quiet This year, on December 23rd, stores will and send employees home to smaller, Christmas trees. Most of the men in th the taxis, and the war in Asia, will co halt. On that night, nearer now, the wh will somehow manage to lose itself in t time out — that present — after the w warmth, before the snow sets in.

Views on the War—4

Bud Collins

"When they see me, they know it's bad news." Ed Fitzgerald was saying. Lt. Col. E. F. Fitzgerald of the 25th Marine can think of no duty in the Corps worse than his. He is one of the bad news officers, the uniformed visitors who bring word of death or a critical wound.

Friday was a good day for Fitzgerald. He did not have to leave his office at the Marine Base in South Boston to talk to parents or a wife, to tell them that their man in Vietnam had become what the Marines call a KIA. Killed in action.

"I hope we don't have to make any calls for a couple of weeks," he was saying to his assistant, Maj. Howard Tickle. "This time of year will be the toughest. We buried a man a couple of weeks ago who would have finished his tour in Vietnam early in January. That was very hard for his people. He'd almost made it."

Fitzgerald is one of several officers in the area who have the bad news duty in addition to other assignments. His principal work is as an advisor to the Reserves. "As long as people have a Marine in Vietnam, I'm always in the back of their minds," he said. He uses "I" to mean all the officers who must ring the doorbell and say, "I have some bad news for you. . ."

"These people have been told by their Marine that if an officer comes to see them, they'll know he's been killed or badly wounded. So I've been in the back of their minds. When they see me, they know . . ."

Fitzgerald was in Vietnam himself a few months ago. He earned the Bronze Star in operations whose names mean so much to Marines — Golden Fleece, Rio Grande, Cortez, Sutter. Places where, he smiles, "they missed me every time." The other side's marksmanship is not always that bad.

"This is not pleasant duty," Fitzgerald said, but we believe in the way the Marines do it. The personal contact. The next of kin get the bad news from me—not from a telegram. They can talk to me as long as they want, ask questions. I go back several times, make arrangements for the funeral if they want a military funeral. I think it helps that I was in Vietnam, and I can answer their questions better.

"The first thing they ask, of course, is: are you positive there hasn't been a mistake?

"Mistakes have occurred, but only a couple out of thousands of deaths. Maj. Tickle had one, and in two hours he was able to rectify it. Then he was good news, but the people had been pretty shaken by his first visit.

"If it's a WIA (wounded in action), the first thing I say is your boy's alive. I want to establish that right away, because when they see me they figure it's the worst.

"It's different every time," Fitzgerald said. "Some people have a tremendous emotional outburst. Sometimes there's initial bitterness, swearing, an outcry against the war and the Marines. That disappe ly. Other people take side. They don't show tion—but the grief is deep.

"They want to kno thing, and I have as m mation as I can get. visit, I try to find out family, if there's anyt a bad heart or anyt that who might not t take the shock. Som take the family m priest with me, or who is strong and tru in the family."

Fitzgerald, who, co Jaffrey, N.H., has be Marines 15 years. "I when I was at Dart fulfill my military req and just stayed in K Vietnam." He is 37, through two wars, an has a desk in South Be duty that he finds th of his military career. it the best you can. it's a war.

Botany: Torrey and Drum

To the editor:

Academic errands brought me to Amherst and occasioned my reading of the Daily Collegian. In the "Campus Comment" column I found yet another letter about Dr. Putala and the recently disillusioned Dr. Drum. I was disappointed by the old Hegelian line of the - truth - lies - somewhere - in - the - middle, implying that some combination of Putalas and Drums would make an ideal academic menu, quite I imagine in the manner that a mixture of proteins and poison would comprise a proper diet!

But aside from this, I was disappointed most by what appears to be a failure to understand what is happening to the University, which is to say to the undergraduate student.

At the fall convocation this year one of the trustees was introduced as a great teacher in the tradition of Dr. Ray Ethan Torrey; and there are rumors of a "Torrey" prize for scholarly works in science and the arts, to be offered by the University press.

Of course, most of the present undergraduates probably don't even know Dr. Torrey's name, if even that much about the man. I was fortunate enough to have studied with him, and thus to know the man and his teaching: intellectually brilliant, metaphysically intelligent, and above all charitable beyond belief.

Dr. Putala probably knew R.E.T., as he was called, better than I. And if anyone represents the tradition of R.E.T.'s teaching on campus it is no one but Dr. Putala. But where is Dr. Putala? Why has he been compelled to leave the University in order to preserve his integrity as a teacher?

Why has his sound teaching been replaced by what seems to be an academic circus in which rats are killed and concepts replaced by gadgetry, all in a kind of "bread and games" for the new academic barbarians? The list of sad rhetorical questions could be indefinitely extended.

The burden of the story is nothing but this: as the University grows even more into a vulgar spectacle of buildings and politics, real quality is quietly leaving.—If today's students want power, why don't they use it intelligently?

There should be an immediate inquiry into the "Putala-Drum" case. Does anyone really know why Dr. Drum is speaking less frequently of late? Does anyone really know of past collisions between Dr. Putala and certain administrators instrumental in his leaving?

Torrey The Teacher

Re: Dr. Ryan Drum and Botany 101, the following excerpt from Frank P. Rand's "Yesterdays at Massachusetts State College 1863-1933" was submitted by Lynda Blanchard '68.

(2 June 1933) "In an unpretentious and somewhat cluttered study a group of boys are met to spend one more evening with a favorite teacher. By six of the last seven classes he has been formally voted the favorite teacher. His name is Torrey.

"Torrey is both a scientist and a mystic. Thus his textbook in botany and his lectures are unique. He cares more about a meaning than a form, more about the boy than the fact. He is often impatient and sometimes erratic, but he is ardently in earnest.

"How these Friday discussions came into being no one remembers. Somehow like Topsy. They have never had a name or an enrollment or a program. They are philosophic, metaphysical, religious. They are disturbing and stimulating. They challenge the mind with doctrines of cycles, and with fourth, yes, even fifth and sixth dimensions. They have the flavor of the Orient, the breath of solar spaces.

"There is always a text, so to speak. It may be from Emerson, the "Bhagavad-Gita," the "Upanishads," or the Book of Matthew. The fourth gospel greatly attracts the leader, but seems to him too profoundly difficult. After the reading there are three hours of analysis, argument, speculation. The boys forget themselves, absorbed by a contemplation of the heights, and the depths, and the glory, and the pain of life. Then, with the universe fairly humming in their ears, they go quietly out into the evening." Note: Dr. Ray E. Torrey '12, Instructor 1919 — (at least 1933).

Propaganda To Fight Propaganda

To the editor:

In a letter to the editor which appeared in yesterday's Daily Collegian, Robert R. Smith criticized the Faculty Group on Peace and War for presenting a "prejudiced viewpoint" in the showing of the film Why Vietnam at Grayson House Dec. 14.

Claiming prejudice, of course, depends on one's own views. In the opinion of many of the members of the FGPW, the Defense Department's film Why Vietnam is an example of a very polished piece of propaganda. Full of half-truths and un-truths, this film has been attacked by Amherst College's Professor Commager as a dangerous piece of re-written history.

The purpose of the showing of Why Vietnam, then, was to point out the propaganda to which we are all subjected daily, in the newspapers, on television, etc. It is indeed a tribute to the members of the FGPW that Mr. Smith deemed them a match for this well-produced 45-minute film which includes dramatic shots of mutilated war victims and a stirring musical score. One of the principle narrators, of course, is President Johnson.

Leaders Spoiled Class Sing

To the editor:

I joined in the Class of '71 Christmas Sing on Sunday, and while I enjoyed the bonfire and concert, I was irritated by the childish antics of our class leaders. Although they were in firm command of the microphones, they had no similar control over their own immaturity. The use of loudspeakers should have been minimal, since the group assembled was large enough to carry a tune unassisted.

Their purported function was to lead the singing of the carolers but this was obviously not their intention. Combining ill-timed guffaws of laughter with discordant fluctuations of voice, they managed to dominate the scene and stifle most serious caroling. I feel that this display was in poor taste and detracted from an otherwise successful program.

The half-hearted participation of those attending was an indication of the ineptitude of our class leaders.

Gnomon takes the worry out of being close ! ! !

(to deadlines that is)

And now, with one of the most important deadlines upon us (final exams and theses) let us show you how we can help you to prepare:

- For your convenience, Gnomon Copy Service will be open during the Christmas vacation. During vacation week, our hours will be 9 - 6 daily except Sundays and Holidays.

- Beginning on Tuesday, January 2, we will resume our normal operating hours of 9 - 9 Monday thru Thursday and 9 - 6 Friday and Saturday.

- If necessary, we will increase our hours and staff during the final exam period so that you may be assured of our usual prompt service.

- As usual, Theses will be handled with the greatest of care and in the least time possible (never later than the next day and the same day in most cases). Remember that we have a 20 sustance 25% rag content bond available should you require it.

- Lecture notes and extra assigned course reading material may be copied in minutes and for nickels so there is little sense to spending valuable study hours recopying notes from a missed lecture or outlining extra course reading.

- The price is still the same low value: 5¢ for the 1st copy of an original; 3¢ for the 2nd thru 10th copies of the same original; and 2¢ for the 11 copy and on of the same original.

Thank you and see you soon ! ! ! ! !

Student Senate To Deal With Recruiting Issue

Under new business on tonight's agenda of the Student Senate is a motion dealing with recruiting on campus during the time that Gen. Hersey's directive regarding demonstrators is in effect. The motion reads:

"Recruiting by agencies of the executive branch of the Federal Government shall be suspended until such time as General Hersey's suggestions to draft boards on reclassification of objectionable dissenters are officially rescinded. The Senate makes no comment on the morality of the military, but only on the civil rights of demonstrators."

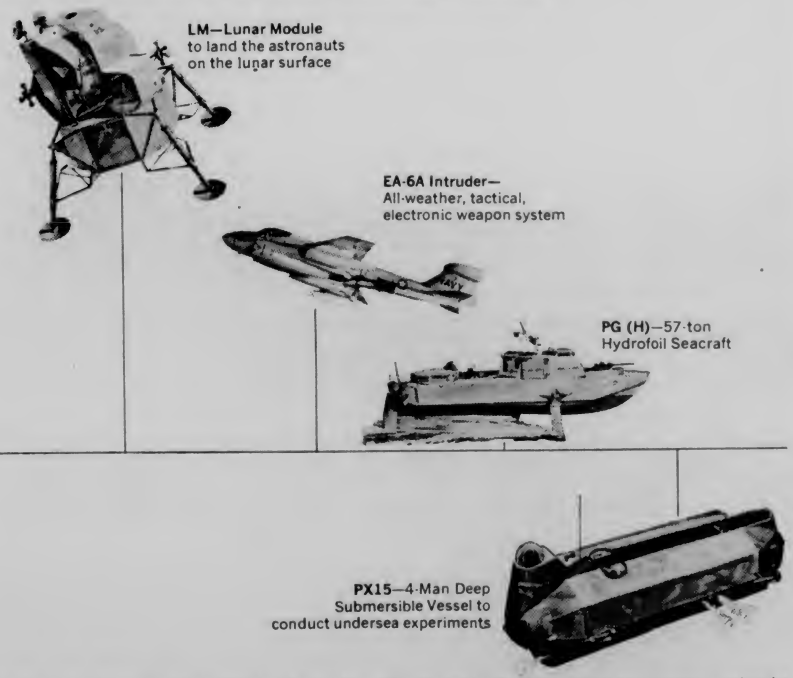
Amherst Ready to Supply Santa with Reindeer Extras

The Amherst Chamber of Commerce has written a letter to Santa Claus at his North Pole address to tell him that there will be a reindeer waiting for him on the Amherst town common.

The letter explains that since there are more children in the world this Christmas than ever before, Santa's sleigh might be extra heavy. The standby reindeer will be available in case any of his regular reindeer need a rest.

The reindeer for Santa's sleigh, as well as a doe and a fawn, have arrived on the Amherst Common. The reindeer are arriving early so that the children of the area will be able to visit them before Christmas. Visitors will be welcome at any time; the glow from the "Merry Maple" on the common makes evening visits possible.



The "reindeer on the common" project is being made possible through the special efforts of several businesses, the Rotary Club, and the support of the chamber membership. A special committee made the necessary arrangements and constructed the enclosure for the deer.

A local 4-H organization has accepted the assignment to feed the deer. Special care will be taken so that the reindeer does not get too fat and stays in good condition in case Santa needs him on Christmas Eve.

THE SPREAD-EAGLE OF TECHNOLOGY AT GRUMMAN

Ranges from inner to outer space

Grumman has special interest for the graduating engineer and scientist seeking the widest spread of technology for his skills. At Grumman, engineers are involved in deep ocean technology... engineers see their advanced aircraft designs proven daily in the air over Vietnam, and soon... in outer space, the Grumman LM (Lunar Module) will land the astronauts on the lunar surface. Grumman, situated in Bethpage, L.I. (30 miles from N.Y.C.), is in the cultural center of activity. Universities are close at hand for those who wish to continue their studies. C.C.N.Y., Manhattan College, New York University, Pratt Institute, Columbia University, State University at Stony Brook, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Hofstra University and Adelphi College are all within easy distance. The surroundings are not hard to take. Five beautiful public golf courses are in Bethpage—two minutes from the plant. White sand beaches stretch for miles along the Atlantic (12 minutes drive). The famed sailing reaches of Long Island Sound are only eleven miles away. The informal atmosphere is a Grumman tradition, matched by an equally hard-nosed one of turning out some of the free world's highest performance aircraft systems and space vehicles. To name a few...

Here then is the opportunity for graduating engineers. AEs, CEs, EEs, MEs, IEs, Physic majors and Chemical Engineering majors... to take their place in the continuum of technology that is Grumman. Grumman representatives will be

Smith College Names Elm Street Building

President Thomas C. Mendenhall of Smith College announced today a decision of the trustees to name the two Elm Street buildings which the college will acquire next summer from the Mary A. Burnham School in honor of two of Smith's most distinguished professors emeriti, Mary Ellen Chase and Eleanor Shipley Duckett.

Miss Chase, the well-known author and professor emeritus of English language and literature at Smith, taught at the college from 1926 until her retirement in 1955. Miss Duckett, an eminent scholar, author and professor emeritus of classical languages and literatures, retired in 1949 after 33 years as a member of the Smith faculty.

Burnham and Southwick Houses, located at 45 Elm Street contiguous to the Smith campus, will be named respectively for Miss Chase and Miss Duckett. The houses are in use at present as Burnham School dormitories.

Miss Chase continues to write and publish prolifically. In 1965 she published "A Journey to Boston," a novel of Polish people in the Connecticut Valley, and the following year a children's book, "A Walk on an Iceberg." Probably she is best-known for "A Goodly Fellowship" which expresses her philosophy of teaching; "The Bible and the Common Reader," a study of the Bible as literature; and two novels inpired by her native Maine, "Mary Peters" and "Silas Crockett."

Miss Duckett has been acclaimed as an internationally respected scholar of medieval literature. Among the numerous books which have earned her this reputation are "The Latin Writers of the Fifth Century," "Alfred the Great" and "The Gateway to the Middle "Anglo-Saxon Saints and Scholars." Her latest book is "Death and Life in the Tenth Century," published this fall.

Together Miss Chase and Miss Duckett continue to travel to England each summer where at the University of Cambridge Miss Chase's interest in the Bible has led her to undertake the study of Hebrew, and Miss Duckett seeks out Latin medieval writings unavailable in English translation.

College Fraternities Maintain High Scholastic Averages

Scholarship averages of college fraternity members in three-fifths of reporting institutions throughout the country again exceeded the respective All-Men's Averages for the academic year of 1965-6, an analysis just released by the National Interfraternity Conference reveals.

With 288 colleges and universities submitting comparative figures, slightly over 60% showed the All-Fraternity Average above the All-Men's Average.

Since 1954 the number of institutions where fraternity averages exceed those of all male students has increased from 110 to 174. When compared on an individual chapter basis, the number above the All-Men's Average is exactly half: 1,535 out of a total of 3,070 chapters covered.

This clearly indicates that fraternities are succeeding in their continued program of emphasis on good scholarship," said Dr. Fred H. Turner, retiring president of the National Interfraternity Conference and retiring Dean of Students at the University of Illinois. "It should be borne in mind that the vast majority of fraternity men participate in campus activities, student government, athletics, publications, and other extra-curricular undertakings to a much greater extent than do the nonfraternity men.

One significant result of this scholarship drive is the high percentage of fraternity men who complete their college work, according to Dean of Students James C. McLeod of Northwestern University, Educational Advisor of the Conference.

UMass Trackmen Get Prepared For KofC Meet on January 13

By RICH FRANKLIN
Staff Reporter

The Knights of Columbus track meet, held annually on the boards of the Boston Garden, is still more than three and a half weeks away, but Coach Ken O'Brien has made some tentative decisions as to who will answer to the starter's whistle on the night of January 13. O'Brien plans to enter three relay teams and two boys in both the dash and the hurdles.

The varsity two mile relay appears right now to be the strongest entry. This team set a school record last Friday in winning at the Brown Invitational Meet with a time of 7:53.8.

The four positions for the race in Boston will be fought for by Diego Gonzales, Paul Hoss, Co-captain Greg Bowman, Dave Evans, and Ron Ryan.

The other varsity relay will be the mile. Bob Hasselbaum, Steve Chase, and Co-captain Steve Burrell will hold down three of the places on the team. The fourth man, to be decided, will be one of the boys on the two mile relay who will double in both races.

The freshmen will also run in a mile relay. The representatives for the Little Redmen will be chosen through time trials from a group of seven. The seven consists of Ed Heywood, Jerry Spellman, Elliot Stevens, Paul Taylor, Clarence Gaynor, Charlie Barry, and Larry Paulson.

Two UMass runners will be entered in the open fifty yard dash. Burrell, Chase, Dave Marble, and freshmen Heywood, Walter Mayo, and Angel Neives will be battling for the two berths.

There are several contenders for the two entries in the forty-five yard hurdles. Mark Lefever leads the group. He holds the frosh record and he won the race at the Brown Invitational. Pete Moryl, Steve Whalen, Jerry Spellman, and Jim Hudson will be seeking to run also.

The best collegiate runners from the New England area, along with a good many from elsewhere, will compete in this meet. There will also be a number of the best from the international set competing in some of the open and special events.

Redmen On The Road

Hoopsters to Face Holy Cross, UNH And Vermont During Intersession

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

After final exams, the UMass basketball team will occupy its intersession with three games on the road. On January 17, the Redmen travel to Worcester to play powerful Holy Cross, followed by Yankee Conference games at UNH and Vermont.

Holy Cross, which has the entire starting five returning from last year's 16-9 club, was expected at the beginning of the season to be one of the East's best. However, the Crusaders have gotten off to a less than impressive start, barely edging weak Dartmouth and getting bombed by Yale.

Nevertheless, Holy Cross should be a fine team once it gets going. In addition to traditional games with Boston College, Providence, St. John's and Fordham, the Crusaders have ventured to schedule a game at New York against national champ UCLA.

Actually, the Crusaders' poor start is deceptive when one considers that last year, they lost three of their first four games. But after that, the Cross went 15-5 for the rest of the season, and this year should be no exception.

The Crusaders' two key men are undoubtedly Keith Hochstein and Ed Siudut. Hochstein, the 6'4 senior captain, is one of the best rebounders in the nation. Although only 6'4, Hochstein can out muscle players much taller than him and often plays at the post. He can also score, evidenced by the fact that he missed the first ten games of last season and still wound up as third highest scorer on the team.

The other key player in Holy Cross' outstanding front court is 6'7 junior Ed Siudut. He is probably one of the best shooters in the East, especially for a big man. Siudut averaged 20.4 last year as a sophomore, most of them on long outside shots. He is also a good rebounder and is improving on his one weak spot, defense. Siudut is without a doubt the Crusaders' biggest offensive threat.

Rounding out the front court is 6'9 junior Ron Teixeira, who had a somewhat disappointing season last year but still averaged 11.2. Teixeira, a high school great at Catholic Memorial, is a good defensive player but still has a long way to go before he develops into an outstanding college center.

In the backcourt, coach Jack Donohue will start 6'3 senior Al Stazinski who averaged 14.1 last year. Stazinski is Holy Cross' best defensive player as well as a good driver and outside shooter.

Rounding out the Crusaders' starting lineup will be Jim Murray, a 6'1 senior who does most of the ball-handling. He doesn't shoot much, but when he does, it's often in a clutch situation. He averaged 6.2 last season.

The Crusaders play in the Ko-Anselm's before taking on UMass and Cornell, and then meet Selm's before taking on UMass at Worcester Auditorium. Last year, Holy Cross beat UMass twice, 8-65 and 64-54. The Crusaders own an 18-4 advantage in the series.

After the Holy Cross game, the Redmen play two Yankee Conference games. They first travel to Durham, N.H., for a rematch with New Hampshire, whom they downed 88-67 in the first game of the season. UNH has not come anywhere near to living up to its pre-season ballyhoo. The Wildcats even lost to Maine, 100-78. However, they lost to Rhode Island by just ten points, so figure that one out.

UMass travels to Burlington, Vt. on January 23 to face an up-and-coming Vermont team. The Catamounts have a couple of outstanding returnees in forwards Bill Librera, a 6'3 senior, and Dave Lapointe, a 6'3 junior. Vermont also has a highly-regarded soph prospect in guard Frank Martiniuk.

For the first time in several years, Vermont has lots of height this season. Sophomores Bob Crawford, 6'9, and Aldo Salati, 6'7, are expected to give the Cats added rebounding strength.

The Redmen return home on January 25 for one of the top games of the season, Providence. By then, it should be evident whether or not UMass is going to bounce back from its dismal start. Coach Jack Leaman would especially like to win the two Conference games and stay in the running for the championship.

Allen, Shula NFL Coaches of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — George Allen of the Los Angeles Rams and Don Shula of the Baltimore Colts share the National Football League Coach of the Year honors in the voting of an Associated Press panel.

Allen and Shula each received 16 votes from the committee of sports writers and sportscasters, 3 from each league city. Vince Lombardi of Green Bay drew 6 votes, Allie Sherman of New York got 3, George Halas of the Chicago Bears and Blanton Collier of the Cleveland Browns 2 each and Tom Fears of New Orleans one.

Two members of the panel did not submit votes in this category in the poll that was taken before the final games.

"That's not much consolation," Shula said Monday. "The only thing I was concerned about was winning the title. Nothing that happens now can make up for the one thing we wanted most."

"I assume the vote was taken before Sunday's game," the Baltimore coach added wryly.

Allen drew solid support for his fine job of bringing the Rams through a 14-game season with an 11-1-2 record, winding up with 8 straight victories including a dramatic 27-24 win over Green Bay to stay alive and a final 34-10 triumph over Baltimore which had been unbeaten.

Although the Rams and Colts finished with identical 11-1-2 records in the Coastal Division, the margin of points in the two games between the clubs was in favor of L.A. Consequently, the Rams go into Saturday's game with Green Bay at Milwaukee, Wis., for the Western Conference title.

It was the second year in L.A. for Allen, who created a wild scene when he left the Bears to take the Ram's job over the protests of Halas. Allen, a defensive coach with the Bears, took over a last-place 4 - 10 team, moving them up to 8-6 last year and won the division last year.

The Rams, of course, are based on that big defensive front line of Deacon Jones, Merlin Olsen, Roger Brown and Lamar Lundy, known as the Fearsome Foursome.

Roman Gabriel has come of age as a fine quarterback and the addition of Bernie Casey gave him another fine target. Les Josephson and Dick Bass did most of the running and Casey, Josephson, Bill Traux, Jack Snow and Bass most of the catching.

Baltimore rolled through the first 13 games without defeat, having been tied by the Rams and Minnesota Vikings, but saw their title hopes vanish in one afternoon at Los Angeles.

Coach Shula did a tremendous job in keeping the Colts on the move despite injuries that sidelined men like Ray Berry, Jim Orr, Bob Boyd, Lenny Lyles and Al Haymond for extended periods.

Shula, a former defensive back, has coached the Colts for 5 years, winning the Western Conference title in 1964 but losing to Cleveland in the finals. In 1965, the Colts tied Green Bay but lost in a sudden death playoff. Shula is 37, Allen 45.

Lombardi's ability to keep the Packers on the move despite injuries to key men like Jim Grabowski and Elijah Pitts was recognized by six members of the panel.

The Packers, champions of everything last year when they beat Kansas City in the first Super Bowl, breezed to the Central Division crown but lost four games and were tied once.

Lombardi is shooting for a 3rd straight NFL title, a feat never accomplished since the league was divided into conferences in 1933. Green Bay did win three straight from 1929-1931.

The New York Giants' surge from 1-12-1 to 7-7 and third place in the combined Eastern standings brought 3 votes for Sherman, whose team produced a potent offense with the addition of Frank Tarkenton.

Halas, the senior citizen of the league and owner-coach of the Bears, gathered his troops together after a sad start in the exhibition season and wound up at 7-6-1, an outstanding accomplishment with several new men in the line-up.

Collier's Browns took the Century Division title with a 9-5 record, winning when they had to. Cleveland nailed it down by beating the Giants and St. Louis on successive December Sundays.

LOYALTY

Detroit Tiger fans haven't exactly been strewing manager Mayo Smith's path with rose petals since season's end, but if he's going to manage a club that fails to win the pennant, he figures any place is better than in Philadelphia.

"The loyal Philly fans!" he said laughing a while back. "I'll never forget that letter I got. This guy writes me that he would like to have my picture, autographed. He says he saves autographed pictures of famous men. He says he has in his collection Khruschchev, and Dave Beck, who was put in jail at the time, and Johnny Stompanato. He writes to me and says, 'Now that Johnny Stompanato just got killed, I'd like to have your picture to replace him.'

"He signed it, 'A Loyal Philly Fan.'"

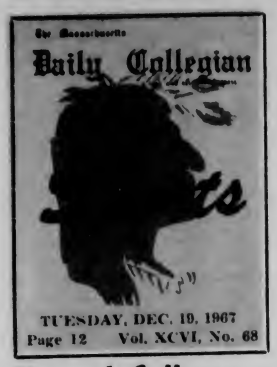
"College Super Bowl"--Dobbs

Coach Glen Dobbs of the University of Tulsa is in favor of a "College Super Bowl" game, according to an article in the current issue of SPORT magazine.

Dobbs, who foresees the problems inherent in creating a season-ending tournament culminating in a national championship "Super Bowl" game, offers this plan:

"Cut back the regular season to eight games," says Dobbs. "With a minimum of four playoff games, a team would play no more than 12 games in a season, which is just one more than most bowl bound teams play now.

"I would fill a tournament field of 16 with the champion from each of nine or ten major conferences and with at-large entrants from the ranks of the Independents," he continues in the SPORT article.



"The eight first-round games would be played on the campus of one of the competing schools and the quarter-finals, semis and finals would be played in the seven major bowls, which would rotate each year as to which bowl gets the most important games.

"I am not saying that by the time you crowned a winner, you would necessarily know who the No. 1 team is," concludes Dobbs, "but the playoffs would give you a better chance of finding out who's the best."

Redmen Hoopsters Face Rider College Tonight

Broncs Last Redmen Home Opponent in '1967 Season'

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Rider College of Trenton, N.J. provides the opposition for the UMass basketball team tonight in the Cage at 8, in the last home game for the Redmen until second semester.

Rider is 3-3 on the season but has been plagued by injuries, and will not meet UMass at full strength. This will be the second time that the two teams have met. In 1962, the Redmen beat Rider, 91-81.

The Broncs have a fairly good club that can give anyone trouble on a given night. In fact, they lost to LaSalle by just six points in the Philadelphia Palestra, not a bad feat.

They revolve around 6'4 senior center Greg Cisson. He does most of Rider's scoring and rebounding, and will be the man to watch for the Broncs. Cisson's height is deceptive, since he is a fine leaper and does a good job off the boards.

Cisson is dangerous on the 12-foot jumper and also moves to the inside well. The team's leading scorer, he is averaging around 20 points a game and is shooting just under 50 per cent from the floor. He is definitely the man to stop.

Another good ballplayer on the Rider squad is guard Bill Wood, the 5'11 senior captain. Wood does most of the ball-handling and is the best defensive player. He is also a good shooter although he doesn't put the ball up much.

The other regular in the Broncs' lineup is forward Dale MacArthur, a 6'5 senior who hits the offensive boards well.

The other two spots in the lineup are not completely resolved because of the injuries. Coach John Carpenter will probably start Dick Snyder, a fairly good shooter, at guard, along with 6'4 sophomore Ray Ramsey at forward. Ramsey is Rider's best shooter from the floor with a 50 per cent clip. However, neither Snyder nor Ramsey were expected to start at the beginning of the season but were thrust into starting holes because of injuries.

Rider, despite the injuries, is an off-and-on ball club, and with a good man-to-man defense can be troublesome.

The Redmen, now 2-4 on the season, will most likely stay with their starting lineup of Bill Tindall, Jack Gallagher and Pete Gayeska up front, and Ray Ellerbrook and Joe DiSarcina in the backcourt.

Long Tourney Trip Abandoned In Favor of UConn Classic

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Staying unusually close to home this Christmas, the UMass basketball team will forego the customary long tournament trip and will compete in the Connecticut Holiday Classic next week at Storrs, Conn.

The UConn Classic is not a tournament, but simply a match-up of Yankee Conference teams against Southern teams. On Thursday, Dec. 28, UMass meets Texas Christian at 7 p.m., followed by a game between host Connecticut and William and Mary.

Then, the next night, the Redmen and the Huskies switch teams and UMass takes on William and Mary with UConn facing TCU. Both UMass games will start at 7 p.m. The Redmen do not face Connecticut at all, since the two teams meet twice during the regular season.

Texas Christian, coached by Johnny Swain, who is in his first year, is expected to challenge for the Southwest Conference title. The Horned Frogs lost the Conference title to rival SMU last year. This year, TCU boasts experience, size and rebounding.

The Horned Frogs' leading scorer of a year ago, 6'5 Mickey McCarty, is returning in addition to the top rebounder, 6'6 Jim Cash. McCarty scored 14.8 points a game and Cash pulled down 11.1 rebounds per game.

Also returning for TCU is 6'0 senior guard Carey Sloan, who had an average of 7.5.

William and Mary, despite a 1-3 record, has its best team ever. The Indians have one of the Southern Conference's best scorers in guard Ron Pannenton, a 6'2 senior who averaged 20.6 last year. Another strong returnee is 6'8 center Dave Daugherty, (12.0) and 6'6 forward Jim Rama (10.3), both good rebounders.

One of the Indians' better prospects is sophomore Bob Sherwood, a 6'6 forward who broke the William and Mary scoring record last year with a 32.4 average.

After the UConn Classic, UMass takes its annual break for finals and then resumes the schedule with three away games during intersession. UMass travels to do battle with strong Holy Cross, and then plays two Yankee Conference games against New Hampshire and Vermont.

Record College Grid Attendance In Year 1967

NEW YORK (AP) — College football attendance rose to a record 26.4 million in 1967 when each game averaged 431 more spectators than the year before, the National Collegiate Sports Services said Monday.

The total atendance of 26,430,639 was an increase of 1,154, 740, or 4.57 per cent, over the 1966 total which was the previous high.

There were 610 four-year colleges playing football this year, six less than last year, but they played only four fewer games—2,764 to 2, 768—and averaged 9,562 spectators a game compared with 9,131 in 1966.

The Big Ten led in average attendance, 57,036 per game, while the Atlantic Coast Conference had the biggest jump in average, 12.28 per cent over its 1966 figure.

The Big Eight dropped 0.56 per cent, and the Southwest Conference dipped 3.60 per cent in average attendance. All of the other major conferences gained.

And the NCSS noted, 15.8 per cent of this season's games were played in unfavorable weather.

W. A. A. BASKETBALL

At 6:30 on Monday, January 29, 1968, W.A.A. Intramural Basketball officially starts its new season. The program will run on Monday and Tuesday nights from 6:30 to 8:30.

Instruction for individual skill and team is available strategy for any who desire it, from 6:00 to 6:30 on all W.A.A. Intramural nights.

Two Tough Tourneys Await Pucksters

By WALT STACHURA

Hockey coach Jack Canniff will be relieved when the second semester arrives. His skaters have dropped three straight games to lower their record to 2-4 and face two tough tournaments before the intersession break.

Boston Arena is the site of the Cod Fish Bowl tournament sponsored by Boston State. Besides UMass and Boston State, Ohio University and Salem State will participate in the tournament.

UMass will face Boston State in the opening round of the tournament tomorrow night at 9.

Boston State has run up a 4-1-1 record this season. Merrimac, ranked no. 1 in Division II of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference, is among the Boston State victims. Vermont inflicted the only loss on the Hub City team.

Salem State has a 2-1 record in their early season play. The Vikings have beat Vermont and Holy Cross while losing to AIC, 5-4, in overtime.

Ohio University has a 2-4 record this season. The Mid-Westerners played in the Hamilton College Christmas hockey tournament this past weekend losing to Hamilton, 7-6 and Norwich 6-0.

Ohio could be a tough opponent however, having played two one goal games against Boston State last year.

Vermont University will host the second holiday tournament for the Redmen skaters, the Yankee Conference tourney, on December 27 and 28.

UMass did not exactly get the luck of the draw because they face perennial conference champ New Hampshire in the first round.

The Wildcats, competing in Division I competition this year, have a 3-1 record. They have beaten Colby and Bowdoin, both victors over UMass this season, and have lost only to Yale.

Host Vermont also has a 3-1 card. They beat UMass, UConn, and Salem State while losing only to Boston State.

UConn has played .500 hockey this season, winning two and losing two. The Huskies were drubbed by UNH, 12-1, and beaten by Vermont. UConn has beaten Holy Cross and Nichols College.

Fine Performances Brighten Redmen Swim Loss

Last Thursday the UMass swimming team met the Wesleyan University team at Boyden Pool. Although losing the meet, 56-39, the Redmen turned in some fine performances.

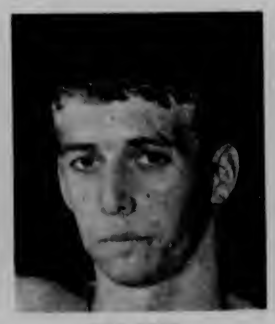
After losing the medlay relay, the UMass swimmers got into the scoring column when Mark Miller won the 200 yard freestyle in a time of 1:59.3. Flip Morton came in a close second in the next event, the fifty yard free-style. In the 200 yard individual medlay, one of the toughest events in a meet, Bob Asquith came in second, with Fred Anderson third. The event was won by Ketcham of Wesleyan in a time of 2:07.9.

Dave Larson, the swim team's finest, had a poor day on the board and took a second against a pair of very good divers from Wesleyan, Stone and Crabon.

Dick Donoghue, the UMass' only entry in the 200 yard butterfly, came in a solid second, losing to Gallas of Wesleyan in a good time of 2:11.0. In the 100 yard freestyle Miller was touched out by Tichenor of Wesleyan in a time of 51.6 seconds with Morton a stroke behind in third.

Broker of Wesleyan took the 200 yard backstroke in 2:13.6 with Asquith and Anderson placing second and third. Miller and Sheppard of Wesleyan swept the 500 yard free-style with Bill Such of UMass taking third. Al Northrup ran away with the 200 yard breast stroke for the Redmen in a good time of 2:33.7.

Although already having lost the meet, the Redmen refused to give up and the team of Morton, Asquith, Beck, and Miller staged a spectacular come-from-behind vistory in the final event, the 400-yard free-style relay.



Although losing the meet, Coach Rogers was satisfied with the performances of most of his swimmers. He was especially pleased with Donoghue, Miller, Morton, and Northup who set new career lows in their respective events.

Open House Proposal Tabled By Faculty Senate

(Story Page Two)

Arguments and Morality Laws Stall Open House Proposal

"Whoever being licensed as a lodging house keeper (this includes dormitories and fraternities —ed.) knowingly permits property under his control to be used for the purpose of immoral solicitation, immoral bargaining, or immoral conduct, shall be punished by fine . . . or imprisonment . . . or both . . ." —Section 26, Chapter 140. Generals Laws.

—One of the statutes cited by University lawyers as reasoning against the open house proposal.

THE Open House Policy recommendation of the Student Affairs Committee was referred back to the Commmittee by the Faculty Senate at its meeting of January 4, 1968, with the charges that it seek legal advice concerning certain aspects of the policy and that it file a spectrum of reports to the Senate.

The referral vote came after presentation of and lengthy debate on the policy recommendation of the Committee. Since October, the eighteen-member committe had been reviewing the proposal forwarded by the Student Life Committee from the Student Senate, which in essence provides that each residence hall unit be allowed to determine its own unique policy on frequency, duration, social conduct and door policy concerning open houses.

DR. Donald Maynard (Dept. of Plant and Soil Sciences), Chairman of the Student Affairs Committee, presented the report, but did not speak in favor of it because he had voted in the minority. (By secret ballot the Committee had voted 9-6 in favor of the proposal.) Dr. Maynard then yielded the floor to Dr. Joyce Berkman (Dept. of History) who defended the merits of the policy on the following bases: 1) it fosters autonomy and maturity in the individual; 2) it heightens interpersonal sensitivity and awareness. Dr. Berkman further elaborated on the rationale contained within the report, stressing the necessity of enacting this policy in the interests of the educational development of students.

Student Senate President James Collins traced the history of the recommendation, noting that the policy had originated in the Student Senate in April, 1967, had been forwarded to the Student Life Committee and had been presented to the Dean of Students by the Committee in late summer. The final policy, as presented to the Faculty Senate was unaltered in principle, although numerous changes in implementation were made by the Student Affairs Committtee.

Dean Field spoke against the proposal, citing the possibility that students may vote for what he termed an "excessive number of open houses." He felt that adoption of such a policy would force students into situations for which many are ill-prepared.

Ronald Reid, Chairman of the Speech Department, noted what he considered to be a lack of substance in positive debate and recapitulated the arguments pro and con. He described the arguments of Professor Berkman as platitudes and characterized the arguments of the Dean of Students as clear, distinct disadvantages in the report. He also stated that the students already had enough responsibility and democracy, noting the $250,000 Student Senate budget and existing residence hall programs run by student governments. In rebuttal, Dr. Berkman noted the platitudinous nature of Dr. Reid's remarks.

SEVERAL other faculty senators entered into debate on the issue. Professor Sidney Wexler (Dept. of Romance Languages) expressed general approval of the policy with a strong reservation on the door policy option. Later, he moved that the doors of participants be opened during all open houses. Dr. Otto Stein (Dept. of Botany) stressed the fact that it is students who occupy residence halls, and that it should be students who determine the open house policy. He also added that he personally denied any parental responsibility toward the students of the university.

Professor Ludtke (School of Business Administration), Secretary of the Faculty Senate, stated that students should have a safety device on the open houses, comparing the open door amendment to the safety devices on cars. He indicated that perhaps in about ten years students wouldn't need the open door rule, but now the students needed such a protective device.

After approximately one and one half hours of debate, Provost Tippo, who was presiding al the meeting, raised legal questions pertinent to the report and called upon Sid Myers, a legal adviser of the University to interpret the legal implications. Citing several sections of the Massachusetts General Laws, Myers noted that the University Board of Trustees cannot give up its authority to conduct the activities of residence halls. Myers said that the University may be doing so in adopting such an open house policy. Further, Myers noted that it was illegal for an educational institution to knowingly permit immoral conduct to occur in residence hall rooms, although he failed to read the word "knowingly" on the floor.

AFTER considerable debate and questions on the legal implications of the policy, Mr. Isidore Silver (School of Business Administration) asked why no alternative or minority report was submitted. He then made a motion to refer the entire report back to the Student Affairs Committee with the charges that it obtain legal advice and that it file a spectrum of reports not later than the March 7, 1968 meeting of the Faculty Senate. The motion to commit the report of Student Affairs was passed 29-23. Tht committal seemed to please certain liberals in the Senate, who felt that they did not have sufficient votes to pass the full report at this time.

The Committee will reconvene as soon as possible and will attempt to report before the actual reporting date, according to a committee spokesman.

UMass Professor to Study Remains of Pre-Indian Culture

The skeletons that await study at the University of Massachusetts anthropology laboratory are more than 11 centuries old yet the information they contain has exciting possibilities for today's medical and genetic researchers.

There are nearly 1000 of them and they were removed this past spring and summer from a newly-discovered site in Ohio by a UMass Archeology Field School team under Dr. Olaf H. Prufer, professor of anthropology. He estimates that there are at least another 1000 to be removed next summer.

"From the standpoint of quantity and opportunity to make a depth study of medical and genetic variations this is a once in a lifetime find," Dr. Prufer said. He said the quantity of remains and their state of preservation make the discovery the most important of its kind in North America in the last 30 years and possibly the most important ever.

The people concerned lived about 800 A.D. and were members of a pre-Indian culture called Late Woodland. Their Village and burial ground site, near Port Clinton in northwestern Ohio, was first marked in 1966 by the Ohio Archeological Survey. Test excavations in August of that year by Dr. Prufer established the importance and extent of the discovery.

Researchers who have examined the skeletons, Dr. Prufer said, have found evidences of disease or genetic irregularities in nearly every one. In his words: "They were sick—really sick. There is evidence they all had arthritis and other bone diseases and there are signs of other diseases reflected in bone structure. There's a fair amount of inbreeding reflected by the constant recurrence of the same genetic variations." There is also evidence of abnormal infant mortality and indications that few individuals lived beyond the age of 35, he added.

Called the Libben site from the name of the farm on which it is located, the excavation area is on a sandy knoll approximately 300 by 75 feet. A swamp bounds three sides and the Portage River flows along the fourth. Thus hemmed in, the village had to concentrate its burials in a small area, which accounts for the great concentration of remains found at the site, according to Dr. Prufer. The skeletons so far removed have come from an excavated area of only 40 by 100 feet, he said.

Along with skeletons, diggers have unearthed pot shards, weapon points and other artifacts that will be studied to establish the cultural connections of the inhabitants. Studies of animal remains at the site may have important medical and dental implications for what they reveal about the diet of the inhabitants, Dr. Prufer noted.

Freshwater shellfish and the white-tailed deer were staples in the diet of prehistoric Indians. Although shellfish must have been present in numbers in the nearby river and deer plentiful in the surrounding forests, remains of these foods are all but absent at the Libben site.

Fish remains, on the other hand, are so common that the UMass anthropologist concludes that the inhabitants must have lived almost exclusively on fish from the river. This theory is reinforced by the absence of any evidences of agriculture. A very limited amount of charred corn, some charred nuts and some unidentified seeds were the only vegetable remains found.

The UMass department of sociology and anthropology, supported by National Science Foundation funds, plans to devote another six-week session of field work at the site next summer to remove the remaining skeletons and all of the cultural material.

"This is clearly a population out of the mainstream, isolated from old world genetic and disease patterns," Dr. Prufer said. "It is hoped that we may achieve the beginnings of a solid quantitive understanding of the attack by disease and genetic variation on a population isolated in both time and space."

"We regret the intrusion. It was unintended and undertaken without any hostile intent."

—Robert J. McCloskey, State Department press officer.

by GARDNER L. BRIDGE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. acknowledged Monday that a U. S.-Vietnamese patrol had crossed Cambodia's border "during the heat of battle" with Viet Cong guerrillas.

The State Dept. said it sent formal regrets for any Cambodian casualties that may have resulted from what it called an unintentioned intrusion 75 yds. inside Cambodian territory last Thursday.

Prince Demands Investigation

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's chief of state, has demanded that the International Control Comm. investigate the violation of his border and the killing of 3 Cambodians during the fight.

Robert J. McCloskey, State Department press officer, said the incidents occurred while an American-So. Vietnamese patrol was defending itself from V. C. gunfire coming from both sides of the Vietnam-Cambodia border.

"We regret the intrusion," McCloskey said. "It was unintended and undertaken without any hostile intent."

Self Defense Asserted

It was the first officially acknowledged case in which American forces invoked the right of self defense enunciated a week ago by Asst. Sec. of State William P. Bundy.

Bundy told newsmen that the U.S. would continue to exercise this right if Communist Viet Cong and No. Vietnamese forces used Cambodia as a base for attacking American forces in Vietnam and as a sanctuary for retreat.

Bundy's statement followed a protest by the Soviet Union on Jan. 12 that it "will not remain indifferent" to U.S. violations of Cambodia's frontiers.

McCloskey said Monday that complete reports have not yet been received on last Thursday's border fight, but he said preliminary information indicates that the clash occurred in a village on the So. Vietnam side of the border between Prey Veng province in Cambodia and Kieng Phong province in So. Vietnam.

McCloskey described the village as being "inside the bend of the border, two-thirds surrounded by Cambodian territory."

75 Yards Over Border

"Our reports indicate the combined Vietnamese and U.S. patrol which came under heavy fire did cross over about 75 yds. into Cambodian territory during the firefight," he said.

"We have expressed regrets to the Cambodian government about any Cambodian casualties that may have occurred during the engagement," McCloskey said.

Since diplomatic relations between the U. S. and Cambodia were broken off in Apr. 1965 as a result of another border incident, McCloskey said the note of regret was conveyed to Sihanouk through the Australian embassy in Phnom Penh.

By coincidence, the diplomatic development came as Sen. Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Mont. said the U. S. must guard against further involvement in Southeast Asia.

"Negotiate" Says Mansfield

Mansfield called for negotiations to end the Vietnam conflict, saying: "Neither our national interests nor the interests selves to be drawn by the actions of others even deeper into Southeast Asia."

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of Cal., the Asst. Republican leader, said a sound peace settlement will require "negotiations on a broad international scale."

Pres. Johnson was reported still hopeful of working out a deal with No. Vietnam to halt U.S. bombing and open peace talks.

Johnson's renewed proposal, set forth in his State of the Un- of international peace and order are served by permitting our- ion message last Wednesday, to stop the bombing if Hanoi will agree not to take military advantage of the lull was rejected by No. Vietnam as "insolent."

"The U.S. has no right," said the Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan Sunday, "to put any condition to the Vietnamese people."

While Hanoi's reaction was viewed as sharply discouraging, officials said the U.S. will continue trying for a time to reach an agreement with the North Vietnamese.

Cambodians Claim Three Americans Killed

EDITOR'S NOTE—An Associated Press man visited the Cambodian outpost at the South Vietnamese border where the Cambodian government claimed U.S. and South Vietnamese forces made an attack. Here is his report.

By Eddie Adams

KOMPONG TRABEK, Cambodia (AP) — Shredded and blackened trees and some large splotches of dried blood mark an area where Cambodian officials say they killed three Americans and 20 South Vietnamese soldiers in a 45-minute battle on Cambodian territory last Thursday.

Evidence Present

Those given a guided tour of the area also found two bloody bandages marked "U.S." and a large section of an American-made flak jacket, empty insect repellent containers bearing the U.S. stamp and hundreds of .30 caliber shell casings.

The outpost is northwest of Saigon in an area where the border is poorly marked and disputed.

In Washington, the United States acknowledged Monday that American and South Vietnamese troops were involved in a firefight 75 yards inside Cambodian territory last Thursday, saying crossing of the frontier was "without hostile intent, not planned and it occurred during the heat of battle." A State Department spokesman said the United States sent formal regrets to Cambodia for any casualties that may have resulted in the incident, which he added resulted from a patrol trying to protect itself from Viet Cong fire on both sides of the border.

Attack Described

A Cambodian police oficer described the attack on the outpost, situated about 500 feet from the South Vietnam-Cambodian frontier, this way:

The Americans and South Vietnamese attacked at 5 a.m. Seven of his 20 men were sleeping outside the fortified command post when they came under fire. Three of the men were killed, one was wounded and three made it back to the outpost.

After several minutes, about 200 South Vietnamese and American troops crossed the border and penetrated about 100 yards into Cambodia toward the command post.

Fire Returned

The Cambodians returned fire with small arms, machine guns and mortars. After about 30 minutes a U. S. L19 observation plane flew over and was followed 10 minutes later by four U.S. fighter-bombers that flew over Cambodian territory.

One napalm bomb was dropped inside Cambodia and after 45 minutes the South Vietnamese and American forces withdrew, taking with them the three Americans killed. The Americans were easily identified because the light was good, the Cambodian official said.

"Hardly Militarily Prudent" --Westmoreland on Bombing Halt

SAIGON (AP)—Gen. William C. Westmoreland contends a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam would give the Communists a great political victory and a military advantage.

"It would hardly seem to be militarily prudent to stop the bombing," the commander of U.S. forces here said.

Westmoreland gave his views in an interview taped for showing by the National Broadcasting Co. on Monday.

The general spoke against a background of renewed calls for a bombing halt from some members of Congress, including Sens. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., and J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., as a possible way of starting peace talks.

Speaking of the Communist enemy, Westmoreland said: "If he did succeed in stopping the bombing, I think he would win a great political victory which could have quite an impact in North Vietnam.

"And we could find ourselves in a position where he would be developing his strength by virtue of his ability to move supplies with impunity down to the South."

Thieu Agrees

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam expressed similar views Monday in a lunar new year message to Vietnamese living abroad. He claimed so-called recent peace feelers from Hanoi about peace talks after an unconditional bombing halt were a political strategy to keep up infiltration and attacks in the South.

Thieu expressed the belief, However, that the Communists had failed in the military field and now were switching "to political and mental warfare, and will continue their dark schemes until the end of this year."

Thieu added: "But I think this would be the last phase before they have to accept peace negotiations or they gradually end their aggression because of exhaustion and despair."

Enemy in DMZ

Westmoreland speaking of the ground war, said the North Vietnamese have what he termed "considerable" artillery inside the demilitarized zone ready to hit allied positions along the North-South frontier.

"I think there will be considerable shelling of the demilitarized zone area around Con Thien and Gio Linh" Westmoreland said. The enemy "has positioned artillery to do this and no doubt has stockpiled considerable ammunition."

Con Thien and Gio Linh are two U.S. Marine outposts that came under heavy enemy artillery bombardment last fall.

"He will probably take advantage of any pause in the bombing in order to further build up these supplies," Westmoreland continued. "The enemy very much wants to stop the bombing. In my opinion his political campaign has as its No. 1 purpose . . . to get the bombing stopped without any reciprocal action on their part.

Lectures: . . . Readings: . . . Papers: . . . Exams: . . . Comments: . . .

The above is an excerpt from the May 1966 edition of Critique, the now-defunct publication which had offered a guide to UMass courses.

It sure would be nice to have such a publication today or to have had it on pre-registration day. But there is no more critique at UMass.

Because of student disinterest.

It's too bad the student's extraordinary eagerness to know whether the lectures are good or required, whether the readings are necessary or good, whether there are papers and how many exams, and what other kids say about the course—which is especially intense today—it's too bad this eagerness couldn't be channeled into a semester-long activity, into reviving one of the best publications ever produced at UMass.

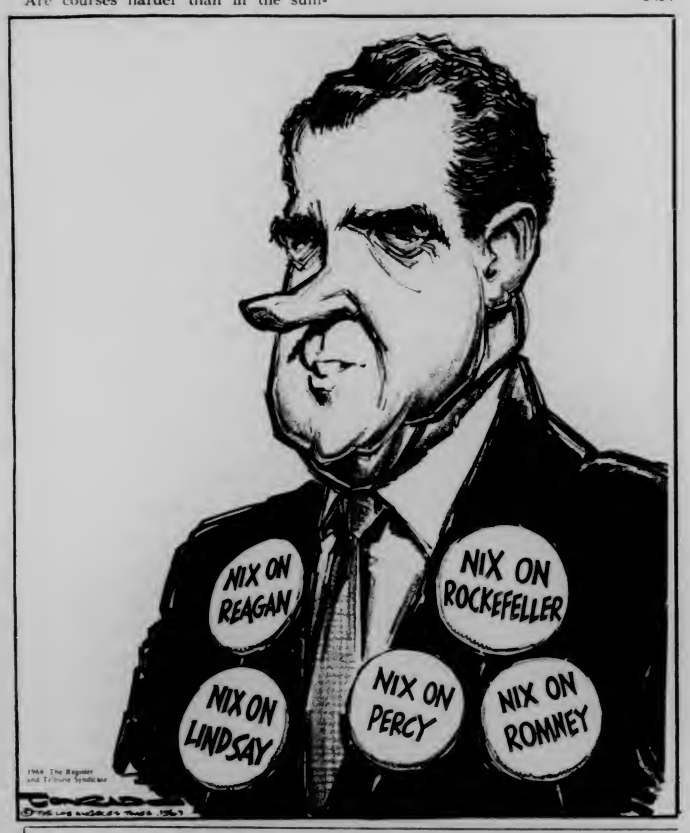
Nice To See You, Again

The swingshifter is arriving on campus once again. This time, however, he doesn't feel like the anxious high school senior who began his first semester in June.

Today's summer freshman thinks he's quite a swinger in many ways. After all he passed a semester of college months ago . . . and didn't he have a great ol' time at the campus in the summertime?

Right? Wrong.

The swingshifter is still somewhat anxious. He's getting a new roommate. Even though his swingshift class was the third, the freshman member fears that he must still prove himself a "regular" student to the class members who were here for the fall semester.



Are courses harder than in the summer—he doesn't know. He will be a little skeptical as he signs his registration card—his last set of courses were taken four months ago.

He doesn't know. He doesn't like questioning his place in the total University community. It seemed so much simpler when the campus was his domain, when the other kids on the corridor were summer freshmen too.

That feeling sums up the problem.

Welcome back, swingshifter but take note this isn't summer school. You are one of approximately 15,000 students. Now you have entered the University of Massachusetts. Hope you enjoy it. (You will, if you remember it's a new experience.)

Sam Spark Speaks Out

Another Sparkling Second Semester

January 23—The 1967-68 Swing Shifters float onto the campus with high aspirations that this semester will head the way for a semester with grass as green as last summer's.

January 24—Thousands of UMies, after receiving their cumes, vow that "this semester I'm really going to study."

January 30—The Daily Collegian publishes "Sam Spark's Greatest Hits", which is immediately hailed by literary critics as the greatest tragedy since King Lear.

February 2—In an effort to better utilize Dr. Drum's talents, a new course is instituted, specifically for Dr. Drum, which is to be a pot pourri of philosophy, music, history, theatrics, and current events.

February 6—Dr. Drum is fired for teaching photosynthesis and the Kreb's Cycle in his new course.

February 14—Pres. Dick Wood announces his revised plans for Senior Week. The week will be held on the French Riviera for the entire month of June. For those married students and indigent students who cannot afford the trip, an alternate Senior Week is being planned for the Newman Center.

February 19—At a luncheon honoring Negro stars in America, Lady Bird Johnson jumps to her feet and screams, "It's really them Negruz who are makin' our beautiful country so dirty and unpeacefulike; it's all them". In a press conference after the luncheon, Lady Bird expressed the hope that her guests weren't offended by her outburst, but she did not regret her speech because she felt that she spoke for a significant portion of the American people.

February 29—After seven months of total impartiality, Sen. Pres. James G. Collins is forced to take a stand when UM Pres. John Lederle threatens to dissolve the Student Senate. Collins is given academic probation for revengefully stealing Lederle's podium.

March 7—The Faculty Senate tables the open house bill on the recommendation of the administration's new lawyer who claims that open houses may violate the 27th ammendment.

March 9—The Mother of Voices reluctantly folds, sadly concluding that the University community was not ready for such a subtle piece of literature.

March 12—The results of the head-on clash between George Romney and Richard Nixon are announced, as the Michigan Governor cops second place behind last-minute write-in Harold Stassen.

March 13—David Eisenhower, venerable spokesman for the GOP, today urged all loyal Republicans to unite behind Harold Stassen, who "best exemplifies what the Republican party stands for." Eisenhower went on to predict that Stassen is the strongest possible candidate that the Republicans could have put up against Johnson in '68, and that there was a good chance for a victory.

March 14—The Faculty Senate tables the open house bill for two more weeks, claiming that not enough research was done on the bill.

March 25—The Soviet Union, China, the United Arab Republic, and France simultaneously declare war on Israel. In a swift one-day massacre, Moshe Dayan leads his troops across the globe and stuns the enemy. By sunset he has conquered all his adversaries. Comments Dayan: "Today is our finest hour, but occupation vill be a problem."

March 29—Lyndon Johnson reiterates his sincere intention to negotiate with the North Vietnamese any time, any place, anywhere, and with anybody, as long as the North Vietnamese sign a preliminary statement promising to unconditionally surrender within two weeks.

April 1.—To the surprise of all, the North Vietnamese agree to Johnson's terms of unconditional surrender as a preliminary condition to peace talks. But the U. S. continues bombing as Rusk explains that the U.S. is waiting for a clarification from the North Vietnamese as to exactly what they mean by "unconditional surrender."

April 3—The Faculty Senate tables the open house bill for one more week, claiming they want to be absolutely certain there is enough research done on the bill.

April 6—General Foods announces that due to surging labor costs, it will have to raise the price of its most famous product, Jello.

April 7—The Dining Commons announces that it is no longer fiscally possible for them to serve their customary variety of desserts, and thus all desserts will be discontinued until further notice.

April 14—The Faculty Senate finally passes the open house bill.

April 15—The administration vetoes the open house bill on the ground that such an excessive amount of research has been done on the bill that the issue has now become clouded. Provost Tippo is quick to add he would be amenable to possibly sanction the formation of new committees to begin research from scratch on a new open house bill.

April 26—World famous skier Jean Claude Killy, while playing catch with his son in his back yard, is hit on the right leg by a batted ball. Later, it is announced that the leg is broken and Killy may miss the last few meets of the season. Comments the French Athletic Union: "From now on, playing baseball in the off-season is strictly forbidden, as it is much too risky a game."

May 2—UM Police Chief Alexander Blasco gets a gold watch for tagging his 10,000th car. Praised by UM officials and policemen in Western Massachusetts, Blasco replies that he only hopes that next month will be equally successful.

May 15—As finals approach, and the unfinished term papers, unread books, and unstudied notes pile up, thousands of UMies vow that "next semester, I'm really going to study."

EDITORIAL DAY EDITORS MEETING—VERY BRIEFLY—AT 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

All letters to the editor must be typed at 60 spaces and should not exceed 40 lines. Letters must contain the signature and address of the writer. Names will not be withheld. Letters are subject to editing and condensing.

Think Negative?

There will be a meeting of the photo staff of the Daily Collegian at 7 p.m., Wednesday, January 24. Anyone interested in joining is invited to attend. No experience necessary, just a good image-ination. An equal opportunity employer.

UMass To Recruit Teachers For Girls' School in Uganda

The University of Massachusetts, in cooperation with the United States Agency for International Development (AID) is recruiting secondary school teacher specialists and consultants for the Tororo Girls' School, Uganda, East Africa.

The school was built and staffed by the UMass School of Education, and operates under an AID contract in cooperation with the Uganda Ministry of Education.

According to Elwyn Doubleday, UMass campus coordinator for the Uganda project, teachers of English, mathematics, home economics, business and science as well as a librarian and a guidance counselor will be needed to replace teachers completing their assignments this year. Teachers in all areas, however, are invited to apply for future vacancies.

All teaching assignments are for a minimum of two years. Applicants must be U.S. citizens and graduates of an accredited college or university. Other criteria include a sound academic preparation in the appropriate subject area and the ability and maturity to teach in and adjust to a new environment.

Salaries are higher than in most American public schools. Vacations and other benefits will be in accordance with UMass policies. Housing, basic furniture and most utilities are provided, as well as transportation for the teacher and dependents, personal effects, limited household furniture and an automobile.

Further information is available from Elwyn Doubleday, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

College Dean Sees "New Morality" Offering Teens Freedom To Choose

Has the "new morality," spearheaded by the Pill bolstered by a decline in fears that "something will go wrong," freed all teenagers for lives of untrammeled erotic ectasy? Are virgins as "out" as Edsels and Shirley Temple movies?

While a cursory reading of some youth-oriented roadsigns might give that impression, there is another side to the story of the "new morality," one which its adherents say is being downgraded. The case is expressed by Ernest Gordon, Dean of the University Chapel at Princeton University, in an article in the January Reader's Digest. Says Dean Gordon:

"I am convinced that there is emerging a powerful case, perhaps a new case, for chastity. freedom, under the so-called 'new Simply put, it is this: Sexual morality,' should be regarded by today's youth as a challenge to their freedom of choice. And freedom of choice, in the area of sex as elsewhere, involves the demand to choose for oneself, influenced by neither old fogy fears nor hipster pressures, the course that will contribute to the richest and fullest life."

In Dean Gordon's view, "choosing for oneself" will often result in the choice of chastity. He points to the Kinsey report, which found that 58 percent of college-bound males had no sex experience, and that 80 percent of unmarried girls aged 16 to 20 were virgins. "More recent surveys of both sexes reveal scant change in these figures," he says.

While the Pill may have removed the fear of pregnancy from a sex relationship, it cannot take away the lowered self-esteem that may result from promiscuous behavior, the author writes. "Indeed, near the top of the list of the costs of unchastity is a very much lowered self-esteem—yet the power to love another rests on the ability to respect oneself."

Noting that most young people want a sincere and permanent relationship, Dean Gordon asserts that chastity will help to insure this goal. Chastity does not mean a denial of sexuality; on the contrary, it implies its fulfillment."

On the other hand, studies of married couples have shown that those who were promiscuous before marriage stand less chance of being happy maritally, says Dean Gordon.

"From experience," he writes, "I am forced to conclude that chastity and monogamy are twins. They stand for the dignity of both the man and the woman."

Pioneer Valley Citizens Committee To Back Eugene McCarthy for President

An area committee of citizens supporting the candidacy of United States Senator Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota for nomination as President of the United States has been formed.

Called PIONEER VALLEY CITIZENS FOR McCARTHY, the committee met recently and elected seven citizens to its steering committee.

Brigadier General (Ret.) Wallace Ford of Montague Road, Amherst, is chairman of the steering committee. General Ford served in World War I, World War II and the Korean War. Recent issues of ESQUIRE and THE NEW REPUBLIC have noted General Ford's opposition to the Vietnamese war, along with similar opposition from other distinguished military leaders.

Other officers are The Rev. David S. King, Middle Street Amherst (Vice Chairman) and Prof. Ronald Rubel, Berkshire Terrace, Amherst (Secretary-Treasurer).

Completing the steering committee are: Prof. Gerard Braunthal of Red Gate Lane, Amherst; Prof. Colby Dempesy of Snell Street, Amherst; Mr. John Fitzgerald of Leverett; Dr. Robert Abrams of Holyoke and Prof. Allen Weinstein of Northampton.

Mr. Fitzgerald is a Captain, soon to be released from active duty, having served and been wounded in the Vietnam war.

Persons interested in giving financial support and working on the area committee are invited to write to PIONEER VALLEY CITIZENS FOR McCARTHY, Box 651, Amherst.

Other area committees are in process of formation in Greenfield, Springfield and Holyoke.

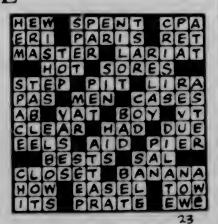
In announcing his entrance into several primary campaigns, including Massachusetts, Senator McCarthy said: "I am hopeful that a challenge may alleviate the sense of political helplessness and restore to many people a belief in the processes of American politics and of American government . . . The issue of the war in Vietnam is not a separate issue but is one which must be dealt with in the configuration of problems in which it occurs . . . I am not for peace at any price but for an honorable, rational, and political solution to this war; a solution which I believe will enhance our world position, encourage the respect of our allies and potential adversaries, which will permit us to give the necessary attention to our other commitments abroad—both military and non military — and leave us with resources and moral energy to deal effectively with the pressing domestic problems of the United States itself. In this total effort, I believe we can restore to this nation a clearer sense of purpose and of dedication to the achievement of that purpose."

Harrington Files Bill For Separate Trustees

Boston (AP) — Sen. Kevin B. Harrington, D - Salem, Senate majority leader, said Monday he will file legislation to set up separate trustees for each of the five state colleges in the most densely populated areas.

Harrington, who was a key figure in developing the Willis-Harrington bill reorganizing state education, said the colleges are being hampered in efforts to win capital outlay funds for expansion.

He said in a statement Monday he believes separate boards of trustees will allow each to "compete on equal terms with other institutional segments for its fair share of budgets and buildings."



The Board of State College trustees currently administers the affairs of the state's 11 state colleges.

The five Harrington wants given their own boards are Boston State, Salem, Bridgewater, Lowell and Westfield.

Henry V Tryouts Begin

The University Theatre invites everyone to try out for Shakespeare's Henry V. Tryouts begin Wednesday and continue Thursday, Friday, Monday and Tuesday evenings at 7:30 in 119 Bartlett.

Up to ten women's parts and more than thirty male parts must be cast. All graduate and undergraduate students, transfer students included, are welcome to try out. No previous acting experience is needed, and the great range of character types that appear in Henry V should offer an appealing part to nearly anyone who wishes to act.

Director Harry Mahnken wants Henry V to be "truly an all-University production." The cast is of tremendous size, and it should afford acting opportunities to people from all areas of the University, states Mahnken.

Mahnken is convinced that Henry V can be well done by a group of college men and women who are spirited and willing to perform. "I don't worry about the fact that Henry V is by Shakespeare. First and foremost it's a play, and one that's filled with a phenomenal variety of dramatic action."

Students may attend as many tryout sessions as they wish. Anyone not wishing to audition publicly or who wishes additional discussion with the director may arrange for a private conference by calling 545-0130.

Production dates for Henry V are March 6-9, four evening performances plus a Saturday matinee for high school students. Rehearsals will begin immediately following tryouts.

Houston Topples UCLA from First Place in AP Cage Poll

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Houston Cougars, who ended UCLA's unbeaten string at 47 games, toppled the Bruins from first place in The Associated Press' college basketball poll Monday while taking over the lead themselves by an overwhelming margin.

Houston, a 71-69 winner over UCLA Saturday night, received 32 first-place votes and three for second while the Bruins drew only three for the top position and 32 for second in the balloting by a national panel of 35 sports writers and broadcasters

Thus, on a basis of 10 points for a first-place vote, 9 for second, the Cougars had 347 points to UCLA's 318. Houston is unbeaten in 17 games.

The Bruins headed last season's final poll and had led each week since the start of the 1967-68 campaign.

New Mexico and St. Bonaventure, two other undefeated teams, gained ground. They moved up behind third-ranked North Carolina.

The Tar Heels were idle last week, their record holding at 11-1. New Mexico advanced from sixth to fourth after defeating Utah 72-66 and Wyoming 81-72, increasing its mark to 16-0. St. Bonaventure, 13-0, including last week's victory over Canisius, climbed from seventh to fifth.

Tennessee, which split two games with Florida, dropped from fourth to sixth. Vanderbilt, a 74-65 winner over Auburn for a 12-3 record, moved from ninth to seventh while Columbia also advanced two positions, from 10th to eighth. The Lions, 11-3, beat Cornell in their only start last week.

Kentucky fell one place to ninth after losing to Auburn, 74-73, and Utah, which lost twice, slipped from fifth place all the way to 10th.

The Top Ten, based on games through Jan. 20, total points:

1. Houston	347	5. St. Bonaventure	174
2. UCLA	318	6. Tennessee	139
3. North Carolina	270	7. Vanderbilt	92
4. New Mexico	204	8. Columbia	73
		9. Kentucky	58
		10. Utah	53

VERMONT . . .

grabbed 22 rebounds against a bullish TCU front line.

UMass came back the next night, however, to down a fine William and Mary team, 92-86. Shooting an incredible 70 per cent in the first half, Massachusetts got off to a 56-39 halftime lead.

UMass subsequently stretched the lead to as much as 20 points with less than nine minutes to go in the game, but the suddenly hot-shooting Indians then switched to a half-court zone press and chopped the lead away until with 1:20 to go in the game, UMass found itself leading by just three, 87-84.

With memories of the Pittsburgh nightmare haunting the Redmen, it was sophomore Dick Samuelson who coolly converted both ends of a crucial one-and-one opportunity to put the Redmen up by six and preserve the win. Samuelson was subbing for the fouled-out Gayeska.

Two more wins during intersession have brought the Redmen's record to 6-5, which they take to Vermont tonight. Conference wins tonight and against UConn next week would make UMass Rhode Island's sole challenger for the title.

UNH . . .

Sarcina fouled out with nine minutes to play, Shockro, Ellerbrook and sophomore Dick Starsiak took turns running the club. Starsiak picked up the first three points of his varsity career in the process.

UNH, now 1-13 on the season, hopes to turn itself around next semester with the help of some previously ineligible players. In the last few weeks the unlucky group from Durham has dropped a number of cliffhangers.

UMass Faces Dangerous Vermont Tonight

Win Streak On Line In Burlington Clash

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Riding the crest of a three-game winning streak, the resurgent UMass basketball team travels to Burlington, Vt. tonight for a Yankee Conference game against Vermont. The game will be broadcast by WMUA at 7:50 p.m.

The Catamounts, who start three sophomores, currently share second place in the Conference with UMass. Each is 3-1, with the only loss for each coming at the hands of league-leading Rhode Island. However, while the Redmen lost to URI by 10 points, UVM was bombed by 27.

Nevertheless, Vermont is improved and must be regarded with caution, especially on their home court at Burlington. The Catamounts overall record is presently 7-3. In addition to the Rhode Island loss, the other losses were to St. Francis (N.Y.) and LeMoyne.

The mainstays of the team are veterans Bill Librera, a forward, and guard Dave Lapointe. Librera, the captain, is a 6'3 senior who is in his third year as a Vermont starter. Librera leads the team in scoring with a 17-point average, and also is setting the pace in rebounding. He is a clutch ball player and a good shooter from medium range.

Lapointe, a 6'3 junior, was a high school All-America who is not disappointing Vermont fans. He hit for a 16.8 average last year and is averaging about the same this year. Lapointe is a fine outside shooter and a good ballhandler. He most likely will run the club for Coach Art Loche.

Joining Lapointe in the backcourt is one of UVM's promising sophomores, 6'2 Frank Martiniuk. Like Lapointe, he is a great outside shooter who is averaging about 13 points a game. The leading scorer for last year's frosh with a 21.5 average, Martiniuk is also one of the Catamounts' better defensive players.

Teaming up with Librera in the frontcourt is 6'6 soph Ray Bueb. A steadily improving forward, Bueb hits the boards well and is a fair shooter, especially from close in. It was his tremendous tap-in against Maine that tied the score with 28 seconds to play and set the stage for Vermont's 63-61 win.

The center is also a sophomore, 6'7 Aldo Salati. He was a teammate of Martiniuk at Emerson High School in Union City, N.J., which turns out some fine teams. Salati is a good shooter for a big man and is counted on by Vermont to do a lot of rebounding.

Loche's two top reserves are 6'3 forward Don Katz and 6'4 sophomore forward Bob Hutton. Katz, a senior, is a swing man who can also play in the backcourt if needed. When the going gets tough, Katz' experience is valuable. Hutton, with some experience, could be an excellent player.

For UMass, 6'9 center Peter Gayeska is still feeling the effects of a sprained ankle and is not expected to start tonight. As in the last two games, sophomore Dick Samuelson will start at the pivot.

The other starters will be Bill Tindall and Jim Girotti at forwards, and Joe DiSarcina and Ray Ellerbrook in the backcourt.

UMass has won five out of its last six games, a complete turnabout from their 1-4 mark after the Fordham loss. Only a seven point loss to Texas Christian in the UConn Holiday Classic keeps the Redmen from having a six-game winning streak.

In that game, UMass held a 10-point lead with six minutes to go, but an effective zone press by TCU enabled the Horned Frogs to outscore U-Mass 20-3 and win, 63-56. The loss marred the best performance of Pete Gayeska's career. Gayeska scored 21 points and

Redmen Upset Cross, Rout UNH; Tindall Surpasses 1000-Point Mark

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

WORCESTER—After a three-week layoff, the UMass basketball team invaded Worcester Auditorium last Wednesday and upset favored Holy Cross, 71-65.

The victory, which Coach Jack Leaman termed "our finest performance of the season," brought UM back to the .500 mark, giving them a 5-5 record.

The upset was the result of a superb team effort, but the brightest star of the night was sophomore center Dick Samuelson, starting his first game in the absence of the injured Peter Gayeska.

He scored 12 points, picked off 13 rebounds, and did a fine defensive job on Keith Hochstein, the ninth leading scorer in the country.

The lead changed hands several times early in the contest as Captain Billy Tindall traded baskets with Crusader star Ed Siudut.

With 8:06 to go in the first half, UM called time out with the score tied, 23-23. After returning to the floor, the Redmen proceeded to break the game open. Tindall and Samuelson connected, Holy Cross countered with three points, and then Joe DiSarcina, Ray Ellerbrook and Samuelson put together a seven-point string to put UM up by 8.

Two minutes later, Gary Gasperack, Tindall and Ellerbrook fashioned another string of seven and the Redmen held a 14-point lead. Two Crusader foul shots cut the lead to 43 - 31 at halftime.

UM maintained at least a 10-point bulge throughout the next ten minutes despite the fact that Tindall had to sit out six minutes because of foul trouble. Jim Girotti, Gasperack and Samuelson more than held their own on the boards against their bigger rivals.

Holy Cross tried to force the visitors into errors with a forecourt zone press, but the Redmen calmly foiled the Crusader plot with accurate passing which resulted in many layups and short jumpers.

Late in the contest the home team did manage one serious threat when Jim Murray and Siudut got hot from outside. With 2:07 to go, two free throws narrowed the gap to 68-63, but UM wasn't about to let this one get away. Pressure foul shooting by Samuelson, Tindall and Ellerbrook preserved the win.

Ellerbrook led the UM scoring with 18, while Tindall, DiSarcina and Samuelson also hit double figures with 15, 14 and 12 respectively. Girotti had four field goals to wrap up the balance scoring of the starting five.

Siudut's 22 points topped the Crusader scoring. Murray and Hochstein were also in twin figures. The loss dropped the disappointed Crusaders' record to 5-5.

DURHAM, N. H. — U M rolled to its third straight win here Saturday night behind the high-scoring efforts of Captain Billy Tindall as the Redmen romped over hapless New Hampshire, 98-73.

Tindall scored 32 points and hauled down 19 rebounds. The 32 markers gave the 6'5 senior 1005 career points, making him the sixth Redman in history to pass the 1000 mark.

UM moved into a second place tie with Vermont in the Yankee Conference race while UNH took its sixth Conference defeat without a win.

After a very brief struggle in the early minutes of the first half, the Redmen broke the game open behind the shooting of Tindall, both from the floor and from the charity stripe. UM controlled both backboards thanks to Tindall, Jim Girotti and Gary Gasperack.

At halftime, the visitors enjoyed a comfortable 50-30 lead. Tindall had 15 points and Ellerbrook came up with 13.

Tindall continued his fine shooting in the second half and UM was never seriously threatened. Coach Leaman used an all-Red Raider lineup during the last five minutes.

The Redmen were hampered by ankle injuries to Pete Gayeska and Dick Samuelson. Both centers got a chance to test their legs and it appeared that Samuelson had the lesser handicap. Senior Rick Perkins was also out with a back injury.

Besides Tindall's 32 points, Ellerbrook canned 15, Gasperack 12 and Shockro 10, as the Redmen had four men in double figures. Scott Sargent, a 6'3 junior from Delmar, N. Y., led UNH with 33 points. No other Wildcat could manage double figures.

The tenacious UM defense, led by Joe DiSarcina, had UNH forcing its shots all night. After Di-

Leaman Feels Redmen Can Beat Anybody on Schedule

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Things are looking up for Jack Leaman and the UMass basketball team. The Redmen stand 6-5 going into tonight's game at Vermont, a far cry from their 1-4 record after the Fordham game on December 13.

UMass has won its last three games and five out of the last six. This includes a split in the UConn Christmas Classic and two wins during intersession. The season takes a crucial turn now with important conference games coming up as well as games against strong independents like Providence and Boston College.

Ever-optimistic Coach Leaman feels that the Redmen are capable of beating anybody on their schedule. Even B.C. and St. John's, two of the best in the East? "Yes, even B.C. and St. John's," Leaman boldly said.

The way UMass has been playing lately, don't discount such "impossible dreams."

Captain Billy Tindall became the sixth Redman in history to join the 1000-Point Club Saturday with his 32-point output at New Hampshire. Bill joins the select group which includes former greats Clarence Hill, Doug Grutchfield, Rodger Twitchell, Jack Foley and Tim Edwards.

With 14 games remaining on the schedule, Tindall has a great chance of surpassing Grutchfield's 1257 career points in second place, and even has an outside shot at Hill's record of 1369 points.

The only dark spot of the vacation was an ankle injury suffered by center Peter Gayeska in practice. Gayeska missed the Holy Cross game and most of the New Hampshire game, and fortunately sophomore

Redmen Roundup

Dick Samuelson filled in well for him. Gayeska, still favoring the sprained ankle, is expected to miss tonight's Vermont game.

After tonight's game, the Redmen return home Thursday night for a game against Providence. The Friars, minus Jimmy Walker, have been taking their licks this year.

Speaking of taking licks, this is D-Weekend for Holy Cross and Boston College. The D stands for devastation at the hands of UCLA, which despite the loss to Houston is still in the eyes of this observer the best in the nation. The way the Bruins played against the Cougars Saturday night, they would have trouble against a lot of teams.

Alcindor and the boys, however, should fatten up this weekend in Madison Square Garden on Massachusetts' two Jesuit schools. The only interest in Friday night's game against Holy Cross is Crusader coach Jack Donohue's meeting wth his Power Memorial prodigy, Alcindor. Otherwise, the Bruins can name their own score.

The B.C. game seems a little more feasible, what with the Eagles' strong pre-season rating. However, B.C. has fallen far short of its expectation, and Alcindor, one eye and all, will have little trouble Saturday night, too.

This coming weekend is one of the biggest, sportswise, for UMass fans this season. The UMass hockey team, idle since the Yankee Conference tourney in December, gets underway with a 7:30 game at Orr Rink Friday night against Colby. The Redmen pucksters, 3-7 on the season, finished third in the Yankee Conference tourney at Vermont, losing to perennial winner New Hampshire in the first round and beating UConn in the consolation.

Then on Saturday, UMass fans can watch the UMass-Yale basketball game at New Haven on the New England ECAC TV game of the week. The game will be televised locally on Channel 22 and air time will be 2 p.m. The Elis have one of their best squads in a long time, and will bring a 9-4 record into the game.

That night, local fans will have their choice of two sports offerings. The gymnastics team, 2-2 on the season and idle since December 16, faces its biggest meet of the year, against perennial Eastern champion Penn State. To accommodate the expected large crowd for this one, the meet will be held in the Cage at 8:15 Saturday night.

The Nittany Lions, despite the graduation of two-year NCAA all-around champion Steve Cohen, are again expected to be the best in the east.

There will also be a hockey game Saturday night, at Orr Rink against Williams at 7:30. The wrestling team, which has also been idle since before Christmas, resumes Saturday night at Williams. The swimming team, which hasn't seen action since December 14, is idle until February 10 when it travels to Vermont. And the track team, under first-year coach Ken O'Brien, kicks off its season of three dual meets on February 17 at Northeastern.

"I'm not overly concerned about student opinion on this matter."

A major argument of advocates of the open door policy is that parietal hour restrictions prevent "undesirable" activity. The hypocritical conflict of student responsibility vs. in loco parentis policy appears to be the stumbling block in the present situation. It becomes a question of the student being free to decide what is morally right or being told what is.

Field Sees Possibility Of Revised Proposal

Dean of Students William F. Field commented on the possibility of a revised report of the Student Affairs Committee by saying, "It is certainly reasonable to assume that since other alternatives have been considered in the past, the committee will consider a variety of proposals" now that their recommendation has been returned to them."

Referring to proposals submitted during the committee's sittings, he said that some of the eaarly alternative ideas might be reconsidered.

While Field was unable to say what will happen in committee, he offered the opinion that if there is not modification of the recommendations, individual members of the Senate will probably introduce alternative measures on the floor.

Field pointed out that no one on the committee, even those members not wholly supporting the majority stand, offered the Faculty Senate a minority report or motion.

The Proposal In Question...

(The following is the text of the open house proposal approved by a majority of the Student Affairs Committee.)

"MOVED: that the Faculty Senate accept the following policy recommendations:

Each residence unit government shall be allowed to determine its own unique policy on the frequency, duration, door policy and social conduct with respect to open houses. Residence unit governments may establish these open houses as open or closed social events and may establish policies relating to the registration of guests.

Students' residence halls and fraternity and sorority chapter houses must comply with existing security measures of the University which provide that these residences be locked at midnight Sunday through Thursday, and at 1 A.M. Friday and Saturday nights and be reopened at 7:00 A.M. every day. Members of the opposite sex must be out of these residence units during these hours.

The present University policies on open houses shall remain in force until each residence unit makes provisions for implementing the recommended policy.

Procedures for implementing the open house policies will be as follows:

1) Each open house shall be approved separately by a majority of all the residents either at house meetings or at section meetings.
2) Each residence unit must determine anew its frequency, duration, door policy and social conduct for no more than two week intervals. House governments must clearly articulate their program, must inform their membership of open house events sufficiently in advance and must be prepared to submit, on request, descriptions of their programs to the Student Personnel representative having administrative liaison with their place of residence.
3) At the end of each semester, each house government council shall submit an evaluation of its policy to the Student Senate and Student Life Committee.
4) Annual evaluations of the policy shall take place by the Student Senate, Student Life Committee and the Dean of Students.
5) Fraternities and sororities come under the purview of the above policies."

...And Its Capsule History

Fall 1966—Jim Collins introduced S115 to allow the frequency, duration, and door policy of open houses to be determined by the house governments; the bill was tabled to the Men's Affairs and Women's Affairs Committees of the Student Senate.

April 1967—The Student Senate passed S 115.

July 1967—Student Life Committee unanimously approved S 115 with an amendment substituting "the majority vote of the house" for "the house government."

Fall 1967—The Student Senate reconsidered the bill and gave consent to the Student Life recommendation.

Dec. 1967—Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate passed the open house proposal, 9-6.

Jan. 4, 1968—The Faculty Senate returned the proposal to the Student Affairs Committee, with the charge of reporting to the Senate by March 7.

How Members of the Faculty Senate View Open Houses

WEXLER

Willing to vote in the Faculty Senate to approve the open house proposal with the exception of one part of it, Sidney F. Wexler, professor of Spanish, made the following amendment:

"In all cases where there is visitation between the sexes, doors of interior rooms of University residence hall, fraternities, and sororities shall be kept open." He also moved to strike other references in the recommendations to leaving the door policy at the discretion of the houses concerned.

He emphasized that he was not in opposition to the majority committee report and that his amendment was not a substitution motion.

But, he declared, University residence halls should not be available as "economical, or convenient substitutes" for motel rooms. He stated that while he believes that while experience may be the teacher, in this case it may charge too high a rate of tuition.

"What do I mean?" he asked. "I don't want any of our girls getting pregnant on university grounds nor any of our boys being responsible," he added.

In regard to the regulations of the Commonwealth cited by the Provost at the Senate meeting, Wexler offered a three-part opinion. He said that he was not a lawyer, that the acts should be interpreted by the legal profession and courts rather than in Faculty Senate, and that the citizens of the state have the recourse of changing laws they don't like, through the ballot.

In his opinion, the whole package will not pass the Senate if it is re-introduced there again in its original form. He gave the revised proposal incorporating his amendment a fair chance but observed that there may well be more changes or even a rejection of the original motion entirely.

On the overall, he summarized he was willing to take his chances on the proposal with his amendment, basing his stand on the good common sense and maturity of the students. Conceding that the students will possibly make mistakes, will probably although perhaps unthinkingly deny minority rights, he expressed his support for the proposal as amended

REID

Ronald F. Reid of the Speech Department explained his reasons for speaking against the open house proposal of the Student Affairs Committee as being primarily because he could

UMass' Policy

From "Residence Hall Regulations" as contained in the 1967-68 "Student Handbook," pages 15 and 16:

The University does not allow visits by students in residence hall rooms of the opposite sex. However, residence halls may have open houses by majority vote of the residents once each month, on a weekend or holiday afternoon or evening; or on a weekday evening preceding a holiday.

Open house may be held for any period of time between the hours of 6 p.m. to midnight on a Friday evening or evening before a holiday, or for any period of time between the hours of noon to 6 p.m., or 6 p.m. to midnight on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays.

Each house is responsible for enforcement of appropriate standards of conduct. It is to be understood that violation of open house regulations will normally result in loss of open house privileges. These social events will be registered with the Student Union Scheduling Office.

Amherst's Policy

Amherst College, despite the possible interpretations of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 140, Section 26, permits "daily" open houses. In the words of the Student Handbook:

"Lady guests may be admitted to the dormitories during hours established by the College Council and approved by the President. Such guests must be escorted by a resident student. At the present time, the hours during which lady guests may be admitted to the dormitories are:

"Monday through Thursday: 10:00 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Friday through Sunday: 10:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m."

Between publication of the handbook and the present day, an extension in the hours on Saturday has been granted, from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. According to Sidney Kahn of The Amherst Student Board of Editors, the college makes no effort to provide for open doors and the doors are closed in practice.

How Faculty Senate View...

see no advantages coming from the process. The argument that the students might be able to exercise the democratic processes more fully was ambigious and not very persuasive to him.

At the present time, he pointed out, students already have a great deal of opportunity to participate in self-government in the Student Senate and the student judiciaries.

In addition to not seeing any gains to be made from a new policy as recommended, Reid cited disadvantages or risks involved in the proposal. He said he was not altogether sure that the right of privacy or the rights of non-participants—the minority not wanting open houses—would be protected. The answer that the majority rules is an oversimplification to this problem, he said.

One of his chief concerns, he continued, was the possibility of a number of students in a dormitory "who want the whole hog" —open house every night—getting their way because the other students would not speak out against such motions for fear of being labeled prudes. He expressed the fear that the minority of students won't have the guts to stand up.

Referring to his own undergraduate days, Reid discussed two reasons why students might not want members of the opposite sex present too often in a dormitory. He recalled it would involve a change in language and dress, at least in the case of the men.

Reid expressed the view that some students—he didn't know how many—would find a closed door policy offensive.

Reid, a faculty fellow for Melville House, attempted to gather student opinion one day after class. He also reported the general reaction of his collegues is being a belief that there is general support among the students for the open house proposal, but not necessarily energetic support. However, the view was that most of the students would go along with the idea.

"I'm not overly concerned," Reid admitted, "about student opinion on this matter." He implied that reservations on the open house proposal brought to his attention carried more weight that what is supposed to be the student opinion.

BERKMAN

The following statement was made by Mrs. Joyce A. Berkman of the Student Affairs Committee. Mrs. Berkman, who presented the majority arguments at the Faculty Senate meeting, told the Daily Collegian that she expected the committee to stick to its original stand.

"I heartily support the open house proposal." It reflects the sensible and responsible thinking of students and faculty. It fosters the social, intellectual, and moral growth of the student by providing valuable experience in the application of classroom principles to concrete daily situations in self-government, in democratic community living, and in interpersonal awareness.

"I am hopeful that upon further consideration the Faculty Senate will pass the open house proposal."

JOHNSON

Karen R. Johnson expressed her position as not entirely in favor of the broad policy recommended by the majority and now adds the legal questions raised by the Provost as equally important for her present opposition. She expressed the feeling the committee will have to do quite a bit more work in regard to the acts cited.

Among her own reservations, Miss Johnson included the door policy, protection of minority rights, questioning of the ability of the student judiciary to handle such THINGS as destruction of dormitory property, and the maturity of the student who might participate.

Some of the work of the committee has been negated, she said, by the introduction of the legal question—which the committee had not considered before making its report. At the same time there was pressure on the committee to make an early report and perhaps the time factor was responsible for the failure to investigate every aspect of the question, she indicated.

But, Miss Johnson's analysis of the committee thinking is that taking a little bit more time still would not have enabled the members to reach a unanimous understanding.

HIGGINS

George R. Higgins expressed the hope the open house proposal will be significantly modified in committee. Rather than for him to offer a detailed opinion on parts of the proposal, he indicated that it would be better to have the opinion of all the committee members in their report.

VARMA

Margaret Fernandes Varma, who has had difficulty in making meetings of the Student Affairs Committee due to her academic schedule and who has requested to be removed from the committee, told the Daily Collegian that she felt unprepared to comment on the open house proposal.

From the minutes of the Faculty Senate meeting of January 4, 1968:

Oral arguments in support of the Motion:

(1) Fosters autonomy and maturity in the individual — puts the student on an adult footing.
(2) Exposure to stresses and strains is necessary to be a truly free and responsible being.
(3) Heightens interpersonal sensitivity and awareness.
(4) Recognizes a fundamental right of students to determine residence policies.
(5) Approximately 5,000 students have signed petitions supporting the proposed change in policy.
(6) The requirements that policy be determined by absolute majority and that residence units review their policies bi-weekly provide adequate safeguards.

Oral arguments against adoption:

(1) Students may vote an excessive number of open houses.
(2) The price of learning by experience may be too high in this instance.
(3) Undue interference with minority rights — too few options.
(4) Literally forces students into situations for which they are ill prepared in many respects.
(5) Students not taking advantage of present opportunities to experience democratic living.
(6) State statutes cast doubt on the legality of the policy.

Act cited by Provost Tippo at the Faculty Senate meeting:

M.G. L. Chapter 140, Section 26 states in part:

Whoever, being licensed as a lodging house keeper . . . or being in actual charge, management or control of such lodging house . . . knowingly permits the property under his control to be used for the purpose of immoral solicitation, immoral bargaining or immoral conduct shall be punished . . . Evidence that a room in a hotel or lodging house (was) not actually used for immoral conduct shall not prevent a conviction under this section of a person in actual charge, control or management of the hotel, lodging house or premises who permits the occupation of such a room or such premises knowing or having good reason to know that the person occupying such room or premises intends to use either for immoral solicitation, immoral bargaining or immoral conduct . . .

Students Should Decide

To students in favor of the open house recommendation of the Student Senate, the feeling held by certain members of the Student Affairs Committee that the great majority of the students do not really want open house is extremely disturbing. Many of these student spokesmen are deeply committed to the philosophy that the students should be permitted to determine significant questions, especially regarding their social life, which affect them.

These students believe that the student body is capable of deciding the frequency, door policy, and duration of open houses. They consider it unfair for the administration or faculty senators to offer substitute proposals in effect giving the students more open houses but not the ultimate establishment of student discretion on the question of frequency.

These are realistic student advocates. They can see that it might be necessary to compromise on the door policy this year. But they feel hurt, and rightly so, when it is suggested that the frequency should be set down 10 or so a month for the campus. If anybody, be it the Student Affairs Committee, Faculty Senate, administration, or trustees, says no to the idea of residence hall "autonomy" and says yes to more open house per month, they will not be serving the students.

The important issue is whether the residence halls shall have increased discretion over open houses—having a greater number per month does not automatically accomplish this goal. Allowing each house to determine its own unique frequency would be in keeping with the idea of "autonomy."

It is extremely difficult to advise the student members of the Student Affairs Committee—to accept or reject the Wexler amendment. The only reason for accepting it would be to secure passage of the entire proposal.

But the students must stick to their stand on the question of frequency being set by each residence unit.

Whether the students want more open houses or not, and 99% of the respondents in the Central Area survey do—, the student leaders are right in calling for decentralization of University government. The very existence of the Student Senate and student members on the Student Life and Student Affairs Committees justifies and compels this leadership position.

Mr. Reid's argument that the students have enough opportunities for self-government now is simply a ridiculous argument in terms of political philosophy.

The Provost's introduction of the legal questions at the meeting of the Faculty Senate was not in the interests of achieving a viable policy—the reference should have been made to the committee and the report to the Senate should not have been heard until the legal matters were disposed of.

Collins Says:

Students Responsible And Mature

The tabling of the proposed Open House Policy by the Faculty Senate to the Student Affairs Committee was, in my opinion, necessary since the legal questions raised must be answered before the bill can finally be considered. However, it would have been preferable if these questions were introduced to Student Affairs while the Policy was being originally formulated. During the last week I have obtained legal opinion concerning the statutes involved and believe that, with minor alterations, the policy can be presented as a legal document.

The Open House Policy is predicated upon the belief that the students at the University of Massachusetts are responsible and mature enough to derive benefit from a flexible but reasonable method of scheduling open houses.

At the Student Senate meeting this evening at 7:00 P.M. in the Council Chambers I shall report the Faculty Senate's actions concerning the tabling of the Policy.

I have also called a special meeting of all the Residence Hall, Fraternity, and Sorority Governments on campus for next Monday evening to discuss the progress of the Policy and to attain their opinions concerning future student action.

Student Members of Committee:

"We Have Made Our Report"

When are we going to have open houses?—All we want are two or three a month. When is the Student Senate going to do something about open houses? These are some of the questions I heard continuously from students the past year and a half as a former student senator and resident of Grayson House.

Well, now I can give an answer to these questions. We, now, give you, students, open houses; in fact, we give you more than just open houses; we give you the right to determine your own open house policy and how many open houses your resident hall should have; we give you the right to determine what rules and regulations shall govern your open house policy; we give you responsibilities; in other words, we give you the right to exercise democracy at grass-roots level, its most effective level.

Who are we that give you these valuable democratic rights? "We" are you, who have expressed a desire to have open houses, and have also desired to have more chance for participation in formulating your own rules and regulations.

"We" are students in Student Life, Student Senate, and other interested students who have hashed over this open house business for well over a year and a half. "WE" also includes a small number of faculty members who have shown interest. Now, "we" have made our report and are granting you these rights through the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

Although "we are" granting you these rights, we must now turn to they, "they" being the faculty senate, administration, and perhaps the trustees. Will they grant you open houses? Will they grant you the right to determine your own policy? Will "they" allow you to be educated in our American philosophy through practical exercise of grass-roots democracy? Will "they" help take U. Mass. a step forward in progressive democracy, social living, and education?

If the answers to these questions are no, then they may as well denounce the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the U.S. and "we" may as well start a revolution.

Student Arguments

(The following is the recommendation on open houses included in the April 4, 1967 "Report of the Men's Affairs Committee on Rules" to the Student Senate and subsequently approved by that body. —Ed.)

"The question of open houses on this campus resolves itself into a simple question of sex and individual responsibility, and there are three ways of looking at this from an educational standpoint.

The first was, as expounded by John Kenneth Galbraith says the proper function of the University is to educate, and as the question of sexual responsibility is, according to Galbraith, an essentially uneducatable one from a university standpoint, it should not be the concern of the University. He goes on to say that the relevance of such problems is ingrained in the personality, background, and mores of the individual, and for a University to act on different premises by changing these factors is to act in loco parentis.'

The other two ways of looking at the situation assert that the problem does have a remedy in the forces of the administration. The first of these two is essentially what appears to be the position of the administration in other areas at the present time. In so far as we can determine it to be, the working premise of the administration is that such responsibility can be learned, and in fact must be learned as a part of what should be a total, not simply academic effort to educate the individual, and that this 'learning' is best accomplished by doing. Thus, for example, the best way to learn responsibility with respect to getting in at night is to set your own curfew, rather than to have it imposed by the University.

The differences between this attitude and the Galbraith article are philosophical in nature, and would differ little in their practical application. It should be noted, however, that both positions are in emphatic disagreement with the idea of a university acting 'in loco parentis.'

The third and last position, which is in direct conflict to the above, states that the administration should try to protect the undergraduate community from the natural penalties of indescretion regarding sex, alcohol, etc. We find this attitude unacceptable for philosophical as well as practical reasons.

First, the idea of a university administration on an ex-officio basis making what amounts to parental decisions is a contradiction of the acknowledged policy of student self government. Residents are told that they are sufficiently mature to have a counselor who is essentially advisory in function, to tax themselves and budget in the range of one thousand dollars, and to establish a student judiciary system which has and will continue to rule on moral issues, including infractions of rules which deal with the question of having a member of the opposite sex in one's room.

Is it then consistent to tell them that they do not have the ability to formulate vitally important rules in the area of open houses? In short, we feel that a policy of students passing judgment on fellow students with respect to rules that

Comments on Open Houses

Arguments Weak

The "Student Residence Open House Policy Recommendation" raises difficult problems regarding responsible action by both students and the faculty and administrators who are responsible for student conduct. We live in an era when electronic devices create numerous possibilities for invading an individual's privacy. Indifference to student needs for privacy, clearly encourages callousness toward privacy in American society at large. The University must do what it reasonably can to protect the privacy of individual students.

Unfortunately routes to encouraging student autonomy and responsibility are not always clear-cut. Architectural decisions made years ago set practical limits on what can be done. Older residence halls, in particular, were constructed with little thought of a student's privacy. Even the new dormitories perpetuate the oider cell-block arrangement of rooms, the dreary long halls, the group facilities for recreation and sanitation, and the lack of possibility for individual access to rooms.

While this architectural design doubtless makes financial sense, it hardy provides a humanizing atmosphere for student life. The physical arrangement of residence areas does create, as opponents of the "open house" proposal note, very real problems for implementing such a policy. Will not the privacy of roommates and other residents of a corridor be invaded by the presence of the opposite sex on the same corridor?

Such objections must be taken seriously; however, many of the arguments against the "open house" policy strike me as weak. Some faculty members fear "excessive" numbers of open houses will be voted. This point is completely hypothetical and is likely to prove unfounded.

Similarly the assertion that "the price of learning" autonomy and maturity "may be too high" panders to fears raised by mistrust of students and again appears to be hypothetical. Students, opponents of open houses say, will be "literally forced" into "situations for which they are ill prepared." Who, one wonders, is to prepare these students for mature life? Certainly the present situation where men sometimes take dates to their rooms at undesignated hours is neither good for the morale of roommates nor providing the regularity and order which sanctioned hours would foster.

Affairs Committee Defends Open House Recommendations

By the Student Affairs Committee

In attempting to devise the best possible rationale for this policy, the following contrary arguments have been considered and evaluated:

A. "THE ADMINISTRATION HAS ABDICATED ITS RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE PERSONAL AND SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE STUDENT."

1. The University is not abdicating this responsibility; rather, it is fulfilling this responsibility, since the proposed open house policy fosters personal and social development of the student by demanding individual responsibility and promoting the growth of social knowledge. For example, just as parents, by trusting their son in the responsible use of the family car, have fulfilled their responsibility in developing a self-reliant and responsible child, so the University, by delegating the right to determine open house policy provides the opportunity for individual maturation. Implicit in the view that the University is fulfilling its responsibility by delegating the rights involved in the formulating of open house policy is the premise that students want and are capable of these rights.

a. In a recent survey of student opinion approximately 95% of students affirmed that visits to students' rooms by members of the opposite sex were desirable.

b. The Open House Proposal originated in the Student Senate in March, 1967, after extensive committee work, received unanimous endorsement. The Student Life Committee, composed of students, administrators and faculty - adminstrators, considered and unanimously endorsed the Open House report which again received unanimous Student Senate approval in September, 1967.

c. During every stage of consideration of the open house proposal, it was necessary to grapple with the question of student readiness for such extensive rights. In justifying the view of sufficient maturity, the following points can be made:

1) Veto power having been removed from heads of residence, the governing of the residence halls is now in the hands of duly elected house councils.

2) The campus-wide judicial structure, including residence hall judiciaries, has been created by students and is operated by them.

3) The institution of self-imposed curfews has negated claims that students were incapable of regulating their social and academic lives. The wisdom of placing faith in student maturity has been confirmed by the satisfactory experiences of such self-government.

d. According to the survey previously cited, students clearly recognize the priority of academic responsibility. The study indicated median participation in fewer than four open houses per semester per student.

e. As noted in the introduction, high school graduates are assumed capable of performing important tasks and fulfilling tremendous obligations of work or marriage and family.

B. "OPEN HOUSES WILL VIOLATE THE PRIVACY OF NON-PARTICIPANTS."

1. Voting procedure as defined above seeks maximum protection of the rights of the minority.

2. The privacy of the majority has hitherto been violated by the existing regulations. There are few places on the University campus which are not public and where a couple may be alone together. The critical need for such opportunities for privacy have been argued by contemporary psychologists and sociologists such as Erik Erikson and Edgar Friedenberg, who point to the woeful inability of adult Americans to enter into emotionally open and loving human relationships.

3. The survey previously cited shows that only 2% of the University students considered visitation to their rooms by members of the opposite sex an invasion of personal privacy.

4. The heart of the educational values of the Open House policy lies in fostering inter-personal sensitivity (be it with one's guest, one's roommate or one's fellow residents) and collective awareness of and provision for possible abuse of self regulation.

C. "SINCE THE RESIDENCE HALL ROOM IS A BEDROOM, THE OPEN HOUSE POLICY WOULD FOSTER PRE-MARITAL INTERCOURSE."

1. The residence hall room serves many functions: it is an office, living and entertainment area as well as a bedroom, much like a studio apartment.

2. If the University authorities consider the residence unit room exclusively a bedroom, why do they permit any open houses? Is it consistent to oppose open houses on sexual grounds and yet permit occasional open houses?
If it is argued that the present open house policy of open doors obviates the sexual "danger", it can be countered that just as the University does not insist on locked doors to prevent robbery, so likewise the University ought not insist on open doors toobligate conformity to conventional morality.

3. The process by which students reach thoughtful, deeply considered, and committed moral standards is impaired when conditions preclude free, intelligent, and moral choice, and instead invite an unthinking adherence to or rebellion from conventional moral standards.

In short, we believe this Open House Policy to be in the best interests of the educational purpose of the University, and we urge its endorsement by all members of the University community.

Favor Open Houses

student had no part in formulating is philosophically unjustifiable.

Secondly, from a practical point of view, it has become entirely clear to the entire university community (we hope) that standards which conflict with established mores are simply not enforceable. It is true that a rule against having a member of the opposite sex in a room is moderately easy to enforce, but the more basic question of pre-marital sex cannot be so enforced, and this is what the third point of view is trying to protect us from.

What, then, are the implications of the first two policies as applied to this campus? The effect divides itself into two areas, the effect on collective structures (student government) and the effect on the individual.

Student government, especially House government would be greatly strengthened, for it would not be concerned with an issue which is immediate to and vitally concerns all residents of the University. As this happened, student apathy grounded in a hopelessness of changing the system could be to some extent ameleorated. Obviously this is no penance for apathy, but it is a step in the right direction.

Along with this will come an increased sense of personal freedom and responsibility which is needed, as the administration has well pointed out, for any kind of total education. A question might be raised as to the effect of open houses on the privacy of those who did not participate.

The first answer to this question is another question: In not the privacy of those responsible students who wish open houses presently being violated, for it is well known that there is no place on this campus where in bad weather a couple may be alone together, even to talk, and that such cases are in the vast majority?

The other point is that it may be logically assumed that residence halls will set only certain times of the day for open houses so as to suit the aggregate needs of the House.

With respect to open houses, then, these are our recommendations, 'made in recognition of the educational value to students of their assuming the greatest possible responsibility for their total development':

- We recommend that the present policy of closing residence halls at a specific hour be continued, for we believe the present policy of providing security of person and property is a good one. The closing hours of the residence halls should be flexible to the extent that special occasions may warrent a change in the hours. We do not believe that residence halls should be used in such a way as to allow all night lodging for members of the opposite sex.
- We recommend that each residence hall government be allowed to determine its own unique policy on the frequency, duration, social conduct and door policy with respect to open houses. Residence hall governments may establish these open houses as open or closed social events, and may establish policies relating to the registration of guests. Adoption of such policies shall be treated as any other piece of legislation in that House."

Says Chairman Maynard

"It Would Create Pressure"

The Chairman of the Student Affairs Committee, Donald Maynard expressed the view that the first question for the committee to consider in reviewing its proposal will be the legal problems. He indicated that the committee will consider the opinions of University legal counsel as its first order of business.

Speaking of his personal doubts about the proposal, he said, "this would create considerable pressures on individual students and perhaps this would be beyond the pressure they ought to be subjected to."

In his opinion also, if it were not for the legal questions, the recommendations would probably stay the same unless some members could be persuaded to change their minds.

He spoke of his frustration as chairman of a committee that could not reach one conclusion on the question. It would have been nice, he concluded, to have had a unanimous report.

Goddard Asks

"Do Students Really Want It?"

"As you probably know, I was on the minority side in the committee," was the way George B. Goddard began an interview with the Daily Collegian. But, he said, he had at first supported what became the majority report.

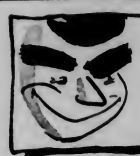
He kicked the idea around, he reported. Bringing it up in his classes, he found, he said, that it wasn't as popular as it seemed to be. Students in his view didn't want unlimited open houses.

Submitting a proposal in committee to have, rather than unlimited open houses, a specific number each month, with the duration spelled out and with an open door policy he related that his proposals went over the committee like a lead balloon.

The actual proposal made by Goddard was to have up to five open houses a month with approval by 75% of all the residences being required.

Speaking of the self-government aspect of the majority's proposal, he pointed out that self-government is never completely autonomous—there are always certain restrictions especially by the complementary governing unit. He referred to the overlapping of federal and state government with self-government being a feature of both.

In support of an open door policy, he was motivated by both moral considerations and practical ones, he explained. The University has to protect itself against charges of permitting or fostering immoral behavior, he argued.



On one side, he said, those members not wanting an unlimited number of open house were willing to compromise. But on the other side, those members wanting an unlimited number would not compromise, he said.

Goddard expressed the view that the committee moved too fast in debate that was not sufficiently coherent.

While he did not forsee support for his proposal now, Mr. Goddard expressed the hope that the committee might enjoy more coherent dialogue now. Perhaps, he implied the gap between the too unrealistic majority recommendation and his too realistic proposal might be bridged.

1968: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

Are you still writing "1967" on your papers and letters? I'll bet you are, you scamp! But I am not one to be harsh with those who forgot we are in a new year, for I myself have long been guilty of the same lapse. In fact, in my senior year at college, I wrote 1873 on my papers until nearly November of 1874! (It turned out, incidentally, not to be such a serious error because, as we all know, 1874 was later repealed by President Chester A. Arthur in a fit of pique over the Black Tom Explosion. And, as we all know, Mr. Arthur later came to regret his hasty action. Who does not recall that famous meeting between Mr. Arthur and Louis Napoleon when Mr. Arthur said, "Lou, I wish I hadn't of repealed 1874." Whereupon the French emperor made his immortal rejoinder, "Tipi que nous et tyler tu". Well sir, they had many a good laugh about that, as you can imagine.)

But I digress. How can we remember to write 1968 on our papers and letters? Well sir, the best way is to find something memorable about 1968, something unique to fix it firmly in your mind. Happily, this is very simple because, as we all know, 1968 is the first year in history that is divisible by 2, by 5, and by 7. Take a pencil and try it: 1968 divided by 2 is 984; 1968 divided by 5 is 393⅗; 1968 divided by 7 is 281⅐. This mathematical curiosity will not occur again until the year 2079, but we will all be so busy then celebrating the Chester A. Arthur bi-centenerary that we will scarcely have time to be writing papers and letters and like that.

Another clever little trick to fix the year 1968 in your mind is to remember that 1968 spelled backwards is 8691. "Year" spelled backwards is "raey." "Personna" spelled backwards is "Annosrep." I mention Personna because I am paid to write this column by the makers of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to withhold my check if I omit to mention their product.

Not, mind you, that it is any chore for me to sing the praises of Personna, for it is a seemly blade that shaves you cleanly, a gleaming blade that leaves you beaming, a trouble-free blade that leaves you stubble-free, a matchless blade that leaves you scratchless. If you are tired of facial slump, if you are fed up with jowl blight, try Personna today... available both in double-edge style and Injector style. And if I seem a bit excessive in my admiration for Personna, I ask you to remember that to me Personna is more than a razor blade; it is also an employer.

But I digress. We were speaking of the memorable aspects of 1968 and high among them, of course, is the fact that in 1968 the entire House of Representatives stands for election. There will, no doubt, be many lively and interesting contests, but none, I'll wager, quite so lively and interesting as the one in my own district where the leading candidate is none other than Chester A. Arthur!

Mr. Arthur, incidentally, is not the first ex-president to come out of retirement and run for the House of Representatives: John Quincy Adams was the first. Mr. Adams also holds another distinction: he was the first son of a president ever to serve as president. It is true that Martin Van Buren's son, Walter "Blinky" Van Buren, was at one time offered the nomination for the presidency, but he, alas, had already accepted a bid to become Mad Ludwig of Bavaria. James K. Polk's son, on the other hand, became Salmon P. Chase. Millard Fillmore's son went into aluminum siding. This later became known as the Missouri Compromise.

Same Proposal Passed Unanimously By Student Life Committee in July

James J. Burke, the secretary of the Student Life Committee, discussed with the Daily Collegian his recollection of the work of that committee on the open house proposal.

The proposal unanimously approved by the Student Life Committee in July 1967 was the same proposal as recently recommended by the Student Affairs Committee with one exception. The Faculty Senate Committee decided not to include the Student Life provision calling for an administration check on the plans for open houses prepared by each residence unit.

In a mechanical sense, this check would have required a house to report to an administrative office whether the house would provide for the registration of guests, whether doors would be open or closed, and what sort of supervision would be employed.

Some of the concerns or reservations discussed in the committee between April and July of 1967, as he remembered them, were:

- by this policy does the University say that it is no longer concerned by action behind closed doors;
- what about in locis parentis;
- does the policy provide for the instituting of parietals; does it institute an unlimited policy;
- the morality of the question and the University as a state and tax-supported institution;
- even though most undergraduates live in the residence units, what about the variety of maturity within the houses;
- the problem of undue pressure for those not ready;
- an obligation by the University to a minority that perhaps could never win in a vote;
- would the halls be open 24 hours a day;
- what about the image of the institution.

When asked "How did the committee know what the students' views were?," Burke expressed his opinion that the committee had little in data to deal with. Preliminary drafts of the survey on social and academic environment to which 3,595 students responded in the spring of 1967 and a survey of Central Area residents were the basic resources. Burke reported that of approximately 1,200 respondents in the Central Area, 99% favored the liberalized open house proposal.

In principle, he said, the students are all excited about open houses perhaps because it involves a generation conflict. But, in practice, Burke went on, open houses tend to attract little more than a third of the students.

Burke summarized the ideas of members of the committee in favor of open houses, as he remembered them. Generally speaking, he said, it was felt that if self-government were to be realized then it would be necessary to have something to govern. Furthermore, if the open houses were to generate extensive participation, Burke reported that members felt that, the open houses would become significant in the learning process.

For some of the members of the committee, according to his observation, for any question to be worthy of discussion in the University environment it must be connected somehow to the learning experience.

These views on open houses, Burke indicated lead to the adoption of the policy recommending residence hall autonomy.

"University Living Conditions Make Proposal Unfeasible"

Under the living conditions of the University, Ted A. Schmitt offered his findings that complete open houses are not feasible. Strongly favoring the open door provision, he said, "The open house policy can be more liberal than at the present time."

Schmitt questioned whether the students really want the proposal. A number of the students Schmitt spoke with—men involved in the intramural program—were not concerned about the open house proposal, he said. Many of them, he indicated, went home on weekends.

"One" student told him, he reported, that houses had a hard time now getting majority approval for the once-a-month open house permitted presently. He indicated that what the student leaders say the students want and what the latter do want may differ considerably.

"I still have to be convinced that the student body really wants this," he declared.

Schmitt referred to the University as a state institution as one reason for not going to a greatly liberal policy.

Including himself among those who favored increasing the actual number of open houses per month, he related that an early proposal in committee to this effect was defeated. On the question of frequency and door policy, he offered his view that the committee should make modifications in its recommendations, in order to secure their passage in the Senate.

Schmitt acknowledged that he was speaking as a parent, although a member of the faculty as well, and expressed his support for the in locis parentis role of the University. Students, he said, still need the guiding hands of their parents but he denied that this involvement of parents prohibited student self-government.

Comments . . .

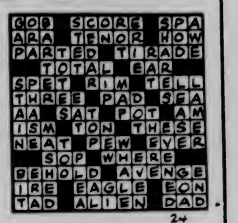
Further, is there any evidence that open houses will produce "immoral conduct" for which the University will be liable? I find the implication that they will insulting to our students. Let's talk about facts: open houses exist now. Have they produced such "situations," or are such situations rare and fears about them largely unfounded?

Gerald W. McFarland

Carlisle—

"Students Must Relax Stand"



In the opinion of Student Affairs Committee member Arthur E. Carlisle, the open house proposal discussion is hung up on the issues of frequency and the door policy.

In both cases, he said, his concerns were with the rights of the minority (if the group is indeed a minority). There probably will have to be some kind of limitation on the number of open houses permitted.

Unless the student members of the committee relax their position on these two issues the Student Affairs Committee won't be able to resolve the question, Carlisle said.

Redmen Upset, 85-82, in OT

Vermont Ends Win Skein, UMass Comeback Bid Fails

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

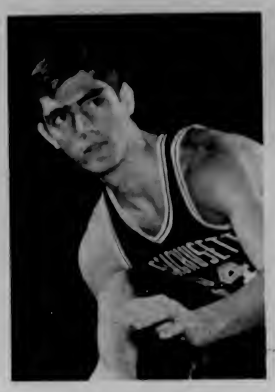
BURLINGTON, VT. — A sophomore-studded Vermont team handed UMass, an 85-82, overtime loss here Tuesday night. The shocking upset puts the Redmen two losses back of leading Rhode Island in the Yankee Conference race.

After leading by as much as ten points in the first half, UM found itself down 70-64, with only 58 seconds left in the contest. Ray Ellerbrook and Jack Gallagher hit clutch jumpers to bring the Redmen closer, then Billy Tindall cashed in on one and one opportunity to knot the score. Catamount guard Dave Lapointe hit two free throws as Ellerbrook fouled out to put Vermont back out in front with 33 seconds to go. Tindall scored on a short jumper, but Frank Martiniuk came right back with a bomb, to put the Cats ahead, 74-72.

Coach Leaman called time out with 9 seconds left to try to set up one last shot. After moving the ball quickly downcourt, Gary Gasperack passed off to John Shockro, whose 25 foot pop tied the score at 74 as the buzzer sounded.

In the five minute overtime, the lead changed hands several times, but fouling and poor foul shooting cost UM dearly. Lapointe scored the deciding baskets for the victorious Cats.

UM seemed to be on the verge of breaking open the game in the first half. They got 40 shots in the first period, against 22 home team attempts, but they blew many short layups. At halftime the visitors held a 43-35 edge, thanks to the shooting of Tindall and Ellerbrook.



Sophomores Jack Shockro and Jack Gallagher were impressive under fire. Shockro came up with five pressure points, while Gallagher hit three pressure hoops.

Martiniuk led all scorers with 24 points. Bob Hutton, Bill Librera, Aldo Salati and Dave Lapointe were also in double figures.

The visitors were led by Tindall's 22 points and 16 rebounds. Catamount coach Art Loche called it "his best win" while coach Leaman termed it a "costly defeat."

Ex-Redman Ace Stewart Signs Chicago Cub Pact

Frank Stewart, an outstanding baseball and basketball player at UMass for the last three years, has been signed to a professional baseball contract by the Chicago Cubs organization of the National League.

Lennie Merullo, the Cubs' New England scout, signed Stewart. The 6'3, 180 - lb. second baseman will report to the Cubs' minor league training camp in March at Scottsdale, Ariz.

Stewart was chosen first team All Yankee Conference in 1966 and 1967 and second team All District One in 1967. During that span, UM won two Conference titles, reached the finals of the NCAA District One tournament and compiled a 37 - 17 record.

Stewart was an Industrial Engineering major and received his degree this month. He is a grad of Lynnfield (Mass.) High School, where he resides. At UM, Stewart was also a three-year letterman on the UM basketball team and captained last year's quintet.

Stewart is the third member of the outstanding 1966 UM infield to sign with professional baseball organizations. Shortstop Jim Babyak signed with the New York Yankees last winter and third baseman Gunnar Hagan signed with the Detroit Tigers in June of 1966. They are still playing in their respective organizations.

Alcindor Eyes NY Games

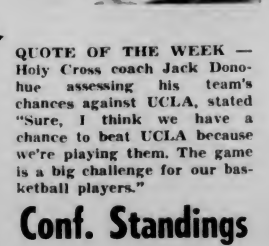
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Basketball superstar Lew Alcindor's blurred vision is improving steadily and he will play for UCLA in two games next weekend in Madison Square Garden, his coach said Monday.

"Lew has got to play to get back into form," John Wooden told a newsman. "He was far from it at Houston."

Alcindor's doctor earlier had said he was suffering from vertical double vision and impaired depth perception, which the doctor blamed in part for the 7-footer's relatively poor performance last Saturday against Houston.

The top - ranked Bruins lost 71-69 to second-rated Houston.

Tests of Alcindor's vision were expected daily throughout the week. Wooden thinks that playing may speed Lew's recovery and he will work out with the team all week.



UCLA meets Holy Cross and Boston Coll. in its New York appearance and Alcindor's doctor has said it is possible the left eye, injured 10 days ago in a game, might not be fully healed.

Wooden said he believed Alcindor got enough rest during the Houston game because of the frequent timeouts. And he said Alcindor told him he felt like continuing.

Alcindor appeared out of condition against Houston. He scored only 15 points, hitting a poor 4 of 18 shots. During the week he had spent three days in bed in the UCLA eye clinic.

Wooden said he "possibly erred" in leaving Alcindor in the game for the full 40 minutes but added "If I had it to do all over again, I'd do exactly the same thing. If you do something and lose, you try to think of what went wrong."

His doctor said Alcindor is suffering from iritis, or irritation of the iris, which causes blurred vision.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK — Holy Cross coach Jack Donohue assessing his team's chances against UCLA, stated "Sure, I think we have a chance to beat UCLA because we're playing them. The game is a big challenge for our basketball players."

Meet Providence

Frosh Cagers End Layoff

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

Returning from a month-long layoff, the freshman basketball team hopes to resume its winning ways when it meets a fine Providence College freshman team, tomorrow evening at the Cage. Gametime will be 6 p.m.

Yale Coach Joe Vancisin and Captain Ed Goldstone. See them Sat. on Channel 22.

In sharp contrast to former years, the frosh came through the exam period with few academic casualties. Freshman coach Peter Broaca was obviously relieved. "I'm definitely pleased with our academic performance," he exuded, probably remembering last year's freshman team, which lost nearly half of its members due to ineligibilities.

Broaca was not so pleased about the long vacation the team has had, however. UM will have only three days practice before meeting Providence and only four days before traveling to meet the Yale frosh. As Broaca puts it, "It will take a while for us to get together."

In meeting Providence, UMass will be facing one of the better freshman teams in the east. The young Friars have a record of 7-2, while facing some of the best teams in the area. They are led by five outstand - ballplayers, with great hig.. school backgrounds.

These performers include James Larranaga, 6'4 from Queens, N. Y., and Archbishop Molloy H. S., an all-N. Y. selection, William Walsh, 6'2, from Brooklyn, N. Y., and Bishop Loughlin H.S., a second team all N.Y. pick. Also, there is, 6'1 Victor Colucci from Newark, N.J. and Essex Catholic H. S., who was All - State honorable mention, and 5'9 Jim Ferro from Bristol, (R.I.) H.S., an All-State selection. Rounding out this group is 6'6 Ray Johnson from South Kingston (R.I.) H.S., who was a teammate of Little Redman ace, Bob Dempsey, in prep school.

Trackmen Excel in Boston Meet

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

BOSTON—A contingent of UMass runners, which included three relays and three individual performers, fared very well at the 42nd annual Massachusetts Knights of Columbus Meet held on January 13, at the Boston Garden.

Sophomore hurdler, Marc Lefever, placed second in his qualifying heat but was eliminated in the semifinals when he fell behind early because of a poor start. Also a victim of a bad start was team co-captain Steve Burrell, who could not make up the ground he lost at the start and he was eliminated from the 50 yard dash. Another man in the 50, freshman Walter Mayo, placed fourth in the entire meet trailing a strong field of experienced dashmen including Bill Gaines, who defended his Boston K of C dash title.

The three UMass relay teams produced two first places and a second.

The first relay in which UMass was entered was the varsity two mile relay. The team finished second in a field of eight. Hoss started off in last place but moved up to sixth before handing the baton to Gonzalez, who closed the gap to bring UMass into a distant third place. Dave Evans then took over and brought the Redmen right up to the leaders. Senior Greg Bowman followed Evans and moved UMass into second place at the finish of the race.

The freshman one mile relay, which UMass was entered in, was a close race all the way with UMass just nosing out Harvard. Starting for the frosh was Ed Heywood, who sprinted into the lead and kept it for his leg of the race. Heywood passed off to Paul Taylor, who kept the lead for his ¼ of a mile only to see it disappear on the hand off to Elliot Stevens. Stevens trailed the Harvard runner for 400 yards and then made his move, passing the Harvard man and giving the baton to Gerry Spellman with a lead. Spellman ran the fastest of the four men (51.1 seconds) keeping his yard lead over the Harvard anchor man right through the tape. The frosh were timed in 3:31.4.

The varsity one mile relay was also a winner. Bob Hasselbrum took the lead on the first leg but the UMass team lost the lead soon after Paul Hoss took the baton. Hoss, who had already run in a relay earlier, stayed close to the lead and handed to Diego Gonzalez who closed the gap and gave Dave Evans the baton in second place. Anchor man Evans stayed behind the first place runner until the gun lap when he flew by the leader and easily won for the Redmen. The varsity time was 3:29.7.

Coach O'Brien said that he was quite satisfied with the performances because it was hard for the team to practice during the Christmas vacation and the final exams period.

World Awaits U. S. Response to N. Korean 'Act of War'

Diplomacy Fails To Release Pueblo

By JACK BELL
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The initial failure of diplomatic efforts to gain release of a U.S. Navy intelligence ship captured by North Korea sharpened demands in Congress Wednesday for military action to free it.

Although Secretary of State Dean Rusk told an informal news conference—after an appearance before a House committee—that seizure of the ship Monday could be described as an "act of war," congressional leaders cautioned against any precipitate retaliation.

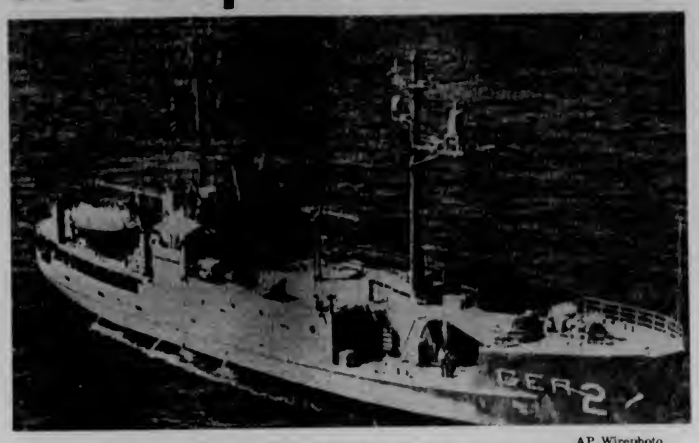
But this did not still a chorus of demands in the Senate for what Sen. John Stennis, D—Miss., called "strong and positive action" if negotiations fail to win the release of the Pueblo and its 83 crewmen.

A subsequent White House report that efforts to arrange a settlement through contacts with the Soviet Union "have not had satisfactory results" visibly hardened the position of some. One of these, Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R—Utah, urged that the Navy steam into Wonsan Harbor in North Korea and retake the Pueblo.

Rusk said seizure of the ship —which the Pentagon said occured in international waters off the North Korean coast—involved a major breach of international law.

"I would not object to designating this as an act of war in the terms of the category of actions to be so construed," the secretary said. "My advice to the North Koreans is to cool it. There have been enough of these incidents."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D—Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had similar advice.



"We ought to keep our shirts on and not go off half-cocked until we know more about this incident," Mansfield told newsmen.

Fulbright said, "We should be very careful not to jump to conclusions until we know all the facts. . .exactly what happened" in the ship incident.

This reflected his doubts—shared by some other committee members—that military retaliation for the alleged attack by North Vietnamese patrol boats in the Tonkin Gulf in 1964 was fully justified.

USS Enterprise Takes Station

The nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and three escorts were reported taking position in the Sea of Japan.

South Korean sources in Seoul said the 75,000-ton carrier and its escorts would take station 12 miles off Wonsan Bay to await developments. North Korea maintains its territorial waters extend 12 miles out from shore.

At the White House, the top-level National Security Council, which ponders major strategic moves, met in full dress session on the problem.

One of the first U.S. moves, after the seizure of the 935-ton U.S.S. Pueblo, an "intelligence" gathering ship, became known, was to ask the Soviet Union to act as a diplomatic channel between the United States and Communist North Korea in hopes of resolving the tense dispute without shooting.

But White House sources said such efforts "have not had satisfactory results."

White House press secretary George Christian stressed the United States still is hopeful "that the matter still can be settled through diplomatic channels."

But, Christian said, the U.S.

Senate Postpones Walk-in Proposals

By BILL DICKINSON
Staff Reporter

Last night the Student Senate voted to table for one week a proposal for mass civil disobedience by students in response to the tabling of the open house bill by the Faculty Senate.

The motion for the "walk-in" which was introduced by Senator Hopkins read: "Be it enacted that the Student Senate unilaterally authorizes all houses to hold open houses according to S-46 commencing February 1." S-46 puts control of the open houses in the hands of the majority of each house.

The walk-in would involve mass violation of University rules by having each house declare as many open houses as they wish. As one senator pointed out, "They (the administration) would have to station a cop at the door of each dorm, and that would be impossible."

The introduction of the motion brought about much debate, centering around the power of the Student Senate and the best strategy for gaining faculty approval of the open house policy.

Many members of the Senate expressed the feeling that most of the student body feels that the Senate is powerless or a "pawn of the administration." Several members felt that if the Senate doesn't take a strong and immediate stand on this issue, it will lose whatever confidence they now have in it.

Principal opposition to the proposal for an immediate walk-in came from Senate President James Collins. He said that it would be strategically bad to have an immediate walk-in because it could push the Faculty Senate "into a corner" and allenate many faculty senators who now favor the bill. He also maintained that such a move might cause a division between the faculty and students, where he feels that a "dialogue" now exists.

He announced that he has called a meeting of house and Greek presidents to discuss possible walk-in or other measures for a later date if other means fail. Collins also feels that an immediate walk-in would fail because of lack of organization.

Senator Gurwitz supported Collins and added, "The biggest weapon of the students is not a walk-in, but the threat of a walk-in."

The proposal to table the walk-in motion was introduced by Senator Hartwell and was approved on the second voice vote.

As it now stands the walk-in will be discussed again before the Student Senate at their meeting next week.

On other business, Collins announced that the Faculty Senate has approved the picketing code

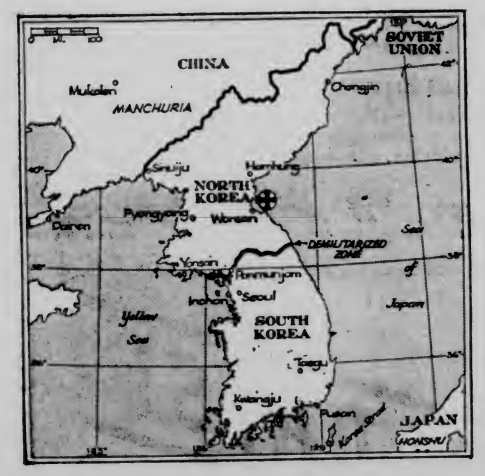
H-Bombs, Wreckage Recovered

WASHINGTON (AP)—Pieces of one or more of four hydrogen bombs aboard an Air Force B52 that crashed Sunday off Greenland have been found, the Pentagon reported Wednesday.

But "it still has not determined whether parts of the plane or of the four nuclear weapons carried on the plane went into or through the ice," the Defense Department said.

This was the first official confirmation of reports that the number of nuclear bombs aboard the plane totaled four.



In revealing that "pieces of weapons — associated hardware were identified among the debris," the Defense Department statement did not say whether significant amounts of the bombs were located. Nor was it clear whether just one bomb or more were involved in the discovery.

The Pentagon has refused to discuss the size of the bombs, but sources indicate they were 1.1—megaton hydrogen bombs—the equivalent explosive force of 1.1 million tons of TNT.

The Pentagon said search operations over the North Star Bay ice, which resembles a frozen ocean of huge waves, is hampered by the polar darkness and deteriorating weather.

Conditions were so bad the teams canceled search efforts the rest of Wednesday.

The six survivors of the crash were listed in good condition. A seventh crewman died in the accident.

President Wood Faces General Court Action

Senior Class President
RICHARD WOOD

In a surprise announcement at last night's Student Senate meeting, Treasurer Paul Silverman said that he is bringing Senior Class President Richard Wood before the General Court for "violation of R.S.O. policy" and "falsifying of travel vouchers."

Silverman said that the charge on the violation of R.S.O. policy stems from the alleged "purchasing of alcoholic beverages with class funds." He didn't elaborate on the two counts of falsification.

He said the charges were the result of an investigation by the Senate Ways and Means Committee of class spending.

When asked later to comment further on the charges, Silverman refused on the grounds that "it might prejudice the case."

cial news agency that the Pueblo's captain has admitted his vessel was inside territorial waters when it was seized was greeted with skepticism. But members of Congress want to know more about it.

In Washington, the Defense Department denounced as "a travesty on the facts" the North Korean claim that the Pueblo's commander had confessed intruding into North Korean waters.

"The style and wording of the document provide unmistakable evidence in themselves that this was not written or prepared by an American," Asst. Secretary of Defense Phil G. Goulding said in a statement read to newsmen. He also disclosed the Pueblo was under orders to stay at least 13 miles from North Korean territory.

Rusk made the comment to newsmen who asked him about statements by some members of Congress that the North Korean action constituted an act of war.

"I would not object to designating this as an act of war in terms of the category of actions to be so construed," he said.

George Christian, White House press secretary, reported after the meeting that "we have not abandoned efforts to settle the problem diplomatically." These efforts "are still of paramount interest," he said, but he would not detail them.

with the exception of the clause authorizing picketing in building lobbies. Collins commented that "If the student government feels they want to stand by what they have already passed, they can go before the Faculty Senate again." At this point Senator Hartwell introduced a motion to fight for the code as written by the student government before the Faculty Senate. It was overwhelmingly approved.

The Senate then went on to old business, but had to adjourn for lack of a quorum. Many senators left after the walk-in debate.

Johnson Asks For Extension Of Arms Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pres. Johnson asked Congress Wednesday to extend for three years the life of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, declaring "the ultimate test of our century" is confining nuclear power to peaceful uses.

Johnson noted the agency's key role in installation of the Washington-Moscow hot line and in the new treaty aimed at banning nuclear weapons from space. Then he said:

"Now the energy and perserverance of the agency has brought us close to the next great step forward: A treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons."

The agency is due to expire June 30 unless Congress keeps it alive. The President, in letters to the presiding officers of the House and Senate, urging its continuance, said:

"If men can join together with their neighbors to harness the power of nuclear energy for peaceful progress, they can transform the world. If not, they may well destroy the world."

Major Vietnam Battle Shapes Up

SAIGON (AP)— No. Vietnamese heavy artillery hit the U.S. Marines' Khe Sanh base for the first time in two barrages late Wednesday. The big shellbursts all but muffled an accompanying rain of mortar and rocket fire on the northern frontier post.

The two shellings signaled a stepped-up confrontation in the hill country of So. Vietnam's northwestern tip. American defenders are deployed along the zone that borders No. Vietnam in expectation of a major Communist offensive.

U.S. headquarters in Saigon said the No. Vietnamese pounded the area around the Khe Sanh base and military airfield with 250 rounds of artillery and rockets in an attack that lasted an hour and 40 minutes. Late Wednesday night they followed up with a one-hour barrage.

An incomplete report indicated one Marine was killed and 12 were wounded in the Wednesday action, headquarters said.

The Khe Sanh sector, under No. Vietnamese pressure since attacks started last Saturday, currently is the most critical point in the northern frontier where massive allied and enemy troop concentrations raised a possibility of the war's biggest battles.

"Jet-Age Guru"

Maharishi Scores Big On College Campuses

NEW YORK — On scores of college campuses across the nation, students are turning away from drugs and substituting transcendental meditation in their attempt to be "turned-on."

The motivation for this switch from drugs to meditation, stems from the teachings of a diminutive monk from India, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who gained instant fame as the "jet-age guru" who guided the Beatles off LSD by way of "a new, non-chemical turn-on."

Maharishi's followers, estimated worldwide at 250,000 with more than 5,000 on U.S. campuses, claim that meditation has cumulative results, but the immediate effects are the release of tension and more individual stability.

"One thing that has made people so receptive to Maharishi's message is hallucinogenic drugs," a Yale student is quoted. "After having tried LSD and having meditated for about a year now, LSD—well—it's just not real."

Another youth reported, "In the week immediately following my initiation into meditation, I cut my hair, returned to my family's house, got a job and registered in a school for the fall."

About to undergo his initiation, an 18-year-old stated that transcendental meditation is "supposed to be like a high and all, but you don't have to take drugs. You get a self-satisfied feeling and learn about yourself. I don't know, but people who do it seem so happy and relaxed."

To many of the practitioners, not only does meditation work, but it works for anything. "Once you start meditating," one college co-ed revealed, "you're lots more likely to make a better choice for a marriage mate."

government "is organized and planning" under President Johnson's direction to deal with the matter.

Christian insisted that the Pueblo was in international waters when it was captured, "according to the best information that we have." State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey also said the Pueblo was "well beyond" the 12-mile territorial limit claimed by North Korea.

The Pentagon has said the Pueblo was boarded while she was about 25 miles off North Korea and that she was in essentially the same location when first accosted an hour and 45 minutes earlier.

Navy sources said the Pueblo had been approached by North Korean patrol boats before, but not threatened, during at least 10 days of cruising in the area.

The Navy sources advanced this information as a possible explanation of why the Pueblo's skipper did not call for help until he was actually being boarded.

Fidel Castro May Resign As Cuban Prime Minister

HAVANA (AP) — An official reference to Fidel Castro as general secretary of Cuba's Communist party touched off speculation Wednesday that Castro might resign as prime minister to concentrate on control over the party.

The party's central committee met amid rumors that Castro's brother, Raul, was favored to succeed him as prime minister. Raul now is deputy chief of the armed forces.

A one-paragraph announcement in the official Communist organ Granma said the committee meeting was called in the name of the eight-man politburo headed by Castro. Granma then referred to Castro as general secretary.

A one-paragraph announcement in the official Communist organ Granma said the committee meeting was called in the name of the eight-man politburo headed by Castro. Granma then referred to Castro as general secretary.

Castro has been first secretary, rather than general secretary, since the party was formed in October 1965.

The announcement of the meeting was unusual in itself. Most meetings of the committee are unannounced. There was no indication when results of the session would be made known.

If Castro steps down as prime minister, that post likely would become more administrative. The bearded Cuban leader still would hold the most powerful political job and the leadership of the country.

Castro resigned once before, briefly, as prime minister in the early days after his take over in Havana.

Student Senate Committees Work on Campus Issues

The scope of student involvement in many campus issues can be seen in the standing and special committees of the Student Senate. Each of the committees, consisting of Student Senators, other students and members of the University community, has a specific constitutional charge but each also covers a generally broad area such as academic matters.

Students interested in serving on one of the committees or who wish to bring a problem or question to a committee should get in touch with the respective chairmen.

The committees and chairmen are:

Academic Affairs Committee: Chris McGahan, Sunderland 1-665-4042.

Activities Committee: charged with approving and reviewing RSO constitutions: Ray Taylor, 1506 Washington, 546-9134.

Alcoholic Beverages Committee: Chris McGahan.

Budgets Committee: scrutinizes budgets of RSO groups and makes recommendations on them when they come to the Senate for approval: Brad Johnson, 707 JFK Lower, 546-7683.

Finance: scrutinizes and recommends on requests of RSO groups for emergency appropriations which go before the Senate for final action: Jim Moran, B-13 Brett, 546-6182.

Public Relations Committee: Pete Ward, 239 Baker, 546-6097.

Services Committee: deals with such matters as housing, health services, parking, vending, food services and problems which don't belong to any other committee: Cindi Olken, 2208 Coolidge, 546-8254.

Student Matters Committee: replaces Men's Affairs and Women's Affairs Committtees: pays particular attention to the student judiciary system: Steve Nault, acting chairman, 310 MacKimie, 546-9785; Elinor Needle, acting vice chairman, 618 Field, 546-6854.

Ways and Means Committee: the financial investigating committee, is concerned with RSO groups adhering to budget categories and binding clauses: Tim Roche, 306 Wheeler, 545-2412.

Ultra Short and Narrow: Patou Presents Spring Collection

By LUCIE NOEL
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP)—Jean Patou's spring and summer collection shown Wednesday features a fresh, narrow silhouette cut close to the figure, disclosing ultra short hemlines and an expanse of stocking that can be varied according to the hour of the day.

For evening, the floor length trapeze comes into its own with the beltline moved down to the hipline and asymetrically buckled.

Patou has discovered a new mannequin who captured everyone's heart. They call her Mouche, French for fly. She is Swedish, age 19, and she has the quality and style of the famous Twiggy.

Patou revives the sleeveless coat, called Dalmatique, and does it in tweeds and wools worn with knitted turtleneck sweaters.

In Memoriam

Although for most intersession is a generally pleasant respite from academic cares, for one member of the University it turned out tragically to be a permanent release from all pressures of any sort. Howard Lebow, Associate Professor of Music, died Sunday, Jan. 13, as a result of injuries sustained in an automibile accident the previous evening. In Mr. Lebow the University lost one of its most outstanding faculty members.

As one of his former students, I was privileged to spend two semesters in private lessons with him, and I have had associations with him regarding various cultural matters. Thus I can personally attest to his real concern for and interest in his students, his friends, his colleagues, his profession, his career, and his music.

One is always shocked at the un-naturalness of the death of one so young as he was. But the death of one both young and talented is doubly shocking. His full potential as a musician and an artist had yet to be revealed, though his performances were always monuments to gracefulness and powerful understatement.

The full impact of this sudden, tragic eclipse of his brilliance has perhaps yet to be felt, but for those who knew him and his talent, he will long be remembered with fondness, affection, and sad tears.

Pass-Fail

Statement of College of Arts and Sciences

General. The action which made the election of courses on a pass-fail basis possible is clear on some points and leaves others to the discretion of the instructor or of the major department. It is definite in this respect:

A course to be applied to the University Core requirements or to College of Arts and Sciences requirements may not be taken on the pass-fail basis.

Majors. The status of courses in a student's major is determined by the major department or committee. The general rule adopted by most departments for their majors is: No course in the minimal requirements for the major, whether within the department or outside the department, may be taken on the pass-fail basis.

Electives. The basic provisions for pass-fail gives the instructor of each course discretion concerning the acceptnace of registration of this sort. In the case of multiple section courses, all sections will have the same policy.

An effort has been made to get advance statements from all instructors as to the possibility of pass-fail registration. In general, a course which a student is taking as an elective is open on a pass-fail basis.

The following courses are exceptions to this statement; they may NOT be taken on a pass-fail option.

Anthropology	103	Geology	250

Editorial Comment: The Pass-Fail option leaves much to be desired.

Hearts and Hatreds

The heart medical breakthrough in the field of heart surgery is serving another humane purpose also—it is obviously going to start brain surgery among some people. That brain surgery which I refer to is the erasure of prejudice from the minds of many.

In South Africa, a country of despicable racial laws, a white man has received the heart of a "colored" boy. The transplant saved his life. The case points out the inter-dependence of all men, and the pointlessness of racial, religious, or ethnic prejudice.

Dr. Barnard and the other doctors in the field have performed not only a wonderful deed in the field of keeping men alive, but have done a bit to make life more livable and more wholesome. As men realize that the heart, kidneys, cornea, etc. of one man is as sound as that of anyone else, they will realize that men are innately equal in all respects and prejudice among all races will die, hopefully.

Dr. Barnard has truly served the health of mankind in all ways.

Sing Thanks!

To the Editor:

The purpose of the Christmas sing, which was sponsored by the class of '71, was to promote the Christmas spirit on campus and to provide a good time for all those who were present. The sing achieved its purpose. A great amount of planning and preparation went into the first freshman event. The time was well spent.

I do not believe that the "immaturity" of the class leaders at all "spoiled the Class sing". If it was not for those same "class leaders" the Sing would have been completely unorganized and chaotic.

The class of '71 owes its thanks, not only to the officers for their participation, but also to the leaders who gave so freely of their time and effort.

Informed Debate?

To the Editor:

In the December 18 issue of the Collegian, two letters about the U.S. war on Vietnam, by Robert R. Smith and Mogens V. Hermann, seem to indicate that what is most needed in the debate is better understanding of just what the war is all about. Jon Siegel's letter suggests a solution may lie in a willingness to read, to become informed.

When Mr. Smith complains that "only one view was presented" at the showing of the Army indoctrination film Why Vietnam because, as he puts it sorrowfully, the group which led the discussion "was prepared", he fails to appreciate that students needn't have relied on the group or the film to become prepared themselves. Indeed, it is tragic that on a university campus, a discussion would be needed to point out the obvious propaganda purposes of the film. A visit to the library would reward any student who felt inadequately "prepared" with several shelves of material on Vietnam, an overwhelming majority of which is highly critical of the war.

Mr. Hermann takes a different tack, since he appears to wish to convey the impression that he knows just what the U.S. is doing, or should be doing, and just what all the protest is all about. But once again, I humbly submit that he needs to inform himself better, before making righteous assertions about "political degeneracy". Since many, many philosophers and historians have "sharpened their pens", he might benefit from their work.

Anyone who, for one reason or another, justifies our slaughtering the Vietnamese and laying waste their land, will find his arguments either totally unfounded or irrelevant, when the overwhelming weight of factual evidence is considered. Some initial readings on Vietnam could include the works of the historian Bernard Fall, or The United States in Vietnam by professors Kahin and Lewis of Cornell, or works by Buttinger, Gettleman, Lacouture, Schlesinger, and others.

The only proper level for a debate on an issue as divisive and complex as this one is not passionate outcry, super-INFORMED, discussion. Presumably, when everyone has become willing to make that initial step of foregoing cliche for fact, emotion for truth, and when students, especially, become students of the issue, there will be no more issue.

Black Power Opponent To Speak at Amherst

An outspoken opponent of the Black Power movement and leader of the nation's ethnic minorities will speak at Amherst College Wednesday, January 31.

Paul M. Deac, executive vice president of the National Confederation of American Ethnic Groups (NCAEG), will speak on "U. S. Ethnic Groups—Responsible Citizenship vs. Black Power" at 8 p.m., in Converse Assembly Hall. His appearance is sponsored by FORUM, The Amherst student lecture committee.

As head of NCAEG, Deac oversees an association of 40 nationality backgrounds, with a membership of over 20 million. Formed eleven years ago, the NCAEG is a strongly anti-Communist organization, which in recent years has been attacking Black Power advocates.

Included in Mr. Deac's speech will be comments on "why ethnic groups who have slowed the civil rights movement to a crawl favor genuine attempts to improve the lot of needy U.S. Negroes; who are the real instigators responsible for the bloody riots and searing hatred which are now sweeping the country; and how our loyal, peaceful, law-abiding ethnic poor are being denied their rightful share in the President's multi-billion dollar war on poverty."

Mr. Deac summed up his philosophy in forming these ethnic associations in a 1959 editorial in his NCAEG newsletter: "The Ethnic Groups will stand for no nonsense where basic U.S. interests are concerned. We are not ashamed of being patriotic."

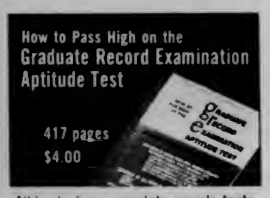
It's time to put up...



The generation that's running the show right now
Is everything you say it is.
It makes war,
Persecutes minorities, wallows in hypocrisy
And abominates your idols.
But it is a good many things
You sometimes forget it is, as well. It's Tom Dooley, Dag Hammarskjöld, Jack Kennedy.
It is concepts: the Peace Corps, Ecumenism.
The United Nations, Civil Rights.
It is awesome technology, inspired research, ennobling dreams.
You can take credit for
None of its accomplishments.
Blame for none of its sins.
But the time is near when
The terrible responsibility will be Yours.
You can stand on the shoulders of this generation
And reach for the stars
Quite literally. Or
You can keep to the ground
Snapping at its heels.
It's your choice.
You're the candidates of the future.
You are our life insurance. .

Record Budget Approved For Greek Week Activities

This week, in a move to involve the entire Greek community in the traditional Greek Week activities, the Intra-fraternity and Pan-Hellenic councils approved the joint subsidy of a record budget.

The final approval of the budget will enable the Greek Week Committee to finalize plans by the beginning of the Spring semester. Tentative plans for the week include, a Greek feast, the IFC and Pan-Hellenic sings, an old fashioned carnival, a major concert, an off campus battle of the bands, and outdoor movies.

The planning committee has been working for some time and plans to announce the final arrangements for the week and the talent for the concert early in the semester.

Groups Formulating to Promote Sen. McCarthy for President

A student group of Republicans, Democrats and Independents is being organized on the UMass campus to promote and aid the candidacy of Senator Eugene J. McCarthy in the Massachusetts Presidential Democratic Primary April 30.

The principal aim of this group during February is to collect signatures in local communities in order to enter the Senator in the Presidential preference primary. The students will work with local "McCarthy for President Committees" to contact every voter and in an attempt to secure his signature on the nomination petition.

After February 27, when the collection of signatures is to be finished, they will begin to canvass the area in an effort to gain large voter turnout April 30. Some projects include rallies, voter registration drives, movie benefits, maintenance of a speaker's bureau, voter education projects.

Chairing the group will be Pete Ward, a Senior, and Nick Ackerman, a junior.

All interested students are invited to attend an organization meeting next Sunday, January 28, at 7 p.m., in the Student Senate Council Chambers in the Student Union.

Meanwhile, another group is being formulated in this area.

John J. Fitzgerald, 26, a graduate student in government at the UMass and a former Army officer, wounded in action in Vietnam, was named chairman of the Holyoke McCarthy for President campaign.

Information concerning Senator McCarthy's campaign in this area can be obtained by writing to "Pioneer Valley Citizens for McCarthy," Box 651, Amherst 01002.

ÆTNA'S AID TO HIGHER EDUCATION PROGRAM HAS SOME IMPORTANT EXTRAS

A number of responsible business organizations today have matching grant programs to help institutions of higher learning meet the increasing demands made on them.

Many of them will match the gift of an employee to his alma mater. Ætna Life & Casualty goes several steps further.

We'll match the grant of both the employee and his wife to any eligible college, junior college, graduate or professional school.

And as a special incentive, we'll add 25% to our gift if half of the institution's alumni have made direct gifts during the past year.

Over 1100 of our people took advantage of our Aid to Higher Education program to benefit 386 institutions last year.

We think that's a solid expression of good citizenship, both personal and corporate.

Our business may be selling insurance.

But our concern is people.

Sox Had to Overcome Tough Luck In Winning Flag, Says Williams

by LARRY ELDRIDGE
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Manager Dick Williams said Wednesday night his Boston Red Sox overcame more tough luck than Baltimore did while dethroning the Orioles as American League champions in 1967.

Williams, attending the Boston Baseball Writers' 29th annual dinner, was commenting on remarks by Baltimore star Frank Robinson earlier in the week that the Red Sox had a lot of things going their way in winning the pennant.

"The only thing I'll say to that is that we lost Tony Conigliaro for nine weeks," Williams said, "and nine weeks without Conigliaro was worse than whatever happened to the Orioles without Frank Robinson."

Conigliaro was beaned Aug. 18 and missed the remainder of the season. Robinson, injured in a baseline collision, missed one month for the Orioles.

Robinson, also on hand to present a trophy to Boston's Carl Yastrzemski for winning the triple crown in batting, had other thoughts on Williams' comments.

"I disagree 100 per cent," Robinson said, "I came back while I still had trouble and wasn't really myself for the rest of the season."

The Baltimore outfielder, who also suffered an eye injury, said he is now completely recovered. The dinner, which attracted a record crowd of 1,400 to the Sheraton Boston Hotel, was entitled "A Salute to the Red Sox."

Other honors:

Williams received the manager of the Year Award from the writers; Dick O'Connell, executive vice president and general manager of the Red Sox, received the Executive of the Year Award.

Jim Lonborg, 22-game winner for the Red Sox and recipient of the American League's Cy Young Award, received the Most Valuable Pitcher Award.

He is still on crutches due to a recent skiing accident.

Bob Gibson, who pitched three victories for the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League when they defeated Boston in the World Series, received the Judge Emile Fuchs Award for his outstanding contribution to baseball.

Reggie Smith, center fielder, and Mike Andrews, second baseman, shared rookies of the year awards. Reserve infielders Dalton Jones and Jerry Adair got Unsung Heroes Awards.

Wally Berger, 62, of Manhattan Beach, Calif., who hit 38 home runs with the Boston Braves in 1930 received the Braves Alumnus Award.

Lennie Merullo, former major league player from the Boston area and now a scout for the Chicago Cubs, got the Good Scout Award.

Bruins Downed by Rangers For First Time This Season

HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lanky Jean Ratelle fired two goals as the New York Rangers defeated the Boston Bruins for the first time this season, 2-1 in a National Hockey League game Wednesday night.

The Rangers had lost five and tied one in their first six meetings with the Bruins.

Ratelle's game winner came midway through the second period when he tipped Rod Gilbert's slap shot passed Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers. It was his 17th goal of the season. The winning goal came just six seconds after Boston's Johnny McKenzie had been penalized for charging.

Earlier, Ratelle had tied the score for the Rangers' with a first-period goal, again on a feed from Gilbert. This one was on a 20-foot wrist shot.

Boston's Ken Hodge had opened the scoring at 2:54 of the first period when his 50-foot slap shot flew past Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin. Phil Esposito drew an assist on the goal, Hodge's 13th of the season.

The victory extended New York's unbeaten streak at home to six games. The Rangers have dropped just two of the last 13 over-all.

Redmen Host to Providence Tonight at Cage

Walker-less Friars Sport 6-5 Mark; UMass Hopes to Rebound from Upset

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Jimmy Walker is gone, but does his memory linger on? It must in the mind of Providence College basketball coach Joe Mullaney, who brings his Friars into Curry Hicks Cage tonight for a game against UMass at 8 p.m.

Providence has a 6-5 record, which is sub-par for a Friar team. But despite the loss of Walker, who plays now with the NBA Detroit Pistons, Providence will pose quite a challenge for the Redmen, who hope to bounce back from Tuesday's stunning defeat at the hands of Vermont.

The Friars have some good shooters, a fine defense and the poise which is typical of Mullaney-coached teams. They have been erratic so far this season, ranging from a 13-point loss to Ivy League weak sister Penn, to a 21-point win over a strong La-Salle team. They also beat Yankee Conference leader Rhode Island, 80-63.

Providence's leading scorer and one of the most exciting basketball players in the east is Skip Hayes. The 5'11 junior, although listed as a guard, plays more like a forward because of his great leaping ability.

Hayes who brings a 17-point average into tonight's game, can stuff it with a double pump over his head. Because of this abiilty to jump, he hits the boards extraordinarily well for a man of his size. He is good for about eight rebounds a game.

The versatile Hayes can also do everything else well. He has a fine short jumper for which he utilizes his leaping ability well. He is also a slick ball-handler and passer, and is probably Providence's quickest defensive player. Hayes is definitely the man to watch.

Probably the most improved player on the team is guard Stu Kerzner, a 6'1 senior. Kerzner does most of the team's outside shooting and has a 16.6 average to show for his efforts. Kerzner, who transferred to Providence from Utah State two years ago, has a great medium and long range southpaw jump shot, and will occasionally drive the baseline from the left side. Kerzner is also tough defensively.

The center is Captain Tony Koski, who was somewhat disappointing last year after two great years at Leicester Junior College. Koski, a big 6'8 senior, seems to have improved this season as he has an average of 10.1 and a rebounding average of 9.3.

On offense, Koski has good moves around the basket and is used mainly as a screen for the team's shooters. However, he can be expected to score from inside if given the shot, especially on a right-handed hook.

Providence relies on Koski for much of its rebounding, and the aggressive captain is strong off the boards. On defense, he is also aggressive but doesn't block out exceptionally well and occasionally gives up the baseline.

The only sophomore in the starting lineup is a good one, Gerry McNair. The 6'5 Bostonian has a good right-handed jumper from about ten feet, and leads the Friars in rebounding with a 9.5 average. McNair, who has a 10.5 scoring average, plays mostly at the high post, where when not shooting looks inside for Koski.

GARY GASPERACK
May start tonight.

Rounding out the starting lineup is 6'1 swing man Don Henderson. He does most of the ballhandling for Providence and is usually stationed at the top of the key. However, he may play at the forward position in a double low post with Koski. Henderson owns a 5.6 average.

This starting five will probably play most of the game since Mullaney doesn't boast much bench strength. The reserve most likely to get in will be 6'5 sophomore center Craig Callen.

Providence will fast break when given the opportunity, so UMass will have to fall back quickly on defense. The Friars use a variety of defense formations, but usually go with their tough 1-2-2 zone. If the need presents itself, they will switch to a man-to-man, especially inside with Koski and McNair.

An important factor in tonight's game could be that Providence hasn't seen action since the Brown game on January 12. Tonight will be their first game after the final exam break.

Coach Jack Leaman is undecided on his lineup for tonight's game. Peter Gayeska, who is fully recovered from his ankle injury, will definitely start at center, but one of the forward spots is up for grabs. It could be Gary Gasperack or Jim Girotti. If Gasperack starts, he will probably guard Hayes.

Leaman was not happy after Tuesday's Vermont game, and understandably so. UMass can ill afford conference defeats if it wants to get back into the race. The Burlington shocker gave UVM sole possession of second place, while it dropped the Redmen to fourth place.

Leamen pointed out that the Redmen have had a tough week, with the concentration of games. In a matter of 11 days, the schedule forces the Redmen to play five games. Making things even tougher is the fact that four of them are away. Long bus rides are not conducive toward getting a team ready for a given game.

However, Leaman managed a smile after the Vermont game and said, "One loss doesn't make a season."

BIG K — Tony Koski, the 6'8 center for Providence, brings an average of 10.1 in Tuesday night's game.

Hoop Race Flare Cools

By CHARLES MCMURTRY
Associated Press Sports Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)— White and Negro basketball players turned out for practice Wednesday on schedule at the University of California and Coach Rene Herrerias expressed confidence that his athletic racial problems were solved.

"I'm satisfied I have a ball club," Herrerias told newsmen when all 11 whites and five Negroes on the squad checked into the gymnasium at 4:20 p.m.

"We are here because we want an education," said Bob Presley, 6-10½ Negro center, whose brief suspension last week touched off the controversy over the treatment of Negro Athletes.

Presley acknowledged that all problems had not been cleared up. However, he declined to say what the remaining unsolved issues are.

"The movement is still going on," said California's leading scorer, referring to the Negro athlete movement for reforms in the athletic department and the treatment of civil rights on the campus.

Presley's comment was in connection with the eight demands made Tuesday by Negroes in the California athletic program. There are 40 Negro athletes but not all were involved in the threatened boycott of sports.

Presley added that the Negro threat of defection from all sports apparently has ended for the time being, at least.

Gymnasts in Cage Sat. vs. Powerful Penn St.

Resuming its schedule after a lay-off of more than a month, the UMass gymnastics team has its biggest meet of the year Saturday night against the favorite to win the Eastern championship, Penn State. The meet will be held in the Cage at 8:15 p.m.

The Nittany Lions, despite the loss of NCAA champion Steve Cohen through graduation, are once again powerful. The Lions are 2-0 on the season, having defeated Springfield, 190-175, and Army, 184-174.

DICK DELGALLO
Unbeaten.

Following in Cohen's footsteps are an abundance of all-around stars for Penn State. Three juniors, Bob Emery, John Kindon and Joe Litow, are especially talented and are the men to watch. Joining them in the all-around class are senior captain Don Spiker, and promising sophomore Dick Swetman. These five give the Lions strength in most of the events.

UMass is 2-2 on the season, and Coach Erik Kjeldsen is not promising any miracles. "Penn State is one of the best in the east," said Kjeldsen. "We have to be realistic. Our best point total to date has been 168 points, while Penn State is a high-180 team."

However, Kjeldsen is hoping for better things. "We're hoping to score higher. We're potentially a middle-170 team."

Kjeldsen feels that Dick DelGalle and Bob Leclair have the best chance of winning their respective events for the Redmen. DelGalle, a junior who competes on rings, and Leclair, a senior side horse artist, are both unbeaten in these events. Both have averages over 9.0.

In addition, sophomore Joseph Reed could give the Nittany Lions trouble on the long horse, and Steve Brown could threaten on the parallel bars.

Penn State had a long and outstanding history in gymnastics. Gene Wettstone, now in his 30th year of coaching Penn State gymnastics, has guided Penn State to eight NCAA championships and 12 Eastern championships, including the last four.

Under his guidance, the Lions have produced a total of 21 NCAA individual champions, in addition to five Olympians. Since 1939, his first year as head coach, Wettstone's teams have won 132 and lost 34 dual meets. This tradition has made Penn State one of the most renowned gymnastics schools in the nation. Dual meets at State attract consistent standing - room - only crowds.

North Korean Reply Intensifies International Tension

Panmunjom Commission Turns Into Verbal Battleground

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Korea responded to a U.S. call for immediate release of the USS Pueblo and its crew by demanding an American apology and severe punishment for those it said committed criminal acts against North Korea.

This was shown in a transcript released by the State Department Thursday of the exchange between U.S. and North Korean representatives at Panmunjom Wednesday in the wake of the Red seizure of the Navy intelligence vessel.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said a general reading of the invective-laden North Korean reply indicates the Reds "rejected the U.S. presentation."

No further meeting of the military armistice commission at Panmunjom on the Pueblo issue has been scheduled so far, the State Department spokesman added.

The U.S. representative at the truce commission meeting was Rear Adm. John V. Smith, senior officer of the U.N. Command. North Korea's chief delegate was Maj. Gen. Park Choong-Kook.

The transcript of the Jan. 24 meeting quotes Smith as complaining first about the North Korean assassination squad infiltrated into South Korea's capital, Seoul, and then turning to the "criminal boarding and seizure of U.S. naval vessel Pueblo in international waters" Jan. 23.

"In the interest of complying with laws and customs of nations," the U.S. delegate told the North Korean, "it is necessary that your regime do the following:

"1. Return the vessel and crew, intact, immediately.

"2. Apologize to the U.S. government for this illegal action."

Smith added that the United States "reserves the right to ask for compensation under international law" and will hold the North Korean regime responsible for the consequences from its "campaign of provocation, sabotage and assassination in violation of the Korean armistice agreement and international law."

Park began his response with a denunciation of President Johnson, calling him "war-maniac Johnson." He declared former President John F. Kennedy "is now a putrid corpse" who was "sent to hell in broad daylight by an American like you," and said "Johnson is dashing forward to meeting the same fate."

After reciting what he termed repeated illegal, hostile military actions by U.S. forces across the demilitarized zone, the Communist spokesman turned to the alleged infiltration of "a number of armed spy boats" into North Korean coastal waters in the past.

Despite previous Red demands to "stop such criminal acts," he said, on Jan. 23 "your side committed a crude aggressive act of illegally infiltrating an armed spy ship of the U.S. imperialist aggressive Navy equipped with various weapons and all kinds of equipment necessary for espionage activities into our coastal waters off Wonsan."

"The recent vicious hostile act by your side," the North Korean representative told the American, "is a link in the chain of your U.S. imperialist aggressive policy for provoking, perpetrating a new war of aggression after further aggravating tension in Korea . . .

"At the same time I strongly demand you frankly admit the violations, provocations and aggressive acts committed by your side in the demilitarized zone and in our coastal waters, to apologize to our side for them, to severely punish as required by the armistice agreement the mad culprits who organized and commanded the incidents and all the criminals involved in them."

  "The mobilization means more war, more involvement in Asia."
- Senator Mike Mansfield:
  "The situation is grave, dangerous, and gloomy."
- N. Korean Delegate Maj. Gen. Park Choong-Kook:
  "The recent vicious hostile act by your side is a link in the chain of your U.S. imperialist aggressive policy . . ."

Johnson Calls Up 15,000 Reservists

WASHINGTON (AP)—Aroused by North Korea's seizure of the USS Pueblo, the United States Thursday called more than 14,700 airmen to active duty and sought an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council.

President Johnson ordered the callup of men to active duty immediately. Then he dispatched Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg to the New York headquarters of the United Nations to present a formal request for a Security Council meeting.

The decision to seek Security Council action was taken in the face of North Korea's past record of ignoring the United Nations. It is not a member.

While pressing for a resolution of the crisis through diplomatic means, the White House indicated that ground troops may be mobilized later if the situation worsens.

Another effort also will be made, it was learned, to enlist Soviet Russia's aid in obtaining the release of the Pueblo and its crew. The Soviets spurned the first overture.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill. introduced a resolution that would put Congress on record as supporting Johnson in any effort to recover the ship.

Findley said adoption of his resolution would show that Congress is united behind the President's efforts in this instance, despite disagreements over Vietnam war policy.

Efforts to effect the release of the captives through diplomatic means continued, despite Moscow's initial refusal to act as intermediary.

White House press secretary George Christian said Johnson reached his decision to beef up the Air Force at a breakfast conference with Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, and U. N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, among others.

The Pentagon said both McNamara and the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommended calling the air reserves.

Christian said "efforts are still being made" to resolve the crisis through diplomatic channels, and "we certainly hope that they bear some fruit in the near future."

Goldberg's presence in the White House underscored the diplomatic phase of what was rapidly developing into an ominous confrontation between East and West.

Wood Challenges Silverman's Charges

By DON EPSTEIN
News Day Editor

"It is with a great feeling of sickness that I picked up the Daily Collegian today to find my name once again smeared."

With these words, Senior Class President Dick Wood answered Student Senate Treasurer Paul Silverman's charges against him which appeared in yesterday's Daily Collegian.

Wood agreed that Silverman, as an individual student, has the right to present charges against him, "But when the Daily Collegian prints such unsubstantiated allegations of the charges without first stating what these charges are in fact, it seems a tragic display of unfairness."

The Senior Class President continued, "I've asked Mr. Silverman many times to quite frankly put up or shut up in regard to his innuendo about the spending practices of the Class of 1968."

Wood told the Daily Collegian that he answered Silverman's "innuendoes" at a Senior Executive Council meeting before Christmas vacation, and that he believed that "no one on the Council felt that he misrepresented the class."

"If Mr. Silverman wants to play a crime busting D.A., he must first be honest enough himself to present his charges to the public's eye." Wood has claimed that he had no prior warning about the charges and that at this time formal charges have yet to be brought against him.

McCarthy Campaign Chief Named

The McCarthy for President Massachusetts Headquarters in Boston appointed Hartford Times reporter Jonathan B. Robison campaign coordinator on the recommendation of the Greater Springfield McCarthy for President Committee.

Karl Haag of Longmeadow, chairman of the Springfield group, said Saturday Robison would start Jan. 20 and that his group would provide a base for operations in Springfield.

"America needs Gene McCarthy," Robison said, "to bring the government back to common sense and to talk straight to the American people.

"I worked hard for Johnson in 1964," Robison said, "in fact I've got one of those certificates from National Chairman John Bailey thanking me for pledging to do 60 hours of campaign work. I didn't do this just because I'm a Democrat, I did it because I believed Johnson would carry on the sensible and creative policies of President Kennedy. The government's policies today aren't what we voted for in 1964.

"I'm going to do everything I can," Robison concluded, to help Sen. McCarthy win the Massachusetts primary April 30 and the Democratic nomination Aug. 26.

Greenfield Permits 'Mother' to Be Sold

Greenfield police this morning permitted two Chapman St. youths to distribute the controversial newspaper, Mother of Voices, on the street.

Selectmen a few weeks ago in effect banned the paper when they refused to allow police to issue permits to sell on the street. Chief John F. Murphy showed the board an issue which he said contained profanity.

Today, Peter Thatcher, 20 and David Josephs, 20, both of 88 Chapman St., were told by Capt. Donald L. Grogan (Chief Murphy is sick) they would be permitted to give away the current issue, or granted a temporary permit to sell it, because he said it does not contain profane words.

The captain made it plain police will not issue a "blanket permit" to sell future issues.

Both Thatcher and Josephs declined the offer of a temporary sales permit, preferring to give away "Mother" until receiving instructions from the newspaper's authorities. They indicated "Mother's" editors might want to make a "test case" in Greenfield by accepting either a full sales permit or nothing.

UM to Produce 'Barefoot in Park'

Roister Doisters, the Student dramatic organization at UMass, will present "Barefoot in the Park," February 8, 9, and 10 at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets will go on sale Monday at the Student Union box office.

The play, which was written by Neil Simon and has enjoyed a long run on Broadway, is about a conventional young lawyer and his fun loving wife adjusting to married life in a fifth floor walk-up flat.

The production will be directed by Tony Francis, a sophomore English major, and stars Kathy Anderson and David Zuker. The former is a sophomore from Chester, Mass. the latter a junior from Wellesley.

Appearing in other roles are John Callahan, Anne Agard, Pedro Silva, and Robert LaCroix.

Second Resignation in Two Months

Gardner Quits Cabinet Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson announced Thursday the resignation of his second Cabinet officer within two months: John W. Gardner as secretary of health, education and welfare.

Gardner's resignation came mid signs he has become increasingly discouraged by the way the Vietnam war has limited domestic programs he considers essential to the nation's well-being, although the White House said Vietnam had nothing to do with it.

The resignation, which Johnson announced at the White House with "deep regret," followed the word Nov. 29 that Robert S. McNamara would leave his job as secretary of defense. Both are Republicans.

United Nations Ambassador Arthur J Goldberg reportedly will resign early this year, and other major resignations recently have included the budget director and chairmen of the Council of Economic Advisers, the Interstate Commerce Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board.

The President did not name Gardner's successor. But there was speculation that the job might be filled for the remainder of this year by Undersecretary Wilbur J. Cohen, who has served as a top assistant to the last three secretaries.

Welfare Department officials credit Gardner with breathing new organizational life into the sprawling department whose budget is second in size only to the Defense Department, at $12 billion a year.

As secretary, Gardner has engineered major reorganizations of the Public Health Service and other department units and has nearly completed a reshuffling of the entire health operation.

Word of the resignation came as a surprise even to some of Gardner's closest associates, although they would not have been surprised to see him resign at the end of Johnson's current term in November.

The White House said the announcement was made sooner than expected because of news stories speculating that the resignation was coming.

WOOD . . .

Wood concluded by saying that he invites Mr. Silverman "to make formal charges against me anytime that he wishes to."

In an interview last night with the Daily Collegian Treasurer Silverman said, "I do not think I am playing D.A. or crime buster, but merely doing a job which would be much easier for me not to do. As for bringing the charges to the public, it is up to Mr. Wood to ask for a public hearing before the General Court."

Silverman said that he has not presented the specific charges because "the case should be tried in the court and not in the newspaper."

He said that the charges will be made public in due time. At this time Silverman has sent the charges, "with evidence," to the General Court, and that the Court must now set a date for the hearing."

Editor's Plea Dropped by Court; Buchanan to Go to Supreme Court

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—Annette Buchanan, the co-ed editor who defied a grand jury's order to reveal confidential news sources, lost Wednesday in her appeal to the Oregon Supreme Court from a contempt of court conviction.

She said promptly that she would appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Miss Buchanan—she now is Mrs. Michael Conard of Portland, but the case was handled in her maiden name—was fined $300 for refusing to name seven University of Oregon students who gave her information for a news story about marijuana on the campus. She was editor of the student daily, the Emerald, and the news story appeared there in 1966.

Dist. Atty. William Frye took her before the Lane County Grand Jury and pressed for the names. She said she had promised anonymity to the students and would not give them. Nor did she do so later when Circuit Judge Edward Leavy ordered her to.

As a result the judge held her in contempt and fined her $300. The press throughout the United States came to her support and helped finance her appeal .

In Wednesday's unanimous decision the Oregon Supreme Court said the only issue was "whether freedom of the press gives a newspaper reporter the constitutional right to preserve the anonymity of an informer in the face of a court order requiring disclosure."

And the court concluded: "Nothing in the state or federal constitution compels the courts, in the absence of statute, to recognize such a privilege."

McCarthy Denied Equal Time by FCC

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Communications Commission denied Thursday a request by Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., for free television time to answer statements President Johnson made in a three-network interview Dec. 19.

In a 7-0 decision, the FCC rejected McCarthy's claim that Johnson is indeed a candidate for re-election and that McCarthy, also seeking the Democratic nomination, is entitled to equal time to reply.

In the telecast, Johnson spoke of "the effect of the Kennedy-McCarthy movement," and of the presidential ambitions of both McCarthy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., indicating they were working together politically. Both have denied collusion.

In a seven-page letter to Blair Clark, McCarthy's campaign manager, the commission said that under its rules a legally qualified candidate is a "person who has publicly announced as a candidate for nomination."

New Earthquake Rips Through Sicily, Kills Seven, Injures Fifty-Five

PALERMO, Sicily (AP)—Another crippling earthquake shot through western Sicily on Thursday, bringing more death and ruin to this island 10 days after its worst quake disaster in 60 years.

The new, violent temblor killed at least seven persons and injured 55 in the same impoverished, hilly region where an earthquake Jan. 15 claimed at least 224 lives.

Some rescue workers were crushed as they picked through mountains of debris for bodies. Buildings swayed and crumbled in towns relatively untouched in the earlier disaster.

Soon afterward, a rainstorm swept the island, bogging down relief squads that had just returned to an emergency footing. At least 30 aftershocks rippled through the area.

The quake struck just as the island was beginning to recover from the shock and misery of the earlier tragedy.

Inefficient and wasteful relief operations of the first few days after the disaster were giving way to smoother coordination. Food and supplies were arriving in abundance.

About 12,000 of the 40,000 quake refugees were still in tents, but as many had been persuaded to enter buildings in nearby towns. Life in Palermo, with half a million population, was returning to normal. Relief crews were digging at rubble in a dozen devastated towns.

In Palermo, a fifth-grade elementary school teacher had just assigned the class the theme for the day—"The Earthquake in Sicily."

Then, at 10:52 the earth shook for 20 seconds in a quake that reached higher than 8 on the 10-point Mercalli scale—only one point lower than the Jan. 15 tremor.

In Gibellina, a town of 7,000 destroyed by the earlier quake, three firemen and a national policemen were crushed to death under a falling wall. Twenty-five were reported injured in that town.

Three persons elsewhere fell dead with heart attacks police said were attributable to the quake. In Partanna, a young boy vanished near the town's cathedral, which collapsed.

The larger cities did not suffer major damage, but their residents headed for open country in cars and afoot. Few took time to gather up any food.

If you don't agree that business destroys individuality, maybe it's because you're an individual.

There's certain campus talk that claims individuality is dead in the business world. That big business is a big brother destroying initiative.

But freedom of thought and action, when backed with reason and conviction's courage, will keep and nurture individuality whatever the scene: in the arts, the sciences, and in business.

Scoffers to the contrary, the red corpuscles of individuality pay off. No mistake.

Encouraging individuality rather than suppressing it is policy in a business like Western Electric—where we make and provide things Bell telephone companies need. Because communications are changing fast, these needs are great and diverse.

Being involved with a system that helps keep people in touch, lets doctors send cardiograms across country for quick analysis, helps transmit news instantly, is demanding. Demanding of individuals.

If your ambition is strong and your abilities commensurate, you'll never be truly happy with the status quo. You'll seek ways to change it and—wonderful feeling!—some of them will work.

Morrisey Reports Decrease in Job Opportunities While Salary Offers Exceed Last Year's Levels

Recruiters in business and industry appear to be showing more restraint this season in making salary offers to college seniors.

There has been a 26 per cent decrease of offers this January, as opposed to a 25 per cent increase over a comparable period last year, according to Robery J. Morrissey, UMass placement director.

The biggest factor in the decline is the reduced activity in the aerospace industry. Traditionally, this industry has accounted for the largest volume of jobs. Chemicals and drugs, another leading force in the recruiting marketplace, has also made fewer job offers to date, but the decrease has been less. This year chemical firms account for 6.4 per cent of the total, compared with 8.2 percent a year ago.

The number of offers of non-technical students has also dropped, but only slightly. A total of 739 offers have been made as opposed to 786 last year.

Offers for advanced degree candidates have declined even more sharply than those for bachelor level students. The master's total is down 40 per cent, while the doctoral candidate figure is down 45 per cent this year.

However, while the number of jobs have decreased, the salary for those jobs being offered is higher than those of a year ago.

Last June, chemicals and drugs stood third in both volume and actual dollar volume. This year that area has dropped to seventh in volume but has risen to the top in dollar volume, going from $715 to $747 a month.

Electronics employers, first in June with $718, are currently second, with an average offer of $742. Tied for third are aerospace and electrical machinery at $735.

The metals industry, however, recorded the largest percentage since June, raising its average offer 6.7 per cent to $729. Next in line are the automotive and utilities groups at 5.9 percent.

Most of the non-technical curricula have experienced only slight increases in the dollar value of jobs since last year. Neither the humanities nor the marketing curricula have gone up a full perecentage point, while the average for business students has gained only 1.8 per cent.

At John Hancock, there's more to Life Insurance than selling Life Insurance.

We'll be here to prove it to you.

Alan Smith works in our Salary Administration Division in Boston. Alan earned his B.A. from Harvard in 1965.

Selling life insurance is big business. So big that John Hancock is selling nationwide. So we need a lot of talented salesmen like Frederick Brown—who can choose their own locations. But that's just the beginning, we also need a lot of talented nonsalesmen like Alan Smith and Charles Grier for positions as:

computer programmers
And mathematicians.
And accountants.
And researchers.
And management trainees.
And people to manage these people.
And people to manage the whole business. (Presidents are made, not born.)

You'll find that no matter what your degree will be, John Hancock probably has a career for you. The John Hancock recruiter will be here to see you.

Check your college placement office for details.

Charles Grier is a management trainee in the Policy Contract Service Department in Boston. Chuck graduated in 1966 from Tuskegee Institute.

Frederick Brown, Jr. graduated from the Pennsylvania Military College in 1964. Rick is a Sales Representative at the Mordecai Gerson Agency, Philadelphia.

HHH's African Safari

Hubert Humphrey recently made a trip to Africa. He visited only those nations which are friendly to the U.S. He brought them each a gift —a dam here, funds for hospitals there—all very commendable. Everything he left behind will be visible to the people of these countries and they will—we hope—remember that the U.S. gave them help in a friendly gesture.

But Humphrey also left behind a sour taste, at least in Ethiopia. He did not talk to the people. He spoke with administrators and officials, but he did not meet the common man.

A group of Ethiopian students were waiting to hear a speech by Hubert. They were against the war in Vietnam. Presumably they had questions to ask and wanted answers.

Hubert never showed up—he cancelled out. The group's leader expressed the disappointment of his fellow students. They were hurt and a little angry.

How can our leaders expect the world to appreciate our policies and respect us when we won't even talk to the people? Humphrey visited only friendly nations, not doubters of U.S. virtue, along with them; he talked only to older men, not the young men who will be running these African countries in a very few years. He did not address the students in Ethiopia and perhaps it was because they objected to Vietnam. Hubert didn't talk to the "doubters" and he ignored the young. Those Ethiopian kids won't forget that the Vice-President of the U.S. ignored them. It'll make them and others like them just a little more anti-U.S. a little more opposed to our basic policies.

It was a small mistake old Hubert made but it hurt the Ethiopians. This was an example of U.S. conduct to all young Africans and showed the Johnson Administration's intolerance of dissent.

HOT PURSUIT

In the Lap of the Gods

International incidents pile up and there is not a good omen in any one of them. They range from "the most grave" seizure of the U.S.S. Pueblo, to the "inadvertent" violation of the Cambodian border by U.S. and South Vietnamese troops, to the "accidental" violation of Greenland's territory by a U.S. bomber carrying hydrogen bombs.

Now Hanoi, anticipating success in a massive assault on U.S. positions in South Vietnam, rejects U.S. conditions for peace negotiations as unacceptable, and Moscow disdains the U.S. bid for its diplomatic assistance in either the Vietnam or the Korean theaters. Thus, the United States, in the midst of one war it cannot end, could be faced by the resumption of an older one brought to uneasey pause by an armistice 15 years ago. And both contain the fuse which could erupt into what truly would be the world war to end all wars.

The lap of the gods must be a large one, for that is where the fate of nations has rested while governments, including our own, have blundered deeper and deeper into the swamp from which men can only hope there may be a way out.

Top military in Congress urge restraint in U.S. efforts to recover the Pueblo. The Senate Democratic leader, Mike Mansfield, cautions against letting our emotions get the better of our reason, and Washington hopes, as must the nation, that the situation, despite Moscow's public stance, can be settled diplomatically.

The national security is of course at stake in all such encounters. But in the calm which Congressional leaders urge, it is vital for Americans to realize that other nations are as concerned with their security as we are with ours, and where we believe they are a threat to us they also believe we threaten them. Brinkmanship, as North Korea has demonstrated, becomes resurgent as Washington deploys American forces around the world, snuggling them closer to other nation's borders than this nation would tolerate were the positions reversed.

Americans, for sufficient reason, are outraged by the armed seizure of an American naval vessel. But North Koreans are equally outraged because their borders were violated, if only by electronic instruments, even as the Russians right along have violated ours with the same kind of sophisticated spying apparatus in the fishing trawlers which regularly ply the waters off both of our coasts.

Statesmen will have performed brilliantly when, as is expected, they extricate the world from the desperate straits into which the Pueblo incident has plunged it. But statesmanship, Washington included, has been inadequate. It has played a dangerous and unprofitable game with the human race at stake.

Night Classes

To the editor:

It is unfortunate that so many students desire a night section of sophomore English and can not get it. It is even more unfortunate that one must fight a lengthy line to get in contact with rude bureaucratic channels to find out this information. I sincerely hope that the English Department will do something to alleviate this problem.

Night sections offer unique advantages which can not be found in the day sections. One of which is the learning of ideas and not names. Another of which is the avoidance of scheduling problems.

Let's find a solution now! Let's get more night English sections!

Open Housing

To the editor:

This is a plea.

Nothing has come to finality in relation to the Open House issue, and to start massive civil disobedience now would be pointless, if indeed detrimental.

Vanguard is working now, as it had during the Senior Class Tax debate, behind the scenes. We are lobbying to individuals. We may change only a few minds, but those few may give us the majority needed to pass the proposal. Yet, we need time, and I hope, sincerely that you will allow us to work.

When we do demonstrate, it will not be in support of open houses; but to underscore our right, as residents of this university, to determine for ourselves, our own policies.

The New Morality

To the editor:

In the very ambitious editorial published in Wednesday's Daily Collegian (pg. 5) concerning the "Real Meaning" of the much-discussed "new morality", the main points were made through quotes from and references to Dean Gordon of the Princeton University Chapel. Gordon unquestionably proved himself to be a theologian and not a psychologist. His major issue is that a soaring decline of self-esteem is the result of sex in all but the ultimate, perfect love relationship. Gordon said and the editor concurred, that losing virginity out of wedlock or final relationship (the one, true love idea) is a heinous crime against oneself and that a person of any sensitivity and intelligence would, after losing virginity, be consumed with self-reproach and, thus, incapable of "true love" forever.

The appearance of such an editorial in a publication which students have come to trust as containing sound, realistic information is an alarming regression; for the effect of Gordon's article and the editorial, were their ideas perpetuated, would be to defeat both the "new morality" and the painfully developing "new humanism". This new view of man has been struggling for primary consideration since Darwin and Freud first put man into his true context.

Dean Gordon fails to understand that a very major part of a person's view of himself lies in what others tell him he is. When clergy and parents tell adolescents that their entire lives will become a shambles if they lose their virginity, the psychological effect is staggering. In place of the old sanction of hell-fire, Gordon inserts a ruined life full of self-contempt. He reverses the trend toward recognition of the entire being as worthy of expression and outlet in favor of archaic, pedantic puritanism. This is not what the "new morality" is about. Its value lies in recognizing the entire being for what it is and in accepting this picture healthily.

What Are Your Legal Rights If You Are Arrested?

THIS STATEMENT is issued as a public service by the Office of the Attorney General of Massachusetts in cooperation with the Boston Bar Association and the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts. Note that it deals only with the laws of this Commonwealth.

I. THE ACT OF ARREST

What is it?

The law says that arrest is "taking a person into custody" so that he may be held to answer for a crime.

What can you be arrested for?

Specific law violations for which you might be arrested are far too numerous to list here. However, law violations have classifications that are useful for you to know if arrested. Felony is the name for the most serious violation. Examples of felonies include murder, rape, and armed robbery. Less serious violations are called misdemeanors. Examples of misdemeanors include motor vehicle violations, gambling, and disorderly conduct.

When can you be arrested?

1. One can always be arrested by a policeman with a warrant for arrest. A warrant is an order issued by a court. It is made on someone's complaint and it charges that you committed a crime, which charge must be listed. It directs the policeman to make the arrest and to bring you before the issuing court. You have a right to see and read the warrant when arrested. The arrest warrant is not the same thing as a search warrant (see below).
2. A policeman may arrest you without a warrant in the following situations.
   a. If he sees you commit or try to commit a violation of the law.
   b. If he knows that a warrant for your arrest for a misdemeanor or felony has been issued and is effective at the time.
   c. If a felony was committed and he has reason to believe that you did it.
3. A private person other than a police officer may also arrest yau without a warrant if you have actually committed a felony.
4. In addition there are special rules governing arrest in particular cases, such as for drunkenness, shoplifting, vagrancy, or certain motor vehicle offenses.

What if you are innocent?

Even if you think you are not guilty, it is a crime to resist an officer who arrests you lawfully. Respect him. The policeman who arrests you also has his job to do. He stands for law and order, and he has a duty to his community. Do not talk back or be disorderly. If it turns out that you have been arrested illegally, you can sue the policeman for false arrest. But remember: your arrest may be lawful even if you are innocent.

Can the policeman use force to arrest you?

If you resist a lawful arrest, the policeman can use all necessary force to arrest you. After you have been restrained, he cannot continue to use force, except to keep you under arrest or to search pursuant to a search warrant.

Can you be searched?

When you are lawfully arrested, your person may be searched. In addition the place of your arrest may be searched within limits considered incidental to the arrest. Otherwise a search warrant is needed, which is an order issued by a court, on someone's complaint, directing an officer to search someplace for contraband. The warrant must describe the place to be searched and the articles to be searched for, and it directs the officer to bring the articles and the person in whose possession they are found before the court.

II. YOUR RIGHTS IN THE POLICE STATION

What happens after you are arrested?

The police may want to question you without making an arrest, and it may be in your interest to co-operate rather than to be arrested. If you are arrested and taken to a police station, a record of your arrest and the charge against you must be reported without unnecessary delay in the "arrest book." Before questioning you, the police must tell you the charge. Where required by law, you will be fingerprinted and photographed. After your arrest you have the right to the aid and advice of a lawyer.

Do you have to answer questions?

After identifying yourself, you do not have to answer any questions or sign any statements about what happened, if you expressly state that you are relying on your constitutional right not to do so. Neither a policeman nor anybody else may force you to answer questions or sign statements. If any force or threats are used against you, report it promptly to the police official in charge, to the court, to the District Attorney, and to your own lawyer.

The promise of a policeman to help you or to intervene with the court, in exchange for a confession, is not binding.

Can you notify your family or lawyer?

On being held you may always ask to use a telephone, and the police should usually grant you permission to the extent necessary to communicate with your family or friends, or to arrange for release on bail, or to engage the services of an attorney. In any event you have a legal right within one hour after booking to use a telephone for these purposes at your own expense.

What happens to the money you may have with you?

You should be given an itemized receipt for all money and property taken from you when you are booked.

Can you be released on bail?

You are allowed to apply promptly for bail. Bail permits you to be released from jail, if an amount of money or other security is deposited with the proper official to make sure that you will appear in court.

After arrest, but before you appear before a judge, the amount of bail is fixed by the clerk of the court or by a bail commissioner or some other specially designated officials before whom you are to be brought. You have a right to have bail set without delay. Later the court may reduce or increase the amount of bail initially fixed. If you are charged with murder, as a practical matter bail is not permitted.

How can you get money for bail?

If you cannot obtain sufficient money or other security from a friend or relative, you may obtain it from a professional bondsman. His fees may vary, but they cannot legally be higher than 5% of the amount of bail for which there is collateral, 10% for which there is no collateral. The police or clerks of court on request will furnish you with the names of professional bondsmen.

III. YOUR RIGHTS IN COURT

When do you go before a judge?

After arrest and booking, unless released, you must be taken before a court without unnecessary delay; this is almost always a district or a municipal court. If the court is not then open, you may be held in the police station until it is.

What do you do in court?

You will be brought before the judge. The clerk will read the charge to you. If you do not understand it, you may ask him to read it again. You will be asked to plead either "guilty" or "not guilty." If possible you should have a lawyer with you at this time. If you ask the judge, he will allow you a reasonable time to get a lawyer. You may, of course, try your own case yourself.

How do you get a lawyer?

Listed at the end of this pamphlet are organizations which will help you to get a lawyer. (See part IV.) In addition, if you are charged with a felony and cannot pay for a lawyer, you may ask the judge to appoint one for you. In the municipal or district court he may appoint one; in the superior court he must.

What does the judge decide?

The judge must hold a hearing at which witnesses (the policemen or others) will tell what happened. You yourself have a right to tell the judge what happened but you do not have to say anything. If you do talk you must tell the truth. You can ask that this hearing be delayed until your lawyer can be present.

For some charges, including all serious felonies (except forgery and breaking and entering, under certain conditions) for which the punishment may be more than 5 years in prison, this first hearing is only a preliminary hearing. It is to decide whether you were properly arrested and whether it is sufficiently likely that you committed the crime so that you should be held for a later trial or for consideration of the charge against you by a Grand Jury. You may waive this hearing if you wish.

In many cases, however, this first hearing is the actual trial to decide whether or not you are guilty. In these cases the judge, after considering what has been said, may dismiss the charge against you, or he may find you guilty. If you are found guilty you may be put on probation or given a suspended sentence, or you may be fined or sentenced to jail for as much as two and a half years on each charge.

What are your rights of appeal?

If convicted in the District Court, you have an absolute right to appeal to Superior Court and to have a new trial there. However, ANY APPEAL MUST BE MADE IMMEDIATELY. If you pleaded "guilty" in District Court, you may appeal only as to the amount of the fine or the length of the jail sentence. Both where you elect to appeal to the Superior Court and where you are held for the Grand Jury, bail must be obtained all over again at additional cost, in order to permit your release from jail pending trial in the Superior Court or consideration by the Grand Jury.

What does the Grand Jury do?

The Grand Jury will either dismiss the charge against you, or will indict (accuse) you. If it indicts you, you must then stand trial in the Superior Court. If you learn that the Grand Jury is considering your case, you should not ask to appear before it without your lawyer's advice.

IV. HOW DO YOU GET HELP

If you can afford a lawyer-

1. Call your own attorney. If you do not know one, or cannot reach him,
2. Ask the police or court to tell you how to reach a local bar association, or
3. Get in touch with the Lawyer's Reference Service of the Boston Bar Association, 35 Court Street, Boston (CApitol 7-8400). They will assist you in obtaining counsel anywhere in Massachusetts.

If you cannot afford a lawyer, ask the court to appoint one, or-

1. In the Boston area call either: Massachusetts Defenders Committee, 8 Beacon Street, Boston (CApital 7-2658). Harvard Voluntary Defenders (UNiversity 8-7600, ext. 413).
2. In the Springfield area of Massachusetts, call: Massachusetts Defenders Committee, 1200 Main Street, Springfield (REpublic 7-0838).
3. Anywhere else in Massachusetts, get in touch with: The Boston Office of the Massachusetts Defenders Committee, 8 Beacon Street, (CApital 7-2658). They will assist you in obtaining counsel anywhere in Massachusetts.

Picketing Code Tolerant of "Free Exchange of Ideas"

Following is the text of the University policy on picketing and other forms of demonstration on the University campus which was approved by the Board of Trustees on December 18, 1967. This report was initiated by a motion at the October 19 meeting of the Faculty Senate calling for the creation of an ad hoc committee to make recommendations in this regard.

The ad hoc committee was appointed by the Committee on Committees of the Faculty Senate and was comprised of three members of the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs and three faculty members. The Committee members were: Dr. John H. Fenton (Government)—Chairman, Dr. Joyce A. Berkman (History), Miss Frances K. Boronski (Vice President, Student Senate), Dr. Donald N. Maynard (Plant and Soil Sciences), Dr. Wolfgang Paulsen (Germanic Languages and Literature), Dr. George R. Richason, Jr. (Chemistry). Seven meetings were held including an open hearing conducted in conjunction with the Student Senate. In addition, the Student Senate's Student Matters Committee debated the bill and Student Senate President James Collins addressed the Faculty Senate on the occasions they discussed the ad hoc committee's recommendations. The Student Union Governing Board also held an open meeting on this matter.

POLICIES DEALING WITH PICKETING AND OTHER FORMS OF DEMONSTRATION ON THE UNIVERSITY CAMPUS
(Accepted December 18, 1967 by Board of Trustees)

Preamble

The University communlty must provide, promote, and protect an environment for the free exchange of ldeas and without regard to whether this communication ls effected through a formal class, a meeting, a public address or private conversation, or by some form of demonstration. The campus must indeed be "open" to all forms of intellectual persuasion. In a communlty dedicated to such intellectual dialogue, all members of that community must be free from any obstruction or coercion that may jeopardize the effectiveness of the discourse. Lest restraint of right and privilege be exercised on this campus, and to the end that all dialogue be conducted with dignity and courtesy, this Committee * recommends the following guidelines for all members of this community.

* Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Picketing

Resolved:

1. That demonstrators confine their activities to the outside of all University buildings and by such activities not block free entry to or exit from such buildings, nor interfere with the free movement of any person on University grounds, nor interfere with the normal conduct of University affairs.
2. That counter-demonstrators observe the same standards as set forth above and that interference with demonstrating by other than duly constituted authorities is prohibited.
3. That it be recognized by all that the ultimate consequences of any violation of the standards as set forth above cannot be foreseen; that the penalty for such violation may be separation from the University or such lesser sanctions as may be judged appropriate, with the determination of guilt and penalty to be by due process. However, separation from the University shall not be the penalty for a first offense in a case where there has been compliance with the requests referred to in 4A, and where the violation has not involved significant personal abuse or property damage.
4. That procedures to be followed by the President of the University or his designated representative in the event of violation of the standards set forth above are:
   A. A verbal attempt will be made to persuade demonstrators to desist from practices in violation of these standards.
   B. Upon failure of the demonstrators to respond in accordance with these standards they will be warned of the consequences and given a reasonable period of time to desist.
   C. After expiration of the reasonable period of time, the names of those in violation will be requested. If those requested to give names refuse to do so, such names may be obtained by any means short of force. Such means shall include repeated demands, photographing, or any other procedure reasonably designed to elicit such information. Any photographs and negatives used for identification of a student shall become exclusive property of the appropriate judicial bodies, not to be distributed, and shall be destroyed upon final settlement of the case.
   D. If persuasion and warning fail, the University police may be employed to put an end to the violations.
   E. If the University police are unable to cope successfully with the infractions, then the appropriate authorities may request outside assistance.

Faculty Brass Trio To Present Recital

The University of Massachusetts Faculty Brass Trio will present a recital of brass music on Wednesday, Feb. 7 at 8:00 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium. Due to the death of Professor Howard Lebow of the Music Department, the recital has been rescheduled from the original date of Jan. 31.

The trio will be assisted by Miss Dorothy Ornest, piano, C. James Sheppard, trumpet, and Richard Studney tuba.

The program will include works by Boris Blacher, Francis Poulenc, Malcolm Arnold, Gordon Jacob, Victor Ewald, and Philip Bezanson. The trio will give a first performance of Dr. Bezanson's "Diversion for Brass Trio", written in 1967 for the Faculty Trio.

Members of the trio are: Walter M. Chesnut, trumpet; John A. Jenkins, French horn, and Larry Weed, trombone.

Walter M. Chesnut holds the degrees Bachelor of Music in Instrumental Music Education and Master of Music in Instrumental Music Education from the University of Michigan. Chesnut is working toward a Doctor of Musical Arts degree at the University of Michigan. He is first trumpet in the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

John A. Jenkins is Conductor of Bands and Assistant Professor of Music at the University of Massachusetts. Professor Jenkins holds the degrees Bachelor of Music in Instrumental Music Education and Master of Music in Wind Instruments from the University of Michigan.

Larry Weed is the Assistant Conductor of Bands and an Assistant Profesor of Music in the Music Department at the University of Massachusetts. Professor Weed holds a Bachelor of Music degree from Oklahoma City University, a Master of Music degree from the Eastman School of Music and is working toward a Ph. D. degree in Music Education at the University of Michigan. He is a member of the Springfield Symphony, choir director of the Wesley Methodist Church and Wesley Aires collegiate choral group. He is guest conductor of the 1967-68 Western District Band Festival.

Miss Dorothy Ornest is Instructor of Voice at the University of Massachusetts.

C. James Sheppard is a graduate student in composition at the University. Mr. Sheppard holds a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Omaha University.

Richard Studney is the Instrumental Music Supervisor in Northampton Public Schols. He holds a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Boston University and is doing advanced graduate work at the University of Massachusetts. Studney is a member of the Springfield Symphony.

THE SPREAD-EAGLE OF TECHNOLOGY AT GRUMMAN

Ranges from inner to outer space

Grumman has special interest for the graduating engineer and scientist seeking the widest spread of technology for his skills. At Grumman, engineers are involved in deep ocean technology...engineers see their advanced aircraft designs proven daily in the air over Vietnam, and soon...in outer space, the Grumman LM (Lunar Module) will land the astronauts on the lunar surface. Grumman, situated in Bethpage, L.I. (30 miles from N.Y.C.), is in the cultural center of activity. Universities are close at hand for those who wish to continue their studies. C.C.N.Y., Manhattan College, New York University, Pratt Institute, Columbia University, State University at Stony Brook, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Hofstra University and Adelphi College are all within easy distance. The surroundings are not hard to take. Five beautiful public golf courses are in Bethpage—two minutes from the plant. White sand beaches stretch for miles along the Atlantic (12 minutes drive). The famed sailing reaches of Long Island Sound are only eleven miles away. The informal atmosphere is a Grumman tradition, matched by an equally hard-nosed one of turning out some of the free world's highest performance aircraft systems and space vehicles. To name a few . . .

LM—Lunar Module to land the astronauts on the lunar surface

EA-6A Intruder— All-weather, tactical, electronic weapon system

PG (H)—57-ton Hydrofoil Seacraft

PX15—4-Man Deep Submersible Vessel to conduct undersea experiments

Here then is the opportunity for graduating engineers. AEs, CEs, EEs, MEs, IEs, Physic majors and Chemical Engineering majors... to take their place in the continuum of technology that is Grumman. Grumman representatives will be

Maine To Plan "Convention"

SOUTH PARIS, Maine (AP) — Republicans of Oxford County want to get a publicity jump on adjacent New Hampshire.

They're planning a mock convention here which they say will be the first presidential preference primary in the nation.

It will be held, with all the trappings of a real party conclave, on Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12—just a month before the New Hampshire primary.

County Chairman Fred C. Hanscom of Rumford said Wednesday night the convention would have no authority even to pledge delegates to the state convention. But he said delegates would be called on to nominate and second candidates for president.

"Not His Voice"

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Rose Bucher listened Thursday to a North Korean tape recording alleged to have been made by her husband and said, "It was not my husband's voice."

Mrs. Bucher's husband, Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher, is captain of the intelligence vessel Pueblo which was seized Monday night by North Korean patrol boats.

North Korea has released a tape recording, claiming it contains a confession by Bucher that his ship was on a spy mission.

Mrs. Bucher said, "It does not sound in any remote way like my husband. The inflections or sounds were not like his."

CRISIS . . .

The administration was reported to feel that the Communist seizure of the Pueblo ties in with a step-up of North Korean harassment in the Korean truce area.

Administration officials are coupling the Pueblo incident with a reported assassination attempt against South Korean President Chun Hee Park as part of an effort to divert U.S. and South Korean forces from Vietnam.

Congress members took a grave view of the mounting crisis. Some, like Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said the mobilization "means more war, more involvement in Asia."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he regards the situation as "grave, dangerous, gloomy."

Hippies Revive Puritanism

(ACP)

The hippie movement may be merely history repeating itself, a University of Minnesota history professor says.

Prof. David Noble, in an interview in the Minnesota Daily, said that attempting to live by perfect love and to attain salvation on earth, rejecting the "establishment, and revolting within the middle class are all manifestations of the philosophy of puritanism."

That philosophy was the basis of the bohemian societies of the 1800s; it was the theory behind John Humphrey Noyes' Oneida colony in western New York in the 1840s; and it is today's hippie creed, Noble said.

Noble who teaches intellectual history, said purification movements have always been separated from society in an effort "to divide the saints from the sinners."

Some 400 years ago, he said, man tried to reject man-made medieval society and restore a God-given way of life.

Today, hippies are rejecting the artificial tradition of the middle class and the hypocrisy of their parents—as all generations do, Noble said.

He called Noyes' Oneida society a form of transcendence because its members wanted to rise above sex—that is, have complete generosity but eliminate marriage.

Hippie transcentalism, he said, is partially satisfied by the use of LSD, marijuana, and other drugs, for two reasons. One is that such use is in opposition to the mores of the middle class establishment.

Another reason for transcendence through drugs, Noble said, is that there is no longer a geographical frontier. Puritanism symbolically moves from east to west, but for the hippies the frontier is gone, Noble said, adding this could explain why there are so many hippies in California.

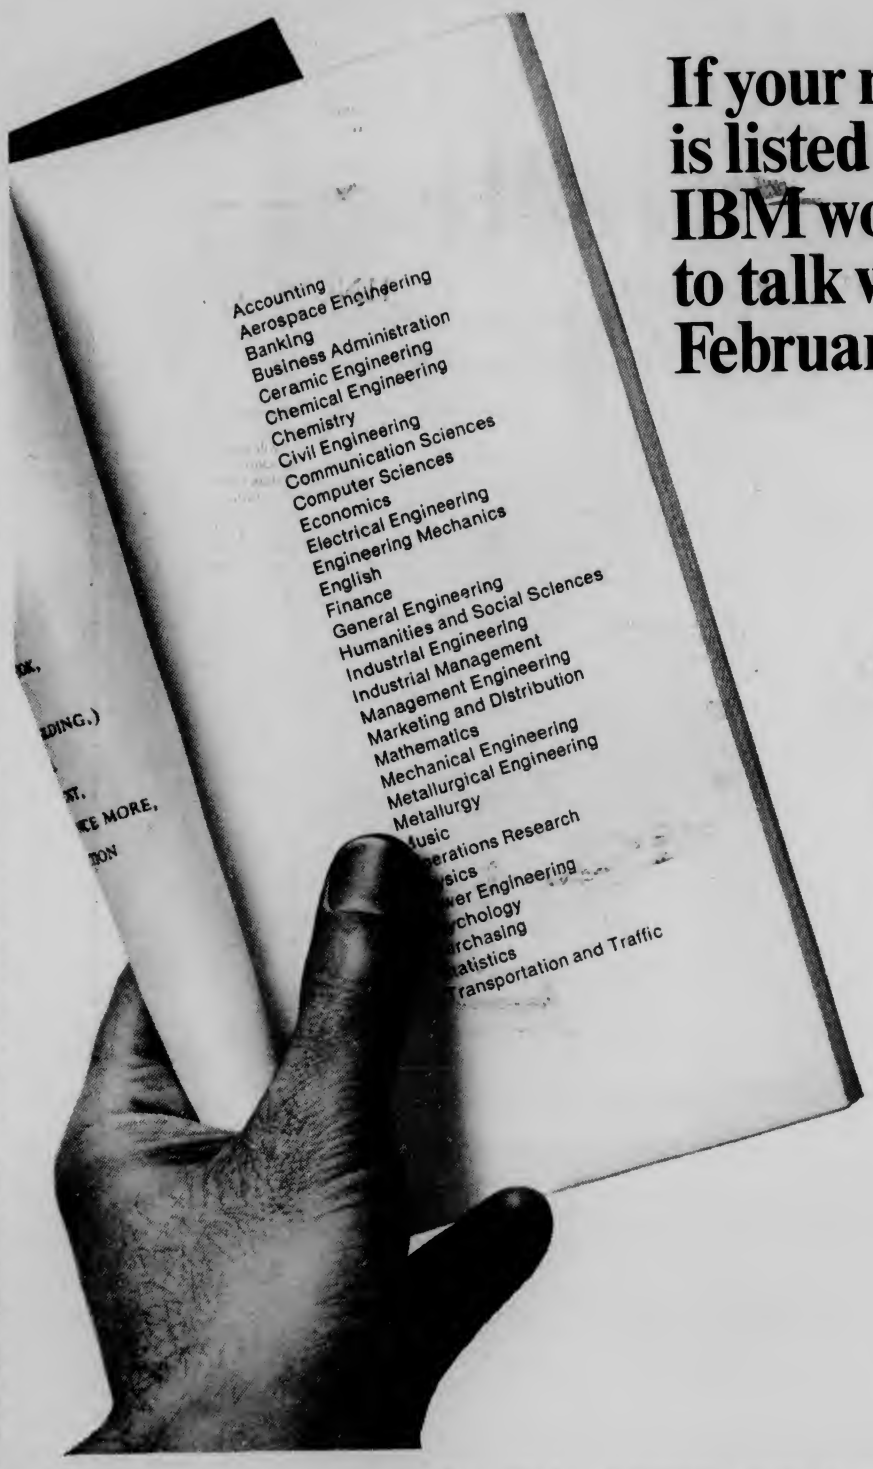
"People regard the hippie as a member of the extreme fringe," but the movement could be an index of a more fundamental shift within society, he said.

Any fringe group is bound to fail, Noble said, because transcendental philosophies cannot be expressed in particular, identifiable forms.

Such purification movements try to create a timeless product, but since there is only a "profane situation" and no "ultimate condition," he said, purification is philosophically and logically impossible.

AP News Briefs

NEW YORK (AP)—A Soviet diplomat who has spent the past five years expressing his views on world topics left New York on Thursday in almost complete silence.



Nikolai T. Fedorenko, who served as head of the Soviet U.N. delegation since 1963, told newsmen that having expressed his views before the U.N. Security Council and the General Assembly there was "nothing else" he wanted to say.

He is being replaced by Jacob V. A. Malik, who was a Soviet delegate to the United Nations in 1950.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Israel and Jordan engaged in a machine-gun duel Thursday across the River Jordan. Two Israeli soldiers were killed and two Red Cross officials were wounded.

The radio in Amman, Jordan's capital, said one Jordanian soldier was wounded but claimed Israeli positions were heavily damaged.

The Israeli army accused the Jordanians of opening fire while an Israeli liaison officer was supervising arrangements for the return of Arab residents of the occupied west bank across the bridge.

If your major is listed here, IBM would like to talk with you February 7th.

Sign up for an interview at your placement office—even if you're headed for graduate school or military service.

Maybe you think you need a technical background to work for us.

Not true.

Sure we need engineers and scientists. But we also need liberal arts and business majors. We'd like to talk with you even if you're in something as far afield as Music. Not that we'd hire you to analyze Bach fugues. But we might hire you to analyze problems as a computer programmer.

What you can do at IBM

The point is, our business isn't just selling computers. It's solving problems. So if you have a logical mind, we need you to help our customers solve problems in such diverse areas as government, business, law, education, medicine, science, the humanities.

Whatever your major, you can do a lot of good things at IBM. Change the world (maybe). Continue your education (certainly, through plans such as our Tuition Refund Program). And have a wide choice of places to work (we have over 300 locations throughout the United States).

What to do next

We'll be on campus to interview for careers in Marketing, Computer Applications, Programming, Research, Design and Development, Manufacturing, Field Engineering, and Finance and Administration. If you can't make a campus interview, send an outline of your interests and educational background to J. E. Bull, IBM Corporation, 425 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. Applications for Block To Be Available Soon

Robert C. Jones of the School of Education has announced that students interested in the Elementary or Secondary Education Blocks for 1968-69 should make an application at the School of Education from Feb. 5-16.

No one will be considered for admission to the Education Block who lacks the required average or who neglects to make an application by Feb. 16 which is the deadline.

The requirements for the Elementary Education Block are that those interested be members of the Junior class who are majoring in Education and who have an average of 2.0.

Only Juniors with a 2.0 may apply for the Secondary Education Block. Applicants will be notified early in March if an interview is required.

Home Economics and Physical Education applicants must be interviewed by the departmental advisor.

Puckmen Slated for Tough Games Against Colby and Williams

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

After a one month layoff, the UMass hockey team returns to action with a pair of weekend home games against Colby tonight, and Williams tomorrow night at Orr Rink. Both games will start at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Jack Canniff's squad snapped a six game losing streak by beating UConn, 4-2, in the Yankee Conference tourney at Vermont Dec. 27 - 28. The win gave the Redmen a 3-7 mark just before the month layoff.

Everett Bray is the lone newcomer to the hockey team. Bray is a sophomore defenseman from Fitchburg who has returned to school after a three year stint in the service.

Colby and the Redmen have met once before in Maine with Colby winning, 8-2.

Canniff commented that Colby has a fine passing team and good forechecking capabilities. The Mules have a 7-3 record, scoring 45 goals while allowing only 22.

Their record is better than indicated. Colby has lost twice to New England powerhouse UNH, once in overtime, and split with A I C.

The Redmen will skate against Williams College tomorrow night. The Ephs started off strong winning three and tying one but have lost three straight to Middlebury, Colby and Bowdoin.

Big Jim Roe, a high-scoring defenseman, and Doby West form the nucleus for Williams which won eight and lost 11 last year. Also figuring strongly in the Ephs' attack are Richard Gramse, Garry Benson and Jim Stearns.

Williams' defense is spearheaded by goalie Ned Perry. His best game was against Hamilton when he made 53 stops to help Williams to a 3-3 tie.

Williams was hurt by the loss of stars Jon Stableford, Paul Sullivan and Charlie Gordon. UM and the Ephs' staged two close battles last season with each team winning a game.

Jeff Sanborn leads UM scoring with ten goals and ten assists which places him in a fourth place tie for Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (E C A C) Division II scoring honors.

Don Robinson is second highest scorer on the squad with 13 points, seven goals and six assists. As a whole, the team has scored 43 goals while allowing 52.

Swiss Skier Scores Upset Over French

ST. GERVAIS, France (AP)—Fernande Bochatay of Switzerland scored an upset over the heavily favored French skiers and America's Kiki Cutter finished an impressive third yesterday in the Grand Prix Slalom, prelude to next month's Winter Olympics.

Miss Bochtay, gaining her first international ski victory since 1966, made two almost flawless runs through heavy snowfalls for a total time of 1 minute, 18.93 seconds.

Florence Steurer of France was second in 1:19.00 and Miss cutter, an 18-year-old schoolgirl from Bend, Ore., was a pressing third in 1:19.07.

The other Americans, Wendy Allen, Judy Nagel and Penny McCoy, placed in the top ten in an encouraging display less than two weeks before official opening of the Grenoble Games Feb. 6.

Miss Cutter came close to carrying off the victory. She made a slight mistake on the second run which cost her fractions of a second. She was not originally picked as a member of the U.S. Olympic Alpine squad but now stands a good chance of making the team.

"She looks very good," said the U.S. coach, Bob Beattie, who announced he would choose his four women Alpine skiers tomorrow or Sunday.

UCLA Basketball Team Travels To New York Without Lacey

LOS ANGELES (AP)—UCLA's basketball team flew to New York City yesterday without 6-foot-6 Edgar Lacey, who apparently became angry when criticized publicly by Coach John Wooden.

Lacey, a starter much of the season, failed to show up for practices on Tuesday and Wednesday and wasn't present when the squad boarded the plane for the Eastern trip to play Holy Cross and Boston College.

Following a 71-69 loss to Houston last Saturday when he saw little action, Lacey reported for Monday practice. Later he read of Wooden's remarks at the Monday meeting of the Southern California Basketball Writers.

"Edgar got his feelings hurt early," Wooden said then. "He wasn't effective in our high post and he wasn't effective guarding his man Elvin Hayes. He didn't especially feel like coming back in, anyway, so I didn't feel it was right to use him," the coach said.

Lacey was removed with about 11 minutes to play in the first half at Houston, when Hayes had scored ten points. The Houston star went on for a total of 39 as Houston dropped the Bruins from the undefeated list and from the No. 1 national ranking.

Lacey skipped classes Wednesday. Wooden said he hadn't talked with him but had not dropped him from the squad. The player was quoted, "It's his move."

Wodden commented, "I think it would be ill-advised to dismiss him now because he is hurt enough already. He has to sit down and think it over. I can understand how he feels. I hope he can think it over and come back."

Replacing Lacey in the starting five against Holy Cross tonight in New York will be Mike Lynn, a 6-7 senior.

Meantime, the Bruins, who play Boston College tomorrow night, are still worried about star Lew Alcindor's injured left eye.

Alcindor is expected to play in both games although he continues to have double vision. The 7-foot-1½ All American suffered the injury in a Jan. 12 game against California.

Gymnasts to Meet Penn State; Wrestlers Travel to Williams

Saturday night the gymnastics team takes on powerful Penn State in the Redmen's most important game of the season. The meet is scheduled for the Cage at 8:15 p.m. tomorrow.

For the Redmen, Dick DelGallo should pose a threat to the Nittany Lions on the Rings, and Bob Leclair on the side horse should do the same. Both Leclair and DelGallo are undefeated in their respective events.

Backing up these two will be Joe Reed on the long horse and Steve Brown on the parallel bars.

In a weekend exchange, the Redmen wrestlers travel to Williamstown tomorrow for a 3:30 match, while the Williams pucksters travel to Orr Rink for a game tomorrow night.

The trackmen travel to Boston for the B.A.A. meet, their first action in two weeks.

In the first competition of the season, the ski team travels to the Middlebury Snow Bowl, Middlebury, Vt., for a meet sponsored by A.I.C. Sunday.

The women's gymnastics team travels to Springfield tomorrow.

The highlight of the weekend will be the televising of the basketball game against Yale at New Haven over Channel 22 tomorrow at 2 p.m. The freshman play at 4 p.m. also in an away game.

Redmen Lose, 83-77, to Providence Friars

DiSarcina Fouls Out With 16:14 Mins. to Go

Staff Reporter
By STEVE ROSS

A standing room crowd of 4,000 saw the Providence Friars eke out a close 83-77 verdict at the Cage last night. Two New York City boys, Alphonse "Skip Hayes" and Stu Kerzner, paced the Friars to the win.

The start of the game was delayed thirty-five minutes due to the lateness of the Freshman game which was due to travel difficulties on the part of Providence. It appeared as if the Redmen were as poor as the elements in the first four minutes as P.C. spurted to an 8-1 lead.

But a 14-2 streak brought the Redmen from a 9-17 deficit to a 23-19 lead in five minutes. Key contributors to the drive were Ray Ellerbrook with three bombs and surprise starter Gary Gas-Perak with a pair of buckets. Joey DiSarcina capped the spurt with a spectacular three pointer with 9:07 to go.

The Redmen employed a 1-2-2 zone defense in an attempt to shut off the Friars inside game. This worked to a degree, but the outside sniping of Hayes and Kerzner kept Providence in the game. For the first half, the Redmen led 43-40.

The second half was a see-saw affair with the lead changing eight times. The Redmen were hampered when DiSarcina 16:14 to go. Kerzner and Hayes along with Craig Callen and Don Henderson did the bulk of the scoring. Marksmen for the Redmen were DiSarcina, Billy Tindall and Ellerbrook. Don Henderson hit a 15 foot pop with five minutes to play, and Providence never trailed afterwards.

DiSarcina fouled out 19 seconds later and the Redmen were dead. Kerzner with two bombs nailed the lid into the coffin as the Friars put on an eight point spurt.

Redmen Rantings! . . . Coach Jack Leaman said, "We played hard, but we didn't get the breaks." Responding to a question on why he kept DiSarcina in with four fouls, he answered, "If I take him out in a close game, we'll get beat anyways, so I have to play him. I don't have anyone who can give him a breather."

Coach Joe Mullaney remarked, "UMass wasn't playing as well as they did against Holy Cross, but they played fairly well."

He also added, "We have a game Saturday with Calvin Murphy and Company and I hope we do better. We'll have to."

This was P.C.'s first game in two weeks.

Kerzner caught an elbow above the right eye three minutes into the game and had the effected area bandaged for the rest of the evening. Kerzner, when asked why he doesn't drive, replied with typical New York City logic, "As a kid, I played playground basketball and no one drives because if someone does, they'll get wracked by the pole."

His outside shooting was more than enough.

Redmen, Yale Clash in Televised Game Tomorrow

By GLENN BRIERE, Sports Editor

One of the Ivy League's better basketball teams, Yale, povides the opposition for UMass tomorrow afternoon in a 2 p.m. game at New Haven, Conn. The game will be televised live on Channel 22 as well as broadcast on WMUA.

The Elis, who have a record of 9-4, have one of their best teams in years and are expected to challenge for the Ivy title. Their only conference loss came at the hands of Columbia, which is seventh-ranked nationally.

Statistics can be deceptive at times, and Yale proves it. The Elis have been outshot, 46 per cent to 42 per cent, and outrebounded, 632 to 596, yet they have outscored their opposition, 978 to 897, in their first 13 games.

Yale, which doesn't have an overabundance of height, plays primarily with three guards and two men up front. They have good shooters, fine ballhandlers and excellent team speed. If they can hold their own off the boards, then they can be very tough to beat, especially on their home court.

The Elis' most outstanding overall player is 6'4 senior captain Ed Goldstone, a forward. Goldstone is the second leading scorer on the team with a 15.6 average, and is tied for the club lead in rebounds. Last year he shot a fantastic 60 per cent from the floor, and although he is not shooting as well this year (48.5 per cent), he still leads the club in shooting percentage.

Goldstone does a good job off the boards for his size, and he hasn't missed a game in his three years on the varsity squad. Offensively, Goldstone is hard to stop in one-in-one situations. His jump shot is effective anywhere from close in to 25 feet out. As a junior last year, Goldstone was named second team All-Ivy.

At center, Coach John Vancisin uses rapidly maturing 6'9 sophomore John Whiston. His only trouble before the season began was his lack of aggressiveness under the boards, but he seems to have remedied that as he is now tied with Goldstone for the team lead in rebounding.

Whiston, who weighs only 205 pounds and looks like a string bean, has a scoring average of 7.2. He is fairly quick for his height, and with some more weight and lots of experience, he could be a good one.

In the backcourt, the Elis boast three slick guards. One of them, 6'1 senior Rick Stoner, is the best outside shooter on the team as he leads the team in scoring with a 15.8 average. Last year as a junior, Stoner hit for 54 per cent from the floor and made All-Ivy honorable mention.

Frank Wisneski, a 6'0 senior, is actually a swing man as he can play both guard and forward. A hustler, he likes to mix it up under the boards and ball hawk on defense. Wisneski, a strong leaper, is also a good long-range average.

Rob McCallum, a 6'0 senior, is a good ball handler who can score in streaks. A tough defensive player, McCallum also sparks Yale's fast break. His 12.0 average ranks fourth in the team's balanced scoring.

Two reserve forwards who should see action are 6'3 sophomore Thatcher Shellaby and 6'3 senior Roger Challen. Also likely to see action is the quarterback for Yale's Ivy League football champions, Brian Dowling, a 6'2 guard.

UMass and Yale have met just once before in basketball, in 1932 when Elis won 52-17.

The ECAC Game of the Week TV appearance is the only one of the year for the Redmen. The last time they appeared on live television was two years ago against Connecticut.

The varsity game tomorrow will be followed by a freshman game between Yale and UMass at 4 p.m.

U.S. Strengthens Power in East

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon said yesterday it is strengthening U.S. air power in the Far East as a precautionary move in the Korean crisis.

The names of the air units and the number of planes are defense secrets, the Pentagon said, in shunting aside all questions on specific military moves.

"The United States is taking certain precautionary measures to strengthen our forces and to reinforce our tactical air capabilities for the current situation," the Pentagon said.

The brief statement broke silence of an otherwise quiet Sunday on the sixth day of the Korean crisis triggered by Communist capture of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo late last Monday.

The Pentagon refused comment on reports the carrier USS Yorktown may have joined the nuclear aircraft carrier USS Enterprise in the Sea of Japan off Korea.

U.S. troops beat off North Korean raids on American outposts along the Korean armistice line Saturday night and Sunday and turned back three attempts at infiltration, U.S. headquarters reported.

It was the seventh straight day of sporadic shootings along the dividing line between North and South Korea. The action started after 31 North Korean commandos got through allied positions along the line and made their way to Seoul with orders to assassinate President Chung Hee Park.

"Students for McCarthy" Meet To Organize Campaign Plans

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

An open meeting of Students for McCarthy was held in the Student Council Chambers at 7 p.m. last night. The participating members of the meeting were Nathanial Ackerman of the Young Democrats, John Fitzgerald of Pioneer Valley Citizens for McCarthy, Patrick Flaherty of the American Democrats Action and Peter Ward of S.D.S. The primary goal of the meeting was to enlist student workers for McCarthy.

The first portion of the meeting was devoted to a description of the organization. Students for McCarthy is not primarily a democratic organization but rather, calls for the restoration of liberalism prevalent in the democratic party in the campaigns of 1960 and 1964. Since it is not sponsored by the Democratic Party, it can not rely upon the Democratic vote, therefore, they plan to canvass independents and Republican voters.

The student role will be auxilliary, for the students will assist the main headquarters. The campaign will be conducted on a professional basis, and the organization at UMass will be united with the Amherst College and surrounding area college organizations.

The McCarthy campaign has already gathered 2,500 signatures needed to put his name on the primary ballot of April 30. The McCarthy supporters are hoping for 100,000 or more signatures, and 20 of the 40 at large members of the Democratic party favorable to their candidate. According to the new Massachusetts law, the democratic plurality of 72 will go to the winner on the first ballot.

The plan of work, according to priority, was broken up into seven segments. The primary step will be a door to door canvass for signatures to inform voters of McCarthy's intentions. A table with McCarthy's literature will be located in the Student Union from Monday to Friday this week. The drafting of a Constitution to separate the organization from the Young Democrats and to formalize the speaker's program will also be started.

McCarthy's supporters admit he has no pat answers concerning Vietnam, but that he urges people to think rationally about the Vietnam War. The cry for McCarthy is basically, "Let us cleanse the Democratic Party."

Further details on the campaign strategy will be discussed Saturday, February 3, at two p.m. at Amherst College in Johnson Chapel.

'Sam Spark's Greatest Hits' To Appear as MDC Special

By JAN CURLEY
News Day Editor

A collection of satires by the Daily Collegian's infamous humorist Sam Spark will be released to the campus Tuesday as a Daily Collegian special. In the form of a sixty-page booklet, the anthology will be inserted into the center of the Daily Collegian on Tuesday.

Sam Spark's Greatest Hits — the title of the copyrighted booklet—will not only contain the best articles by Sam Spark, but will also reveal the long-awaited announcement of his heretofore secret identity.

The UMass satirist has been the longest-running column in recent Collegian history. Spark's pen first dripped its poison in November of 1965 when he sledgehammered the campus reform group, the Young Independents. In the years and scores of articles since then, virtually no campus or national controversy has escaped his comment. "In the beginning, Dean Helene. . .", a biting criticism of the curfew system and its advocates, erupted a lava of vehement protest which led to total curfew reform less than two months after the article was printed.

Faculty and administrators admit Sam Spark is universally read by them and many times has had, as one high administrator noted, "a positive and active effect on many areas of campus life."

Perhaps the Daily Collegian's most popular column, "Sam Spark Speaks Out" has appeared almost every week on the editorial page of the campus paper. Additionally, Spark has been reprinted in other papers throughout the country.

In a Daily Collegian survey, twenty-four out of twenty-five students questioned knew that Sam Spark was a Daily Collegian columnist. This is, incidentally, better than the national average for Americans knowing the identity of their Vice-President.

Spark is not popular with everyone, however. Student senators and class leaders have publically denounced Spark as a bigot who hides behind a shield of anonymity attacking anyone whom he personally dislikes. Privately, though, even those student leaders admit that Spark articles on campus politics have caused change, buried hopeful office-seekers, and boosted other candidates to victory.

"It is because of his tremendous impact and his wide readership appeal that we are answering a demand to have all of his best articles under one cover," said Daily Collegian Managing Editor Jack Dean. Dean went on to say that Spark serves as an example of how powerful and effective the student press can be when it has quality writing to print.

The book has been in the planning stages for almost a year. It is being printed by the Gazette Printing Company of Northampton and distributed by Hamilton I. Newell of Amherst.

The Collegian Sports Staff is in the midst of organizing for its second semester coverage. Prospective reporters are encouraged to apply for tryouts. Those interested in applying for sports day editor or sports reporter should see Sports Editor Glenn Briere between 2:30 and 4:30 today, 7:30 and 8:30 tomorrow night, and 2:30 and 4:30 Wednesday.

President Holds Reception For Swing Shift Freshmen

By ALISSA GREENBERG
Staff Reporter

Between 200 to 250 swingshift freshmen attended President Lederle's Reception for swingshift freshmen held yesterday in the Colonial Room at the Student Union.

Among the guests present at the reception, which was sponsored jointly by the Maroon Keys and the Scrolls, were President John Lederle, William Field, Dean of Students, and Mark Noffsinger, Assistant Dean of Students.

Also presiding in the receiving line were the freshman class officers; President Joe Tabacco, Vice-President Joei Wilson, Secretary Suzanne Baier and Treasurer Marty Shapiro. Maroon Key President Peter Murphy was also in the receiving line.

President Joe Tabacco stated, "Now the whole class can work together as a body".

Graphic Designs Shown At Skinner Hall Gallery

By RON LABRECQUE
Specials Editor

Graphic design 1967 — an intriguing display of graphics selected by members of the Art Directors Club of New York City is currently being exhibited in a refurbished corridor turned art gallery in Skinner Hall.

The gallery is the creation of Herbert Paston, Assistant Professor of Art in the department of Home Economics. A combination of carpeting, wall paneling, and lighting has turned the once hallway into a permanent gallery for traveling exhibitions and student work.

The exhibition area, which was completed in December of 1967, is one of a limited number of permanent such areas available on campus for display of art work.

The work currently being shown includes both black and white and color examples of published art work including posters, package design, book jackets, and most prominantly, magazine advertising layout, which have been blended by Paston in a creative display.

Student Parking Assignments

It will be necessary for each student desiring an assignment to a numbered controlled parking area for the second semester to proceed as follows:

1. Apply to the campus police for renewal if the student is presently assigned to a numbered controlled area, and if he has the same basis of need to retain the same area assignment. Except for first semester assignments which were based upon temporary physical disability, work problems, and course conflicts which no longer apply, renewal by the police will be automatic if the applicant has observed University parking regulations.
2. Apply in writing for a specific area assignment. This should be done by those students presently assigned to a numbered controlled area, but desiring a different area assignment or by those students initially applying for assignment to a numbered controlled area. The application should state the reasons such assignment is desirable, and should be addressed to Robert W. Kittle, Room 322, Whitmore. The following timetable will be used:

All requests for new assignments or changes in assignment –requests to Mr. Kittle by February 2; decisions on applications made by February 9; stickers available from campus police, February 14.

Sophs to Blow Off Steam At Weekly Open Forums

Sophomores in the College of Arts and Sciences are invited to blow off steam at a series of open forums to be held weekly by their class dean, Assistant Dean McFarland.

Two such forums will be organized, one on Mondays and the other on Tuesdays, both from four to five o'clock in the CASIAC office, entrance "C" of South College. The first meetings will be held today and tomorrow.

The Monday Forum will start with the topic Are You Getting An Education? and focus on educational issues such as the College Curriculum, undergraduate courses, teaching standards, and the University's grading system. The Tuesday Forum will discuss student attitudes under the title Is This A Stay-Cool Generation? (Or why are students anti-intellectual, confused about values, and lacking in social and political commitment?)

Acording to Dean McFarland, the idea for the Sophomore Forums originated with two very successful Freshman Advisory Committees that he met with last year. These student committees met several times and provided valuable advice regarding such College projects as the Arts and Sciences Summer Reading Program for Freshmen.

The reading program, which was initiated last summer, was in large part patterned after suggestions made by the present Sophomores. It is Dean McFarland's hope that this year's forums will be equally productive.

Sophomores may either sign up in advance at Dean McFarland's office, 109 South College or by dropping into the Forums. They will be held every Monday and Tuesday during the first weeks of the semester.

ART GALLERY . . .

of a Michelob bottle to intricate poster design, the collection of graphics shows the diversity of creativity which is available in the apparently limitless field of advertising art.

Graphic design 1967 will be shown at Skinner Hall for three weeks. Following this exhibition will be work from the National Institute of Design and Salamandie Textiles.

Paston pointed out that the gallery will definitely not be limited to traveling exhibitions but will also be available between scheduled showings for exhibition of student work from all departments of Home Economics.

Govt. Profs Send Wire To Johnson

Word has been received by the Daily Collegian that 13 members of the Government Department sent a telegram Jan. 25 regarding the Pueblo incident to President Johnson.

The telegram reads: "We deplore appearances of war hysteria. U.S. obligated by Korean armistice and U.N. charter to seek peaceful solution. International investigation of Pueblo affair required. National interest and honor demand adherence to due process."

In addition to President Johnson, the telegram was sent to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, U.N. Ambassador Arthur S. Goldberg, Senators Edward M. Kennedy, Mike Mansfield, J. W. Fulbright and Representative Silvio Conte.

The telegram was signed by Dean Alfange, Luther Allen, Loren Beth, David Booth, Gerard Braunthal, Philip Coulter, Peter Fliess, Glen Gordon, Sheldon Goldman, Irvin Howards, Jerome King, Felix Oppenheim and George Sulzner.

UMass Coed Injured In Hit-Run Accident

A UMass coed and a student at Northeastern University were victims of a hit and run accident late Friday on North Pleasant Street in the southern end of the campus.

Police said four other students were walking with the couple, but none obtained the car's registration number.

Police identified the girl as Miss Brenda Johnson, 19, of 44 Holyoke St., North Quincy, who lived at 245 Patterson Dormitory on campus. She was treated at the University infirmary and released.

Walking with her was Darryle Lettsinger of Roslindale, who was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Northampton, in the town ambulance, where 60 stitches were placed in a scalp wound. He was released Saturday.

Janet T. Kolb, 17, of Glen Lakes, New York, was killed late Saturday, Jan. 13, on her way home after finals. The sophomore at UMass was struck by a car crossing East Pleasant St. at Eames St. at 9:20 a.m.

She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital with multiple injuries and died at 2:26 p.m. The driver of the car was Mrs. Christine Blackmer, 84 Maple St., Belchertown, according to police.

Israeli Sub Vanishes In Mediterranean Sea

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli submarine Dakar suddenly broke off a radio broadcast to its home port Thursday just before Thursday just before she vanished without trace in the eastern Mediterranean, Israeli officials disclosed Sunday.

The submarine was radioing an unscheduled message to Haifa when she went off the air, never to return, the Israelis said.

But Israeli sources rejected the possibility the Dakar might have collided with the now-missing French submarine Minerve, since they were nearly 600 miles apart.

Officials have discounted the possibility that hostile action might have been taken against the Dakar but acknowledged the possibility has not been ruled out 100 per cent.

A five-nation air and sea search continued for the Dakar Sunday about 120 miles off Cyprus but hope waned for the safety of the submarine and her crew of 69.

Patches of oil spotted 25 miles offshore have failed to lead a naval task force to the missing French submarine Minerve and her crew of 52 men, a spokesman at French Mediterranean Fleet headquarters said Sunday night.

The patches of oil were sighted just before dusk by sailors taking part in a massive search for the 800-ton, high-performance, Daphne-class submarine, officially counted as missing Saturday after taking part in French naval maneuvers.

Taking part in the search are six escort vessels, 10 minesweepers and seagoing tugs, the 27,000 ton carrier Clemenceau and dozens of planes and helicopters.

Last contact with the Minerve, the spokesman said, was at 6 a.m., Saturday, on the concluding phase of the two-day maneuvers.

The pilot of a sub-chasing plane taking part in the exercise messaged the Minerve, then under water 25 miles southeast of Toulon, that because of rough weather he was returning to base. The Minerve acknowledged the message from the plane.

The Minerve was the second submarine listed missing in the Mediterranean in three days. The Ishaeli sub, Dakar, with 69 aboard, was last heard from Thursday as she was cruising near Cyprus, almost at the other extreme of the Mediterranean.

Auditions Set For "Li'l Abner"

The Operetta Guild of UMass announces auditions for its spring production of "L'il Abner" to be presented at Bowker Auditorium April 4, 5 and 6.

Tryouts will be held at South College Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, January 29, 30 and 31 from 7:00-10:00 p.m. All those interested in any phase of production, offstage as well as on, are encouraged to attend auditions and meet director Steve Rosoff.

He is looking for men not necessarily with any acting, singing or dancing experience. Many women are also needed in the cast which lists over 50 speaking parts.

Contrary to a previous announcement, rehearsals will not be held over spring vacation. Tryouts are open to all, freshmen as well as upperclassmen.

Scholarships Available For Study in Sweden

A special opportunity for scholarship study in Europe is being offered under the auspices of the Scandinavian Seminar, an American organization which since 1949 has enrolled college students and other adults for study in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden at the unique Scandinavian residential schools known as "folkhogskolor".

Young Americans and Canadians of Swedish descent may apply for one of the 22 scholarships given by the Swedish Folk High Schools for participation in the Seminar program, comprising nine months of study and living in Sweden, from August 1968 to May 1969.

The Seminar academic year consists of family stays, intensive language instruction, individual tutoring, a wide curriculum of liberal arts studies at the Folk High Schools, as well as special lectures and courses. The year culminmates in an Independent Study Project in the student's special field. Many major American colleges and universities give partial or full credit for the Seminar year.

Each $500 schoiarship covers one-fourth of the Seminar's total fee of $2,000 and includes transportation from New York to Sweden, language materials, tuition, board and room for the academic year.

For more information write to Scandinavian Seminar, 140 West 57th Street, New York, N. Y.

North Vietnam To Release Four Prisoners

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam identified today the three U.S. airmen it said would be set free as a humanitarian gesture in observance of Tet, the lunar new year that begins tomorrow. A broadcast dispatch of Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency did not say when or where the men would be released. It listed them as:

—John David Black, captain, service number fr 55413, Tennessee.

—Norris Miller Overly, major, service number fr 45067, West Virginia.

—David Paul Matheny, ensign, service number 710099, Indiana.

In broadcasts last November, Hanoi reported Black was captured Oct. 27 in Hanoi and Matheny in Ninh Binh Province Oct. 5.

Hitchhiking is a hazard to both hitchhiker and motorist. The hitchhiker risks injury to himself and to drivers of oncoming or overtaking vehicles, who may cause accidents because of the carelessness or thoughtlessness of the hitchhiker. Several recent "incidents" have underlined the inherent danger, to men as well as to women students, of hitchhiking. The University considers hitchhiking to be a dangerous practice and strongly urges students to refrain from soliciting and/or accepting rides in this manner.

Previewing the N. H. Primary

The Republican voters of New Hampshire face a difficult decision in their first nation primary. They can vote for either a man whose qualifications for the presidency are doubted by many or a man who many Americans dread.

George Romney has been a fine governor in Michigan. He fixed up the fiscal affairs of the state wonderfully. However, he has shown some lack of comprehension of the subtleties of the day's national issue, foreign and domestic. Moreover his statements about getting back to the fundamentals of family and religion in America sound like those of a man out of touch with American society's values, needs, priorities, and conditions. His thinking is "back to" instead of "forward for". He'd probably be a great Secretary of Commerce or Labor, but as president he'd be out of touch with the problems and ideas of the young, the deprived, and the city dweller. He couldn't defeat Johnson in November.

Nixon certainly knows how to run a country. He was vice-president in the Eisenhower administration. You remember Ike's administration, don't you? So much was done in the field of civil rights, and in foreign affairs we outplayed the Communists all the time—right? Certainly not.

During Nixon's vice-presidency civil rights legislation was nil and in foreign affairs John Foster Dulles bungled many times—turning allies away from us and new nations actively against us, and failing to perceive trends of world affairs. Thus, damaging our position. Nixon was stoned in Latin America because of the administration's policies. It is doubtful that the people of those lands have forgotten their reasons for hating America. Electing Nixon won't help us in our relations with other lands. Even Krushchev stated that he desired Nixon.

How can people vote for a man who so many at home and abroad despise? Do we want more of an Eisenhower type of administration? Obviously he can't win against Johnson either, responsible people couldn't vote for a man with his record. (He has campaigned for many Republicans who now hold party office, and many delegates to the Republican convention favor him, but he will not defeat Johnson.)

The Republicans of New Hampshire face a tough decision in that they must choose a candidate who can win in 1968. Hopefully they will vote for Romney so as to keep Nixon from getting votes at the convention. It is a negative task they are asked to perform, but if Nixon is prevented from getting the nomination, and Romney's chances being low, we can hope that Rockefeller will be nominated.

Rockefeller is man of intelligence and integrity and the only one who can defeat Johnson in November. The people of New Hampshire can be instrumental in deciding who our next president will be. If the candidates are Nixon and Johnson then American politics will have reached a nadir and we will have to choose the lesser of two evils—Johnson who despite his dismal administration has at least done a little bit for the domestic scene in America.

House Presidents Meet Tonight

The strategy of Student Senate President Jim Collins in the open house controversy appears likely to win for him not only the proposal but also a strong measure of house government support. The student government executive has called a meeting of all house presidents for tonight to discuss his actions on behalf of the open house proposal and to solicit their opinions.

Observers see in the meeting a means of restraining individual houses from acting precipitously in holding illegal events —if the presidents can reach a consensus. While Collins opposes any immediate mass demonstration because he is not convinced it is necessary and he fears it would alienate supporters in the Faculty Senate, he also opposes it because he does not believe it could be successful on short notice.

If Collins cannot convince the house presidents to give the concept of a triparte community a little more time, any demonstration undertaken might — through this meeting — be coordinated and successful at least in a mechanical sense.

More importantly the meeting is an opportunity for the student government leadership to dispel the image that the Senate is unwilling to take action to achieve its proposal. It is expected that Collins will tell the presidents that he will call upon them to carry out a walk-in should the Faculty Senate delay its action as soon as the Student Affairs report is made.

In many ways Jim Collins has already given his support to house government. Last year in the Senate, before he was elected an officer, he used to frequently ask the members to meet with their house governments and to ask the Southwest members to attend the SW Presidents' meetings. If he can elicit their support in this case, a greater amount of dormitory autonomy seems likely.

Somebody's Move

Open House

From Once a Semester To...

Until summer 1966, one open house was permitted per semester with no policy stated on doors. Visits by relatives of the opposite sex in residence halls was permitted on Sunday afternoon without permitting students opposing such visitations any defense against such.

The spring 1966 Men's Affairs Committee (of the Student Senate) Report on Rules requested visitation periods be extended to two additional periods on Saturdays including one in the afternoon and one in the evening with any member of the opposite sex permitted in the residence halls.

The Student Life Committee in their report that Spring did away with the weekly visitation periods for relatives of the opposite sex instituted open houses once monthly, the policy presently in effect. This was subsequently approved by the appropriate administrative officials without consideration by the Faculty Senate and forwarded to the Board of Trustees.

The Board of Trustees returned the recommendations to the administrations without recommendation stating that the matter was one of administrative responsibility. The policy was subsequently put into effect in Fall 1966.

Fall 1966: the Dean of Men, Robert S. Hopkins declared that closed doors were "corny" and ordered the doors of partipants in open house in men's residence halls to leave their doors open. No change was made in the women's nonpolicy on the matter.

Fall 1966: no serious problems from the implementation of once monthly open houses, except for abuse of the wording by supposed University "men" who took advantage of a loophole which permits any person to enter a building during open house. This loophole has yet to be corrected in spite of student requests for a correction.

Winter 1966: change in the Dean of Student's Office removed the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women from authority over residence halls and substituted for them an Associate Dean of Students (Dr. Mark Noffsinger who headed the Student Life Committee from its formation until this appointment) to supervise three area coordinators.

Late winter and early spring: Men's Affairs conducted gripe sessions in residence halls throughout campus to obtain opinions on existing rules changes and suggestions for future changes. These sessions and their results convinced the committee of the existence of very broad support for the open house legislation as it was evolving in our minds.

Spring vacation: four committee members stayed on campus to write the Men's Affairs Report in order that it might be approved by the senate in time for the traditional April 15 deadline for changes for the following year. Final date of writing was April 2, 1967.

April 3, 1967: Men's Affairs Committee in a special meeting approved the report unanimously.

April 4, 1967: Student Senate suspended the order of business to pass the Men's Affairs Report, amended by adding the Women's Affairs Report. The report passed with only 3 opposing votes (an overwhelming majority).

Early Summer 1967: Student Life Committee approves Men's Affairs recommendations on open house policy but with changes in the implementation procedure.

Summer 1967: the Administration permits a policy of one open house per week for summer school students. They have since stated that this was in excess of their authority.

September 1967: Student Handbook issued. It was specifically designed to include all regulations for which students may be held responsible. No mention was made of door policy during open houses.

September 1967: Open House bill submitted to Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate.

Homecoming 1967: Administration authorized two additional open houses for the weekend. David Grayson House had previously announced that they would hold two that weekend in addition to the one authorized.

November 1967: Student Affairs approved the Student Life Report on Open Houses with changes in implementation.

December 15, 1967: Faculty Senate fails to discuss open house bill which has been on their agenda since the previous meeting, two weeks earlier.

January 4, 1967: Faculty Senate tabled the Open House bill after the Provost suddenly came up with a legal opinion on the matter which had not for some reason been presented to the faculty committee during the long months of debate.

One fact stands out: Three changes have been made in open house frequency during the last two years without going to the Trustees. Two changes have effectively been made in door policy without trustees approval. The present stand of the administration is that they cannot make the decision on open houses; that this is a decision of the trustees.

UMass Offers Courses at Freiburg University

UMass is putting down roots this year at Freiburg University, one of Germany's leading centers of learning.

The University's Atlantic Studies Center in Freiburg, begun a year ago, is offering this year two courses that are listed in the official University of Freiburg catalogue and are given within the framework of the department of political science.

The two courses, taught by UMass Professor Ferenc Vali, are on the problems of divided Germany, given in German, and on Atlantic organizations, given in English. Both are attended by German and American students.

According to UMass German Professor Peter Heller, resident director of the Freiburg program, "This is a first major breakthrough toward significant communication between American and German participants in the program, and it offers clear evidence of the fact that we are in a position to make a contribution here."

The UMass Freiburg program enrolled its first students in the fall of 1966. Dr. Frederick C. Ellert of the UMass German department was instrumental in establishing the center and served as a resident instructor during the first year.

The 26 American students at Freiburg this year come from UMass and other American institutions.

Only students proficient in German are accepted, according to Prof. Ellert, because one of the principal aims of the program is "an attempt to get our students into a dialogue with the students and faculty at Freiburg."

American students have German tutors to brief them on German university customs and standards. They are also given guided tours of the historic city of Freiburg and the surrounding Black Forest area.

The major feature of the program is an emphasis on interdisciplinary studies. "We feel that having had a chance to range away from his major interest, a student finds he is brought back to that interest in greater depth," Prof. Ellert said.

Aided by a grant by the UMass Associate Alumni, the Freiburg center has cooperated with Freiburg University and the local American House in a guest lecture series. The series has brought to Freiburg such distinguished lecturers as Hannah Arendt, Robert Kenney and Dr. Pierre Hassner. This year the series will sponsor a symposium on the current state of contemporary literature in America, England, France and Germany.

One of the eventual goals of the Feriburg center is a fully mutual exchange program—Americans at Freiburg and Freiburg faculty and staff at UMass.

Hunt Continues for Missing Bomb

THULE AIR BASE, Greenland (AP)—Air Force officials are privately convinced they will never find an intact hydrogen bomb in this ghostly arctic wasteland.

Yet they plan to spend months trudging the black ice and crusty snow of North Star Bay where a B52 bomber carrying four of the deadly "nukes" crashed and burned a week ago.

"We know very well," one Air Force colonel said, "that those bombs were torn apart when that plane came down and burned."

One reason the Air Force isn't making its private conclusion official is that it doesn't wish to publicize any details of the construction of the four devices, believed to be in the 1.1 megaton range.

But the finding of the four parachutes that are a vital part of the bombs' delivery system made it all but certain that nothing would be found of the bombs themselves except fragments.

The chutes, one Pentagon nuclear expert acknowledged, are sealed within the casing of the bombs. Their purpose is to slow the descent of the bombs in an attack so that the delivery plane will have ample time to get out of the way before they go off.

Maj. Gen. Richard O. Hunziker, who is directing the around-the-clock recovery effort, acknowledged that the four chutes were found in a compact area on or near the dark scar in the ice and snow where the Strategic Air Command bomber crashed and burned.

"You can draw your own conclusions from the fact that the chutes were found separate from anything else," one source said.

The United States shipped up 1,500 pounds of horsemeat to feed the Eskimo sled dogs that ferry men from the air base 7½ miles across the ice to the crash scene. Electrical generators are being hauled out to the area to provide light for the search in the nearly continuous winter darkness.

What the searchers and visitors—not to mention the Thule veterans—dread most is the onslaught of a Phase 3. This is Arctic talk for a severe polar storm in which the blowing snow from the arctic icecap reduces visibility to zero. All activity stops except for emergency rescue missions. Prolonged exposure during a phase 3—at temperatures 30 or more degrees below zero—means death.

Johnson's Popularity Rises Since October Gallup Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson's popularity has gone up 10 per cent since October, with 48 per cent of the public now approving of the way he is doing his job, the Gallup Poll reported Sunday.

The new figure represents a high mark for the President since just after the Glassboro conference in June, when he registered 52 per cent.

In Gallup's nationwide sampling, people were asked simply if they approve of the way the President is handling his job. Forty-eight per cent said yes, 39 per cent said no and 13 per cent were undecided.

The interviews were completed just prior to Johnson's State of the Union message January 17.

"Want a company where you can really put your education to work? See IBM February 7th."

"Some of the engineers who graduated before me complained that their education didn't mean much in their jobs. That's not what I wanted," says IBM's Jim Carr. (Jim is a Manager of Mechanical Process Engineering.)

"At IBM I knew I'd be using what I learned. There's so much diversity here that you can usually work in the specific area you choose. In my own case, I majored in Mechanical Engineering and minored in Metallurgy. Today my ME degree means more than ever. And I often use my metallurgical background. For example, I'm now working on a process development program that requires a knowledge of machine design, metallurgy, heat transfer, and chemistry, all of which I studied in school.

"Another good thing about IBM's diversity is that it creates an interdisciplinary environment. You get a chance to work with and learn from people in many different fields. Since our industry is growing so fast, the people you talk to are likely to be working at state-of-the-art levels or beyond."

There's a lot more to the IBM story than Jim has mentioned. We'd like to tell you about it when we're on campus. We'll be interviewing for careers in Marketing, Computer Applications, Programming, Research and Development, Manufacturing, and Field Engineering.

Gymnasts Sparkle but Bow to Penn State

By JOHN GEDSUDSKI
Staff Reporter

Competing against the best team in the east and one of the best in the country, UMass put on a great gymnastic show, before going down to defeat at the hands of Penn State, 188.55-176-50, before a near-capacity crowd at the Cage. The UMass score was a record high for a UMass team.

The Redmen took an early lead in the first event, the floor exercise. Joe Godwin tied for first place with Bob Emery of Penn State, a truly outstanding performer, with a score of 9.15. Dick Delgallo and Jim Corrigan tied for third place and sophomore Joe Reed gained fourth, as UMass swept the first four places. It was the only Redmen win.

The brilliant Emery, who was a member of the American gymnastics team in the Pan- American games at Winnipeg, won the side horse competition with 9.35 score. In doing so, he handed Bob Leclair his first defeat in the competition. Leclair took second, however, scoring a 9.15, his fourth consecutive nine point or better performance. Clarence Fraser, seeing his first action, took fourth place.

Emery continued his winning ways winning the rings competition with a 9.3 score. Penn State took second place also with UMass' Joe Reed taking third place with a fine 9.0. Dick DelGallo, who was previously unbeaten in the event, led for three-fourths of the event but bobbled on his last attempt and finished fourth.

In the trampoline competition, Penn State's Tom Clark, John Kindon and Marty DeSantis swept the first three places, the winning score being 9.35. Mike Kasavana took the only UMass place, placing fourth with a score of 8:15.

Joe Reed brought UMass back in the long horse, tieing for first place with Don Spiker of Penn State, each scoring 9.3. Reed gained his place with a brilliant front hand spin. Steve Brown of the Redmen tied for third with Emery of Penn State, scoring 8.8.

Penn State's Dick Swetman scored the high individual score in the parallel bar action, notching a 9.65. His performance was highlighted by seven consecutive back somersaults, culminating in a one armed handstand. Emery took second place, with Reed and Brown of Umass finishing third and fourth respectively.

Penn State swept the first three spots in the horizontal bars, the last event. Swetman won first place, scoring 9.4. Redman Dave March finished fourth.

Besides the record score by the team, the meet was also highlighted by the scoring of Joe Reed, whose all-around total was a personal high of 54.8. This was only exceeded by Emery who scored 54.8

Coach Kjeldsen was pleased with his team's performance. He said, "The team responded well to pressure. I believe if they perform like this they can beat Army, Navy and Springfield."

The next home meet is February 10 against Pittsburgh with haux visiting on February 17 at the Cage.

IT LOOKS EASY—Steve Brown performs a deft maneuver while competing on the parallel bars. He finished fourth.

Redmen Downed by Yale, 83-69, on Eastern TV

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

NEW HAVEN, CT. — A veteran Yale team spotted UMass an early 16-10 lead then came roaring back to slap the visitors with an 83-69, defeat in an Eastern College Athletic Conference television contest here Saturday afternoon.

The loss, the third straight for the Redmen, drops their record to 6-8 while Yale now has won ten of 14 encounters.

Ray Ellerbrook's shooting and the rebounding of Billy Tindall and Gary Gasperack sparked UMass in the early going. The visitors had six-point margins on two different occasions before the cold Elis began to find the range.

With 6:59 left in the half, the Redmen and Elis were deadlocked 21-21. Exactly four minutes later Yale led, 38-25, thanks to visitor offensive fouls violations, and bad passing. Every UMass mistake, and there were plenty, was turned into home team points.

Yale led 44-32 at halftime. Frank Wisneski had 14 of these points while Ellerbrook came up with seven first period hoops.

The Ivy Leaguers wasted no time putting the game completely out of reach. In the first five minutes of the second half UMass could only manage one field goal. The swifter, shorter Elis took over complete control of the backboards and soon they were ahead by more than 20 points.

Joe DiSarcina fouled out with five minutes remaining and the game completely out of reach at 75-52. Four of the floor general's fouls were offensive jobs which could earn Rob McCallum who guarded him, an Emmy Award, considering it was his first television appearance.

John Dreyer and Ellerbrook managed to save some face for the Redmen as they went on a 12-point spree at the end of the game to make the final score, Yale 83, UMass 69.

Yale had five men in double figures. Deadeye Ed Goldstone poured in 18 markers while Wisneski had 16. Rick Stoner, the Elis leading scorer, managed 13, McCallum was off the floor enough to get 11, and substitute Roger Challen came up with ten.

Ellerbrook was the only bright light in an otherwise horrible Redmen performance. The south paw sophomore was the game's leading scorer with 25 points.

Wrestlers Lead Early, Then Are Caught by Williams, 29-15

WILLIAMSTOWN—A strong comeback by Williams in the last seven matches enabled the Ephs to defeat the UMass wrestling team, 29-15, here Saturday night.

For a while it looked like the Redmen might record their third win in a row as they enjoyed a 13-3 lead going into the 145 pound class. Even with almost a total collapse of the U-Mass heavyweights, the Redmen were ahead 13-12 going into the 16 pound contest but the only team score managed in the last seven weights was a draw by Dick Gnatek in the 191 pound class.

Things looked pretty good at the start as Billy Goodwin wrestling for the first time 115 pounds drew a forfeit and five points for the Redmen. However, Dave Wade went on to drop an 8-5 decision to a superior conditioned Coombe of Williams.

Paul Pearl got UMass back on the scoreboard with his third win in five starts with a hard-fought 5-2 win.

In the 137 pound class, Captain Gene Paltrineri never looked stronger as he scored a convincing pin over Foster at 3:14.

That win gave UMass a 13-3 lead, but then the roof really caved in. Mike McKenna was leading his opponent in the 145 pound class, 6-4, but ended up on the short end of a 7-6 score, and the Redmen's hopes went down the drain.

In the 152 pound class, Allan Sgroi subbed for regular Brian Urquhart, and dropped his first decision in three, starts to the Williams captain, Hall, 4-0.

In the 160-pound class, Fred Fitzpatrick dropped his second decision and took a decisive 11-2 thrashing at the hands of Johnson of Williams.

Parker Simonds, who has been wrestling for exactly one week, was pressed into service for the position vacated by Sgroi.

He showed unusual strength but was pinned in 3:42 in a split-scissors, a not-too-comfortable hold in the 167 pound class.

Ernie Smith, wrestling at 177, dropped his fifth straight as he was pinned by Williams' best wrestler, Poindexter, in 1:20. At this point, the score was 22-13, Williams and UMass needed two pins to pull it out but the Ephmen had other designs.

Dick Gnatek, in his second start at 191, wrestled the best bout of his short career when he tied a strong Hitchens, 1-1.

Aggressive Glenn Cummins went all out in the unlimited battle and almost pinned his opponent in the early moments of the contest. But the Williams heavy, Gregg, took Cummins down, when Glenn tried for a kill with a lateral drop and ended the bout and the meet with a pin in 4:00.

The Redmen, now 2-3 in dual competition, next meet Central Connecticut on Saturday at home.

Frosh Drop 2nd

NEW HAVEN CT. — Trailing from the second half on, the UMass freshman basketball team went down to defeat against the Yale frosh, 60-555, Saturday.

UMass led early in the first half, but with the sharp shooting of 5'11 guard James Morgan, the Elis forged ahead into the lead and never were headed. Morgan scored 24 points, most coming on long range bombs.

Jim Ryan led UMass scorers with 12 points as the Redmen were plagued by cold shooting.

The win brings Yale to a 2-4 record while UMass falls to 5-2. The Little Redmen next meet the Connecticut frosh Wednesday evening at 6 p.m.

Baseball News

All interested freshman baseball candidates are invited to attend the first organizational meeting of the season. The meeting will be held in Room 251 of the Boyden Physical Education Building at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, January 30.

Puckmen Drop Two to Colby, Williams

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Colby and Williams dealt the UMass hockey team a double defeat over the weekend, Colby trimming the Redmen, 9-1, Friday night while Williams dumped UMass, 6-3, on Saturday night, at Orr Rink.

Lack of defensive support for UMass goalie Pete Scoville was the main reason for the double defeat. Scoville had a total of 74 saves in the two games.

Colby broke open a close game with six third period goals in their convincing triumph Friday. Bill Henrich had scoring honors for the Mules by coming up with a three goal hat trick.

Henrich's linemates Ed Allison and Bob Waldinger combined for three goals giving Colby's top line a total of six goals for the night.

After Henrich opened the scoring with an early power play, Bill Fallon picked up a long pass from Charlie Hanifan at the Colby blue line went in alone and beat the Colby goalie with a 25 footer into the lower left corner.

Only the great work of Scoville enabled the Redmen to come out of the first period with a 1-1 tie. He had 21 saves while UMass scored on its only shot on net of the period.

Waldinger and Allison added second period goals to increase the Colby margin to 3-1. Both scored on easy rebound shots after Scoville had made the initial save.

Colby had 56 shots on net for the night while UMass could manage only 14. The Mules hiked its Division II record to 8-1 and its overall mark to 9-4.

Jeff Sanborn started the Redmen on what seemed to be a promising night against Williams with his eleventh goal of the season at 2:16 of the first period.

The Ephs bounced right back with a three goal outburst within three minutes midway through the period. The first two goals were scored only eleven seconds apart.

Frank Buckler's goal at the 4:00 mark of the second period got the Redmen within one goal. He scored on a short backhander from the right side of the net.

Gary Benson scored a short handed goal for Williams at 11:10 but the Redmen came back again as defenseman Dave Goldberg drilled in a 20 foot screen shot for his first goal of the season.

Pete Comstock tapped in a rebound of a Jim Roe shot from the point to give the Ephs a two goal lead at the end of two periods.

Clint Wilkins scored the only goal of the last stanza when his long shot from center ice took a crazy bounce and eluded Scoville. The Redmen pressed for the latter part of the period but Williams goalie Ned Perry made some good saves.

Perry finished the night with 38 saves while Scoville stopped 28 shots. The win broke a four game losing streak for Williams and moved their record to 3-4-1. UMass is now 3-9.

Collins Sets Faculty Open House Decision "Deadline"

By DON LEBLANC
Collegian Staff Reporter

In a meeting last night with the presidents of dormitories, fraternities and sororities, Senate President James Collins called for a deadline of Feb. 15 for a final decision on the proposed Open House policy, now tabled in the Faculty Senate.

The purpose of the meeting was to bring the residence hall representatives up to date on the history and progress of the bill. Collins presented his personal views on the situation and asked for the opinions of the representatives on certain points of debate.

Criticizing both students and faculty for lack of speed in processing the bill, Collins stated that "Since the policy is so basic a concern for all students, procedures could have been set up". He further stated his opinion that the Senate has had "a very reasonable amount of time to consider the bill."

He feels that when the bill comes up again for consideration, "only logical argumentation should accompany any rejection of the bill." Collins feels that any unreasonable putting off of the bill should be met with organized, campus-wide student protest, in the form of campus-wide open-houses or silent walk-ins at Faculty Senate meetings.

Collins stressed the importance of the student in the tri-parte system. When the student is dealt with unfairly, he has the right to non-violent protest. Any civil disobedience, Collins said should be on a campus-wide basis.

Collins went on to point out that arguments against the policy, such as this state's chastity laws and control by the Board of Trustees of University policies, can be met reasonably enough to obtain passage of the bill. He indicated, however, that an open-door stipulation might have to be included in the new policy. Arguments were raised on the issue of the power to enforce the opendoor clause, and it was generally felt that this would be unenforcable. The Senate president's personal feeling is that the doors should be closed, and that a forced open-door policy insults the students' integrity. He admitted that the first two-week period of setting up open houses might be slightly irrational, but felt that it would quickly settle down.

A decision must come not only on the open-house policy, but also on the validity of the tri-parte system, Collins stated. Also brought out were arguments over the validity of majority-vote approval for individual house policies, and the setting up or restructuring of governing bodies to handle infractions of policies.

U. S. Still Strives for Diplomatic Solution to Korean Crisis

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —The U.S. was authoritatively reported Monday night to be ready to discuss all aspects of the Korean issue with the North Korean Communists—but not as long as they insist upon continued detention of the U.S. intelligence ship 'Pueblo' and its crew.

Authoritative sources said the U.S. did not regard an invitation to North Korea to take part in the Security Council debate as a critical issue at the moment.

U. S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg was described as prepared to respond to that issue if and when it arises in the council.

The Soviet Union hinted that it backed sending an invitation to North Korea, but it was up to that country to say whether it would accept.

The U.S. view was described as willing to take part in talks at the U.N. or any place else with North Korea on the entire Korean issue — but not at the price of having the 'Pueblo' and its crew held for an indefinite time as hostages.

The 15-nation Security Council cancelled a meeting scheduled for Monday afternoon on seizure of the 'Pueblo' amid indications that private talks were producing little movement toward solution of the critis.

Authoritative sources said it would be a mistake to assume that diplomatic efforts at the U. N. have come to a dead end. They said the U.S. was neither pessimistic nor optimistic over U.N. prospects.

The U.S. was described as putting the main emphasis on finding a diplomatic solution that would defuse the situation— and that could be done only by prompt release of the U.S. vessel and its crew.

Shuttle Bus To Run Daily On Campus

A shuttle bus service will be offered at the University from now until March 30. This is a free service to all members of the University community.

The route will begin at 'F" lot in the Southwest area and proceed to the other perimeter road at Boyden to the new North road and "N" lot to North Pleasant St. and through the new road through parking area #1, and back to the starting point on University Drive.

The route will be serviced between the periods of 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. From 7:30 - 9 a.m. and 4:30 to 6 p.m. two busses will travel the route at 10 minute intervals. One bus will travel at 20 minute intervals for the remainder of the time.

Stops will be made at the following locations, in the listed sequence:

Passengers may board or leave the buses at any scheduled stop.

Communists Attack Da Nang Base After Lunar Truce Called Off

SAIGON (AP)— Communist forces launched widespread attacks on lunar New Year day, Tuesday, including a destructive rocket assault on the big U.S. fighter base at Da Nang and strike against at least seven government provincial capitals.

Street fighting was reported in several of the cities, including Da Nang, the second largest city in South Vietnam.

First reports said six American planes worth $12 million were destroyed and one more was damaged in the rocket attack on the base.

Street fighting still raged at daybreak in a village on the outskirts of Da Nang. Officers said the attacking Viet Cong were using villagers as shields to hold off counterfire.

The attacks came as Vietnamese ushered in the lunar new Tet with incessant bursts of firecreckers, intended to ward off evil spirits in the coming year.

Only hours earlier, the Allied command cancelled a planned New Year's cease-fire in the five critical northern provinces where the allies estimate an invasion force of four to five North Vietnamese divisions is newly deployed.

U. S. pilots were ordered to continue raids on North Vietnam's southern panhandle through the 36-hr. truce period.

The allied cerse-fire went into effect elsewhere in South Vietnam at 6 p.m. Monday, and was to continue until 6 a.m. Wednesday. The Viet Cong began their own seven-day New Year's cease-fire period last Saturday but continued fighting in scattered areas all but rendered the truces meaningless.

The U.S. Command reported eight enemy violations in the first 11 hours of the allied truce. It said three Americans were killed and 27 wounded in the incidents, while 37 enemy were killed by allied counterattack.

The Communists launched their rocket attack on the Da Nang air base at 3:30 a. m., Tuesday, firing an estimated 40 rounds into the huge installation. U.S. headquarters in Saigon said there was no report of casualties.

The shelling was followed by a ground assault, apparently planned against the air base. But, officers at the scene said the main enemy force became trapped in a village on the outskirts of Da Nang, half a mile from the base.

Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency, meanwhile, said U. S. planes Monday afternoon bombed the city of Vinh, at the top of the northern panhandle. The agency said American pilots also "fired missiles on a populated area on the outskirts of Hanoi."

The U.S. has about 60,000 Marines and Army troops in the five provinces of the northern sector, designated by the military as the 1st Corps area. So. Vietnam has about 12,000 troops. More Americans are likely to move up soon.

The bulk of the No. Vietnamese force is reported dug in around Khe Sanh.

U.S. officials said the entire enemy line force—not counting backup troops—consists of four and possibly five divisions, or 40,000 to 50,000 men.

Spock Pleads Innocent Amid Demonstrations for Both Sides

BOSTON (AP)— Dr. Benjamin Spock and four other men pleaded innocent Monday to charges of counseling young men to avoid the draft.

The pleas, which included one by the chaplain of Yale Univ., were entered during a brief arraignment in U.S. District Court as demonstrators marched outside in their support.

Judge Francis J. W. Ford ordered the defendants released in $1,000 bail each and told lawyers for the defense and prosecution he wanted trial to begin by spring.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Defense lawyers requested 60 days to file motions, but the judge allowed them 30. When the prosecution asked for 30 days after that for replies, Judge Ford said he would allow 20.

"If I allow all this time for these so-called motions," he said, "this case will spring right into summer."

Ford said he would set a trial date after considering motions of both sides.

Under indictment with the 64-yr.-old pediatrician are the Rev. William Sloane Coffin, Jr., 43, chaplain at Yale Univ.; Michael Ferber, 23, of Boston, a grad student at Harvard Univ.; Mitchell Goodman, 44, an author, of New York City and Temple, Me.; and Marcus Raskin, 33, of Washington, D.C., co-director of the Institute for Policy Studies.

The indictments, returned Jan. 5 by a federal grand jury in Boston, charged the five with violating the Selective Service Act by conspiring to counsel young men to avoid the draft.

Outside the court, 200 persons, young bearded men, girls, housewives and businessman types marched around the courthouse as 75 policemen kept them separated from about 100 pro-Vietnam demonstrators.

Councillor Positions Open

Director of Staff Training, Alice Sargent, has announced that Heads of Residence will be accepting applications for the position of counselor until February 5.

All interested upperclassmen should pick up an application from their Head of Residence or Area Coordinator and return it by the due date.

Following receipt of the applications, a House Screening Board, consisting of an equal number of representatives of the counselors and the House Government and also the Head of Residence and the Graduate Assistant, will solicit recommendations from residents and also conduct interviews with candidates.

The Screening Board will then send the applications, with its recommendations to the Area Coordinator on February 26.

Students Give and Gain Volunteer Work Through

"A Meaningful Lesson in Life"

By GEORGE W. FLAVIN

The Belchertown Volunteers have added a dimension to their lives. In addition to the intense academic and social experience gained at UMass, these volunteers have learned something else. Coming from many diverse backgrounds, and pursuing different programs of study at the University, they share together a meaningful lesson in life.

No lecture, no dorm experience, and no social event can teach a person to give of himself in an unselfish manner as helping those who are less fortunate and who desperately need help. Peace Corps and Vista, but more specifically a number of local programs geared to helping the local community can teach people to be unselfish.

UMass Volunteers for Retarded Children, commonly known as the Belchertown Volunteers, is one such local program. Nearly every Saturday a bus leaves the Newman Center for the Belchertown State School.

The bus is seldom filled, but those few volunteers who return time after time, year after year, to work intimately with one or more retardates (often of college age) at the School, feel that this is the best way to spend their Saturday afternoons. They don't get paid, they seldom receive recognition by the community for their efforts, yet they persevere.

Among such volunteers are:

Sharyn Lowenstein, '68, majoring in elementary education, discovered the program at Activities Night. For the past three years she has been teaching a 19 year old boy to read and write. Although the progress has been slow, she has received great satisfaction from her efforts.

An entomology major, Leonard Radin, '69, first learned about the Volunteers through his Child Psychology professor. During the past two years he has delighted many audiences with a puppet show, put on with the help of a retardate at the School.

Mary McMenamin, '70, a zoology major, went to Belchertown the first time as part of a GSS project. She has returned to help as a volunteer every Saturday since then.

These volunteers, though few in number, are not alone. They point to the diversity of background, yet similarity in wanting to help those who are less fortunate than they. They have indeed added a new dimension to their lives. More young adults may learn a lesson from them.

"Brighten the Dismal Halls"

By CHRISTINE BEYETTE

Every Wednesday evening a chartered bus pulls up to the Memorial Wing of Northampton State Mental Hospital. Several patients wave and welcome the University of Massachusetts and Smith College Volunteers as they arrive. Northampton Volunteers come to brighten the dismal halls where approximately 2200 human beings have been placed by society.

Northampton patients receive little more than custodial care. Psychiatric treatment is limited; living quarters are demoralizing, being dimly-lit, bare-walled, and crowded. These people who just "don't count," are simply left to their own worlds, day after day, year after year.

Do you have a few hours on Wednesday nights that you could give to these people? Would you like to come to play a musical instrument, to sing, to play cards or checkers, to set ladies' hair, polish fingernails, or play pool on the men's ward?

Visit in a group—several volunteers and several patients—or be the special visitor of one patient—the visitor whose company one special patient awaits every week—the person who shows he cares—who makes that patient feel that he "counts".

A mental hospital is not an exceptionally dangerous place to do volunteer work, as has been thought in the past. The average patient is calm and receptive to the volunteers. Volunteers are not required to come every week—any time given is appreciated. Volunteers are always needed.

Have you ever thought, "Sometime, I would like to go to Northampton Volunteers", but you never got around to going that first time? After you've been a Northampton Volunteer for one night, patients will remember you and be anxious to see you again. You will be glad you went, and you'll probably want to go again. This Wednesday the volunteers will leave from the lobby of the Student Union at 6:00 p.m. Come for that first time—make some patient's day happier.

Education Costs Rise at Amherst

Amherst College has announced that it will be necessary to increase its comprehensive charge for tuition, room, board, and fees from $2,900 to $3,200 for the academic year beginning next September.

In a letter to parents, President Calvin H. Plimpton said: "We take this step reluctantly, but if we are to continue to give your sons the best in undergraduate education, the Board of Trustees is convinced that we have no alternative."

"Even with this increase," he said, "income from students next year will account for approximately 43 percent of the College's projected budget of $8,940,000. The balance will have to come from gifts, grants, and endowment.

"Furthermore, Amherst's charges will still be no more—and in many cases less—than those at comparable colleges and universities."

In explaining the basis for the increase, Dr. Plimpton cited the need to compete with leading colleges and universities for distinguished faculty by meeting prevailing levels of compensation; increased costs of operating and maintaining the physical plant, including the new Robert Frost Library and a music building and a science center now under construction; expenses of a new computer center for faculty and student use; and the continuing costs of adapting the curriculum to contemporary needs through such programs as independent study and interdisciplinary inquiry.

"In the years ahead," he said, "all these costs will continue to rise as they reflect the national economy."

Nixon to Announce Decision on Primary Thursday

UP — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, with active campaigns already going in well over a third of the states, will announce Thursday whether he will run in Republican presidential primaries.

The date was disclosed Monday in New York by a spokesman for Nixon, executive assistant Patrick Buchanan.

It falls on Feb. 1, one day behind the date when backers in New Hampshire had been confidently predicting Nixon would start an active personal drive for that state's first-in-the-nation March 12 primary.

Simultaneously with the New York announcement, Nixon-for-President headquarters here disclosed the scope of organizational efforts six months ahead of nominating convention time. It gave out a list of Nixon chairmen in 20 states and the District of Columbia.

Nixon insisted, "I have not yet made the final decision on what I will do in 1968."

Cuba Viewed As a Possible "Little China" in the West

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Fidel Castro, reacting to challenges within his Communist party by instituting a broad purge, seems bent on turning his island into a little China within the Red world, at the risk of severely straining already aggravated relations with the Soviet Union.

The announcement of a trial for nine "old" Communists, meaning those following Moscow's line, is likely to be received with anger in the Kremlin, whose economic and military aid support the Castro regime.

Behind Castro's crackdown are six years of tension, dating even before the missile crisis of 1962 left Castro bitter against his Soviet benefactors because they agreed to withdraw offensive rockets from Cuba.

Castro evidently feels he can play with this political dynamite on the assumption that Moscow has no option except to continue supporting his regime as the only island of communism in the Western Hemisphere.

Cuba depends upon the Soviet Union and Communist nations as markets for agricultural products and as sources of military aid. It relies on Russia and the Communist bloc for oil and oil products, machines, raw materials, semimanufactured products, metals, fertilizers, cement, rubber, chemical products and even foods and medicines. There is no precise figure on what aid to Cuba costs the Russians, but it must be well in excess of $1 million a day.

For years Moscow has displayed irritation at the state of the Cuban economy, the way economic aid was used and the effects of Castro's expensive adventures in subversion abroad.

Moscow has been advising Cuba's Communists to "build socialism" first before going all-out to export revolution. But like China's Communists, Castro espoused constant armed struggle as communism's only future.

Chief purge trial defendant will be Anibal Escalante, who was secretary-general of ORI—the Integrated Revolutionary Organizations—in the early days of the regime. He clashed with Castro as early as 1961. Now he may face the death penalty.

Castro cracked down on "old" Communists in March 1962. He dissolved ORI and set up the United Cuban Revolutionary party with himself as its chief. He banished Escalante, who went to Czechoslovakia and then Poland and Russia.

Escalante did not return until 1965, by which time there was a deep rift in Castro's party. Castro fired a number of the old ones from high jobs.

One Man Show Staged by UMass Art Professor

A one-man show of works by University of Massachusetts artist Walter Kamys will wind up this week at the Ward-Nasse Gallery, 118 Newbury St.,

The show includes 25 paintings and drawings by the University associate professor of art. Trained at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Prof. Kamys received two fellowships from that institution and has also been awarded the Prix de Rome.

His work has been included in exhibitions and group shows all over the U.S. and has been featured in more than 20 one-man shows, two of them in Great Britain. Prof. Kamys is representtd by work in several public collections, including those at Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges, Yale and New York universities and UMass.

Police Find Driver of Car In Friday Accident

Police have identified Miss Judith A. Mulvey, 22, of Conroad Rd., Acton, as the driver of a car involved in an accident late Friday night on North Pleasant St., Amherst, in which two persons were injured.

Not Charged

Police declined Sunday to say how they learned the identity of the driver other than identification was made following an investigation of the accident. No charges have been filed against the woman, police said. The investigation is continuing.

According to police, the car Miss Mulvey was driving came in contact with Miss Brenda Johnson, 18, of North Quincy and Darryl Lettsinger, 20, of Roslindale. Miss Johnson was treated at the UM infirmary and Lettsinger was admitted to Cooley Dickinson Hospital for treatment of scalp injuries.

Smith Graduate Appointed As Five-College Fellow

The appointment of Roberta (Mrs. Henry S.) Wulf, formerly of Brookline, Massachusetts, as Five-College Fellow has been announced by North Burn, the Five-College Coordinator (for Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith and University of Massachusetts).

Mrs. Wulf received her B.A. from Smith College in 1966 and expects to receive a Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) degree from Smith in June. A dean's list student as an undergraduate, Mrs. Wulf majored in history and also studied sociology and political science. Among her summer experiences was work as a social research assistant for the Massachusetts Committee on Children and Youth.

The Fellowship is an annual appointment. Mrs. Wulf will serve until June when she will be succeeded by a new appointee from among the 1968 college graduates in the Connecticut Valley.

As Five College Fellow, Mrs. Wulf will assist the Coordinator in promoting and continuing collaboration among the Valley colleges.

Since 1951, when the Hampshire Inter-Library Center (HILC), a joint depository for little used books and periodicals, was established, numerous cooperative ventures have developed and inter-institutional relationships have grown into a complex organizational structure.

Student interchange among the institutions is now commonplace and faculty interchange frequent. Inter-institutional academic programs range from a formal four-college Astronomy Department to informal joint curricular planning among the established departments.

The Valley institutions cooperate as well in public services, including the Five-College radio station, WFCR (FM), the quarterly Massachusetts Review, a Five-Calendar, and work with the schools in the area.

Hazards of Booming Population

"By the time you finish reading this ad, 17 people will have died from starvation. Most of them children."

This was the way a full page ad in yesterday's N.Y. Times caught my attention. That must be the way statistic courses teach you to break figures down—to make them hit home.

The writers of the ad—an appeal which is one of many which are appearing frequently on political or social subjects—are the Campaign to Check Population Explosion, with Emerson Foote as chairman.

Asking for support, they paint an extremely black picture: "world population has already outgrown world food supply." Population will increase by 300 million in the next four years. There is no way in sight to feed these numbers. Most of them children.

How do people suppose we can do it in the year 2,000—when we are not doing it now, not because we cannot but because we are unwilling. We are unwilling to take the preventive steps to keep 17 people from dying every 2½ minutes.

Some Americans may say that this is a problem for the world, not for our leadership or concern. We spend 150 times as much now feeding the underdeveloped nations as we do in helping them to solve their population problem.

Of equal importance to America is the other problem of excess population, a problem which we don't quite acknowledge yet but with each summer's riots becomes more graphic:

"A hungry, over-crowded world will be a world filled with fear, chaos, poverty, riots, crime and war. No country will be safe. Not even our own." Perhaps, the central problem of this other world is not that it is hungry but that it is fearful.

The ad advocates population control. Is this the right appeal—humanitarian? Should it be instead an appeal that says it would be less costly to make an investment now? Should it be an appeal that says we spend X amount of dollars on luxuries, why not on this social service—or we spend X amount of dollars on other social services, why not on this one? These questions come to mind, because however stark the morning newspaper is, this ad holds little promise.

Yes, this is our world—starving, overcrowded masses, and the richest nation in history ignores, with a turn of the page, documented social concern.

Korea and Vietnam

North Korea's seizure of the crew of an American naval vessel and the ship itself, which may, or may not, have penetrated North Korean territorial waters, has precipitated a grave international crisis. The roots of that crisis are not in Korea but in Vietnam. It is to the Vietnam question, therefore, and not merely to the Korean incident, that the United States and the world community must turn their most energetic diplomatic attention if the growing threat of an even greater international calamity is to be eased.

The expanding conflict between American and indigenous Communist forces in Vietnam was bound to touch off repercussions around the world wherever Communist nations or parties, allied with or sympathetic to North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front, were in a position to put diversionary pressure on the United States and its allies. Korea, where American and Communist forces long have faced each other across an uneasy armistice line, was a natural locale for such diversionary action.

The longer the Vietnam war continues and the more the battle in Southeast Asia intensifies and spreads, the greater will grow the danger of further pressures in other areas of confrontation — the off-shore islands, the Sino-Indian frontier, the Mediterranean, Berlin, to name just a few possibilities. Renewed conflict in any of these areas could touch off the nuclear war that all the world dreads.

This is not to argue that tension between the United States and its allies and the major Communist powers and their allies would not persist without Vietnam. Nor is it to suggest that the United States must not stand firmly with its allies wherever established lines are threatened, as in Berlin.

But Americans must recognize that in attempting to curtail gains the Vietnamese Communists thought they had secured in the Geneva settlement of 1954, the United States has run into direct conflict with both major Communist powers that supported that settlement. This confrontation aggravates tensions at every point of contact throughout the world. At the same time, the United States has spread its power thin, has tended to unite a divided enemy in common cause against it and has increasingly alienated world opinion, including that of some of its best friends.

To reverse this ominous drift in American fortunes and to reduce the threat to world peace, it is necessary to move to correct the initial mistake in Vietnam, now acknowledged even by many of the war's strongest supporters.

The Johnson Administration has in the last few days exhibited a brilliant display of diplomatic initiative in pressing for a solution to the Korean problem through every available peaceful means. The same kind of diplomatic vigor has not been so evident in trying to find an honorable solution to the central issue, the war in Vietnam. It could well be applied now.

Campus Comment

No Need for Anonymity

To the editor:

In answer to a letter that Lois Bloom, '69 has in this week's issue of TIME MAGAZINE (Jan. 26, 1968), I wish to enclose the following answer which I would make to TIME, and to her.

If Miss Bloom has no identity on our campus perhaps the fault is hers. We have several residential dorms with dedicated faculty advisors. I serve as a "fellow"in one of them and may only state that the lack of student particlpation, or even interest, is what appalls me. The opportunities are there, but the student must go part way. Faculties are made of flesh and blood people, most of whom are interested if approached and made aware of an individual's needs.

The president of the university also holds "open office hours" when his too full schedule permits. Once only two students took advantage of this opportunity to talk. Were the president not sincerely interested he would not have offered this opportunity.

We have many students who do not feel they are just numbers and some of them are freshmen. It's a big world, Miss Bloom, outside of the university. No one is going to hold your hand. You had better learn to make your identity count within the smaller world of the university before you graduate in '69. You must learn about people: you must meet the world, not expect it to come to you.

Angie Lederle,
Wife of the president

The Need for Open Houses

To the editor:

I consider the present open house proposals absolutely essential for normalizing student life although slightly too strictly regulated. My reason is that students on campus have a very limited number of resources in the area for dates and study. It is nice to entertain dates in our homes here with the resources available. We live in an unusual situation, necessitating special measures, particularly to protect minority rights. But minority rights are effectively safeguarded in the existing proposal.

The two key sentences in the Men's Affairs Report on Rules 1967, which have survived a year of wrangling intact called for local determination of "frequency, duration, door policy and social conduct with respect to open houses." It further stated that these could be locally designated "as open or closed social events" and that registration provisions could be established. The latter was placed in for the protection of girls who wished to keep out men from their residence halls without invitation.

Administrative inaction on this proposal still legally permits such misbehavior a year after our request for correction. In the former sentence "Social conduct" has aroused objections. It was intended strictly as a description of the status quo and can without harm be eliminated.

"Frequency" and "duration" can within certain very broad limits be subjects for compromise. One consideration in this compromise must be that of parental visitations to include such things as men carrying girls' suitcases to their rooms legally. The existing regulation is the result of the Student Life Committee in 1966 dividing the difference between parental visitations every Sunday and open houses once each semester in consideration of Men's Affairs request for parental visitation periods each week end.

Until then parental visitations were considered a University responsibility. The Men's Affairs' request was a logical extension of the existing regulation based on the obvious fact, although still not recognized, that parental visitations (including all female relatives) are no less violations of the privacy of non participants than visitations of female friends in men's residence halls.

"Door policy" cannot with consistency be compromised upon. This is the basic defense for minority rights in the residence hall. Participants, as part of normal entertainment, will play stereos and radios. The only method by which students may still study in the residence halls if not participating is to shut those doors. There are times however, (fraternity and sorority rush , for example) when residence units will wish to require all doors to be open to show off their accommodations.

An Invitation to the Campus

from New England's Largest College Daily

Tryouts for positions on the Massachusetts Daily Collegian staff will be held tomorrow evening, 6:30 p.m., in Room 124 Hasbrouck.

Openings are available in the fields of newswriting, makeup, editorial writing, sports, and business. All classes are eligible, although second-semester freshmen and sophomores will be given preference.

Requirements for membership include a training period of up to one month, passage of a written examination, and a trial staff membership during which time the candidate must demonstrate a desire to serve the newspaper and a willingness to devote a minium of two hours per week to the paper. (While most Collegian staffers average one night per week, no staffer is allowed to devote more than six hours per week at any time).

We feel that if you are willing and think you are able to meet these requirements, the Daily Collegian will give you one of the most rewarding experiences of your education. The people, things, and events that will touch you every day as an MDC staffer make the effort miniscule when compared with the returns.

NOTE: The average cume for the seven MDC news day editors was 3.1 last semester.

That's tomorrow night, Wednesday evening, 6:30, Hasbrouck 124.

See you then.

Defense Education Act Staff Meets in Amherst This Week

The first of three workshops to be held across the country for directors and staff members of National Defense Education Act-sponsored summer institutes for high school history and social studies teachers is taking place at Amherst College next Monday through Friday, Jan. 29-Feb. 2.

The workshops are under the direction of the Amherst College Committee on the Study of History, which conducts a Federally sponsored project in curriculum development and in-service training for teachers.

Together, the Amherst workshop and two to be held in the months ahead at Berkeley, California, and Racine, Wisconsin, will involve a total of 90 summer institute directors and staff who are themselves college teachers of history. The NDEA summer institutes are held on campuses across the country and this year will be attended by some 3,000 high-school teachers.

Chairman of the Amherst Committee on the Study of History responsible for the workshop training program for institute personnel is Van. R Halsey, associate dean of admission and assistant professor of American studies at the College. Richard H. Brown, of the staff of the Newberry Library in Chicago, is project director.

Next week's workshop sessions here will use curriculum materials developed by the Amherst project in "live" classes at the Amherst Regional High School. These presentations will be observed by the workshop participants and will also be the basis for other exercises involving the participants themselves as teachers and as class members.

A number of the demonstration classes will be videotaped and the tapes then used as the basis for detailed discussion and analysis of the teaching techniques involved by the workshop participants and staff.

The emphasis throughout will be on the "discovery learning" approach, which encourages the student to test various source materials with his own questions and pursue their answers, learning through his own inquiry rather than merely being on the receiving end of a textbook discussion or presentation by the teacher.

During the past eight years, the Amherst project has been developing curriculum materials in American history which teachers, in turn, can use in the development of their own courses based on this approach.

The focus of the Amherst workshop will be on examining the attitudes which teachers have toward the subject, their students, and their own role, as well as on providing working experience with the new course materials.

Each of the participants has been asked to prepare a one-day lesson which can be used in the demonstration classes.

Rose R. Olver, assistant professor of psychology at Amherst College, who serves as consultant to the project, will participate in the discussions on the criteria of learning as psychologists see them.

John Adams, chairman of the history department at the Amherst Regional High School, and Ronald Fitzgerald, superintendent of the Amherst schools, will also be among the participants.

Shuttle Bus To Run Daily On Campus

A shuttle bus service will be offered at the University from now until March 30. This is a free service to all members of the University community.

The route will begin at "F" lot in the Southwest area and proceed to the other perimeter road at Boyden to the new North road and "N" lot to North Pleasant St. and through the new road through parking area #1, and back to the starting point on University Drive.

The route will be serviced between the periods of 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. From 7:30 - 9 a.m. and 4:30 to 6 p.m. two busses will travel the route at 10 minute intervals. One bus will travel at 20 minute intervals for the remainder of the time.

Stops will be made at the following locations, in the listed sequence:
- "F" lot
- Boyden building
- Farm area
- "N" lot (Engineering area)
- Intersection of North Pleasant Street and Eastman Lane
- Hasbrouck
- Morrill Science Center—South entrance
- Newman Center
- Parking area No. 1 (Administration building and SBA)
- Boyden building

Passengers may board or leave the buses at any scheduled stop.

NODOZ ANNOUNCES THE EXAM PILL

(If you flunk, at least you'll be awake.)

Sure you've used NoDoz to help you stay awake the night before an exam.

But have you ever thought of taking NoDoz to make yourself a little sharper during the exam itself?

Well, maybe you should.

Let's say you're one of those guys who doesn't have to cram like mad the night before. (Even so, you're probably not getting your usual amount of sleep.)

And let's say the morning of the big exam, you find yourself heading for class, kind of drowsy and unwound and wondering if The Great Brain has deserted you in the night.

What do you do?

You panic, that's what you do.

Or, if you happened to read this ad, you walk coolly over to the water cooler and wash down a couple of NoDoz, the Exam Pill. And before long you're feeling more alert and with it again.

You see, NoDoz helps bring you up to your usual level of alertness, so you don't just sit there in a fog; it's got what it takes to help restore your perception, your recall, and even your ability to solve problems.

In fact, NoDoz contains the strongest stimulant for your mind that you can take without a prescription. Yet it's not habit forming.

Okay, but what about the guy who goofs off all term and has to jam everything in the night before.

Are we saying NoDoz will keep him from flaming out?

Nope.

We're just saying he'll be alert and awake.

As he flunks.

UMass' Carty May Join Landry in Pro Draft

Cuozzo to the Minnesota Vikings for the Vikings regular number one draft choice. This is not the bonus pick, but rather the seventh pick of the first round. With their quarterback problem solved, the Vikings will undoubtedly strengthen their defense by taking a defensive lineman, probably Kevin Hardy or linebacker Fred Carr, as the first choice in the draft.

The second pick goes to Cincinnatti; they are starting from scratch, so its anybody's guess who they will go for. A good bet would be fullback Lee White or El Paso's Carr.

Atlanta drafts third, and they may try to strengthen their backfield with the likes of White, Larry Csonka, or Garrett Ford. A logical second round pick for them might be hometown hero Lenny Snow of Georgia Tech.

San Diego has Denvers fourth pick and will go either for a big defensive lineman (Humphrey, Hardy, Byrd), or kicking specialist Jerry DePoyster of Wyoming.

Green Bay drafts fifth for New Orleans and will also go for a good defensive lineman, possibly Humphrey, to eventually replace the aging Willie Davis.

The Boston Patriots have the sixth pick, and while head coach and general manager Mike Holovak has stated he wants a good defensive lineman, he just may go for a legitimate long receiving threat, something the Pats have woefully lacked for years. That would be Haven Moses, the top receiving prospect in the country, a 6' 3", 200 lbs. speedster whom Holovak coached in the recent Senior Bowl. The feeling here is that if Moses is still available when the Patriots' turn comes to draft, Holovak will grab him, and still be able to get his defensive lineman in the second or third round. There are that many good ones around.

Other draft possibilities see the Miami Dolphins going for an offensive lineman (Ron Yary), the Buffalo Bills going for either a fullback or receiver, the Detroit Lions, a quarterback (Landry), the Kansas City Chiefs an offensive center (Bob Johnson), and the Oakland Raiders may be looking for a good receiver.

If he is still available, look for the Dallas Cowboys to take Jerry DePoyster. The Cowboys have been dissatisfied with their punting and kicking games; DePoyster, one of the nations leading punters, has hit consistantly on 40-50 yard field goals.

Another UMass player likely to be drafted is tight end Bill Carty. He has the size (6' 4"—235 lbs.) the pros like and has sure hands. He should go in the middle to late rounds of the draft.

When the 1968 pro season opens up next August there will be many new faces on the various rosters. Along with veterans Milt Morin, Phil Vandersea, Ed Toner, and Terry Swanson, there should be at least one more UMass alum in the big time next year, and possibly two more. Today's pro draft will say for sure.

State College System Director Named to Toledo Post

Dr. John Gillespie (Tuesday) has been appointed Director of the Urban Studies Center at The University of Toledo. Dr. Gillespie, currently director of the Massachusetts State College System, also was named professor of political science.

The Urban Studies Center was established in February, 1966 to stimulate, coordinate and facilitate urban-oriented research, teaching and extension activities.

The Center will draw upon the talents of faculty members in all colleges of the University in providing various kinds of leadership to develop a better way of life in the metropolitan Toledo complex.

"Dr. Gillespie's broad experience," Dr. Giesecke said, "is counted upon to help the University address itself more intelligently and aggressively to the various problems of urban civilization."

He has served in a number of administrative and academic posts at the University of Massachusetts, the University of Texas and at East Central State College.

Employment Opportunities for Engineering Graduates at Stone & Webster Service Corporation

Stone & Webster Service Corporation provides consulting and planning services in 17 fields of management responsibility for public utilities, banks, private investors, business and industry. Our clients are located throughout the United States, Canada, the Caribbean area, Europe and Asia.

Opportunities are available to graduates with degrees in electrical, mechanical and industrial engineering for positions on our consulting staff. For over 75 years engineers on our consulting staff have worked with hundreds of clients in long range planning, determining the feasibility of new ventures, mergers, acquisitions, etc., evaluating and appraisiing physical properties, informing boards of directors and stockholders of their company's present business health and future prospects. Our consultants also give advice in the general field of improving efficiency in operations and the review of management policies, procedures, systems, etc.

Accountants at Stone & Webster Service Corporation find opportunities for both professional and personal development through a wide variety of assignments on projects involving the highest level of client management.

Talent Abounds for Today's Pro Grid Draft

Landry Should Go in Opening Round As Ex-Redman Morin Two Years Ago

By JOHN SANDHAUS
Staff Reporter

With the war currently raging in Vietnam, and a new crisis in North Korea, the draft is a subject foremost on the minds of most young men. Today, another draft will be receiving considerable attention, although it will only affect some 450 men. It is the annual pro football combined college draft. The twenty-six pro teams from the AFL and NFL will get together in New York and divvy up the talent among the recent college season's senior crop.

Selecting in order of their won-loss records, the last place team choosing first and first place team last, the pros will go through 17 rounds in what should be a marathon session, ending sometime Wednesday. Last minute trades for prime draft choices are anticipated, and some of the stronger clubs, notably Green Bay, San Diego, and Kansas City, already have two first round picks.

Pros will have to wait for Simpson and Keyes

Speculation is widespread as to which teams will pick which players and who will be the first big names to go in the opening round. The big name this season of course was O. J. Simpson of USC, who along with Leroy Keyes of Purdue, could step into any pro backfield right now and rip a defense to shreds. Unfortunately for the pros, both these great runners are juniors, and will not be eligible for the draft until next year.

The other big name this year was Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Gary Beban. He is eligible, having completed a brilliant three-year career at UCLA. However, most pro scouts don't consider him the best quarterback prospect in the country and, in fact, rank him only fifth or sixth at that position. Look for Beban to go late in the first round or early in the second.

As far as the other seniors are concerned, this was considered, a poor year for halfbacks, linebackers, and defensive backs a fair year for quarterbacks; a good year for fullbacks and receivers, and one of the best years ever for big, fast, and tough linemen, especially defensive ends and tackles.

The best of the defensive linemen includes Claude Humphrey (6'6", 260 lbs) of Tennessee State, Kevin Hardy (6'5"-270 lbs.) of Notre Dame, Dennis Byrd (6'4"-260 lbs.) of North Carolina State, Bill Staley (6'3"-250 lbs.) of Utah State, and Jim Urbanek (6'4"-250 lbs.) of Mississippi.

Top rated offensive linemen include tackles Ron Yary of USC, Maurice Moorman of Texas A&M, and Wayne Mass of Clemson; guards Edgar Chandler of Georgia, Curley Culp of Arizona State, and Ray Phillips of Michigan; and centers Bob Johnson of Tennessee and Forrest Blue of Auburn.

Abundance of Good Receivers

Top Receivers are Haven Moses of San Diego State and Dennis Homan of Alabama. Other good prospects here include John Wright of Illinois, Richard Trapp of Florida, Jim Beirne of Purdue, Bob Wallace of Texas at El Paso, Jim Cox of Miami, and Phil Odie of Brigham Young.

The first fullback to go in the draft will probably be either (6' 4"—240 lbs.) Lee White of

KEVIN HARDY
Notre Dame

Weber State or All-American Larry Csonka of Syracuse, with Georgia's Ronnie Jenkins and Colorado's Wilmer Cooks also being high picks.

Garrett Ford of West Virginia, Lenny Snow of Georgia Tech, and Houstons mercurial Warren McVea are the best of a meager crop of senior halfbacks.

A teammate of Greg Landry's in the All-Yankee Conference backfield is Vermont's bruising halfback Bob Mitchell, who should be tabbed by one of the teams today.

Linebacker Carr Outstanding Prospect

Although this is also considered a slick year for top linebackers, there is one who might very well be the number one pick in the entire draft, or is sure to be one of the first half-dozen chosen. He is Fred Carr of Texas at El Paso, a 6'5"-235 pound terror, with the speed of a flanker-back and the strength and hitting ability of a tackle.

Likened to a combination of Bobby Bell and George Webster, Carr is considered by many pro scouts to be the finest linebacking prospect to come along since Green Bay's great Dave Robinson.

Other good linebackers are Mike McGill of Notre Dame, Adrian Young of USC, and Granville Liggins of Oklahoma.

The best of the corner backs, a very difficult position to fill for the pros, appears to be Jim Smith of Oregon, Major Hazelton of Florida A & M, Bobby Johns of Alabama, and Robert Atkins of Grambling.

Outstanding safeties include Charlie West of Texas at El Paso, Tom Schoen of Notre Dame, Dick Anderson of Colorado, Sammy Grezaffi of LSU, and Frank Loria of Virginia Tech.

Landry Highly Regarded

As far as quarterbacks are concerned, a priceless commodity in the pros, the top prospect is Alabama's gifted southpaw Ken Stabler. The tall (6'3") but skinny (175 lbs.) Stabler led the Crimson Tide to a two year record of 19 wins, two losses, and one tie. A good runner as well as an accurate passer, Stabler should go early in the first round.

Rated right behind Stabler is UMass' Greg Landry who at 6' 3" is the same height as the Alabama star, but weighs a good 20-25 pounds more. Landry has a strong arm for the pros and is an able runner. A big advantage Stabler has over Landry is the caliber of opposition he has faced (Alabama plays a bit tougher schedule than UMass) and the fact that he has been coached by Bear Bryant, a man who has groomed some pretty fair quarterbacks in his time (George Blanda, Babe Parilli, Joe Namath), and has undoubtedly trained young Stabler in the same mold.

Greg Landry should do well, and he probably will. The teams most likely to grab the Redman star appear to be either Cincinnati, New Orleans, Boston, or Detroit, although this is purely conjecture. The Patriots have indicated an interest in going for Landry on the second round, but he should be long gone by then.

Landry will be the second U-Mass player in the last three years to be a number one draft choice in the pros (Milt Morin was the Cleveland Browns top pick in the 1965 NFL draft).

Milt Morin, now a starting tight end for the Cleveland Browns, was the first Redman to be a number one draft choice.

Vikings and Saints in Late Trade

Other quarterbacks worthy of mention are Dewey Warren of Tennessee, Kim Hammond of Florida State, Danny Holman of San Jose State, and Billy Stevens of Texas at El Paso.

A major trade took place last night when the New Orleans Saints sent quarterback Gary

Gymnastics

Although they took first place in all four events, the girls' gymnastics team lacked the depth necessary to win Saturday's meet and lost to Springfield College by a score of 98.40-91.45.

Leading the UMass team in scoring was Margie Sims, who took first place in the floor exercises with an 8.1, balance beam (8.25), and uneven bar (8.8) competition. First place in vaulting was taken by Sue Clancy, who scored 8.9.

The UM girls, however, could not score well enough to gain second and third places in most events, and this lack of depth resulted in their defeat by the SC team.

Skiers Win Two Slaloms

Collin Garstang and Ned Kelley paced UMass skiiers to victory Saturday as the Redmen defeated seven colleges in the "A" division of the New England Intercollege Ski Conference in a two run dual slalom at the Middlebury College Snowbowl.

Garstang completed his two runs in a total time of 94.4 seconds, Kelley finished second with a 94.9. Miles Herkenhem of Amherst was third with 95.9 and Steve Perrins of AIC was fourth with a 97.1. Dave Kamilla and Jim Garstang rounded out the scoring quartet for the Redmen.

Total team time for the best four University skiers was 407.5 seconds. Bentley College was a surprising second with 419.7, B.U. had 421.1, W.P.I. 425.8. A very strong Amherst team had a disastrous day with 425.9, AIC had 455.2, Northeastern 487.0 and Tufts 490.9.

The Giant slalom run on Sunday in the Middlebury Snowbowl was slowed by three inches of new snow which fell Saturday night and masked the rocks, ice and other obstacles around the 33 gates on the course.

Don Marsh of Tufts finished first with 78.6 seconds while Collin Garstang copped a silver medal with 79.3. Pete Flaccus and Miles Herkenhem of Amherst posted dual times of 79.5 to crowd UMass, but Ned Kelley finished sixth with a 79.9 and Dave Kamilla and Mike Zanolli finished seventh and eighth with 81.3 and 81.8.

Michael Bar, Amherst's french racer, posted an 82.3 which tied with Jim Garstang's ninth place in the race. The UMass quartet, whose times counted for team score, were all among the first eight men off the mountain.

The UMass team time was 322.3 seconds, Amherst 325.5, Bentley 337.7, WPI 342.5, BU 346.4, Tufts 348.2, AIC 354.7 and Northeastern 358.7

COLLIN GARSTANG

Coach MacConnell talked about the Redmen victory and team preparation "We start cross country running and soccer early in November and skip rope all the time, you need strong legs to ski. Skiing is the best exercise of all. We ski on weekends and holidays, we start when the lifts open and blaze away until they close.

We ski as a team. In our league we ski six, the best four to count. That means everyone must come in two out of three times, or you get a 'dummy score' of 110% of the worst counting time on the mountain.

"We play percentages, everyone must come in two out of three times or we leave him home. It pays off for us. We have always finished in the top one-third of the league. The last two years we finished second out of eight colleges. We may do better this year."

Next weekend UMass will ski against the same colleges in the Amherst College Giant Slalom on Saturday and in the UMass Winter Carnival Downhill on Sunday. Both races start at 10 a.m. at the Dartmouth Skiway in Lyme, N. H.

The two Yankee Conference backs most likely to be drafted: Vermont's Bob Mitchell and UMass' Greg Landry.

Saigon Shelled; VC in US Embassy

SAIGON (AP)—The Viet Cong attacked Saigon Wednesday and seized part of the U.S. Embassy. American military police, who were at first driven back by heavy outbursts of fire eventually recaptured the building.

Dawn broke over the tense capital about 7 a.m. and fighting swelled up around the embassy in the heart of the city.

U.S. Military police on the scene said it was believed about 20 Viet Cong suicide commandos entered the embassy compound and held part of the first floor of the embassy building.

The Viet Cong's seizure of part of the embassy followed exchanges of gunfire with U.S. Marine guards posted there.

A senior American diplomat, trapped in an upstairs room of his house during the fight for the U.S. Embassy, fought a duel with a member of a Viet Cong suicide squad and killed him with a pistol thrown up to his room from the outside.

The diplomat, U. S. mission coordinator George Jacobson, 56, blasted the wounded Viet Cong with two rounds from the .45 caliber pistol.

The Viet Cong had staggered up to Jacobson's room from the ground floor, where he had been fighting with a U.S. military policeman and a Marine guard.

The U. S. diplomat's bedroom window had been broken by the first shell fired on Saigon early Wednesday. His two-story, white frame house is on the embassy grounds.

The house eventually became one of the last pockets of Viet Cong resistance to American soldiers who recaptured the embassy. The Viet Cong Jacobson killed was said to be the last one giving resistance on the embassy grounds.

The enemy also shelled or attacked other major cities and installations in a swift followup to assaults on the lunar new year Tuesday against seven provincial capitals and the Marine base city of Da Nang.

The Communists' over-all aim, military men said, was to divert allied strength from the northernmost provinces where a major battle seems imminent. The attacks on the cities in the main used Viet Cong guerrillas, rather than main-force troops such as those gathered near Khe Sanh in the north. The object, it appeared, was to warn the allied command that it could not afford to send further reinforcements northward.

The shelling of Saigon by rockets or mortars began around 3 A.M. Key installations came under attack, including Independence Palace, where President Nguyen Van Thieu has offices.

Also shelled or attacked with small arms fire were the U.S. Embassy, the building of the Vietnamese joint chiefs of staff, Vietnamese navy headquarters, three U.S. officers' billets, the Philippine Embassy, and the vicinity of Tan Son Nhut airbase.

As shells burst within inter-

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the 83 crew members of the USS Pueblo, seized by North Korea as a spy ship, was reported Tuesday to have died.

The Defense Department said the report was unconfirmed, and there was no way of identifying any casualties among the captured men.

The report followed a White House statement that it had been advised the crew was being properly treated and the wounded were receiving medical care.

Asst. Secretary of Defense Phil. G. Goulding said "We are not able to confirm the reliability" of either report.

"The government still has no firm information on injured or wounded among the crew of the USS Pueblo," Goulding said in a statement.

He said "our only first hand knowledge" was contained in brief radio messages from the Pueblo at the time she was being surrounded by Communist patrol boats off North Korea on Jan. 22.

The White House laid stress on diplomatic efforts to free the men.

Graduate Student Explains Aims of Free University

By RICHARD LANE
Staff Reporter

The Free University will hold registration days in the Student Union Thursday and Friday of this week. Free University coordinator Tony Carlin has stated that, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on these two days, any interested UMass student may talk with representatives of the Free University on course descriptions, listings and the philosophy of the University in general.

In an interview with the Daily Collegian, Carlin went on to discuss the concept and background of the Free University in general. The main idea behind the University is "to ask questions," and "hopefully realize a new experience of learning. The University exists for students to explore their own potential."

The school was conceived one and a half years ago by students of the four area colleges and conducted two semesters of classes in Northampton before halting due to lack of interest.

The University currently is centered in Amherst in the Valley Centre building on North Pleasant St. Carlin made it clear, however that his group is in "no way related to the Valley Peace Centre" of the same building and is "nonpolitically oriented."

The graduate student went on to say that the Free University was created out of dissatisfaction and criticism of the present American educational system, which Carlin stated is "incapable of meeting the needs of our society."

"Students are not encouraged to think critically, nor do they understand critical issues," he said.

The present American university is a "large factory" and the students are "looking for answers out of the mouths of authority," added Carlin.

In relation Carlin expressed his belief that UMass in various departments, "is attempting to do creative things," and "is becoming very aware of the situation." He added that he considers Dr. Drum of the Botany dept. among others, as one who is also aware.

Acording to Carlin the ultimate aims of the Free University are to:

(1). "Open people to possibilities to know themselves."
(2). Provide "free expression in the area of university education."
(3). Provide "a forum of students with diverse backgrounds who may meet together freely."
(4). To create "humanness, wonderment, questioning AND SENSITIVITY."

Carlin himself does not know for sure "what we can do," in achieving the school's goals.

In regard to student response to the Free University there are expected to be 20-25 from UMass alone, a much larger group than previously.

Carlin declared that the idea of being a "Free" University is not as related to the financial angle as the nature of the courses and instruction given and participation by students. A slight fee may be asked from those who can afford to attend.

There are to be no books, exams, or other formal requirements at the Free University and faculty members are graduate students from the four college area. Emphasis will be on small group discussions.

Among courses offered are; film making, religion, mysticism, photography, astrology, architecture, poetry, and ceramics. Classes are planned for the evening, Mon. thru Thurs.

There will be bi-weekly newsletters available to students at various campus locations on information of the Free University. The school is also to be sponsored by the UMass Daily Collegian.

Managing Editor Jack Dean stated the Collegian's sponsorship was due to an attempt to encourage students to look into the school as a non-political Association.

Boronsky-Collins Desire To Clarify "House" Policy

"I was disturbed by the focus of the Daily Collegian article reporting the meeting of residence hall, fraternity and sorority presidents called by Student Senate President Collins to discuss the Open House Policy Recommendation." Thus spoke Fran Boronski, Vice-President of the Student Senate, to clarify the purposes and events of the meeting.

Miss Boronski noted that the education of residence hall representatives regarding past and future events was the main purpose of the meeting. "The announcement of the February 15 Faculty Senate meeting was not given as a deadline ultimatum, but rather as vital information in the next step of reviewing the policy.

She added that President Collins expressed faith in the Faculty Senate to act reasonably. He also felt that the Senate was justified in expecting the Faculty Senate to give fair and expeditious consideration to the policy by February 15, provided that the Student Affairs Committee could complete its charges by that time.

Vice-President Boronski proceeded to clarify some of the other considerations raised. Opinions of students were sought as to the advisability and feasibility of student concession to having open doors required at open houses. President Collins had pointed out that in terms of political realities, it might be necessary to consent to such a provision to insure passage of the policy by the Faculty Senate.

Representatives of residence halls did not feel that such a provision would be respected by the residents. A question period on various aspects of the proposal followed Pres. Collins' presentation.

The Daily Collegian will keep the campus informed of the status of the policy.

The Daily Collegian regrets that due to an "unforeseen error" in the distribution of Tuesday's newspaper, not all students were able to obtain a copy of SAM SPARK'S GREATEST HITS. Copies of the book are available in the Collegian office.

Landry Gets NFL Draft

The two most celebrated college quarterbacks of 1967 were Gary Beban of UCLA and Kenny Stabler of Alabama. They were considered by sportswriters and sportscasters as the best of their breed. However, when the professional football teams drafted college players yesterday the first quarterback to be picked was UMass' Greg Landry. The Detroit Lions of the NFL selected him on the very first round; "Number 11" was the eleventh gridder to be grabbed in the entire draft. (For the complete story, see Page Eight.)

Israel and Egypt Exchange Tank and Artillery Fire Over Part of Suez Canal

By HAL MCCLURE
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Israel and Egyptian tanks and artillery exchanged fire for 90 minutes across the Suez Canal Tuesday in the heaviest engagement along the troubled waterway since last October.

The firing began when Egypt sent four launches into the northern part of the canal to look for obstacles barring the way of 15 foreign ships, stranded in the waterway since the June war.

Israel had agreed to a clearing operation in only the southern part of the canal and had warned Sunday that any attempt in the north would be resisted.

The launches had proceeded about a mile north from their starting point at Ismailia, midway in the canal, when Israeli troops on the east bank fired warning shots.

Israel says the Egyptians on the east bank then opened up with artillery and the fire was returned. An Egyption communique said Israeli troops were the first to open fire on Egyptian positions north of Ismailia.

Tanks joined the artillery in the duel. An Israeli army spokesman said two Egyptian tanks were knocked out. Five Israeli soldiers were wounded.

The Egyptian army communique made no mention of casualties, but said one of the launches was damaged. This contradicted earlier Egyptian reports that the four launches returned to Ismailia.

Fighting finally was stopped in response to an appeal by Lt. Gen. Odd Bull, the United Nations chief truce supervisor, who happened to be visiting in Cairo. Egyptian sources said he had ordered his observers on the canal to prepare a detailed report of the clash.

Explaining the attempt to make a survey in the northern part of the canal, the Egyptian sources said a preliminary survey in the southern portion of the canal showed there were too many obstacles. The nature of these obstacles was not given but some are believed to be small ships sunk by the Egyptians to block the canal in the Israeli-Arab war.

As it would take considerable time to clear the southern portion, the Egyptians planned to survey the northern part of the canal to see if it would be easier to free the foreign vessels, the sources said.

Without confirmation in Israel, the Egyptians said the plan was forwarded to Bull and that the Israelis had agreed.

No Invitation For Brooke U of Tanzania

Tanzania (AP) — The University here has withdrawn its invitation for Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R - Mass., to address students during a two-day visit here.

Brooke arrived Monday from Lusaka, Zambia, and was to have addressed the students tonight.

Black power advocate Stokeley Carmichael and civil rights leader Calvin Cobb have spoken here in the past few months.

College authorities, after making the invitation, asked the students' African Revolutionary Front, which allowed Carmichael and Cobb to speak under its auspices, to do the same for Brooke. But the front refused, saying it would disassociate itself from the senator's visit.

Earlier in the day Brooke visited Pres. Julius Nyerere and held a press conference in the afternoon. He will fly to Zanzibar Wednesday for a one day visit and will leave from there for Kampala, Uganda.

LBJ Wants Changes For Veterans Problems

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson asked Congress Tuesday to help make it easier for veterans to buy better homes and to subsidize veterans who train for public service jobs.

In a special message, Johnson noted that the present $7,500 ceiling on the maximum guarantee on GI home loans is 18 years old and said it is no longer adequate. He asked for a $10,000 ceiling.

Since mortgage payment guarantees under the GI bill, normally cover about 35 per cent of the value of a loan, the higher ceiling would mean that veterans could buy bigger, more expensive houses.

The chief executive also proposed a wholly new program to help finance training of veterans "to teach the children of the poor, to help man understrength police forces and fire departments, to do meaningful work in local hospitals" and to become full-time specialists in antipoverty work.

Johnson gave this example of how the program would work for a veteran wanting to teach in a deprived area:

"While he is getting the schooling that will qualify him for teaching, he will draw additional benefits of $50 a month for every month he agrees to teach — up to three years of such extra benefits.

"While he is actually on the job teaching, he will draw a special training allowance, in audition to his regular salary—$80 a month for the first school year, $60 a month for the second."

Spending for all veteran's programs is estimated at $7.3 billion for the 1969 fiscal year that begins next Juiy 1. Of this total, Johnson said, only $50 million would be needed to meet initial costs of the training subsidies.

The President also asked Congress to act favorably on two proposals he presented last year:

To increase serviceman's group life insurance from a maximum of $10,000 to a range of $12,000-$30,000, depending on individual pay-meaning rank.

To "protect the veteran against disproportionate pension losses that could result from increases in other income such as Social Security."

Another Johnson proposal, a new one, would offer vocational rehabilitation benefits to service-disabled veterans receiving part-time training. Benefits now are limited to full-time trainees.

Johnson also announced he will sign an executive order that would permit priority hiring of veterans in the lower-rank civil service jobs without requiring the competitive examination, provided they agree to pursue a part-time educational program under the GI bill.

While the government has no authority over the hiring of veterans in private industry, Johnson urged enactment of a joint resolution "expressing the sense of the Congress that private employers should give job priority to our returning servicemen."

Johnson also unveiled a plan to set up veteran's assistance centers in major cities where, in a centralized location, a veteran can go for information about the vast array of federal programs available to him. The first 10 will be opened next month.

Prof Will Teach At Colby in June

UMass associate professor of geology, Charles W. Pitrat will be teaching at a summer institute of science held at Colby College, June 24 to August 2. Approximately 100 high school teachers will be enrolled in the National Science Foundation program.

Pitrat will be under the direction of Wilfred J. Combellack, chairman of the department of mathematics at Colby College.

Besides the UM professor, the institute will have a teaching staff of ten members of the Colby faculty. Also on the staff will be Charles Armentrout, assistant professor of physics, University of Maine, Portland.

Students accepted will receive free tuition, travel expenses, and a stipend for living costs.

Anti-Poverty Program Expects Funds Cutbacks

BOSTON (AP) — Domestic spending curbs will result in cutbacks in anti-poverty programs at an "extremely unfortunate time," an Office of Economic Opportunity official said Tuesday.

Richard Saul, chief of economic development in the Community Action program, said he thinks "Project Headstart is going to be cut back, and almost every program in O.E.O. is going to be facing cutbacks.

"I think it's an extremely unfortunate time for the cutbacks to happen," he said.

"In our big cities we're probably in for some very unfortunate things next summer just because of the frustrations, and this is just one more frustration."

Saul is in Boston for a two-day National Conference on Consumer Action, sponsored by the O.E.O.

English Prof Will Teach At Syracuse U

Professor David R. Clark was appointed to the College of Liberal Arts at Syracuse Univ. as a visiting full professor. Dr. Clark, whose academic specialty is modern British literature, will serve on the faculty of the English department for the spring 1968 semester.

Clark is currently an English professor at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. His research interests include W. B. Yeats, modern Irish literature and T. S. Eliot.

He completed his undergrad education at Wesleyan Univ. in Connecticut and received his master's degree and his Ph.D. from Yale Univ. He studied the manuscripts of Yeats in Dublin and at the University of Iceland.

His publications include four books and more than 25 articles and poems

Alleged Commie-Backed DuBois Club Faces Hearing

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The subversive Activities Control Board, nearly dissolved last year in an uproar over a presidential appointment, asked Monday for a 38 per cent increase in its budget and announced Tuesday its first public hearing in two years.

A hearing scheduled to begin Monday in New York will explore the U.S. Attorney General's contention that the W.E.B. DuBois Club of America "is substantially directed, dominated and controlled by the Communist party."

Frank Hunter, SACB general counsel, disclosed the hearing to a reporter who called to ask about the budget increase. "We do not have the faintest idea" where or when hearings other than the DuBois proceeding might be held, Hunter said.

The public hearing apparently will keep the board in business, since Congress voted to dissolve it June 1, 1969, if it held no hearings in the next year.

The DuBois clubs have asked a postponement of the hearing until Feb. 26. Their request for additional preparation time is expected to be granted.

The Subversive Activities Control A033 add: be granted. The Subversive Activities Control Board popped from obscurity last year after President Johnson appointed Simon F. McHugh, husband of a former Johnson secretary, to a $26,000--a-year job as a board member. Opponents argued McHugh was not qualified.

Congress, after first considering abolishing the board, finally voted at the urging of Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen to give it new duties instead.

The board was voted $295,000 this year and wants $13,000 more to meet payroll increases approved by Congress—including a raise to $28,000 for board members. One of the five seats has been vacant several months awaiting a presidential appointment.

For fiscal 1969, the board is asking $425,000. Increases would go mostly for travel—$20,000 instead of $3,500 this year—transcripts and an increase in staff from 17 to 22 persons. New Staff would include a $21,000 hearing examiner, an attorney and secretarial help.

Asked about the travel increase, Hunter said "all that can be done is to have available to the board money to travel if necessary for hearings outside Washington."

The board became virtually dormant after courts stripped away its powers to require organizations it deemed subversive to register with the Justice Department.

Now Congress has empowered the board to conduct hearings and determine if organizations are Communist - dominated or controlled. It has no punitive powers and can act only on cases referred to it by the attorney general.

Nicholas Katzenbach, then attorney general, filed with the board March 2, 1966, a proceeding against the DuBois Clubs. The organization fought in federal courts to stop the hearings but eight days ago the Supreme Court turned down the latest DuBois petition, thus allowing the board to proceed. Hunter said he did not know how many witnesses the Department of Justice or the DuBois clubs would call.

The brief Katzenbach filed nearly two years ago alleged that the DuBois Clubs "came into existence under the plan, guidance and direction of the Communist party." have been partly financed by the Communist party, has supported Communist causes and objectives and has never deviated from positions advanced by the Communist party.

The organization for young people, which had 36 chapters and 2,500 members at the time Katzenbach filed his charges, denied it was affiliated with the Communist party.

Morris To Speak About Stations On Moon Surface

Thursday evening, Feb. 1, 1968, at 7:30 p.m., Mr. Vernon B. Morris, Jr. of The Westinghouse Space and Information Systems Dept. will speak on "Scientific Stations on The Moon". Mr. Morris will discuss work completed at Westinghouse for NASA on a preliminary design for a post-Apollo lunar surface scientific station.

Within the talk will be expositions on supporting power and communications subsystems. The Westinghouse, Apollo TV camera, and lunar drill will also be discussed. Mr. Morris will make use of slides to illustrate his material.

This talk by Mr. Morris 's sponsored by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, (A.I.A.A.), and will be held in rooms 10 and 11 of Guinness. All are cordially invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

SAIGON . . .

vals of a few minutes fire broke out in a building near Independence Palace. One shell landed two blocks from the Hotel Splendide, a billet for U.S. officers.

Allied planes went up, some dropping flares to try to locate the Communists. Helicopters flew over the palace.

At least three guerrillas tried to enter the U.S. Embassy grounds and Marine guards opened fire. One Marine was reported wounded.

Other Viet Cong wrecked the gates of Independence Palace with grenades. Another unit tried to infiltrate near the government radio stations and the prime minister's office.

Some of the guerrillas carried bazookas. Street fighting raged at several points.

Among other cities shelled was Can Tho, the biggest city in the Mekong Delta, about 80 miles south of Saigon. It was the first attack this week in the sprawling, canal-laced delta below Saigon.

Also attacked, either by shell or ground assault, were the air base at Bien Hoa, 20 miles north west of Saigon; U.S. Army installations at Long Binh, 15 miles north of the capital; the airstrip at Ban Me Thuot, a province capital in the central highlands; Kontum, another provincial capital in the highlands, and Da Nang, second largest city in South Vietnam.

Unlike the Tuesday attacks on key cities that caught allied defenders by surprise, the attack on Saigon was not entirely unexpected.

The U. S. Command had circulated a notice several days ago warning: "There may be Viet Cong activities aimed at various U.S. and Vietnamese headquarters and government billets during the Tet New Year holidays. Viet Cong artillery units and Viet Cong suicide cadres are infiltrating into the capital area."

This was the fourth shelling of Saigon. The Viet Cong sent shells into the capital Nov. 1, 1966, South Vietnam's National Day, killing eight and wounding 45. Later the Viet Cong fired mortars at Gen. William C. Westmoreland's headquarters but did not hit it.

The attacks Tuesday and Wednesday broke open the Communists announcement of a truce to cover the lunar new year. The U.S. Command expressed belief the assaults probably were intended to "draw attention from the major area of threat" just below the demilitarized zone.

Student Affairs

The Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate will meet this afternoon for the first time this semester to carry out the charges given to it by the Faculty Senate on January 4, regarding the Open House Policy Recommendation.

The charges are clear and concise: 1) to seek legal advice regarding the questions raised by University counsel on some aspects of the proposal which would allow each residence unit to determine "its own unique policy on frequency, duration, social conduct and door policy with respect to open houses;" 2) to file a spectrum of reports, since the nature of the sole proposal is relatively sweeping.

The proposal has been in the Committee for an entire semester, and the Committee has reached a decision on its support. Opponents within the committee have expressed specific objections.

It goes without saying that committee members, both student and faculty, must be sensitive and reasonable regarding the views of each other. Hopefully, legal advice will be sought quickly, with adjustments made, if necessary, and opponents of the Committee report will come forth with minority opinions.

Sam Spark Speaks Out

Guru Grieves Over Growing Graft

The open house bill had been under consideration by both students and faculty for over a year. During that time, no one had raised a question as to the legality of open houses.

But a few weeks ago, when passage of this bill at the Faculty Senate seemed possible, the Provost of the University, Oswald Tippo, in a last minute move in what appeared to us to be merely a stalling technique, brought forth legal testimony questioning the legality of open houses.

The logic behind this move perplexes us, since the administration has de facto sanctioned open houses for a year now, but it cannot be denied that the open house bill has yet to be passed. And if the Provost sticks with his successful formula, we wouldn't be surprised if the next Faculty Senate Meeting goes something like this:

Provost Tippo — The meeting to discuss open houses is called to order. Since I am an administrator and this senate is composed of faculty, it would be unfair for me to comment on this bill, so are there any faculty members who wish to speak on this asinine motion? Yes, Professor H. Doody.

Professor Doody—Thank you, Provost Tippo. It's been obvious to me for sometime that the students are too immature to handle open houses.

Provost Tippo—That's exactly how we discussed it earlier this week in my office, Howdy. There aren't any other comments, are there? Yes, what do you want Professor Gray?

Professor Gray—Gentlemen: The students at the University are responsible and mature enough to benefit from helping to determine the frequency, duration and social policy of their open houses. Freedom with responsibility is the basis of a true and worthwhile university education.

Provost Tippo—You're crazy, Professor Gray, but since I am chairman, I must conduct this meeting impartially. So is there anyone else who wants to risk his tenure and agrees with the idiot, Gray.

Scores of hands were raised to show their agreement with Professor Gray, Tippo quickly realized that unless he impartially took matters in his own hands and squelched the bill that the bill might be passed. So, the Provost introduced his personal guru who ascended the podium and spoke to the faculty.

"I am deeply concerned about the increasing graft and corruption which is manifesting itself in the students of UMass," the guru soothingly whispered.

The guru sat on the floor, crossed his legs and urged the faculty to meditate with him for the remainder of the meeting. As the faculty was in a trancelike meditation, Professor Howdy Doody roamed the chambers attaching strings to the few remaining faculty without them. The guru then ended the meditation and the Provost confidently called for a vote on the bill.

Man on a White Horse

Campus Comment

"Open House" Consistently

To the editor:

I have yet to hear an intellectually consistent argument presented by opponents of open house normalization. Arguments range from slightly inconsistent to ludicrous. An excellent example of the latter is the Wexler amendment, as accurately reported in the Wednesday Daily Collegian, which did not receive appreciable negative debate in the Faculty Senate.

This amendment, in the name of enforcing a Commonwealth statute of dubious applicability would open all doors of interior rooms in buildings participating. This would include the doors of all non-participants as well as the doors of all bathrooms in the building, thus completely destroying the possibility of use of the residence rooms for study purposes by non-participants as well as preventing protection of their property, and possibly encouraging indecent exposure.

Other opponents draw attention to the barracks-like nature of our living facilities as reason for opposition. Students at this University are punished enough by less than desirable facilities without having further punishment.

I sincerely hope that an internally consistent policy may be established for use now, not a year or more after original Student Senate approval.

Bob LaTremoville

Happy Ending, Happy Story

Editor's Comment: The first letter in the following is a reprint from the Massachusetts Daily Collegian issue of October 19, 1967; the second is from the young man whose coat was stolen.

To the editor:

On Fri., Oct. 6, 1967, one of our international visitors, a young man from the Republic of Malagasy in Africa, left his trench coat (which he had purchased only the day before) on one of the clothes racks located in the north corridor of the Student Union.

After the luncheon given by the University in honor of his international group (6 from Malagasy and 6 from Ivory Coast), he discovered that his coat was missing. Several visits to the Lost and Found Department proved futile.

Our friend from Malagasy left on Sat., Oct. 7, 1967, to return to Africa with his colleagues. I have paid a daily visit to Lost and Found since that date. No trench coat. I can only conclude that the present illegal owner of the trench coat knew what he was doing when he made off with our visitor's property. I had hoped it was a case of mistaken identity.

It is indeed regrettable that an international participant should leave our campus community, after 5 educationally fruitful and enjoyable weeks, with the unhappy memory that this University harbors at least one thief.

I cannot speak for our international friend who lost his coat, but I feel certain that his image of our University must be somewhat marred by his unfortunate experience.

If the thief should, perchance, see this letter to The Collegian, I would remind him that he stole not just a trench coat, but something even more valuable — an indeterminate measure of goodwill and institutional integrity.

Dear Mr. Mottla:

I received your letter of the 20th of November and the enclosed check for the replacement of my raincoat. I was very touched by it and words fail to convey my feelings toward such a gracious action on the part of the University Administration. The devotion and the goodness which all of you displayed during our time of training has been very valuable to us. From now on we have the knowledge necessary to successfully participate in the development of our country.

Everything that I learned in the United States has been of much help to me as far as teaching my students is concerned. Many of your American methods can be adapted to the needs of my country.

Please transmit my thanks to all members of the Administration. I wish you and your family good health.

An Invitation

from New England's Largest College Daily

Tryouts for positions on the Massachusetts Daily Collegian staff will be held tonight at 6:30 p.m., in Room 124 Hasbrouck.

Openings are available in the fields of newswriting, makeup, advertising, photography, editorial writing, sports, and business. All classes are eligible, although second-semester freshmen and sophomores will be given preference.

Requirements for membership include a training period of up to one month, passage of a written examination, and a trial staff membership during which time the candidate must demonstrate a desire to serve the newspaper and a willingness to devote a minium of two hours per week to the paper. (While most Collegian staffers average one night per week, no staffer is allowed to devote more than six hours per week at any time).

We feel that if you are willing and think you are able to meet these requirements, the Daily Collegian will give you one of the most rewarding experiences of your education. The people, things, and events that will touch you every day as an MDC staffer make the effort miniscule when compared with the returns.

NOTE: The average cume for the seven MDC news day editors was 3.1 last semester.

That's tonight at 6:30, Hasbrouck 124.

See you there.

Wilson Says US-Hanoi Close in Public Stances

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson contended Tuesday that very little in their public stances now separates the United States and North Vietnam from a peace parley.

Wilson, home from Moscow last week, suggested in the House of Commons an exchange of assurances between Washington and Hanoi.

Answering questioners, the British leader said he will seek to persuade President Johnson, as he has urged the Russians to persuade Hanoi, "to cross the narrow bridge that remains."

Wilson reaffirmed his government's backing for the U.S. approach to peace talks spelled out by the President in San Antonio, Tex., last fall.

Most of Wilson's two-day meeting with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in Moscow was taken up with studies of precisely how peace talks could be organized quickly.

"There is now very little between the two sides as far as public declarations are concerned," Wilson told Commons.

"I think the Americans have a right to be assured this action peace talks will follow the cessation of the bombing and North Vietnam has a right to be assured that the Americans will cease the bombing if this conference follows.

Interested Faculty Needed For Standing Committees

The standing committees of the Faculty Senate have a vital role in the University community. All interested faculty are eligible for the committee assignments. The deliberations and recommendations of these committees are expected to become more and more important in the coming years.

Councils, Committees, and Boards whose faculty members are chosen by the Faculty Senate Committee on Committees — along with areas covered by committees.

1. Academic Matters Committee — General consideration of curriculum; review of course and program proposals, honors programs; academic regulations and graduation requirements; academic calendars.
2. Military Studies Sub-Committee—To review matters pertaining to the military curriculum and to screen candidates for faculty positions.
3. Admissions and Records Committee—Admissions policy; transfer credits policy; residence requirements; course loads; registration procedure; academic records.
4. Discipline Board — Hears student discipline cases and appeals.
5. Faculty Affairs Committee—Attends to non-academic well-being of faculty members; housing; insurance; fringe benefits.
6. Faculty Athletic Council — General consideration of athletic policy; intercollegiate and intramural.
7. Fine Arts Council — Arranges and supports University program of fine arts events; recitals, concerts, theater, dance, art exhibits, lectures, art films arts festivals, readings.
8. Foreign Students Committee — General policies concerning foreign students; recommends tuition waivers for foreign students.
9. Health Council—General consideration of physical and emotional health needs of students; environmental health and safety needs of campus; health information services; research into campus health problems.
10. Library Committee—General consideration of development and operation of University library.
11. Master Planning Committee—Studies and advises on physical development of the campus.
12. Research Council—General consideration of research policies; recommendations on research grants.
13. Scholarships, Financial Aid, Placement, and Study Abroad Committee —Self-explanatory.
14. Services Committee—Implementation of Senate resolutions on service departments; liaison between faculty and service departments; general improvement of service functions.
15. Student Affairs Committee—General consideration of non-academic rules and regulations governing students; discipline regulations; students rights; dormitory life; student personnel services; promotion of academic freedome and civil liberties of students; extracurricular activities policy.
16. Student Communications Board — Considers, reviews and advises on organization, operation, budgets, and standards of quality and performance of student communications organizations.
17. Summer Session Committee—Recommends policies for the operation of the summer session.
18. University Affairs Committee — Makes recommendations in the areas of honorary degrees, University commencement, Honors Day events, Teacher of the Year Award, convocations, and special occasions.
19. University Computer Committee — Recommends policies for the service functions of the University Research Computer Service.
20. University of Massachusetts Press—Makes recommendations concerning the operation of the Press and approves publications of the Press.

"Webster" Again Involved in Great Decisions, But UMass Style

Every Monday evening at 7:30 starting on February 5, Great Decisions 1968 will tackle a pressing world situation at Noah Webster House. The first program will deal with the Middle East and the prospects for an enduring peace. The panel will consist of Professors Haim Gunner, Department of Environmental Sciences (UMass), who has recently returned from Israel; George Kirk, Department of History (UMass), who is an authority on Middle East history and author of A Short History of the Middle East; and Kamel Abu-Jaber, Department of Government (Smith), who has authored The Baa'th Party of Syria. Dr. Luther Allen will chair this and future discussions.

Included in the upcoming hot topics are UPHEAVAL IN COMMUNIST CHINA, BRITAIN AFTER EMPIRE, THE TWO GERMANIES and THE "OTHER WAR" IN VIETNAM. Panelists for each of the discussions are well versed in their fields and promise to present an "in depth" view.

Each program will be broadcast live from the lounge of Noah Webster on WFCR between 7:30-8:30 p.m. A question and discussion period will be taped after 8:30 p.m. and will subsequently be broadcast at 11:30 p.m.

Background material has been prepared by the Foreign Policy Association. Pamphlets may be procured at Noah Webster House Library during evenings or by calling either 549-1782 or 546-7119.

Research Projects Unaffected by Protest

WASHINGTON (CPS)—Although opposition to secret research on university campuses has increased during the past six months, the Pentagon claims universities have not responded by backing down on their classified research agreements.

In fact, a Defense Department official said some college and university administrations have responded by writing the Pentagon expressing their willingness to take on secret research projects or to increase the number they now have. These administrations apparently want to make their positions exceedingly clear in case some universities decide to drop their classified projects.

Dr. Arwin A. Dougal, assistant director of the Pentagon's office for research and engineering, would not say how many universities have expressed an interest in conducting secret research. He also declined to list specific schools which have written the Pentagon in this regard.

He did, however, indicate that the number of schools expressing a willingness to conduct secret research outweighs the number expressing concern over whether or not universities should engage in such projects.

But Dougal says the "large majority" of the letters have shown the universities "have a sincere concern about the national security."

Dougal said he can sympathize with the opponents of secret research on university campuses. "But many aspects of Defense research simply have to be withheld from foreign knowledge, and the only way we can do that is to classify the project.

Defense Department research is conducted in four basic sectors: in-house Defense research laboratories; industries; Federal Research Contract Centers, and universities. "The university sector is one of the very strongest sectors," Dougal said.

Landry Is First College QB Chosen In Draft

Lions Nab UMass Ace on Initial Round; Patriots Select N. C. State's Byrd

By JOHN SANDHAUS
Staff Reporter

Of all the honors and awards that have befallen Greg Landry this season, perhaps the most noteworthy took place Tuesday. Landry was the first quarterback in the country selected in the Pro Football draft.

Tabbed on the first round by the Detroit Lions of the NFL, he was the eleventh player to be selected in the entire draft. "Detroit made a fine choice," stated UMass head coach Vic Fusia, "and Greg is very happy at the opportunity to play for the Lions."

Fusia said that he thought Greg was the best quarterback in the country, but wasn't sure if the pro scouts felt the same way.

"I did know that the NFL teams all rated him as one of their top two or three quarterback prospects, but I must admit I was a bit surprised they regarded him as highly as they did. Greg wanted to play in the NFL, and being with Detroit he should have a great opportunity."

Greg Landry himself was very happy with his selection. He had hoped to go to an NFL team, such as Detroit, which is in need of a young quarterback.

"I should have a real good chance there, and I'm really looking forward to next year. I was a bit surprised I went so soon and ahead of the other big name quarterbacks but I wasn't surprised that it was Detroit that drafted me; they were one of the three or four teams that I figured were most likely to draft me. And I'm really happy at the chance to prove myself in the NFL."

As far as Greg's signing his contract is concerned, he said that Detroit had not officially got in touch with him yet, but that he didn't expect them to contact him until a day or two after the draft. He has had offers from various agencies regarding his contract negotiations, but at the present time he is retaining a personal lawyer and has no immediate plans for dealing through an agent.

Landry now becomes the second UMass player in the last three years to be a number one pick of an NFL team. Tight end Milt Morin ('66) was the first choice of the Cleveland Browns in the 1965 UFL draft.

The rest of the first round choices proved as interesting as Detroit's, and there were numerous surprises.

Green Bay, rich in just about everything, but especially in linebackers, chose linebacker Fred Carr of Texas at El Paso as their first pick.

The New York Jets, who already have a potent running attack built around Matt Snell and Emerson Boozer, chose fullback Lee White of Weber State as their first pick.

The Dallas Cowboys, already deep in speedy receivers such as Bob Hayes, Lance Rentzel, and Frank Clarke, chose Alabama's Dennis Homan, an All-American end on the first round.

The only other quarterback chosen on the first round was Eldridge Dickey of Tennessee State, by Oakland, but he may be used as a flanker or defensive back by the Raiders.

The Boston Patriots, true to their word, went for, and got a big defensive lineman on the first round. They selected Dennis Byrd, a 6'4", 260 lb. All-American defensive tackle from North Carolina State.

Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Gary Beban of UCLA was bypassed on the first round, but was chosen third on the second round by the hometown Los Angeles Rams.

Another big name quarterback, Alabama's Ken Stabler, was drafted late in the second round by the Oakland Raiders.

A remarkable sidelight of the draft is that of the 27 players selected on the first round, five were from National Champion Southern California. The USC stars include top pick Ron Yary, Mike Taylor, Tim Rossovich, Mike Hull, and Olympic hurdler Earl McCullough. Hull was injured all this year, but was the Trojan's best runner two years ago before the fabled O. J. Simpson arrived on the scene.

As the second round took four hours and ten minutes to complete, and with 15 more rounds to go, the draft should take until sometime this afternoon to complete. Interestingly enough, there were still many big name players, many of All-America fame, still to be claimed as the third round got under way last night. The final draft tally will appear in tomorrow's Collegian.

Frosh Cagers Hope to Improve Performance vs. Springfield

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

Coming off possibly its worst performance of the year, the UMass freshman basketball team hopes to rebound tonight when it meets the Springfield College freshman team. Cage game time will be 6 p.m.

Originally, the frosh were to meet the Connecticut freshmen, but the Huskies are unable to play, due to intersession. Therefore the Springfield contest was added.

The visitors will be sporting a 4-4 record, coming into their engagement with the Little Redmen. The Chiefs have dropped their last two games to Holy Cross and Dartmouth.

Springfield's main weakness lies in their lack of height. The leading scorer is 6'2 Steve Waterman from East Hartford, Conn. and state champion Hartford Public High School. Waterman is averaging about 20 points per ballgame. He is supported by 6'1 Sam Provo, from Agawam. Provo, averaging 12 points, played at Cornwall Academy last year and scored 32 points against last year's UMass frosh team.

The two bullwarks on the boards for Springfield are 6'4 John Woodruff from New Rochelle, N. Y. and 6'5 Brad Macomber from Winthrop, Me.

UMass has been plagued all season by inconsistent shooting. Their fine performance against Providence was dulled quickly by the lackluster display at Yale Saturday. The Little Redmen have the luxury of the home court tonight for the last time until February 10. They hope to put this to good advantage and also regain the shooting touch again.

Sizzling UConn Here for Key Tilt with Redmen

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Poor Burr Carlson didn't know what he was getting into when he took the job of coaching University of Connecticut basketball last year. Or did he?

The Huskies, minus record-setting guard Wes Bialosuknia, got off to a terrible 1-4 start this year and the grumbles could be heard all the way from Storrs.

Now UConn is 6-7, with four wins out of its last five games. That includes last Saturday's stunning 89-84 upset of Eastern power Syracuse. Apparently, tradition means quite a bit to this team which has four starters who saw little or no varsity action last year.

It is this red-hot Connecticut team that invades the Cage tonight for an important Yankee Conference game against UMass at 8 p.m. UConn, 3-1 in the Conference, is trying to stay close to league-leading Rhode Island while the Redmen, 3-2, will be trying to get back into the race.

The Huskies have won the last seven games against the Redmen, including last year's 60-59 heartbreaker for UMass. However, UConn this year boasts only one of last year's starters.

That one starter, however, is a great one. He is 6'7 center Bill Corley who leads the team by wide margins in scoring, rebounding and just about everything else. He dominates the whole show for Connecticut.

Corley, who owns a 22.5 average, has cat-like moves under the basket. Although he has only 186 pounds to fill his 6'7 frame, he is very strong off the boards. The senior from Williston Park, N.Y., who has been All-Conference and All-New England for two years running, is also a good shooter If the Redmen can hold Corley in check, their chances will be greatly enhanced

As the season has progressed and the other four starters have gained experience, UConn has improved considerably. One of those starters is 6'4 senior forward Tim Smith, who like Stu Kerzner of Providence is a transfer from Utah State. Smith saw little action last year, scoring only 1.6 a game for UConn, but this year the lanky forward is averaging 10.0.

Smith is a great outside shooter who couldn't miss from 20 feet in the Huskies' loss to TCU in the UConn Classic. He is also a good leaper which makes him dangerous off the boards.

The other forward is sophomore John Crisp. Last year's leading freshman scorer, the 6'4 Crisp is a steady defensive player with a good shot. He also started on the varsity football team as a flanker.

In the backcourt, where the Huskies suffered their greatest graduation losses, UConn features a pair of greatly improved M and M boys. Junior Fred Malan is a good ball-handler who also owns a good outside shot. He is averaging 11.1.

The other guard, junior Jack Melen, is UConn's best defensive player. Melen also has a wide repertoire of offensive moves and can hit from outside on occasion. Both Malan and Melen saw little varsity experience last year, with Bialosuknia and Tom Penders monopolizing the backcourt chores.

Besides Corley, one other veteran returned at the start of this season. Bob Steinberg, a 6'3 senior, was slated as a starter. But after UConn's first five games, he was removed from the squad permanently for disciplinary reasons.

A UMass win tonight can put the Redmen into a second place tie with Vermont in the Yankee Conference. But if the Huskies win, UMass will be virtually eliminated. UConn, by winning can move one game behind Rhode Island.

Leaman is undecided on who to start at one of his forward positions. Billy Tindall, who has a 19.5 average, will start at the other forward spot with Pete Gayeska (10.3) at center, and Ray Ellerbrook (13.7) and Joe DiSarcina (11.1) in the backcourt.

Student Senate Endorses Civil Disobedience

Brooks' Notice to Student Affairs Committee Members . . .

The Faculty Senate voted at its January 4 meeting to refer back to our Committee, the proposal on open house policy. Their vote directed us to report again to the Faculty Senate by March 7.

"By this action, the present proposal, as written, was killed, the Senate finding the substance and rationale unconvincing and unacceptable. (The major points of the discussion will be outlined at our next meeting.) It seems that the choices are now to develop a new proposal with new rationale, resubmit the old proposal with new rationale, or for the minority, or individual members thereof, to submit proposals.

Attached for Committee use is the legal opinion of the University counsel regarding open houses in general and the Committee's recommendations in particular. It seems that any further deliberation and redrafting must be done in reference to the cited applicable statutes, regardless of any individual feelings about this matter.

The next meeting was on Wed., Jan. 31, 4:00 p.m., 231 Whitmore (this week's meeting only, at this time).

By PETE WARD
Senate Reporter

Last night the Student Senate voted unanimously to endorse the use of civil disobedience in its current dispute with the Administration and Faculty over the Student Senate proposed Open House policy.

The civil disobedience proposal reads as follows: "Be it enacted that the Student Senate unilaterally authorize all houses to hold open houses according to S46 (Faculty Senate Student Affairs Committee Report concerning open houses)."

After the Senate meeting, Pres. Collins issued the following statement to the Daily Collegian.

"The Student Senate acted this evening to make absolutely clear to the students, faculty, and administration that the Student Government endorses the 'Tri-partite' concept of University government. The Senate realizes and supports the belief that the three elements of the University can accomplish ends that are most in accord with the University's ideals by working together.

The civil disobedience motion was passed to tell the University community that the 'Tri-partite' system, as begun by Pres. Lederle two years ago, cannot operate without integrity on the part of all three members.

Thus the Senators, many of whom voiced the opinions of their Residence Hall Councils, said that they would not endorse civil disobedience unless the Senate directed the action for the sole reason that the students had been dealt with in poor faith. This might include stalling or unreasonable rejection of a proposal by faculty or administration.

Conversely the students and the Senate have the responsibility of respecting the integrity of the other two elements in the "Tri - partite' University.

I believe that tonight's action and this statement are necessary to make absolutely clear to the University community that the students demand reasonable and fair treatment of their proposals. Such mutual respect and honesty between the students, faculty, and administration is necessary if the 'Tri-partite' concept is to remain valid."

The bill included provisions requiring a two-thirds approval by the Senate and eliminating the proposed Feb. 14 deadline for action on the Open House policy by the Faculty Senate. Under the present bill, the Senate may at any time lead the students into open defiance of the administration if they feel such action is necessary.

The original bill proposing civil disobedience, sponsored by Sen. Charles Hopkins (J. A.), included allowance of a deadline of Feb. 14, but this was dropped at the insistence of Sen. Paul Silverman, Senate Treasurer, who cited a document written by Robert Brooks, the Assistant to the Dean of Students, as the basis for his action. Instead of the deadline, an amendment by Sen.

"Sam Sparks Hits" Hit

At the request of Sen. E. T. Mellor, the Ways and Means Committee of the Student Senate will investigate the expenditure of $2,500 by the Daily Collegian in producing the recently released "Sam Spark's Greatest Hits."

Several Senators have expressed the opinion that the expenditure was not a proper one under the Senate budget for the Daily Collegian passed last year.

The special was produced with funds designated for specials, but those opposing it feel that these funds were intended only for regular newspaper specials, not for a magazine.

President Collins has directed the Ways and Means Committee to report on the issue next week at the regular Senate meeting.

Freshman Class Loses Three Major Officers

By RON LABRECQUE
Specials Editor

A sombre Freshman Class President Joe Tabacco expressed hope that the Freshman Executive Council would be able to "move full speed ahead with the ideas that we have" after the surprise resignations of three class officers due to "academic reasons" were announced at a meeting held in John Quincy Adams Tower last night.

Marty Shapiro, Vice-President, and Joel Wilson, Treasurer, disregarded prepared speeches in favor of short resignation announcements. Tabacco announced also the resignation of Ed Hill, Senator-at-Large, who was absent from the meeting.

Earning praise from prominent upperclassmen attending the meeting for his handling of the situation, Tabacco expressed his deep regret at the loss of the three officers and indicated his desire for their return to student government in future semesters.

The Freshman President praised all three for their efforts in the realm of student government. Looking to the future in hopes of recovering from what seems to be an almost tragic disruption of class administrative activities Tabacco said that he would be consulting Senate President Jim Collins in the near future to make plans for filling the vacancies.

Queried by the Daily Collegian, Collins said that according to the Constitution, the remaining Freshman class officers will meet with the Student Government Association and work out a method for filling the vacancies, either a general election or appointment, which will then be approved by a three fourths vote of the Student Senate.

Saigon Under Control, Says U. S.; Pres. Thieu Declares Martial Law

SAIGON (AP)—The Viet Cong's offensive in Saigon diminished Thursday but it was able to score successes elsewhere in its coordinated attacks down the length of South Vietnam.

The Communists captured part of Hue, the old imperial capital 400 miles north of Saigon, and seized control of half of Kontum in the central highlands. Two other major cities along the coastline in the north, Nha Trang and Qui Nhon, came under fresh mortar attacks and ground probes for the third straight day.

President Nguyen Van Thieu declared martial law throughout the nation in the wake of the Wednesday attacks against the U. S. Embassy and military and civilian installations from Hue to the Mekong Delta.

The U.S. Command reported shortly after midnight that the situation in Saigon was under control, but soon afterward the Viet Cong blew up a power station in the Cholon section and attacked two national police stations there.

"It is felt that we now have the initiative and that we are no longer reacting to enemy-initiated actions but are seeking out the enemy," the U.S. Command said at 12:30 a.m.

But small-arms fire still sounded, there were fires in the outskirts, and parachute flares lighted the night sky, where roving fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships lashed at the enemy.

Two tanks and an armored personnel carrier moving north on a Saigon street 15 minutes after midnight drew fire from enemy forces. Other shooting persisted at the Tan Son Nhut airbase northwest of the city and a village north of the base.

The Viet Cong claimed "resounding victories" in statements relayed from Hanoi. Speaking for the allies, President Nguyen Van Thieu declared: "The Communists' general offensive attempt has been completely foiled."

Thieu's government will rule by decree until further notice rather than under the constitutional parliamentary system inaugurated last fall. The president ordered all bars, theaters, night clubs and other places of entertainment closed. All gatherings and demonstrations were banned.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U. S. forces in Vietnam, said he believed the attacks were a "diversionary effort to draw attention from the northern part of the country," the hotspot sector below the demilitarized zone.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker said this attack was obviously premeditated, planned well in advance and carefully coordinated with similiar assaults elsewhere around the country.

The 74-year-old diplomat noted the enemy offensive was launched during the period in which the Viet Cong had proclaimed a one-week cease-fire for the lunar new year Tet. Both the Viet Cong truce and a 36-hour stand-down ordered by the

"We Must Decentralize"

Messenger Predicts a Unified Hill

"This University has got to decentralize or it will depersonalize." These are the feelings of John Messenger, assistant area coordinator for the Central area, better known as the Hill.

A native of Montreal, Messenger added, "Self-determination is more important than allegiance to a larger identity. I say this coming from a province threatening to break from Canada. . .and I believe in the principle."

Self-determination for an area on campus mainly involves learning to run itself as a separate entity—and this is, in essence, Messenger's job. He feels most strongly about the politics of the operation. "Probably the most exciting part, for me, is working with house governments and judiciaries", he said.

Changes in area politics have been coming at a rapid pace. The young coordinator noted that a suspension could now originate from house judiciaries rather than, as in the past, from a remote campus agent. "The more meaningful the government, the more participation and interest at large", he stated.

Central Voice, the area's newborn newspaper, had quoted Mr. Messenger as calling his hill students "disadvantaged rabble". Asked to comment on that description, Messenger replied, "The University tends to look on Central area as second-class citizens. As a political entity we just don't have the resources or the advantages—such as funds or faculty involvement—that Southwest has."

The area must become an entity, the area coordinator stressed. Toward this end, social chairmen of the dorms meet every Wednesday night; the social and cultural events are now being geared to the area as a whole. The recent Car Rally, area dances, and a "Theater in the Round" are "the kinds of things that will give this area an identity of its own," he said.

Smith Sponsors Lecture Series On "Drugs, God, and Reality"

The Smith College Religious Association will sponsor a forum entitled "Drugs, God and Reality" on the evenings of February 5, 6, and 7 at 7:30 p.m. in Wright Hall.

The three lectures will be given by Raymond Prince, assistant professor of psychiatry at McGill University in Montreal, William Braden, Chicago Sun-Times reporter, and Willem J. Pinard, professor of psychology at Boston University.

On February 5, Dr. Prince, who is also research psychiatrist of the Mental Hygiene Institute in Montreal, will speak on "Drugs and the Super-natural in Primitive Societies" and he will show one of his films on this subject.

On February 6, William Braden, a general-assignment reporter on the Chicago Sun-Times, will speak on "Psychedelic Mysticism." He is the author of numerous short stories and articles in addition to a book, "The Private Sea: LSD and the Search for God," which was published in 1967. He has received many awards for the wide range of assignments he has covered.

On February 7, Dr. Willem Pinard will lecture on "Religious Experience: Sacred and Profane." A panel discussion will follow. Dr. Pinard is chairman of the Psychology department at Boston University.

Birth Control Educator Baird Will Speak at Amherst College

Bill Baird, founder and executive director of the Parents' Aid Society, is to speak at Amherst College Monday, February 5, at 8 p.m. in the Babbott Room. His lecture is sponsored by Forum, the student lecture committee at the College.

Baird has carried his campaign to educate the public about birth control methods, repeal state laws outlawing dissemination of birth control information and devices and legalize abortion throughout the East Coast. His efforts have led to arrests in Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey.

Last April, Baird was arrested for displaying a uterine device and distributing samples of a contraceptive foam in a speech at Boston University.

Baird's Parents' Aid Society has sponsored birth control information programs in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant and now operates the only abortion referral service in the country.

His New York activities led to his arrest in May 1965 for teaching contraception to a group of ghetto women. His case led to the overthrow of the statute he had violated and a year after his arrest he was appointed as consultant to the New York Senate and Assembly Joint Committee on Health.

In October, after his Boston trial, Baird was quoted as saying: "I have put ten years of my life on the line to help the people in this state. If the law is incorrect, as I believe, then college students, persons on welfare, everyone who isn't married will have the right to their own morality."

Nation's Press Comments On RFK's Elimination

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy says he "would not oppose Lyndon Johnson under any foreseeable circumstances"—but not everyone believes that eliminates him from this summer's Democratic nomination convention.

The New York Senator issued the statement at a National Press Club event here Tuesday, asking that other statements be considered off-the-record.

The nation's press—as eager to examine closely every RFK statement as minutely as it does those of reluctant Republican Rockefeller—reacted with skepticism Wednesday.

James S. Doyle, Boston Globe bureau chief in Washington, wrote yesterday: " . . . in the context of his other remarks . . . the published statement seemed less than a Sherman-like disclaimer of interest in the 1968 race".

Kennedy aides later added that the statement should not be read to mean that Kennedy will stop opposing the President on public issues.

Not clear was whether Kennedy applied the family wit in giving an explanation for deciding not to run in 1968. According to Doyle, he said he does not want to be responsible for electing a Republican President.

Year-Long Inquiry Ends

NASA Blamed for Negligence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year-long Senate inquiry into the fiery death of three astronauts brought a conclusion Wednesday that "no single person bears all the responsibility for the Apollo 204 accident."

"Over-confidence and complacency" resulted from a prior successful series of manned flights in the earlier Mercury and Gemini projects the Senate Space Committee said.

But the usually unanimous panel, which supervises the multibillion dollar space program, differed sharply in the degree of reprimands for top officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the prime contractor for the lunar landing project, North American Aviation, Inc.

Thirteen members, led by Chairman Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, ranking Republican, urged that Administrator James E. Webb and other top NASA officials keep Congress fully informed on all its problems, including deficiencies of contractors.

But three committeemen, Sens. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and, Charles H. Percy, R-Ill charged both the space agency and its prime contractor with failing to keep Congress and the public properly informed prior to the tragedy at Cape Kennedy, Fla., on Jan. 27 of last year.

Mondale said the lunar project "was in deep and perilous trouble" before the accident and Congress was unaware of that fact.

When Congress learned about a critical NASA report on North American through outside sources, Mondale said, there were "deliberate efforts to mislead committee members and evade legitimate congressional inquiries during an investigation of this nation's worst space tragedy."

"NASA's performance — the evasiveness, the lack of candor, the patronizing attitude exhibited toward the Congress, the refusal to respond fully and forthrightly to legitimate congressional inquiries, and the solicitous concern for corporate sensitiveness at a time of national tragedy — can only produce a loss of congressional and public confidence in NASA programs," Mondale wrote.

Percy and Brooke, in a separate statement, said: "We are disturbed at the possibility that, had there been no disaster, important shortcomings in management, scheduling, design, production and quality control might never have come to light."

There was no immediate comment from NASA on the report. North American spokesmen said they wanted to study the report before commenting.

Senator Donahue Criticized For Stand on National Policies

State Senate Pres. Maurice A. Donahue, who has been critical this winter of UMass policy in handling federal grants, is being criticized this week for his stand on national policies.

The senator announced Monday that he would be willing to run as a stand-in candidate for President Johnson in the April presidential primary "if he needs one". The Holyoke legislator added: "But, personnally, I think President Johnson could carry the state in the primary running for himself."

In a statement to the Holyoke Transcript-Telegram, Sen. Donahue said he "totally supports the President's action in Vietnam."

That brought a reply Tuesday from John J. Fitzgerald, another Holyoker who is an Army Vietnam veteran and area campaign chairman for Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who seeks Democratic support for President.

"I suggest," Fitzgerald declared in a Transcript-Telegram interview, "that Sen. Donahue take a trip to Vietnam to see first hand what is happening there . . . Party loyalty is one thing. But for party loyalty you don't have to sacrifice all train of thought."

He wound up with this prediction: "McCarthy would trounce Sen. Donahue if the primary election was today . . . Sen. Donahue was wrong on the sales tax issue. He was out of step with the times. He does not know the minds of the people of Massachusetts, especially not the minds of the young people. . . I challenge him to public debate."

Hitchhiking is a hazard to both hitchhiker and motorist. The hitchhiker risks injury to himself and to drivers of oncoming or overtaking vehicles, who may cause accidents because of the carelessness or thoughtlessness of the hitchhiker. Several recent "incidents" have underlined the inherent danger, to men as well as to women students, of hitchhiking. The University considers hitchhiking to be a dangerous practice and strongly urges students to refrain from soliciting and/or accepting rides in this manner.

East-West Air Route Decision by Mid-Summer Called "Optimistic"

BEDFORD, N.H. (AP)—It might be a "little optimistic" to hope that the Civil Aeronautics Board will reach a decision by mid-summer in the East-West air route case, Richard Walsh CAB examiner, said Wednesday.

The route would link northern New England with the Great Lakes area. Testimony on the routes which three airlines seek continued at a CAB hearing here.

"I'm sure when I get back to Washington and the hearing of this case is completed, I will do my utmost to issue a decision as speedily as possible," he told newsmen.

George Hogerty Jr., an associate of Systems Analysis and Research Corp. of Cambridge, Mass., testified on behalf of Hampshire and Vermont.

He said that given "new and improved air services, growth in passenger traffic between New England and the Great Lakes area will outpace that of the nation as new communications links are established."

He described northern New England as being "isolated from most of the country. This, together with the inconvenient connecting air service to most parts of the country, results in severe penalties in terms of time and cost to some 138,000 passengers at 1969 traffic levels, traveling between northern New England and the Great Lakes."

The governors of New Hampshire and Maine said their states badly need the air routes which the airlines seek.

New Hampshire Gov. John King and Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis testified Tuesday at the opening session of the Civil Aeronautics Board's four-day hearing here.

Roger Crowley Jr., head of the New Hampshire Department of Resources and Economic Development, said related hearings will be held in Washington starting Feb. 13.

The air routes would serve a number of airports in the three northern New England states including Manchester and Lebanon, N.H.; Burlington and White River Junction, Vt., and Bangor, Presque Isle and Portland, Maine.

Congress Receives LBJ's Economic Message Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sends to Congress Thursday his economic message and is expected to urge a new approval of his 10 percent surtax on income taxes.

The message gives a report on the nation's economy over the past year, but of more importance forecasts the outlook for the future as seen by the government's economic experts.

Campus Comment

A Timely Reply

Mrs Lederle's biting criticism in her Jan. 30 letter to the Collegian was most unexpected and, I feel, most undeserved. In view of this, I would like to present the following explanation to Mrs. Lederle through the same medium that she has used to reach me.

My letter to Time Magazine (Jan. 26) was not intended to be a direct attack on the University of Massachusetts. Nor was it intended to be, as it has indeed become, a direct attack on myself. I will tell Mrs. Lederle, as I have told my numerous other "critics," that the excerpts from my letter which appear in Time are a distortion of my actual views. They do not misrepresent, but rather misemphasize, my original meaning.

I do not feel that I am "just a number" on this campus. I am not waiting for someone to "hold my hand." I do not "expect the world to come to me." And I certainly realize that "faculties are made of flesh and blood people" because I myself plan to teach. If such accusations as these were true, my letter to Time would never have come into existence. "Numbers" do not have the capacity to respond with anger.

What I do believe is that there are people who feel this way, people who perhaps do not belong here at U. of Mass. What I meant to say was that I can understand such feelings of inadequacy because I myself have experienced them at times. There have been several occasions when I have attempted to speak with faculty members who simply did not have time for me. There have been courses that I wanted to take in which there was no room for me. This was not of course the fault of the faculty; however, such incidents often tend to make one feel like just another cog in the wheel of administrative mechanism — not a pleasant feeling.

True, "it's a big world. . .outside of the university," one which college should help us to prepare for; but not everyone can adjust to the whole world — hereditary and cultural diversities prohibit it. People build smaller worlds within the larger whole, just as we do here, and in these they can live happily and usefully. The worlds are interdependent and integrated, but still they are worlds apart.

What I am saying is that some people are unable to build their own worlds and incapable of assimilation in another. Some people must have their worlds built for them. It is sad, but it is true. And such people do not belong at a large state university. My criticism is then that mass education is great, but not for everyone (as was Time's implication in its previous article). For some, the small college's ivy-covered walls and happy class reunions will provide a better preparation for life as they will live it. For others, the larger university will provide the independence, individuality, and identity necessary in a larger world. If this great education boom continues, those who belong at the small college will find themselves in a large university and will consequently have to develop that "new maturity" they lack.

This, Mrs. Lederle, is my original meaning. I am sorry that your misinformation made it necessary for me to have to defend not my views, but myself.

World News Roundup from AP Wire Service

National

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Rusk and Defense Secretary McNamara reviewed the Asian crises, including the Pueblo seizure, at a Wednesday afternoon Cabinet meeting.

White House Press Secretary George Christian said Rusk emphasized continuing diplomatic initiatives and reported that McNamara "strongly agreed diplomatic efforts offer the best hope of regaining the ship and the crew and avoiding a large-scale conflict.

Asked why the Saigon embassy had not been better protected, inasmuch as the government had anticipated general terrorist activity, Christian replied:

"We of course had no knowledge of exactly where the terrorists might attack."

In such a situation, he said, all that could be done was to tighten security generally.

The press secretary also was asked if there might be increases in American ship levels in Asia.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 7.3 million low-income workers will add $2.3 billion to their pay Thursday as the second stage of a five-year increase in federal wage minimums go into effect.

Workers engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce or employed in large enterprises will have their wages increased from $1.40 an hour to $1.60 an hour under the new regulations.

The first step in the biggest minimum wage increase in history went into effect last Feb. 1 when the hourly rate was increased from $1.25 to $1.40. It also brought some 8 million additional workers under the law but at the lower minimum of $1 an hour.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Scientists on earth commanded Lunar Orbiter 5 to dive to its death on the moon Wednesday. It did.

The spacecraft, obeying radio orders from a quarter of a million miles away, plunged into the surface near the lunar equator, on the western edge of the face of the moon, at 2:58.5 a.m. EST.

Orbiter 5 had been circling the moon since Aug. 5.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it became necessary to destroy the spacecraft because, after five engine starts during its 2,000 trips around the moon, the onboard supply of attitude-control gas was almost depleted.

Three earlier Lunar Orbiters similarly were sent to self-destruction after depletion of their fuel.

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — The "longhair" rebels at Brien McMahon High School dwindled in number Wednesday as their suspensions moved to the court stage.

An order for a show-cause hearing was obtained against the Norwalk school system by the Fairfield County chapter of the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union.

And the local chapter of the CORE moved in to defend one of the some 50 pupils who were suspended Monday for refusing to heed a rule on hair length.

A spokesman for the CORE chapter said one of the pupils was a Negro who was suspended for having "bushy hair" and that this amounts to "an attack on Afro-American culture" and was "an aspect of white racism."

By Wednesday 23 or 24 of the "longhairs"—the number varying from different school authorities —were still on suspension. The others got haircuts and returned to school.

The hearing for the school system to show why the suspended pupils should not be immediately reinstated was set for next Monday at 2 p.m. in Common Pleas Court at Bridgeport.

McMahon Principal Luther A. Howard made an inspection in all classrooms Monday — the deadline for complying with a rule to have haircut above the ears, eyes and collars and suspended the violators.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Rembrandt's 300-year-old "Portrait of a young Man," valued at more than $100,000, was stolen from the Eastman House Museum, police said Wednesday.

Police said they believed more than one man was involved in the theft because the painting and its frame weighed more than 150 pounds.

The frame was found hanging on a fence adjoining the museum, soon after the theft was discovered.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Ever try turning your car around inside the garage? Chester Porta did.

When he finished the 19½-foot-long auto was trapped lengthwise in the 20-foot-wide building.

"It took a lot of patience on my part to get the car in that position," said Porta, the city treasurer and former mayor.

His problems started when ice coated the driveway and he was unable to get up enough traction to back up the incline leading to the street.

He began maneuvering the car back and forth, finally got stuck, and telephoned for help.

A service station mechanic placed a jack under the rear wheels, moved the car a few inches, then went around to the front and repeated the process with the front wheels. One hour later, Porta was able to drive out of the garage.

International

CAIRO (AP) — An Egyptian spokesman insisted Wednesday that the entire Suez Canal must be surveyed before 15 stranded foreign ships can be released. He said firing by Israeli troops made the task impossible.

Mohamed Hassan el Zayyat told a news conference the trapped vessels would remain blocked in the 107-mile canal until it can be determined if they should be released through Port Said at the canal's northern end or the Suez outlet in the south.

Israeli and Egyptian guns exchanged fire Tuesday after Egyptian boats tried to survey the northern half of the canal.

Israel has agreed that the canal's southern end can be cleared of sunken vessels to free the 15 stranded ships, but says any clearing operations in the northern end violate a cease-fire agreement that neither Egyptian nor Israeli forces would use the canal.

Israel, with troops stationed on the canal's east bank, has said it is willing to negotiate reopening of the Suez Canal to all shipping if Israeli vessels can use it, too. Egypt has refused to discuss such an agreement.

The 15 foreign ships were caught in the canal during the June 5-10 Middle East war when other vessels sunk during the fighting blocked the waterway.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI urged every Roman Catholic Wednesday to help fight what he called the decline in religious faith.

Speaking at a general audience, the Pope said that "precisely in this historic moment in which religious sentiment is weakening and dying out in many levels of population" the Church was demanding that "each of its children be united to it in a manner full of new faith. He asked Catholics to spread the faith.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The marble columns leading to the Parthenon atop the Acropolis are in danger of collapse, archeologists reported Wednesday.

The Greek Archeological Society said vibrations from low-flying aircraft, rust from steel support braces, weather and air pollution have weakened the columns.

The Society said emergency measures to save them were under study.

The columns are part of the Propylaea, the monumental gateway that stands about 50 yards from the Parthenon itself.

The Propylaea, considered the most distinctive gateway built in ancient Greece, dates from 437 B.C.

TOULON France (AP) — The French Navy gave up hope Wednesday of saving any of the 52 men aboard the missing submarine Minerve but ordered the search continued.

The Minerve failed to arrive at Toulon Saturday night.

"Best Dressed College Girl" Will Be Chosen on UMass Campus

Angel Flight held its annual candidates tea last Sunday for twenty-five coeds, all vying for the coveted position of "Best Dressed College Girl," a contest in conjunction with Glamour magazine.

The eight judges rated each candidate on two outfits: a daytime outfit (to wear to classes), and an off-campus outfit (for a dinner date or a concert).

This preliminary judging was merely to get the girls acquainted and to put them more at ease in front of an audience.

The actual judging will take place on Sunday, Feb. 4. The eight judges are: Dr. Arney, Astronomy; Miss Crow, Home Economics; Mrs. Gonon, Area Coordinator for the Quad; Dean Field, Dean of Students; Mrs. Tunis, wife of Dean Tunis, Dean of Admissions; Captain Robinson of the USAF Detachment on campus; Chet Weinerman, Editor of the Collegian; and Kathleen Koumjian, last years' "Best Dressed College Girl" on the U-Mass campus.

They will rate the girls on poise, carriage and over all personal appearance.

Harvard Professor Appointed In Smith College Tribute

Louis Frederick Fieser, distinguished scientist and professor emeritus of chemistry, who invented napalm in 1943, at Harvard University, has been appointed William Allan Neilson Research Professor at Smith College for the second semester of this academic year.

The professorship was established in 1927 in tribute to the third president of the college.

Mr. Fieser is the first chemist to hold the Neilson chair at Smith and the first scientist since Harlow Shapley, the astronomer, held it in 1956.

Mr. Fieser has received many awards for his research on the chemical causes of cancer and on drugs to combat the disease.

He was a member of the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Smoking and Health which issued its report in 1964.

Mr. Fieser is also known for his work in developing a laboratory method for the production of vitamin K, the body's blood clotting agent and also for his development of antimalarial drugs.

Among his many honors, he received last year the Award of the American Chemical Society in Chemical Education.

Napalm, which is an incendiary agent in jellied form, was used effectively against the Japanese in World War II. A simpler form of the gasoline incendiary, known as the Molotov cocktail, was used earlier against Mussolini's tanks, in the Spanish Civil War.

Time magazine, in an article in its January 5 issue, quoted Mr. Fieser as insisting that a researcher cannot be responsible for how other people use his inventions. "You don't know what's coming," he says. "I was working on a technical problem that was considered pressing. I'd do it again, if called upon, in defense of the country."

The eighth consecutive Smith-Northampton Summer School will be held this year, it has been announced by John Buteau, superintendent of schools, and Lawrence A. Fink of the education department at Smith.

As in the past, enrichment courses will be offered by the college, and remedial courses by the city, in several disciplines.

The six-week session opens on June 25 and concludes on August 2, with no classes held on the July 4 holiday. All students register for two courses which meet five days per week from 8-10 a.m., and from 10 a.m.-noon. Tuition is $25. Information folders containing applications will be available in the schools just prior to spring vacation in April.

allies had dissolved in the fury of the conflict.

Bunker cast doubt on whether there would be further truces in the war. Asked whether the allies would ever agree to another holiday halt in hostilities, he said: "I think it is very problematical that we can."

The threat of a big push by three or four divisions of North Vietnamese regulars against U.S. Marine and South Vietnamese government posts below the demilitarized zone was cited by the ambassador as a parallel to the guerrilla operations.

LEONARD SPACEK

CPA to Address SBA Students

Leonard Spacek, chairman of the Arthur Andersen & Co., Certified Public Accountants, will address the University of Massachusetts Accounting Association Wednesday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m. in room 120 of the School of Business Administration building.

Mr. Spacek, who has been with the international firm for 40 years, will speak on "The Public Accountant as the Investor Sees Him." He will be accompanied by other partners from Arthur Andersen's Boston and Hartford offices along with other employees of the firm. An informal question and answer period will follow his address.

After completing his undergraduate work at Coe College and the University of Chicago, he was granted a C.P.A. degree from the University of Illinois. Mr. Spacek received his Doctor of Laws degree from Coe College.

Affiliated with the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, he is also a member of state societies of C.P.A.'s in California, Indiana, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio and Texas. Currently serving as a consultant for the Bureau of the Budget in Washington, D.C. he also holds trusteeships on the U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce and at Northwestern University.

Evening Draft Discussions are scheduled for Wednesdays at 7:30 starting February 7, especially geared to the college-age student, male or female. Alternatives to the Draft, from Conscientious Objections to Resistance, will be discussed, as well as problems and questions about classifications and deferments. The first discussion at the Valley Peace Center, 203 North Pleasant, will be led by Peter Salus, professor in the German Department at the University, and Isabel Arnold.

Students unable to attend these sessions, or seeking individual advice, may still make appointments through the Valley Peace Center, or drop in Mondays between 2 and 5 or Thursdays between 3 and 5.

Those students at the University who are unable to make it to the Peace Center may contact Peter Salus at 208 Machmer.

CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE . . .

Hartwell (Webster) was passed under which the senate, by a two-thirds vote, could set "Walk Ins" in motion at any time.

Sen. Silverman called the document written by Mr. Brooks an example of "backstabbing". In an interview with the Collegian he said that the documents interpretation of Faculty Senates action on the Open House proposal was false and misleading and was composed in such a way that it represented Mr. Brooks personal opposition to the Open House proposal under the guise of being an objective presentation and thus was not conducive to objective consideration of the problem by the Student Affairs Committee, the members of which had each received copies of the document.

Mr. Brooks had composed the letter as a notice to the members of the committee in his capacity as Secretary to the committee.

FBI Head Accuses Dissident Groups Of 'Intimidation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover accused "some dissident groups and individuals" Wednesday of trying to destroy local law enforcement by means of "harassment and intimidation."

In an editorial in the FBI's monthly "Law Enforcement Bulletin," Hoover singled out—although not by name — the American Civil Liberties Union in connection with a pending law suit in Newark, N.J.

The ACLU last August asked a federal court to place the Newark police department under a form of receivership, and appoint a special master to administer it. The group accused the department of a long and continued pattern of brutality.

Hoover said: "The courts could do this country a great service if they would promptly, and with finality, slap down such schemes to undermine and destroy local law enforcement." He called the ACLU move "a ridiculous plan."

While these groups have made little headway, Hoover said, "They are creating such a smokescreen of harassment and intimidation that enforcement of the law is becoming an overwhelming burden for many agencies."

"GUT ISSUES"

"WHERE THE ACTION IS"

"DRAMATIC REVOLUTION"

FEDERAL SCHOOL REPORT says: The Philadelphia public schools are engaged in "the most dramatic revolution in a city school system in the post-war period." Reform in Philadelphia is "more widespread and far-reaching than in any large school system in the country."

DR. MARK R. SHEDD, new Superintendent of Schools, says: "I will continue to support teachers who are able to examine, in a mature way, the gut issues of our day—war, sex, race, drugs, poverty. If we divorce school subjects from the guts and hopes of human beings, we can expect students to find them gutless and hopeless."

RICHARDSON DILWORTH, President of the Board of Education, says: "The city is where the action is. It's where the challenge is. It's where we are facing the great moral and social issues of our day. If you want action, come teach in Philadelphia. If you don't, go teach in the suburbs."

WE SAY: Come join our school revolution as a teacher. Get in on the action. Teacher salaries are rising rapidly. So is our school system. Come on up the up staircase. For further information, see our Representative who will be at Univ. of Massachusetts on WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1968.

COUNCILLOR POSITIONS OPEN

Director of Staff Training, Alice Sargent, has announced that Heads of Residence will be accepting applications for the position of counselor until February 5.

All interested upperclassmen should pick up an application from their Head of Residence or Area Coordinator and return it by the due date.

Following receipt of the applications, a House Screening Board, consisting of an equal number of representatives of the counselors and the House Government and also the Head of Residence and the Graduate Assistant, will solicit recommendations from residents and also conduct interviews with candidates.

The Screening Board will then send the applications, with its recommendations to the Area Coordinator on February 26.

If you don't agree that business destroys individuality, maybe it's because you're an individual.

There's certain campus talk that claims individuality is dead in the business world. That big business is a big brother destroying initiative.

But freedom of thought and action, when backed with reason and conviction's courage, will keep and nurture individuality whatever the scene: in the arts, the sciences, and in business.

Scoffers to the contrary, the red corpuscles of individuality pay off. No mistake.

Encouraging individuality rather than suppressing it is policy in a business like Western Electric—where we make and provide things Bell telephone companies need. Because communications are changing fast, these needs are great and diverse.

Being involved with a system that helps keep people in touch, lets doctors send cardiograms across country for quick analysis, helps transmit news instantly, is demanding. Demanding of individuals.

If your ambition is strong and your abilities commensurate, you'll never be truly happy with the status quo. You'll seek ways to change it and—wonderful feeling!—some of them will work.

Could be at Western Electric.

Tindall's Last-Second Basket Downs UConn

Coach Calls Effort "Greatest" As Redmen Win, 65-63

A twenty-five foot desperation jump shot by Billy Tindall gave the Redmen a 65-63 victory over Connecticut at the Cage Wednesday night. It was the Redman's first win over UConn in more than four years.

Billy Tindall scored the winning basket with one second remaining in the game as the Redmen recorded what Coach Leaman termed "my greatest thrill."

A major reason for the U.M. victory was the superlative defensive effort which held Connecticut's leading scorer Bill Coreley to just 8 points, some 14 points less than his average. The effort on Coreley permitted the Redmen to stay close throughout the game, and to eventually win.

Tindall's shot capped one of the finest performances in years. No team enjoyed more than an eight point lead. The second half had the crowd of twenty two hundred experiencing cardiac spasms as the game stayed within two points for the last seven minutes.

The first half saw Conn. Jump to an 11-5 lead before the Redmen, on the strength of Gary Gasperack's bombs, climbed back into the game. Another UConn spurt saw the huskies grab a 23-17 lead before things became interesting.

After Billy Tindall converted a pair of free throws with 9 minutes left, Ray Ellerbrook sparked the Maroon with an 18 footer, and a subsequent steal resulting in a lay-up. After two more charity tosses, a Gary Gasperack rebound tied the score at 25 with 6:40 to play.

In the first half, Gasperack led the UMass attack with 11 points. Ellerbrook scored 10, Tim Smith led the UConn attack with seven intercontinental bombs from the steps of Goodell Library.

Connecticut maintained its slim margin for the first five minutes until Pete Gayeska's lay-up gave the Redmen a one point lead, 45-44. But a 3 point play by the everpresent Smith gave the Huskies another lead.

An 8-2 Redman streak threw them into an 8 point lead. But the Huskies returned the favor, and with 5:24 to play, Fred Malan put the UConns ahead 61-59. They never led again.

Tindall tied the contest with his patented 10 foot spinner and put the Redmen ahead with 4:09 to play. Malan, however, knotted the score with his fifth field goal of the half.

Both teams were guilty of turn-overs and poor shooting in the next two minutes. The biggest play came with 1:15 to play, when John Crist was guilty of an offensive foul. The Redmen carefully worked the ball for one last shot, but disaster nearly struck when a UMass pass was nearly stolen. The ball, however, was deflected out-of-bounds by a Husky.

UConn coach Burr Carlson called for a time out. The Redmen worked the ball to Gary Gasperack who took a 20 footer and missed. The ball deflected off Corley and went out of bounds.

After a time out, the Redmen passed the ball around and fooled with it until they ordered a halt with 7 seconds left.

On the pass-in the ball went from Tindall to DiSarcina to a cutting Ellerbrook, in the corner to Gasperack, out to Tindall miles from the hoop.

The rest is history.

Little Redmen Beat Chiefs, 54-51

By Peter Passorelli
Staff Reporter

Clutch free throws by Ken Mathias and Bob Dempsey helped stave off a late Springfield rally and enabled the UMass freshman basketball team to defeat the Springfield frosh, 54-51, last night at the Cage.

UMass actually gained the necessary cushion to withstand the Chief surge early in the second half. Scoring at 15:26, the Little Redmen proceeded to outscore Springfield 9-2 in the next two and a half minutes, leading, 39-28, at the 12:47 mark. This was the biggest lead of the game

Keying the surge was Jon Kruper who popped six of the nine points. Also a chief factor for UMass was the rebounding of Ken Mathias, who again played a steady game off both boards.

Springfield, however, was not ready to fold out of contention. Led by the shooting of Tom Cooper and Steve Healy, the Chiefs scored ten straight points to close within one, at 41-40, with 7:45 to play.

From then to conclusion, it was a nip and tuck contest with the outcome in doubt until Mathias, at 1:39 and Dempsey at 37 seconds, iced the triumph.

The first half saw the combination of cold shooting and tight defense have both teams struggling. UMass trailed by as much as seven points in the early going, finally pulling into the lead on a basket by Jim Ryan, at 5:43. The Little Redmen took a 25-22 lead into the dressing room at halftime.

Leading the Redmen scorers was Mathias with 18 points, with Ryan chipping in 12. Cooper led all scorers with 24 points, with Brad Macomber adding 10, for Springfield.

UMass was hampered by the loss of starting forward Lou Griffith, who is sidelined for six weeks, with torn ligaments in the right elbow, suffered in practice Tuesday. Frank Schaffeld started in his place.

Frazier is Best

A.P.—Ring Magazine named heavyweight Joe Frazier as its Fighter of the Year for 1967 Wednesday. The publication cited Frazier's six straight victories — five of them knockouts—during the past year as primary reasons for his selection.

Ring lists Frazier as the number one challenge to Cassius Clay, who it still recognizes as champion. Clay's crown has been taken away by the World Boxing Authority because of his refusal to serve in the armed forces. Frazier fights Buster Mathis for the New York version of the heavyweight crown in Madison Garden March 4.

Packers' Dowler Dislikes Pro Football Labor Union

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)—Flanker Boyd Dowler of the Green Bay Packers said Wednesday he does not favor a proposal to unionize professional football players.

Dowler appeared at the winter convention of the Wisconsin Broadcasters Association as a stand-in for Packer Coach Vince Lombardi, who was honored by the group as "Wisconsinite of the Year."

"I am too old to get mixed up in joining a union," the Packer veteran said during a question period following his acceptance of a plaque on behalf of his boss.

"I don't believe it would be a good idea. I would just as soon take care of my own salary situation myself. I think it should be done on an individual basis, rather than collectively."

Lombardi was unable to appear because the annual player draft kept him in Green Bay. Lombardi has called an unprecedented postseason news conference for Thursday night to disclose his future plans.

Ray Ellerbrook sinks a lay-up as UConn's John Melen watches.

NOTICE

Intramural basketball managers are reminded to submit their ballots for the Intramural All-Star team to the Intramural office as soon as possible.

Athletic chairmen should pick up their volleyball and squash flyers at the Intramural Office if they have not already done so.

Canniff Wants More Checking As Hockey Team Preps for Saturday

By WALT STACHBURG
Staff Reporter

UMass hockey coach Jack Canniff wants to see more bodychecking by his squad. He realizes that most teams have better speed than his club and wants the Redmen to hit their opponents to slow them down.

Against Colby, the team had checked little and the Mules outskated the Redmen badly during the six goal last period. Against Williams, the Redmen threw more bodychecks and were in the game most of the way and wound up outshooting Williams.

Power plays were another problem encountered by the Redmen last weekend. UMass had six power play opportunities and failed to score on any of them.

Colby had two power plays and scored during both of them. Williams had two power plays and scored once and also scored once during a Redmen power play.

One thing the team cannot afford is an injury. The roster contains the minimum number of nine forwards, four defensemen and two goalies.

Next game for the Redmen will be Saturday at Burlington where they will skate against the University of Vermont Catamounts. Next home game is Feb. 9 against Army.

Canniff will be a well-traveled man before the hockey season is over. He will attend a high school hockey tournament at Lake Placid this weekend and plans a trip to Minnesota during February.

Matters could be worse for Canniff and his squad. At least, they do not play Cornell. The Red Raiders bombed Yale 18-1 Saturday, scoring nine goals in the second period.

The series between the varsity and the freshmen is all even. Each team has a win and they have played to one tie.

U.S. Skiers Voice Approval Of French Olympic Course

AUTRANS, France (AP)— America's cross-country skiers tested the Olympic course for the first time Wednesday and found it to their liking.

"It is a wonderful course," said Mike Gallagher of Killington, Vt., who is rated the best U.S. hope for a good placing. There appears no hope for an American gold medal in this specialty in which the Scandinavians and Russians dominate.

"It has good downhill areas and this is to our advantage," Gallagher added. "The turns aren't too sharp and in some places the course is shaded by burlap. I've never seen that before."

"We like it very much," added Mike Elliott of Durango, Colo., another of America's better cross-country men.

Other members who arrived at the scene Tuesday night are Bob Gray, Larry Damon, Charley Kellogg, Jack Lufkin, Ned Gillette and Clark Matis.

Gallagher said the Americans would be happy to crash into the first 20 in any of the races ranging from 10,000 to 50,000 meters.

"I won't be racing for position, "I'll be racing for time," Gallagher said. "If I can come to within two minutes of the winner, then I'll be very happy. That will be significant.

"A few years ago we couldn't cut the difference below 15 minutes. In the more recent events we have seen this advantage cut to 10, six and then three minutes.

"It's a long grind. This is a way of life to these Scandinavians and new to us in training technique. But we're making it. In a few years we should win a medal."

Nixon Plans to Run

by RELMAN MORIN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard M. Nixon announced formally Thursday that he is a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination and said, "I believe I have found some answers" to the problems confronting the United States.

"I have decided, therefore, to enter the Republican primary in New Hampshire," his statement said.

It was issued in the form of a letter to the citizens of New Hampshire. Nixon prepared to open his drive with 3 days of appearances in that state, beginning today. From there, his office said, he will go to Wisconsin and Oklahoma.

Richard Nixon; a man who wants to be President.

In his statement, Nixon said the U. S. is in "grave difficulties around the world and here at home." He said the efforts to find solutions transcend partisan politics.

"Peace and freedom in the world, and peace and progress here at home," the statement continued, "will depend on the decisions of the next president of the United States.

"For these critical years, America needs new leadership."

Nixon reminded the voters of his 14 years of experience in Washington, during which, he said, "I learned the awesome nature of the great decisions a president faces." He went on:

"During the past eight years I have had the chance to reflect on the lessons of public office, to measure the nation's tasks and its problems from a fresh perspective. I have sought to apply those lessons to the needs of the present, and to the entire sweep of this final third of the 20th century.

"And I believe I have found some answers."

Nixon's announcement came as no surprise. For many months he has been speaking and writing about foreign problems—especially the war in Vietnam—and the major domestic issues in the United States.

Trustees Approve New Plan For UMass Medical School

By DON EPSTEIN
News Day Editor

The UMass Trustees unanimously approved Wednesday a "much simplified" design for the UMass Medical School at Worcester.

In November, the federal government rejected the University's first application of $25 million for the medical school. Complications in design were cited.

Dean Lamar Soutter told the Daily Collegian in an interview from his Boston office that the new plan "is not as good as the original one, but it is perfectly acceptable to the administration and faculty."

The latest plan, submitted by Campbell, Aldrich & Nulty, Boston architects, shows clinical and basic science wings making up the sides of a large "H" with the medical library in the middle.

A teaching hospital to be built in the second stage will be attached to the south end of the clinical or right side of the "H".

The new plan is almost a reversal of the relationship of clinical and science facilities to the hospital, and it places the library in the center for the first time.

Dean Soutter estimated that this new plan will save the government about $3 million over the previous arrangement. The total plan is expected to cost $45 million.

The Trustees also voted to endorse a report that advocated a dental school to be built in conjunction with the planned medical school in Worcester.

The report, completed last fall, cited a need for a dental school in the state university system, adding that the most economical method would be to combine the dental school with the proposed medical school.

According to university officials, the board "did not take the initiative" in indorsing the report. The report was indorsed as a method of informing the governor and Legislature that a need is present.

If the Legislature agrees with the need and is willing to appropriate funds for the dental school in addition to those provided for the medical school, the university will be willing to go ahead with the building plans, the official said.

Dual Building Use

Although there were no official estimates of the cost of the dental school, the report said it would cost "considerably less' by building it in conjunction with the medical school, as many of the buildings could be used by both schools.

A building report on the plan said the dental school would mean "an additional story here and there on some of the buildings."

Dean Soutter told the Daily Collegian that he had talked with the legislative leadership about the proposed dental school and that they "appear interested".

Civil Liberties Union Sues UMass

By DON EPSTEIN
Day Editor

The Civil Liberties Union has filed a suit against UMass in Hampshire Superior Court on behalf of a university teaching assistant who claims her salary has been withheld because she refused to sign a state employee's loyalty oath.

The suit was filed in Hampshire County Superior Court on behalf of Mrs. Allison Kaufhold the UMass assistant. CLU alleged that Mrs. Kaufhold was allowed to continue teaching but had her salary withheld.

The oath is required of all state employees. In subscribing to it, they swear allegiance to the U.S. and state constitutions and vow not to attempt overthrow of either government.

Isidore Silver, a CLU spokesman, said the major aim of the suit "is to have the oath declared unconsitutional."

Mrs. Kaufhold said the oath was "illegal and unconstitutionally vague."

In a Collegian interview last night, Mr. Philip Eddy, Assistant Professor of Education, who is also Chairman of the Amherst Chapter of the Civil Liberties Union, said that it is hoped that as a result of the court action the "statute would be removed from the books."

Eddy expects someone from the Atty. General's office to handle the case for the University. He went on to say that the lawyers representing the client donate their services while the CLU pays the court costs.

Eddy said that it is possible for this case to reach the Supreme Court.

U. S. Replies To North Korean Offer to Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding quickly to a North Korean suggestion, the United States said Thursday it is prepared to try again to seek release of the Pueblo and its crew through the military armistice commission at Panmunjom.

But no one here is predicting early success. The last time the armistice commission handled a U.S. prisoner case, it took a year of meetings before the Americans — two helicopter pilots—were freed by the Communists.

The North Korean hint came in an English-language Pyongyang radio broadcast of a statement by a secretary of the Communist Korean Workers Party, Kim Kwang Hyop.

Kim said the United States cannot solve the Pueblo affair by military threats, aggressive war or "illegal discussion at the United Nations." But, "it will be a different story if they want to solve this question by methods of previous practice," he said.

Enemy Suffer 10,500 Casualties As Fighting Rages in Vietnam

SAIGON (AP)—North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong have suffered 10,553 killed in savage fighting this week and have failed to hold any major South Vietnamese cities, the U.S. Command said Friday.

As fighting throughout the country continued into a fourth day, Allied forces were killing the enemy at a ratio of 11.5 to 1, military spokesmen said.

They added that allied forces also captured 3,076 enemy suspects and seized 2,100 weapons.

In a communique, the U.S. Command said:

"Although the enemy raided numerous cities and towns throughout the republic and achieved some temporary successes, they have failed to take and hold any major installations or localities. Although some enemy units are still occupying positions in a few cities, they are rapidly being driven out."

The announced toll underlined a feeling expressed earlier by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander, that the Red drive was being blunted.

While conditions in much of the country remained chaotic, Westmoreland told newsmen it was a go for broke proposition by the Communists and there was evidence to suggest that the enemy "is about to run out of team."

"He has, however, some reserves yet to be committed," Westmoreland said. "We are watching this."

The U.S. Command gave this breakdown of casualties among allied forces for the period 6 p.m. Monday to midnight Thursday:

Killed in action — 632 South Vietnamese military; 281 American military and four from other allied forces.

Wounded in action — 1,588 South Vietnamese military, 1,195 U.S. military and 34 from other allied forces.

The toll on both sides gave bloody evidence that the fighting during the week was the most savage of the Vietnam conflict.

Civilian casualties across the country obviously were heavy, but no immediate estimates were available on the number killed and wounded among the populace as the fighting raged in cities and towns.

Dick Gregory, entertainter and of late, Civil Rights leader, will speak on the crisis of Black Power in the Cage on Wednesday.

Atty. General Declares War On Underworld

BOSTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson has formally asked for a gubernatorial message to the legislature on five key proposals to help fight organized crime.

Richardson, in a letter Thursday to Gov. John A. Volpe said the bomb assault Tuesday on an Everettt attorney indicates "the underworld has extended its terrorism to those outside its own circle."

The attorney general called for a witness immunity law, wiretapping and electronic surveillance under court controls, stronger penalties for conspiracy, more state troopers and $67,910 in added funds for the attorney general's new Organized Crime Section.

Richardson said the five-point program was hammered out in a closed doors conference Wednesday night with police, district attorneys, state troopers and agents of the FBI working on the bombing case.

The victim, John E. Fitzgerald Jr., was injured critically when a bomb demolished his car as he turned on the ignition Tuesday night. Fitzgerald, attorney for underworld informer Joseph Barboza Baron, underwent extensive surgery in which one leg was amputated.

American and North Korean officials met at Panmunjom recently. They hope to meet again.

NORTH KOREA . . .

Quoting Kim's words, State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey announced "the United States is prepared to deal with this matter through this channel."

"The interest of the U.S. government," he added, "is in obtaining the release of the vessel and its crewmen. I do not want to let modalities and technicalities stand in the way."

Under the procedures of the armistice commission set up at the end of the 1950-53 Korean War, either side can request a meeting when it wants to talk to the other.

The chief delegate on the U.N. command side, American Rear Adm. John V. Smith is expected to seek a meeting promptly. McCloskey said the North Koreans responded within one day to the request for the meeting which was held last week.

New Education Dean Speaks Here Tomorrow

Monday, February 5, the new Dean of Education will be formally introduced by the Education Club to the Education Department.

According to Mrs. Rudman, advisor to the club, Dwight Allen is an ambitious man who plans to institute several changes in the Education Department.

Mrs. Rudman mentioned in an interview that the new dean is actively interested in students. His past involvement in the development of "microteaching," "flexible time grouping," and "automation" reveal a concern for progress in education.

Dr. Allen received his Doctorate in Education at Stanford University. He has held over fourteen leadership positions since 1953, ranging from Instructor of Athens College in Greece to Director of the Philippine Stanford Peace Corp Training.

Since 1960, Dr. Allen has written numerous articles and two books: A Design for High School Education, and The Computer in American Education. He has received research grants amounting to almost $1,500,000 for various projects.

Theo Snyder, coordinator of the program, urged education majors to meet Dean Allen Monday night at 7:45 in Hasbrouk 20. He will discuss such topics as educational TV, a teacher training program, and student-faculty communication.

Theo said that Dr. Allen has a sincere interest in meeting the students.

MED SCHOOL . . .

Soutter emphasized that both he and other officials "don't want these preliminary plans for the dental school to interfere with the medical school." The medical school will get top priority in any building plans.

In another medical school development a Boston legislator Wednesday urged approval of his bill to have the state set aside $45 million for the UMass Medical School at Worcester instead of waiting for federal matching funds.

"I believe the federal funds were ready to be appropriated in June of 1967," said Rep. Robert L. Cawley, D-Boston. "But in less than four months we were told it was the rising costs of the Vietnam war which was holding them back.

Cawley asserted that without more medical school graduates, the state will not have enough qualified personnel to implement health and safety fund grants. There was no opposition to the bill before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Commenting on Rep. Cawley's plan, Dean Soutter said that any construction done prior to the federal government acceptance of the plan will not be paid for by the federal government.

Soutter concluded that as of now he still expects the medical school to open in 1970 with an entering class of 16 students.

Brooks Comments on Open House Quote

Mr. Robert N. Brooks, Assistant to the Dean of Students and Secretary to the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs was interviewed by the Daily Collegian today to get his response to charges made in the Student Senate Wednesday night by Sen. Treasurer Silverman concerning a meeting notice sent by Mr. Brooks to members of the Student Affairs Committee.

The notice in question, which appeared on the front page of Thursday's Collegian, was accused of presenting a false impression of the results of the Faculty Senate's action in tabling the Open House proposal.

Sen. Silverman felt that the notice's claim that the Faculty action had killed the proposal represented Mr. Brooks personal opinion, and as such, should not have appeared on a formal notice bearing the stamp of the Office of the Dean of Students. According to Sen. Silverman, the Faculty Senate had only tabled the proposal and had definitely not killed it.

In an interview with the Daily Collegian, Mr. Brooks commented on the issue: ". . . my reference was solely my interpretation. . . . Meeting notices are not official documents and usually do not circulate outside the Committee . . . . since I suspected that different people heard different things and drew different conclusions from the discussion at that meeting, I distributed to all Committee members, a copy of the minutes of the . . . meeting."

Russians Go To India

MOSCOW (AP) — A four-man Soviet delegation led by Politburo member Arvid Y. Pelshe will attend the Moscow side of the divided Indian Communist party congress at Patna next week, Indian sources in Moscow reported. The Indian party is split between rival factions supporting Moscow and Peking.

Volpe Gets Pen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pres. Johnson talked privately with seven governors Thursday and discussed with them a wide range of subjects.

The President conversed with the governors before a national prayer breakfast and later at the White House.

The governors watched the President sign his economic report to congress and received souvenir pens.

Governors who got the pens included John A. Volpe of Massachusetts.

Bergman Festival to Be Presented

Orchard Hill is pleased to announce the beginning of its spring Bergman Festival.

Ingmar Bergman's name is already a legend, not only in his Swedish homeland, but througout Europe and America. He has the uncanny ability to combine a brilliant visual and dramatic gift, with a deeply honest spirit of inquiry into the nature and state of man. His films stand not only as fascinating entertainment, but also as thoughtful essays on spiritual, moral, and psychological progress—his own and many another's.

"Wild Strawberries", which won the Grand Prize at the Berlin Film Festival, will begin the series. It will be shown Sunday, February 11, at 7:00, in Mahar Auditorium on the University Campus. The following six films, will also be shown at 7:00 in Mahar on the following dates: "The Virgin Spring" (February 18), "The Magician" (March 3), "Smiles of a Summer Night" (April 7), "Through a Glass Darkly" (April 21), "Winter Light" (April 28), and "The Silence" (May 5). These last three films compose his famous trilogy, exploring the saving force of human communication and love.

Series Tickets will be on sale in the Student Union Ticket Office from February 5 through February 10, and will be available at the door of the first film. The price for the complete series is $2.75. Single admission will be $.50, and may be bought at the door.

MEET THE NEW DEAN

A "Meet the New Dean" program will be held in honor of University of Massachusetts School of Education Dean Dwight W. Allen by the UMass Education Club, Monday, February 5.

The program is open to the public and will be held at 7:15 p.m. in Room 20, Hasbrouck Laboratory. Dr. Allen became dean of the UMass School of Education Jan. 1. A former Stanford University faculty member, he is a much-published experimenter in education.

Gavin Blasts U. S. Policy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Retired Gen. James M. Gavin said Thursday he was being kind in using the term "enept" to describe America's handling of the Pueblo incident.

"It was the height of irresponsibility to send that ship into unfriendly waters during tense times such as these, without any air cover," he said.

During an interview, he called again for an end to the bombing in North Vietnam and for negotiations with the National Liberation Front.

Gavin, now board chairman of a management consulting firm in Cambridge, Mass., said the war has alienated American youth.

"I've visited a number of colleges and universities in recent months," he continued, "and I sense this deep frustration and anxiety among our youth about where we are headed."

As an antidote, he suggested a constitutional amendment extending the voting privilege to all who are 18.

I Love to Hear Myself Talk

Things are shaping up for the annual elections of Student Senate officers to be held in April. As one Senator said to me last week, "I have to make my decision soon. I know I have to start campaigning now if I'm going to run." A few individuals are announced candidates for the four positions and it seems likely that there will be opposition in all races with the exception of the Treasurer's for the time being.

But a sort of slump in interest in this election has now descended over the Senate, many of whose members have been speculating on the question since September.

At this week's Senate meeting it seemed that some of the senators, if not calling attention to their availability, attempted to show off their qualifications in manners befitting candidates:

The President: Are there any comments or questions on the request for an explanation of "social policy" as contained in the Open House report ?

Sen. Know Better: Point of Order. The correct word is included not contained... if I may refer you to the work of the S.G.A. Committee. We must place faith in our committee system.

The President: Thank you. Any other comments ?

Sen. Ready and Willing: Mr. Chairman, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen, My Fellow Senators. I propose that the Senate hold a meeting to discuss means of interpreting "social policy."

Sen. Extreme: I object. This is obviously a clear case of giving in to the administration. We should stick by our position on "social policy"—let the houses interpret it—and let's not make any replies to the administration's asking what does it mean.

The President: Sen. Extreme, the question came from a member of the faculty not the administration.

Sen. Extreme: It's all the same. They're all against us.

Sen. D. A. Golden, (whispering): Mr. President

The President: Yes.

Sen. D. A. Golden, (whispering): We can't have a meeting until I find my briefcase... it's got lots of important... papers in it.

Sen. Moron, (with a gleam in his eye): I know what's in there !

Sen. Know Better: Point of the Business of the Day. This discussion isn't relevent. I move the previous question.

Sen. Ready and Willing: Mr. Chairman, Distingulshed Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen. My Fellow Senators. I would like to ask a question. I've only debated twice on this... may I say a few words ?

The President: No, you may not. Sit down. (Muttering) Take two candidate's steps backwards.

Sen. Moron, (rising): Mr. Chairman, there is no question before us.

The President: You're right. Good thinking. The call of the question is out of order.

Sen. Know Better: Mr. President, if the motion was not in order how could it be out of order ?

The President, (wearily): Good thinking. You're right. (Aside, who do they think they are ? I'm still President.)

Sen. Brad the Silent: I should like to offer a few comments. I should like to clarify the debate on two points. In the first place, we are considering a phrase composed of two parts. Namely, "social" and "policy." Of the two "policy" no doubt has more importance in general, but specifically as related to this question, I would generally say that "social" as understood in common usage means more. (Dramatic pause.) I hope you understand my meaning on this (The senator then summarized the main points of his position for 15 minutes.)

Sen. Booby: There are a couple of points to be kept in mind. Before we act on this bill, we should canvass our constituencies and ask them a few misleading questions so that we can be truly representative. (With the expression of the last word, murmurs of approval were voiced.) After all (he continued), if we are going to be representative we must find out what they want and then act in our best interests.

Sen. Extreme: I agree. We must act for them now. They want an immediate show of strength. It's the only way he can get our open house proposal through them.

The President: Sen. Extreme, aren't you confusing your they's and them's ?

Sen. Extreme: I guess I'm confused. They're against us...but we're for them...

Sen. Ready and Willing: Mr. Chairman, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen, My Fellow Senators, my original idea of having a meeting was to decide whether we belonged with they or them.

Sen. Know Better: As much as I like the idea of meetings, as you well know, I think that we should either consider ourselves as being with they or them or else we should not openly discuss the question and give away our strategy.

Sen. Moron: I move we postpone this for a week to search for Sen. Golden's missing briefcase.

Sen. Nellie, agreeably: That's the best idea I've heard all night.

The President: All right then. If there's no objection we shall follow this responsible policy. Is there any further business ?

Sen. Booby: Are you kidding ?

(Thus, Sen. Moron's brilliant move, involving Sen. Golden, headed off Sen. Know Better's advice which was predicated on Sen. Ready and Willing's move and about which Sen. Brad the Silent talked but made no motions. Things are certainly getting in shape for the election. As soon as that comes up, the Senate should solve its quorum and absences problem and all sorts of social proposals for the students will be forthcoming.)

Every man of action has a strong dose of egotism, pride, hardness and cunning. But all these things will be forgiven him if he can make of them the means to achieve great ends.

The Relabeling Issue

"Uncle Sam is watching you" will prove to be true for innumerable pharmaceutical companies when a new study, by scientists from the National Academy of Science and the National Research Council, on drug effectiveness is released in June. The study, ordered by the Food and Drug Administration, will determine if the drugs are being correctly labeled. The FDA has announced it plans to order drug companies to relabel products to agree with actual performance.

The review will be made under the authority of the Kefauver-Harris Act of 1962 which requires drugs to be effective not just safe. In the past, products only had to be proven safe to the consumer.

Estimates by officials indicate that perhaps as much as ten per cent of the drugs involved in the study will be found ineffective and ruled off the market.

Pharmaceutical manufacturers are beginning to criticize the FDA's study, naturally. They have a lot to lose if the estimates should prove accurate—not to mention low. At best, changes will have to be made in current advertising to meet FDA requirements. Relabeling will be necessary and, for some, loss of a product due to ineffectiveness will result.

From the positive standpoint however, the new requirements would, in all probability, raise not only standards but consumer respect for the firms. Buyers will be able to tell exactly what a drug will do—not what it is supposed to do.

Advertising, by its very nature, is devised to sell—to present products attractively—to appeal to the consumers' desires. Because of the enormous amount of products, the consumer can not possibly know the effects and benefits of drugs. With the changes, advertisements, hopefully, will be honest and reliable.

The relabeling and demands for high standards will be of great value to the American public because it will save money, enable the buyer to buy drugs more wisely and remove some of the worthless drugs from the market.

A Last Final . . . Then Death

To the editor:

I should like to report to the student body the fact that Janet Kolb's unfortunate death has been avenged. Justice has prevailed! For those who have forgotten, Miss Kolb, 17, class of 1970, was struck and killed Jan. 13 while crossing a street (after finishing her last final and as her parents waited) by a car driven by Mrs. Christine Blackmer, 84. Tuesday, Jan. 30, Mrs. Blackmer, pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to slow down for a pedestrian and paid her $25 fine. An additional charge of operating to endanger was dismissed for lack of prosecution. To my knowledge, Mrs. Blackmer at 84 still retains her license.

As a commuter, I have the privilege to be both a driver and pedestrian on this campus. Either way is hell. Crossing a street, I take my life in my hands; driving down it I assume the responsibility of many others. People walking six abreast down the road because the sidewalks are impassable can propose a problem to us drivers. If we don't slow down we may pay a $25 fine.

And as for you hitchhikers—you troublemakers! Of course I know that when you walk the streets you're at least watching for cars (they give rides and that's why you're in the road—to get a ride). It is my feeling you propose the least problem but no one else seems to side with me.

And again to those of you who don't hitchhike, who just walk, ("they always stop") remember Miss Kolb. Of course you'll know your life was avenged by a $25 fine, even though a loss of license may not occur. You can't have everything! And there are sidewalks. Granted you can't see them much less wade on them for mud, water, and snow, but they are there?

And now I go back to my books, satisfied that justice has dealt its devastating blow, that we students walk in the road because we like danger and that hitchhikers are troublemakers.

Hampshire College Continues Development in Scientific Area

AMHERST MASSACHUSETTS, Tuesday, January 23, 1968—Hampshire College, continuing its policy of developing its plans in consultation with experts in specific fields, recently completed a three-session planning conference on science and mathematics. Faculty from area colleges, representing all the science disciplines, attended sessions to consider plans for the science and mathematics curriculum and for the science building itself.

At the opening session, held at the Smith Faculty Club on December 8th, academic consultants were joined by Lawrence Lieberfeld of Taylor, Lieberfeld & Heidman, Inc., a program consultant, in a discussion of the design of the building.

The conference was called by Hampshire President Franklin Patterson, who chaired the first meeting. Professor Alice Dickinson, Smith College, Department of Mathematics, was chairman of the January sessions. Other professors participating, and their disciplines, were: Arnold B. Arons, Amherst College, physics; Robert H. Breusch and James Q. Denton, Amherst College, mathematics; George W. deVillafranca, Smith College, biology; Richard D. Fink, Amherst College, chemistry; George M. Fleck, Smith College, chemistry; Richard M. Foose, Amherst College, geology; Robert L. Gluckstern, University of Massachusetts, physics; David Park, Williams College, physics; Robert H. Romer, Amherst College, physics; Henry T. Yost, Amherst College, biology; and Edward B. D. Lambe, State University of New York at Stony Brook, and Director of the Institute for Research in Learning and Instruction, physics.

Hampshire staff attending were, in addition to Dr. Patterson, Vice-President Charles R. Longsworth and Executive Assistants John R. Boettiger, David E. Matz and Kenneth Rosenthal.

Volpe to Step Up Anti-Crime Bill

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. John A. Volpe says the bombing attempt on the life of an Everett attorney will speed his plans to file an anti-crime package of legislation.

"I think it incumbent on us to do everything in our power to eliminate this kind of activity," he told newsmen Thursday on his return from a one week trip to Israel plus a Washington stop.

"The latest incident will accelerate the date on which we submit this crime package," he added. "It will contain many of the items recommended by the attorney general and may incorporate other items."

The governor commented after being asked about the bombing injuries to John E. Fitzgerald Jr., attorney for underworld informer Joseph Barboza Baron.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson called on the governor to make a special request for laws on witness immunity, wire tapping, conspiracy penalties, more state troopers and more money for the Organized Crime Bureau.

Volpe also said that after studying the Arab-Israeli situation "I don't believe there will be a settlement in the immediate future. It could be months, it could be years before a settlement can be reached."

The governor also made these points:

- If the Senate redistricting bill now in the legislature is not much different than the one he vetoed a month ago, it probably will meet the same fate.
- He is going to New Hampshire for a Lincoln Day speech to a county Republican organization, and will make similar speeches in Indianapolis and at Villanova University.
- He has asked study of the Redman job corps center in New Bedford for possible conversion to a vocational high school when the federal program is phased out this summer.
- The governor as chairman of the National Governors Conference will go to Japan April 3 with a delegation of governors, and "subsequently we will be—I expect—going to Vietnam."

Persons willing to volunteer time to secure signatures from Amherst area voters in order to place the name of Sen. Eugene McCarthy, Dem. of Minnesota, on the ballot of the Massachusetts Democratic primary as a candidate for President of the United States, are invited to meet on Saturday, Feb. 3rd at 2 p.m. at Johnson Chapel, Amherst Coll.

This campaign for signatures will go on during the month of February. Instruction for neighborhood canvassing will be given by a committee headed by Prof. Colby Dempsey.

UMass Students Given Opportunity To Study Abroad Next Year

The University of Massachusetts offers students a unique opportunity to study at a leading European university. The students study under the auspices of the University of Massachusetts with both American and European professors, with no difficulty in transferring credits, and at a very modest cost.

The University of Massachusetts' Atlantic Studies Center in Freiburg, Germany, welcomes the applications of all qualified University of Massachusetts students of the humanities and social sciences. American students attend classes with both American and European students. Although the program is primarily conceived for graduate students, qualified undergraduates will also be accepted.

A preparatory course in the German language is starting for those students planning to attend Freiburg next fall. There is still time to enroll in this six hour, six credit course, German 386. The course will be offered at hours to be arranged for the convenience of the participants. Students interested in this course should inquire immediately in the German office, Machmer Hall E-20 or contact Mrs. Edith Ehrlich, telephone 545-2574.

There are many important advantages of this program. It is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts, thereby eliminating difficulties in transferring course credits usually associated with such foreign study programs. Some scholarship aid is available. It is the least expensive of all overseas year study programs. Long vacations and intersessions provide generous time for personal travel in Europe. Many students are able to live in private homes in Freiburg and enjoy an opportunity to become acquainted with German families. Finally, Freiburg is situated in a picturesque location with easy access to most other European centers.

For further information contact Professor Paulsen or Professor Ellert in the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures, Machmer Hall, University of Massachusetts.

U.S. to Continue Bombing Until North Viet Gives Better Sign

WASHINGTON (AP)—The bombing of North Vietnam will continue, President Johnson said Thursday, until the enemy gives some better sign that a halt would not mean more terrorism and aggression.

As it is, Johnson said, to call off the bombing now would mean a harder and longer war, and the loss of more American lives.

While the bombing cannot keep the enemy from ultimately moving into battle position, Johnson said, "it can reduce his momentum. It can keep many of his men off the backs of our men."

And so, Johnson said, "Until we have some better sign than these last few days have provided that he will not step up his terrorism and aggression if we halt the bombing, we shall continue to give our men the protection it affords."

Johnson voiced this stand as he presented the Medal of Honor to Air Force Maj. Merlyn H. Dethlefsen, of Derby, Kan., who took part in raids against North Vietnam's missile complex.

Pilot Relives Brainwashing

LAKE ZURICH, Ill. (AP) — A former U. S. Army helicopter pilot who was held prisoner by the North Koreans in 1963 told Thursday of beatings and relentless questioning by his captors.

"I hope that they don't treat the 83 crew members of the USS 'Puebio' like they treated us," said Carleton W. Voltz.

Voltz and another American captain, Ben Stutts, were captured by the Communists in May 1963. Voltz said their copter was downed, apparently by gunfire, after it strayed over the South Korean border into North Korea because of poor radar conditions. In an AP interview, Voltz said "the copter barely touched the ground before at least 100 soldiers surrounded the craft.

"The soldiers, mostly young men, knocked us around, tied us up and put rice sacks over our heads.

"They took us to a small prison. The cells were filthy and too small to lie down in.

"That's when the questioning started, day and night. They would interrogate for three hours, let me sleep for an hour and then ask questions for five hours. They asked everything from my name and rank to when I graduated from school and what kind of family I had.

He said that after five days he was taken to a secluded house where the interrogation continued. This time, he said, by real professionals.

"For instance, there was a big 6-foot tall North Korean sergeant with calloused hands that was an expert at torturing without leaving marks," he said.

Voltz said he spent the next four months without leaving the house. He slept in one room, his interrogators in another. He said there was a full platoon of guards assigned just to watch him.

"That was one of the worst parts. I was never alone," he said. "They constantly watched me and questioned me. I became so physically and mentally exhausted that when asked my name, it took about eight seconds to answer."

LBJ Asks for More Student Aid Offset By Reduced Building Funds

WASHINGTON (CPS)—President Johnson has asked Congress for modest increases in federal student aid programs during Fiscal 1969, but the increases will be offset by severe reductions in higher education construction funds.

In his budget message to Congress this week, the President requested an increase of $112 million for existing student financial aid programs. But the budget shows a decrease of $82 million in the amount of federal funds for construction grants to colleges.

The Administration's budget also asks $23 million for proposed new legislation in the area of federal assistance to students. This apparently refers to President Johnson's promise in his State of the Union Message that he will recommend passage of an Educational Opportunity Act "to step up our drive to break down financial barriers separating our young people from college."

Details of this $23-million student aid legislation will be included in the President's education message, which will be sent to Congress within the next few weeks.

The Administration's 1969 budget request also includes an increase of about $86 million for educational research in the Office of Education, and an increase of nearly $70 million for teacher training.

About $18 million of the increase for teacher training is designated for expanding the Teacher Corps, which received a severe financial beating by Congress this year.

Despite these increases, the budget outlook for education in Fiscal 1969 remains gloomy for two major reasons:

- As a result of the rising costs of the war in Vietnam, a fiscally conservative mood prevails in Congress, and cutbacks are expected in nearly all of the Administration's requests.
- Higher education presently is suffering not only from the lack of sufficient appropriations in Fiscal 1968, but also from the across-the-board cutbacks in federal spending ordered by Congress late last year. Higher education construction funds, for example, were cut by about $150 million this year, about one-third of the entire year's budget appropriation.

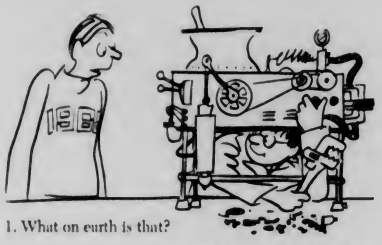
Wilbur Cohen, Undersecretary for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, described the Administration's budget request as "large but constrained." He said the Administration decided to give priority to "programs involving people and research rather than to bricks and mortar."



Cohen conceded that the unmet needs in education "are very great," and he added, "There will be unmet needs for years to come. But this budget will enable us to continue the forward thrust in the major programs."

The increases in federal aid to students are spread over a number of different programs, resulting in only modest increases for each program.

The President asked Congress to appropriate $149.6 million for educational opportunity grants to about 284,000 needy undergraduate students, as well as $8.5 million for contracts to identify and encourage needy youths to go to college.

He also requested $193.4 million for national defense loans to about 408,000 graduate and undergraduate students; $109.7 million for advances for reserve funds and interest payments for 750,000 college students under the insured loan program; $145.5 million for work-study grants for about 228,000 students; and $15 million under proposed legislation for project grants to institutions for recruitment, counseling, tutoring, and other services for disadvantaged students in college.

"No matter how great be the resources we commit to the struggle, we cannot provide the South Vietnamese with the will to survive as an independent nation . . . or with the ability and self-discipline a people must have to govern themselves." — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Senator Kennedy Is Named Chairman of Veterans Committee

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was named Thursday as chairman of the Senate veterans sub-committee.

The appointment was made by Sen. Lister Hill, D-Ala., chairman of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee of which the vets group is a part.

Kennedy succeeds Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., who decided to drop the subcommittee chairmanship because of his work as chairman of the Public Works Committee.

At his first official act in the new post, Kennedy introduced 2 administration vets bills and promised quick action on them.

One would offer extra benefits to vets who go into public service such as police work, teaching of poor children, hospital work and youth programs.

The other would allow vets with service-connected disabilities to participate in part-time vocational rehabilitation programs. Now they must take full-time training.

Asians React to Attacks Spreading in Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) Some Asian nations reacted Thursday with shock, anger and concern to the Communist attacks spreading across South Vietnam.

Thailand, engaged in fighting Communist guerrillas of its own, noted that the latest Viet Cong offensive fitted in with a growing Communist drive in Asia.

The army commander in chief, Gen. Praphas Charusathien, said the Communists had attacked government forces in Burma, Laos, Thailand and South Korea. He urged the non-Communist world to go on "an offensive politically and militarily instead of always being on the defensive."

In the Philippines, the Viet Cong attack on the Philippine Embassy in Saigon set off anger and sparked a demand in Congress that Filipine combat units be sent to Vietnam.

While such action was unlikely, initial reaction provided an unexpected boost to President Ferdinand E. Marcos campaign to win congressional support for a bill to maintain the Philippines' 2,000-man noncombat commitment in Vietnam. One Philippine congressman called for sending two battalion combat teams to fight along sided the allied forces.

Japan, worried over developments in Korea arising from North Korea's seizure of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo, was shaken by the Viet Cong offensive. But it viewed the latest Communist assaults as "obviously part of a carefully laid out plan prepared well in advance."

Kinya Niiseki, spokesman for Japan's Foreign Ministry, said Communist attacks on South Vietnamese cities was unlikely to make a "major change in the course" of the war. He said the assaults were "launched with the aim of exerting a political and psychological influence.

Nationalist China's vice president and premier, C.K. Yen, said U.S. forces in Vietnam were engaged in a "bloody battle in the cause of freedom."

Nationalist government officials and military commanders held the view that the North Korean seizure of the Pueblo and the Vet Cong attacks in Vietnam were masterminded by Red China. Hsieh Jen-chao, a leading member of the Legislative Yuan or parliament, said the Vietnamese issue should be settled with Peking, center of Communist aggression in Asia.

In Indonesia, Foreign Minister Adam Malik said "for the moment Indonesia will not take any initiative toward finding a solution for the Vietnam war."

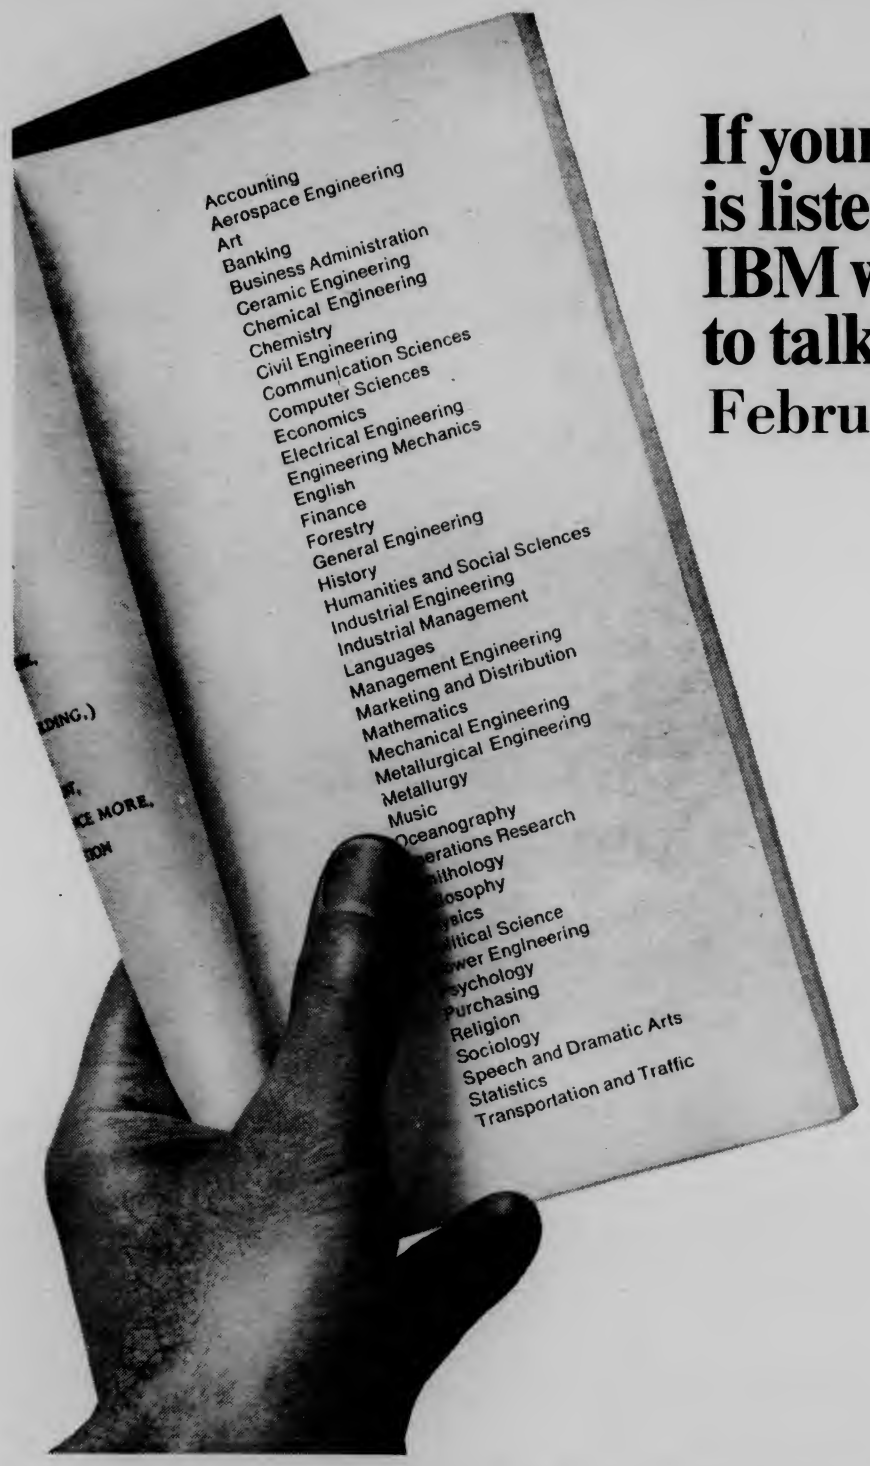
Lily Pad Features Greg Dahl

The Pioneer Valley Folklore Society is holding an open "get acquainted" meeting this evening, at the Smith College Lilly Pad. The meeting, an informal folksong workshop, begins at 8 p.m. and will feature two performances by folk-singer Greg Dahl.

The Folklore Society, a four-college organization since its founding in 1959 by Buffy Sainte-Marie, Bill Keith and others, is open to all "sharing a common interest in the folklore of any or all cultures."



Among its past activities have been the presentation of numerous folk concerts by such artists as Pete Seeger, Odetta and Carolyn Hester as well as annual Spring Folk Festivals.

Greg Dahl, folksinger from Harvard University will appear through the courtesy of the Lilly Pad Committee and present a program which includes songs learned first hand from the Spanish Indians of Bolivia in the summer of 1966.

The Society extends an invitation to all interested to participate in this meeting. Musical ability or talent is not required, but guitars, banjos, autoharps, etc. will be especially welcome. Four-college bus transportation is available from the Student Union at 7:30 p.m.

1967-68 Student Handbooks

"Swing-Shift Freshmen," transfer students and other newly entering students should pick up a copy of the Student Handbook in the Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore.

If your major is listed here, IBM would like to talk with you

February 7

Sign up for an interview at your placement office—even if you're headed for graduate school or military service.
Why is IBM interested in so many different people?

The basic reason is growth. Information processing is the fastest growing, fastest changing major industry in the world. IBM products are being used to solve problems in government, business, law, education, medicine, science, the humanities—just about any area you can name. We need people with almost every kind of background to help our customers solve their problems. That's why we'd like to talk with you.

What you can do at IBM

Whatever your major, you can do a lot of good things at IBM. Change the world (maybe). Make money (certainly). Continue your education (through any of several plans, including a Tuition Refund Program). And have a wide choice of places to work (we have over 300 locations throughout the U.S.).

What to do next

We'll be on campus to interview for careers in Marketing, Computer Applications, Programming, Research, Design and Development, Manufacturing, Field Engineering, and Finance and Administration. If you can't make a campus interview, send an outline of your interests and educational background to J. E. Bull, IBM Corporation, 425 Park Avenue, N. Y., N. Y. 10022. Varsity Relay Team to Compete In Knights of Columbus Track Meet

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

Track Coach Ken O'Brien recently received word that the UMass two mile varsity relay team has been invited to compete in the Knight's of Columbus Track Meet at Madison Square Garden in New York tonight.

The four men representing UMass in the relay are senior Co-captain Greg Bowman, senior John Anderson, sophomore Dave Evans, and junior Diego Gonzalez. Competing against the UMass squad will be entries from Fordham, Iona, Providence and Tufts.

This same group of UMass runners finished twelfth overall in the two mile relay at the BAA meet in Boston last Saturday. Also at the BAA the varsity one mile relay turned in a good performance but finished in a tie for fourteenth in a close field despite winning in their heats.

The UMass track team will be split in two groups, the Maroon and the White, for an inter-squad meet tomorrow. The meet should produce many good performances and some excellent individual battles.

Ron Wayne, Paul Hoss and Greg Bowman will be competing in the mile. Wayne, and Gonzalez, will be battling in the 1000, and Leo Duart will challenge Charlie Lang in the two mile. Talented freshman sprinter Walter Mayo will miss the race due to an injury, but the dash will still have two speedsters as Ed Heywood, a freshman, competes against Co-captain Steve Burrell.

After the meet, all the competitors will meet to select the outstanding athlete of the meet. The winner will receive an award. The White, defending champions by a 60-51 marginal victory last year, will start in Boyden Gym at 1 p.m with the sprints, hurdles, high jump and shot put. The meet then moves to the Cage for the running events.

Frosh Hoopsters, Hampered By Loss of Griffith, Meet AIC

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

Hoping to overcome from its troubles on the road, the freshman basketball team travels to Springfield tonight to take on the American International College freshmen. The Butova Gymnasium battle begins at 6:30 p.m.

UMass will be hampered tonight and for the rest of the season by the absence of 6'6 starting forward Lou Griffith. Griffith sustained torn ligaments in his right elbow during practice Tuesday and will be in a cast for six weeks.

His loss to the team cannot be minimized. Coach Peter Broaca of the frosh hoopsters said of Griffith, "His loss really hurts. He was coming along very well and starting to play really good ball. It's really too bad we have to lose him."

The damage Griffith's injury does to the team height-wise will never be felt more than against A.I.C. The Yellow Jackets feature a mobile 6'11 starting center, Al Carter, originally from New York and more recently from Comerce High School in Springfield. Coach Broaca stated, He is a definite problem for us to contain."

A.I.C. is reputed to be a fine test for the Little Redman cagers.

Redman Gymnasts Look for Win Against West Point Cadets

By JAN CURLEY
Sports Day Editor

After a sparkling, although losing performance against powerful Penn State last Saturday, the varsity gymnastics team travels to West Point, New York, tomorrow to take on the Cadets in a 2 p.m. meet.

Last year Army won by a point and a half. Based on this year's scores, the Redmen should be able to win, according to Coach Erik Kjeldsen.

The Redmen average 167 or 168 a meet. Coach Kjeldsen said "The way the team has looked in practice this week, they can do the job."

The first three events should prove to be the key to the competition. If the Redmen can win the floor exercises, the side horse and the rings, they stand a good chance of winning the meet. Army is stronger on the trampoline. "But if we hit on the trampoline, "Kjeldsen says, "we have an excellent chance to go all the way and win."

Redmen Seeking Revenge Against Yellow Jackets for 81-76 Upset

Last year a group of high-flying Yellow Jackets caught the UMass basketball team completely off guard and won a stunning 81-76 upset. The Redmen will have revenge in their minds tonight as they travel to Springfield for a game against AIC at 8:15. The game will be broadcast on WMUA.

AIC had their best team ever last year, going to the NCAA College Division tournament and finishing 19-6 for the whole season. This season, the Yellow Jackets are 11-2, with their only two losses coming ironically in their own Christmas Tournament. One of them was a 21-point defeat by Amherst.

Coach Bill Callahan has three of last year's starters back but suffered a big loss in the graduation of center Frank (Moose) Stronczek. Nevertheless, AIC is again one of New England's better small-college teams.

The Yellow Jacket's offense can be summed up in three words: run, run, run. And their defense can also be summed up in three words: press, press, press. UMass coach Jack Leaman said, "They will press every minute of every game."

Directing AIC's fast-breaking offense is senior guard Henry Payne. A local boy from Springfield, Payne is a flashy playmaker who specializes in fancy passes. A thin, 6'0, 150-pound co-captain, he can also score as evidenced by his 11.0 average.

Joining Payne in the backcourt is another returnee from last year, 6'1 co-captain Jim Miele. Miele is the best shooter on the team and is excellent from 10 to 15 feet. He leads the Yellow Jackets in scoring with a 15.3 average. Miele was most responsible for AIC's upset of UMass last year, as he never missed in the first half.

Up front, AIC uses a sophomore center, 6'3 New York City import Curtis Mitchell. Mitchell is a great leaper who paces the team in rebounding. He also shoots well from close in and has a 13.8 average.

One of the forward's is Rudy Wolters, the younger brother of former B.C. center Willie. Wolters, a 6'5 junior college transfer, hits the boards well and is occasionally a good shooter. He owns a 9.2 average.

The other forward is Larry Freed, a 6'4 senior letterman from Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Freed is used mainly for his rebounding ability, but if he gets the shot, he will take it. Freed, who averages 8.7, did a great job in the second half against UMass last year.

Callahan will often spell Miele and Payne in the backcourt by using 5'10 Bob Rutherford and 5'7 Alan Bush. Although they don't do too much scoring, they are both hustlers who work well on defense. Rutherford came off the bench to have a great night against Bates Wednesday.

UMass leads, 14-11, in the series, but AIC is always "up" for the Redmen since they are the biggest team on the Yellow Jackets' schedule. Last year, AIC was sky-high when they played UMass and got off to a big half-time lead. A Redman comeback in the second half fell short and the AIC rooters in the crowd were overjoyed.

Leaman will start the same lineup as in the UConn game. This includes Billy Tindall, Peter Gayeska, Joe DiSarcina and Ray Ellerbrook. And Leaman has finally found a permanent starter at that second forward spot that has given him trouble this year.

Gary Gasperack, whose play in the UConn game seems to have won him a permanent spot in the lineup, will start tonight. Actually, Gasperack will play more as guard since his best shot is from the key. Ellerbrook, a hustler on the baseline and a deadly shooter from medium range will play up front more.

UMass Wins Thriller Over UConn

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

It was a nice, high arching shot which seemed to stop at the top of its arc, and then head at a 45 degree angle for the hoop. When it finally dropped cleanly through the basket after what had seemed like an eternity, pandemonium broke loose in Curry Hicks Cage.

It was a 25-foot last second shot by Billy Tindall which gave UMass a 65-63 win over Connecticut Wednesday night. In fact, last second is not the word to describe it. If Tindall had held the ball for a silly millimeter longer, the buzzer would have sounded sending the game into overtime.

The importance of the pressure-packed win cannot be underestimated. By beating UConn, the Redmen stayed alive in the Yankee Conference race, moving back into a second place tie with Vermont. The Huskies dropped to fourth.

Even better was the emotional satisfaction for UMass of beating UConn. The Huskies had won the last seven games against the Redmen, including last year's 60-59 sizzler in which UMass outplayed Connecticut all the way until the last minute.

Wednesday night's game was nip and tuck most of the way, but it all boiled down to the last three minutes and 20 seconds. That was when UConn's Fred Malan tied the score at 63-all. Turnovers by both teams gave each a chance to go ahead in the next two minutes, but it was an offensive foul by UConn's John Crisp with 1:15 to go that gave the Redmen the ball for good.

Coach Jack Leaman's strategy here was to hold the ball for the last shot, since UMass couldn't possibly lose the game in regulation time and that one shot could win it. UConn, in the meantime, could not get too aggressive in trying to get the ball since a foul would send a Redman to a free throw line.

So UMass proceeded to work the ball around, watching the clock with one eye and the UConn defense with the other.

Gary Gasperack, who played probably the best game of his career, deviated from the one-shot strategy with 20 seconds left as he took an 18-footer. The shot wasn't good, but fortunately it went out of bounds off the hands of Crisp, so the Redmen had the ball with 19 seconds left.

They wasted the next 12 seconds, and after a time out the teams returned to the court with seven seconds left. It was obvious that UMass was going to play for one shot, but how they would do it depended on UConn coach Burr Carlson's strategy.

Leaman said yesterday that during that last time out he worked out two sets of strategy with the team, one if Connecticut played a man-to-man defense and one against a zone. It turned out that the Huskies were using a zone.

Since UConn was playing in a zone defense, Leaman said that his strategy was to get the ball to Tindall. "Who do you let take the last shot in a situation like that?" he asked. "The man with the most experience, right?" Besides, Leaman pointed out, Tindall had been playing a great second half in which he had hit six out of seven from the floor.

So with seven seconds left, the Redmen worked the ball around again with their eyes on the all-important clock and this time on Tindall, too. Billy was playing on the weak side, about 20 feet out. The strategy against this zone was to draw four UConn players to the strong side leaving Tindall one-on-one on Crisp.

That was exactly how it worked out, with the exception that Ray Ellerbrook's pass to Gasperack took up more time than the Redmen had counted on. But Gasperack fired the ball out to Tindall quick enough for him to get off the shot. A split second later the buzzer sounded, so with the ball in the air it was either a UMass victory or overtime.

Of course the shot went in, leaving some to say that it was a lucky desperation heave. Leaman disagreed with this vociferously, pointing out that it was their strategy to get the ball to Tindall in the first place.

No matter what kind of shot it was, it went in, giving UMass fans a game that they can talk about for a long, long time.

The Redmen still have their work cut out for them. They have to win the rest of their Conference games, including the UConn game at Storrs where they haven't won since the New Deal, and at the same time hope Rhode Island loses two games along the way. But Wednesday night's win has to be regarded as a start for a team which had lost three in a row beforehand.

Pucksters Hope to Even Record Against Vermont

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Hoping to revenge an earlier defeat, the UMass hockey team will journey to Burlington tomorrow to face off against the University of Vermont Catamounts.

Vermont opened UMass' season by beating the Redmen, 8-5, at Orr rink late in November. The Redmen trailed early in that game and only a late rally closed the gap to three goals.

JIM O'BRIEN
UMass star in first Vermont game.

Jim O'Brien starred for UMass in the first Vermont game. He came up with a three goal hat trick to pace the Redmen attack.

The Catamounts have had an up and down season so far. They have beaten Amherst, 10-4, and UConn, 8-6, and lost to Brown by a score of only 2-1. Brown owns a victory over national power Boston University.

Vermont has also been beaten, 6-1, by Army and has fallen to Colby and Bowdoin.

Sophomore Jeff MacLaughlin of Newton, Mass., and senior Jack Semler of Salisbury, Conn., are the Catamount scoring leaders. MacLaughlin is the leading goal-getter with ten, and Semler is the top play-maker with ten assists.

Russ Watson of Milton and John Lawrence of Troy N.Y., share the goaltending duties for Vermont. In five games, Watson has a 1.4 average while in seven games Lawrence has a 2.9 average.

The next home game for the Redmen will be against Army, Feb. 9 and the team is hopeful that this year the Cadets can be beaten.

McCarthy Addresses Collegiate Editors

Senator Urges 'Join the Fray'

By RICHARD S. KLINE
News Editor

McCarthy, in a short speech, called upon "college editors to join the fray," and strive for "political freedom." He said that "In 1968 they (students) are prepared to stand right up..." express their views and "take chances."

Taking a light look at the campaign, yet maintaining a serious note, the Senator said some people feel that he does not project a good image. "If you had more charisma, they say...look at Romney...or Nixon...and my principle opponent in the Democratic Primary; especially upon the students."

"What we're dealing with," McCarthy told the gathering, "is the projection of America into the future." He stated that a threat anywhere in the world or an outbreak of violence is regarded as a threat to America. And "if elected, McCarthy said, "I would change the name of the Department of Defense to the Department of Offense."

It was just seconds after McCarthy had finished his prepared speech that he was confronted by three young men. One, peace activist Jerry Rubin who was one of the principle organizers of the march on the Pentagon last Fall, waved a newspaper in his face that headlined the freeing of 2000 Viet Cong prisoners.

"What do you think of that, Senator?" Rubin yelled. "People are free!" McCarthy calmly and somewhat sarcastically answered, "What do you think of that?"

The three intruders proceeded to sit down on the stage with McCarthy and Rubin and the other members of the group heckled with gestures while the Senator answered questions from the audience. The gestures were primarily the New Left's "V" sign and the waving of the newspaper headlines.

McCarthy answered questions from the floor although the stage had been invaded by the uninvited guests. He drew prolonged applause when one member of the college press apologized for the display of Rubin and the others.

The Senator said during the questioning that "Vietnam has implications in other areas," and cited the problems of the cities particularly with regard to ghettos and other urban problems. He also stated that the war should be a Vietnamese effort and that if we stop the bombing and the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong negotiate, fine. If they don't however, then we should still withdraw.

Throughout the last few sentences of his answer to the withdrawal question, a slow, pulsating drum beat could be heard in the backgrounds. As it became louder to the audience and to the Senator, a group of the New Left were seen carrying a casket in front of the stage and McCarthy. McCarthy did not attempt to deal with this final insult and later said, "I expected something like this."

The casket had McCarthy for President stickers on it and when put down and turned over by its bearers, an American flag and McCarthy for President buttons fell to the floor. One demonstrator attempted to burn the flag and was "laid out," as one observer put it, by an N.B.C. camera man.

'Daily Collegian' Plans Withdrawal From U. S. Student Press Association

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Pending the results of a full investigation of the United States Student Press Association (USSPA) Conference this past weekend, the editors of the Daily Collegian announced plans to withdraw from the organization.

Attending the conference from the Daily Collegian were Editor-in-Chief Chet Weinerman, Managing Editor Jack Dean, News Editor Richard S. Kline and reporter Bill Dickinson. All expressed extreme displeasure with the conference and the way that it was organized.

NEWSWEEK'S representative and reporter at the conference, Denny Crimmins.

Arriving at the conference at the Sheraton-Park Hotel on Thursday afternoon, the UMass group and the numerous other delegations were confronted by members of the New Left and a hippie contingent mostly from a settlement known as Drop City.

The conference title, Alternative Futures and Present Choices, was intended to stimulate the minds of the editors and the reporters at the conference, but according to Daily Collegian Managing Editor Jack Dean, "There was no direction and the only goal seemed to be shock value. It had only a negative effect."

"Some of the leaders of the USSPA had good intentions," said Dean, "but they failed to communicate them." He was referring to the light shows, and mind-expanding games, as well as lectures and seminars presented at the conference.

With the aim of presenting "alternative futures" and making college editors "confront themselves" conference coordinator David Lloyd-Jones admitted that he "set up a fake Vietnam debate" at the primary meeting of the conference. One conference official stated that Jones had "expressed a desire to run the whole show" and that he had arranged the appearance of the Leftist "Liberation News Service" who showed North Vietnamese and NLF films to the crowd of editors.

After the films, a voice over the loudspeaker system identified himself as a "Captain Jorgenson of the D.C. police" and ordered all spectators to immediately leave the area or be subject to arrest. It was later learned through investigation that the voice was a part of the scheme of those presenting the films.

The entire incident of the films and the subsequent police hoax came immediately after a resolution to withdraw from Vietnam had been tabled by the members of USSPA.

British Newspapers Rumor Westmoreland Is On Way Out

LONDON (AP) — British newspapers said yesterday there are strong demands behind the scenes in Washington for firing Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

The five-million circulation London newspaper The People carried a front page story by foreign editor Terence Lancaster under the banner headline: "LBJ Probes Great Vietnam Blunder."

"Behind the scenes there are strong demands for the sacking of General William Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam and the man who gave assurances that the Viet Cong build-up had been under observation for months," the article said. "And what became clear yesterday was that there had been massive mistakes in Vietnam."

"General Westmoreland is a personal friend of the President, he calls him 'Westy', but whether he stays or is sacked, he is now a political liability for Mr. Johnson.

"For whatever warnings the general may have issued, he is clearly nailed as the man in charge when American prestige in Southeast Asia sank to its lowest point."

The Sunday Times said in an article by its correspondent in Washington, Frederic Collins: "Underground criticism of Westmoreland, who for public purposes is accorded status as a hero, focuses on two points.

ANTI-McCARTHY and anti-war new left demonstrators forced presidential hopeful Eugene McCarthy to leave his press conference with the editors of college papers when they entered the hall bearing a casket and beating a death march on a drum. (Left). When directly in front of the podium where the Senator was speaking, the demonstrators lowered the casket which had McCarthy for President stickers on it to the floor (middle). They then over-turned the casket and emptied out the buttons and an American flag (Right.) The protest was aimed directly at the American involvement in the war in Vietnam and the Senator.

Clarification Made On Winter Carnival

By RON LABRECQUE
Specials Editor

The Winter Carnival program of entertainment has recently been besieged by rumors concerning entertainers who have been contracted to appear in concert.

In hopes of clarifying the situation, Junior Class President Wayne Thomas spoke to the Daily Collegian yesterday. The concert which seems to have caused the most concern is the Sunday evening show which was originally billed as "The Righteous Brothers" show.

Thomas said that although the supporting acts which were travelling with the show are no longer a part of the program, the Junior Class has signed a contract with the nationally famous rock group "The Byrds."

It has been confirmed that one of the original Righteous Brothers of "Souls and Inspiration" and "You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling" fame has left the act. However, Thomas assured the Daily Collegian of the talent of the replacement.

According to talent agents, extensive auditions were held for a number of months and the "new" Righteous Brother has been training for almost a year to take his place in the act.

Research by the Winter Carnival Committee has found that 41 college concert contracts were signed last Fall before the change in the act was made public. The Committee called 15 colleges within a 1500 mile radius of UMass who had signed the "old" Righteous Brothers and found absolutely no dissatisfaction in the switch. Thomas added that at this time the Righteous Brothers are contracted for 64 appearances.

A Winter Carnival Committee member pointed out that musical groups are constantly changing members without damaging the talent or distinctive sound of the group and "the switch in the Righteous Brother act is no exception." Thomas said that "those expecting to hear the unique sound of the original

Gen. Ford Speaks at Amherst

By Richard Lane

UMass faculty member William Wallace Ford told supporters of Senator Eugene McCarthy at Amherst College Saturday afternoon that, "no one knows how far he can go."

McCarthy, (Democrat-Minn.), is seeking the party's presidential nomination this election year and also is campaigning for the Bay State's spring primary.

Speaking for the Pioneer Valley Citizens for McCarthy Committee, the retired Army brigadier general commented on recent statements that nothing would come of McCarthy's campaign saying, "We don't believe it. We dare not believe it."

"His strength can be carried by others if he cannot go all the way. Whatever he does will not be lost," continued Ford.

The former Army leader's brief speech highlighted what was termed by one committee member as an "organizational meeting to get signatures for McCarthy" on the ballot in the upcoming Massachusetts primary April 30. At the meeting it was announced that Sen. McCarthy would, in fact, speak on campus or elsewhere in the area in February.

Ford stated that "this campaign for signatures is much broader than that." He said the Minnesota Senator can get "many more than the required number" for his name to appear on the ballot and this is "just the first step."

The University faculty member stated that McCarthy's success in the primaries would depend on the "big, big independent vote." "Elections are won or lost by it," he went on, and it is to this segment of voters that the Pioneer Valley Citizens for McCarthy group and the Amherst Signatures for McCarthy organization will be aiming their campaign.

In an interview with the Daily Collegian Ford went into further detail on parts of his speech.

Asked just what more specifically he thought Eugene McCarthy can do for the country Ford stated, "He gives to people the choice of deciding and/or changing foreign policy in a legitimate way" which "does not involve violence, civil disobedience or impudence."

The nation is in a "political nightmare" presently, Ford continued, because of its "paranoidal preoccupation with war," although "segments of the American people are concerned with domestic problems."

Ford stated his belief that the war is wrong politically because "we are alienating our former allies and our own people;" and militarily, because it "cannot be quickly won." "It is a long proposition" that will bleed us white."

And although Senator McCarthy's stand on the war will not be the only issue involved in the upcoming campaign, Ford stated that he felt McCarthy's views on the domestic scene are "sound". The Vietnam conflict "must be settled, first before others can be gotten to," he stated.

Righteous Brothers will not be disappointed."

In response to charges that an exhorbitant price is being charged for the Johnny Carson Concert, Thomas said that the Committee had no alternative in deciding on the price due to the cost of bringing a show of this nature to campus. He added that the admission charge is "not at all unreasonable when compared with the amount of entertainment it will buy."

U.S.SPA CONFERENCE . . .

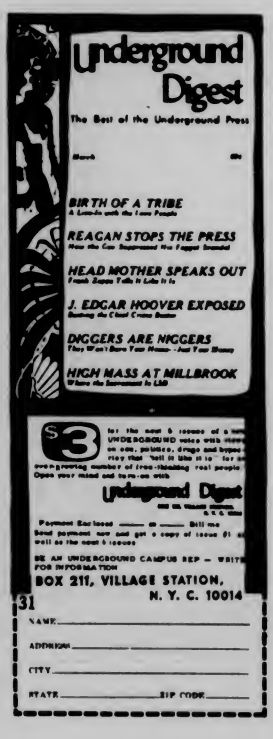
Newsweek magazine, who backed the conference to the tune of $15,000, was one of its principle backers. Said Denny Crimmins of the Newsweek staff, "We cannot intercede in the conference . . . we back it financially and then hands off."

One of the highlights of the conference, a speech and news conference by presidential hopeful Senator Eugene McCarthy, was marred by anti-McCarthy Leftist demonstration which caused McCarthy to leave the hall abruptly. Said Crimmins on the demonstration (speaking unofficially for Newsweek), "It upset us personally . . . Newsweek had to apologize to Senator McCarthy."

After the afternoon demonstration and subsequent events, hotel officials called for police to patrol the downstairs area of the hotel. It was suggested that the McCarthy demonstration was planned by the USSPA people as was the afternoon events, but it was emphatically denied by association leadership that they had any knowledge of it.



The two privately called meetings, the editors of more than a dozen college dailies (including the Daily Collegian) met and discussed withdrawing from USSPA and the formation of a private collegiate daily paper association. Although no concrete plans were forthcoming, a number of proposals are being worked on.

Bids to be Asked For Grad Center

Bids will be called for this Friday on an estimated $14.1 million three building graduate research center at UMass, it was announced by Governor Volpe's office.

The structures will include a 17 story chemistry building, laboratories, offices, classrooms, a three-story computer center and a three-story library science center.

General contracts will be asked by March 15 and subcontracts by March 17.

Prof. Ehrmann to Speak On West German Politics

"Rebel with a Cause: Student Politics in Western Germany" is the title of a lecture to be given by Dartmouth Coll. Prof. Henry Ehrmann, Wednesday, at 4 p.m. in Room 120, School of Business Administration.

Prof. Ehrmann is Joel Parker Professor of Law and Political Science and chairman of the government department at Dartmouth College. He joined the Dartmouth faculty as professor of government in 1961 after having taught at the University of Colorado since 1947.

He studied law at Berlin and Freiburg and worked in Paris as an associate of the Amsterdam International Institute of Social History. He joined the New School of Social Research in New York when he came to the U.S. in 1940.

In 1964 Prof. Ehrmann collaborated with James B. Conant in a Ford Foundation - sponsored survey of the social studies teaching in the Berlin school system for which he spent several months visiting schools in Berlin and West Germany. His report was published in Germany in 1965.

Professor Henry Ehrmann

Prof. Ehrmann has authored two books, Organized Business in France and French Labor from Popular Front to Liberation, and edited several others. He has also contributed numerous articles and reviews to professional journals in this country and abroad, including an article on U.S. government to a new volume of the French Encyclopedia.

The lecture is sponsored by the UM department of government and is open to the public without charge.

Gain Made in Pueblo Release

SEOUL (AP) — A secret U.S.-North Korean meeting yesterday may have made "substantial headway" toward release of the USS Pueblo's crew, including agreement on returning the dead and injured, South Korean sources reported.

A Seoul radio station quoted a South Korean government source as speculating that "a certain major agreement" might have been reached.

A spokesman for U.S. forces in Korea neither confirmed nor denied reports of a meeting Sunday at Panmunjom. One such meeting was held Friday without result, and a South Korean radio station reported another was held Saturday.

According to one South Korean account, the Communists agreed Sunday to turn over a body or bodies from the crew of the captive intelligence ship.

Others said the North Koreans planned to release the crew but not the ship and had offered as a first step to turn over the dead and injured if the United States would admit the vessel had intruded into North Korean waters.

North Korean Maj. Gen. Park Choong-kook told a Military Armistice Commission meeting at Panmunjom Jan. 24 that "several" crewmen were either killed or injured resisting Communists who seized the ship off Wonsan Jan. 23. He did not specify the number killed or injured. President Johnson said Friday that one man had died.

At the same time, Korean officials and legislators complained that the United States was showing too much concern about the Pueblo incident and not enough to the attempt last month by North Korean infiltrators to kill President Chung Hee Park or to South Korean requests for military modernization.

Park Choon-kyoo, chairman of the National Assembly's Foreign Affairs Committee, declared Saturday that South Korea should consider withdrawing its 48,000 troops from Vietnam if the United States maintains its "lukewarm attitude."

But Defense Minister Kim Sung-eun told the assembly the increase in border tensions did not yet necessitate withdrawal from Vietnam. Replying to claims that modernization of the armed forces is being delayed, he said such criticism is premature until the U.S. military aid program is fully known.

Where Is the USSPA Headed?

The United States Student Press Association conference held in Washington this past weekend could probably be called a "happening," though according to some the term "psycho-drama" would be more appropriate. From what we can gather, the National Executive Board hoped to "open our minds" by using the structure and content of the conference sessions to the best psychological advantage.

PETERSON

The general content of the whole program and its discussions conveyed a definite impression of non-direction which nurtured frustration and confusion in the minds of the delegates. This was then played upon in the Saturday afternoon general meeting when the 500 editors were presented with two opposing resolutions on the Vietnam war, with both sides being carefully manipulated by the USSPA leadership. Heated, confused debate ensued over the poorly worded resolutions, until the whole matter was tabled. Then the radical element took over with its anti-war films and loudspeakers. All order broke down and the meeting disbanded shortly afterwards.

Had the experiment then been explained and discussed perhaps the USSPA leadership might have deserved credit for masterminding one of the most successful experiments in the history of college journalism. But nothing was explained, and as General Secretary David Peterson later explained, the situation got "out of hand" when various uninvited elements staged a protest during Senator Eugene McCarthy's speech. This illustrated total lack of courtesy and respect for a US senator, the United States, and its flag.

PHIL SEMAS
Editor of CPS

More central to the issue, however, is the question of the political involvement of a group which, according to its constitution, should not be and cannot be politically involved. The Daily Collegian recently dropped the College Press Service (CPS), the organization's news service, for three reasons: a price increase, a marked concentration on the Vietnam war, and an abandoning of objective reporting in what appeared to be an attempt to slant the news against the war.

Said editor Chet Weinerman after the conference, "We now feel justified in questioning the veracity of statements issued by CPS under the guise of news. The leadership would appear to be attempting to convey its own political views through this medium."

Someone definitely appeared to be in control of the organization this weekend, but whether it was the USSPA executive board, Peter Rabbit and his Drop City entourage, or Ray Mungo and his Liberation News Service (LNS) crew we are still not sure. And until we do find out, we will reserve making a final judgement on those persons involved, particularly David Lloyd-Jones the conference co-ordinator.

However, pending a complete report on the expenditures and events of the past weekend, from the National Executive Board, the editors of the Daily Collegian have tentatively agreed that there is no apparent reason or need to retain membership in the United States Student Press Association.

Down This Way

The Rubbing of the Victim's Heart

YOU CAN GET a copy of Conrad Aiken's Thee (with drawing by Leonard Baskin) at any bookshop for five dollars. A short time ago, you could get the book free by subscribing to The Massachusetts Review. When we checked last, there was one copy of Thee left in a Northampton bookshop. It was signed by Mr. Aiken and Mr. Baskin. The price was twenty-five dollars.

Neither artist needs the extra money. Why, then, are some collectors willing to pay twenty dollars more than the retail price for a pencil connection with two famous men?

A friend of ours, who used to believe that the rubbing of an artist's hand across a piece of paper gave a sort of immortality to the person who touched the same spot, came running up to us recently, drew us aside, and said, as if secretly, "You know, I just bought a wood engraving by Baskin. You should see it, it's beautiful! It's the head of William Blake! It cost me a small fortune, but it's beautiful!"

We asked him what he meant.

"First of all, the engraving is intricate. The head bulges from a black, coffin-shaped background. The forehead and the top of the head are large and bone white. The eyes, ear, nose, mouth, and chin are mazes of fine black lines, engraved so closely, so tightly, that the concentration is drawn especially to the eyes, which are closed and which bulge out of the head. I have put it up, and I keep going back to it. Sometimes, I stare so that it nearly tears the heart out of me."

We understand our friend's delight. There is more to art than the crow quill pen, than the water colors or oils, than the burin or chisel. There is blood behind the black, the white, the stone—the blood of the artist with vision—the artist who gives blood to the vision and makes it come across. If the holder of the book, the incisive eye, is drained of a quart of blood by a block of wood and some ink, he may be shamelessly self-indulgent, but his masturbation has a constant rhythm and depth.

The Rime of the Ancient Mariner

Campus Comment

The Free University

To the editor:

The impending establishment of a Free University in Amherst (see the D. C. dated Jan. 31) raises a fundamental question: Granted that students are willing to spend cash and time in order to be able to study—and discuss academic subjects — outside the framework of the State University; what is it that impels them to do so? In other words, what is it that is so wrong with state-sponsored education that students are anxiously looking for an alternative?

Such questions have a variety of answers. In the first place, we have the fawning attitude adopted by the State University towards a number of celebrated authorities whom I would describe as Pied Pipers. In economics there is Keynes; in biology Darwin; and in philosophy and psychology a whole bevy. While reading the works of any of them, and while listening to discussions centered around their works, I am always of the impression that money, power and prestige are in all doubtful cases allowed to override the dictates of conscience and unattached search for truth.

In the second place, the State University—and I suspect most universities and colleges elsewhere—has made a sham of principles such as those of discussion and creativity. Very few students have the courage to raise their hands in class and contradict their teachers. And as to creativity, look what has happened to debates, term papers and seminar opening speeches.

Intellectual honesty within any of those disciplines would require (1) that students have a precise general idea as to what is in a topic before they select it. (2) That they be emphatically discouraged from defending any position with which they do not sympathize. (3) That divergence from officially approved standpoints be respected. (4) That contributions be judged only according to criteria such as those of clarity, soundness of reasoning, agreement with facts, and non-suppression of relevant facts and arguments. (5) That the introduction of "padding" for the sake of length be discouraged. (6) That students who have no strong desire to speak or write be allowed, without ruinous penalization, to remain silent.

Such principles are being violated all the time. Therefore, hail to the Free University, and let us hope it will compel the State University to change its ways.

To the Class of '71

To the editor:

During the last Class of 1971 Executive Council meeting I announced my resignation as Vice President of our class. Academic reasons prohibit me from completing the term of office as Vice President.

These last few months have provided me with much experience and practical knowledge of the office. Working with the Executive Council and other officers has been a great pleasure. After my academic problems have been resolved, I would appreciate the opportunity to serve the class in the future.

Joel Wilson

A Glaring Ailment

To the editor:

In regard to Mrs. Lederle's letter to the Daily Collegian, I would like to say that as one of the freshmen who feel like neither a number nor yet a student, I understand the lack of personal contact of which Lois Bloom speaks. It is not the fault of the faculty, but more accurately a glaring ailment of "the Giant's" system. Computerized schedules, endless lines, hotel-like dorms, and student numbers give the university student the feeling of being in the stomach of a four-year function machine instead of a college.

Here, the individual is often sacrificed for the sake of the community, both the present one and that of the future. In short, a university concerns itself chiefly with efficiency to better equip the multitude, and secondly with quality, or so it sometime appears. Perhaps this helps to prepare us for the "big world", but must this preparation obliterate the joy of the college experience itself? In reading the article in Time, this is one aspect that is sorely underemphasized.

A university is not conducive, furthermore, to the taking of initiatives, either on the part of the professor or student. Too often, personal contact ends between the two with the close of the semester. By virtue of the fact that the University is attempting to remedy this problem, it shows recognition of its existence, but to recognize it and to remedy the symptoms with faculty fellowships and open office hours is not to eradicate the disease, despite the sincerity behind the attempts.

I ask Mrs. Lederle, therefore, to have patience with what she sees as our indifference. It is not a reflection upon the University, but upon the university system. And in turn, I commend the faculty's efforts to make the system a little bit easier to accept.

Resident Halls Given Power To Collect Dues

By PETE WARD

Senate Reporter

The Student Senate has voted to give the power of the purse to Residence Hall student governments. By passing S26 last Wednesday, the Senate empowered Residence governments to enforce the collection of dorm dues by all students living in the respective halls. A large measure of discretion was left to the individual governments in that they may decide for themselves whether or not their dues will be manditory.

If a Residence Hall decides to enforce collection, it must follow several procedures voted by the Senate to ensure that the budgets for which the taxes are collected have been drawn up and implemented in a democratic manner.

In other recent actions, the Student Senate approved the constitution of the Orchard Area newspaper, The Hobbit but killed a proposal that the faculty advisors for the publication be approved by the President prior to assuming their duties.

The question of Presidential approval of student publication advisors is presently being investigated by the Activities Committee of the Student Senate under Chairman Ray Taylor, therefore the Senate felt the proposal concerning The Hobbit should not be passed while the investigation was still under way. The representatives of the Hobbit were in opposition to the administrative supported proposal. The issue will ultimately involve all existing student publications.

Senate action concerning University censorship of concerts and concerning recruiting by non-University agencies on campus were tabled for further study.

Magga Dan

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP)
The cruise ship 'Magga Dan' which became stranded on a volcanic mudbank on an Antarctic tour arrived at Invercargill on Sunday, apparently undamaged. The 1,957-ton ship was aground for 37 hours near Hut Point Peninsula in [illegible] Murde Sound.
"Many passengers had not even realized we were aground until told," said her skipper, Capt. F. Bang. He said the ship drifted onto an uncharted volcanic mudbank while trying to berth.
An American icebreaker pulled the vessel free the next day and divers who inspected the 'Magga Dan' said there was no sign of damage.

Skiers 2nd Sat...

Rain and unseasonably warm weather delayed the start of the Amherst College Giant Slalom on Saturday at Dartmouth Skiway, Lyme, N.H. The course had to be reset and after being packed out by the racers, it was treated with ammonium chloride to freeze the snow. The "icy" course was ready at noon and held up for the 70 odd racers who used it.

The UMass team, fresh from two first place victories at Middlebury College, found the chemical cement a little difficult to negotiate on and fell behind the Amherst College team. Three members of the six man A Team either fell or "spun out" during their run resulting in a second place finish in the race. Third place in the meet went to Tuft's College.

Dave Kanila, a junior, distinguished himself in a dubious manner at the end of his run. After successfully skiing through all of the gates, he went wide at the finish and sent many of the race officials scurrying for safety. Not only did he miss the finish line, but he managed to hit one bystander.

The bystander happened to be Mr. Roger Peabody, the President of the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association, the organization which sanctions every skiing and jumping event in the East. In essence, Kanila knocked down the biggest man in organized skiing in this part of the country. There were no broken bones and both individuals seemed to have gained some respect for one another after their initial "contact".

...Then Win Sun.

Sunday: The Mercury plunged below freezing over night and turned the soft mushy snow into "boiler plate" conditions for Sunday's race. Originally scheduled as a downhill, the race was changed to a two run Giant Slalom in the interest of safety.

Collin Gavstang, class of '68, led the field during the first run with a time two second ahead of the nearest competitor, but the senior captain had difficulty on his second run and was outdistanced for top honors by Don Marsh of Tuft's College. Gavstand nevertheless had a fine combined time and aided the Redmen in regaining their winning form.

Coach MacConnell had high praise for Mike Zanolli who had strong consistent runs for the team all weekend. "When most of the boys were having trouble, Zanolli was coming on strong," stated MacConnell. "He bailed us out yesterday and put us that much further ahead today."

The races are decided on the best four times out of six skiers and Zanolli has finished in the money the last three out of four meets.

Aggies in Rifle Win

Making it three in a row, the Stockbridge School Rifle Team took the measure of the Northeastern University Freshmen at the U Mass range on Saturday. Dave Sears fired a 94-83-82 as top individual scorer for the match with 259, closely followed by Ken Lever's 256. For the losers, Miller and Dana opened the match with 249 and 248, but the remainder of the team could not keep close enough to the center of the International targets to stop the home team stretch.

Tindall in Buzzer Encore As UMass Wins

Redmen Edge A.I.C., 71-69, In Last-Second Thriller

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

SPRINGFIELD — Billy Tindall named to the ECAC All-Star team the last two weeks, is trying to become a permanent fixture of that outfit. Friday night, he was Mr. Clutch again for the Redmen as he threw in a 20 foot jump shot with two seconds remaining in the game to give UMass a 71-69 triumph over American International.

It was almost an exact duplicate of the shot Tindall had canned against Connecticut two nights earlier which resulted in another Redmen victory.

Saturday's night's shot came after sophomore John Shockro stole a Henry Payne pass as A.I.C. tried to inbound the ball with ten seconds left. UMass then called time out after which Joe Discarcina threw the ball into Tindall on the left side. Tindall turned toward the hoop and fired his patented over-the-head jumper neatly through the cords.

It was of course, a heart-breaking loss for the hometown Aces, who had battled valiantly from as much as ten points down in the second half to knot the score. It was only their third defeat of the season against 11 wins.

Coach Jack Leaman was most impressed with the speed and rebounding of the scrappy, smaller Yellow Jackets. A.I.C.'s tenacious full-court press was also a potent weapon as UMass was forced into numerous mistakes throughout the contest.

Both teams battled on even terms for the first 20 minutes. American International sparked by the shooting of Jim Miele and the offensive rebounding of Curtis Mitchell and Rudy Wolters held a 30-25 lead at one point. Shockro led a rally which enabled the Redmen to walk off the court at intermission on even terms with their hosts as the scoreboard, 36-36.

UMass shot 50% in the first half, but 13 visitor turnovers and a strong showing off the boards knot A.I.C. even.

In the second half, the Redmen seemed to be having a much easier time with the Yellow Jacket's press. Ray Ellerbrook and Tindall were sinking the good shots with regularity and with 10:13 left, UMass was up, 57-47.

At this point the Aces again began stealing errant Redmen passes and getting the second and third shot off the boards. Superior foul shooting kept UM ahead for awhile, but with 2:47 to go a short jump shot by Rudy Rutherford knotted the score.

Shockro came through under pressure converting a one and one opportunity but Miele layup nullified that advantage. A.I.C. regained control of the ball with 1:40 to go and froze the ball for a minute and a half and called time out.

It was then that Shockro came up with his big steal, followed by Captain Tindall's patented shot.

Tindall and Ellerbrook led the visitors with 22 apiece.

Frosh Gymnasts Lose to Army

WEST POINT, N.Y. — After leading through the first three events, the U-Mass freshman gymnastics team was caught by the Army Plebes and defeated Saturday, 129.85-122.30.

The frosh won four of the seven events, but the deficit they incurred in the trampoline event was too much to overcome. They took a quick lead in the first three events.

In the floor exercise competition, Robert Tatraque, Ken Perkins and Glenn Silver all did a fine job to sweep the event for the Little Redmen. The ring team then came along with an equally strong performance. The team consisting of Ed Jones, Mike Peloquin, Steve Margil and Norm Vexler combined to add for UMass additional points to their lead.

In the long horse event, Jones and Robert Henry both scored eight points to pace the UMass matmen. Peloquin and Vexler again combined in the parallel bar competition to lead the meet.

Coach Gundersheim said that the team did not do as well as expected. He said that the combination of a strong Army trampoline team and the fact that UMass broke 13 of 26 routines added up to the UMass defeat. He added however, that "We expect to do much better this week against Long Island University."

Little Redmen Win 65-54

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

SPRINGFIELD—Employing a harrying zone press defense to great advantage, the UMass freshman basketball team broke open a close ball game late in the second half and scored a 65-54 victory over the American International frosh here Friday night.

Leading by only two, 46-44, with 9:37 to go, the Little Redmen went on a nine point run to swell the lead to 55-44, with 6:24 left. From then on, UMass maintained a healthy lead as it coasted to its seventh win, against two losses.

Keying this surge, was Jon Kruper who got six of the nine points and a rugged defense that held the A.I.C. five to only one field goal in the last 10 minutes of play.

The first half was close all the way, with the contest being tied seven times. UMass finally took the lead for good with only 1:16 left in the half, on field goals by Bob Dempsey and Ken Mathias. The halftime lead was 32-28.

Early going in the second half was a duplicate of the first, the shooting of Jim Ryan and Mathias' complete domination of 6'11" A.I.C. center Al Carter were the main factors for the Redmen, while the scoring of Fran Maloney and Dick Fekete kept the Yellow Jackets close. However, UMass went into their 3-1-1 halfcourt press with about 12 minutes left, and A.I.C. was quickly taken out of contention.

Leading all scorers was the consistent Mathias with 22 and Ryan with 18. Bill Greeley also hit double figures with 10 points. For A.I.C., Fekete and Maloney led the attack with 16 and 14 points respectively.

Defeat Cen. Conn.

Frosh Matmen Win 21-18

By BOB LUMDDUE
Staff Reporter

The Little Redmen wrestling team remained undefeated and at the same time knocked the Central Connecticut freshmen from the undefeated ranks with a hard earned 21-18 victory. In scoring the victory UM won only five of the eleven weights, but came up with two forfeits and a pin and two decisions to Central's six decisions. John Paltrineri scored the only pin in the meet and registered it in a convincing 1:17 of the first period. John is the brother of captain Gene of the varsity.

In the 115 lb. class Nick DiDomenico won a forfeit for UM at 123 lbs. John Paltrineri scored his pin over Stone of Central.

Phil Davis won a forfeit at 130 lbs. At 137 lbs. Howie Kaplin dropped a hard fought decision to Steve Granowitz. Howie scored three take downs to Granowitz's two escapes, a reversal, takedown and riding time.

Bob Freeman wrestling at 145 lbs. was bombed by Dave Detrick, 15-3. After a scoreless first period everything seemed to go the wrong way for Freeman as he was caught in a predicament and two near falls by the classy Detrick.

Mike Brauner wrestling at 152 lbs. started strong and looked like he had things under control with Rich Looram but surrendered an escape and riding time late in the match to lose a heartbreaker 2-0 decision.

Tom Young met John Harris at 160 lbs. and did the job that the Redmen needed at this point. Young scored two takedowns, an escape and a near fall to register a solid, 8-1 decision.

In the 167 lb. class Tom Andrews couldn't seem to get started against Bill Macieg and gave up a takedown, reversal and riding time in losing a 6-3 decision.

The Redmen still needed a win at this point to breath easy. Bob Willman stepped on the mat with Steve Zager, and the pressure was on for both teams. Zager was a worthy foe and proved his ability with two takedowns and a reversal, but Willman, showing good conditioning and drive scored three escapes, two reversals and riding time to salt the 8-6 decision. Willman had to maintain control the entire third period to gain the advantage.

The last two wrestlers for Central were strong and they drove hard for the pins that they needed to win the duel, but George Zguris, and Curtis Moore had determination to prevent this. At 191 lbs. Zguris dropped a 7-2 decision to Brian Brown, and at unlimited Moore dropped a 7-1 decision to Ed Prengrove.

The next home meet will be with Wilkes College from Wilkes Barre, Pa., February 17, Freshmen at 1:00 p.m., and Varsity at 3:00 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage. Wilkes is one of the better small schools in the U. S.

Grapplers Pinned, 34-11

By BOB LUMDDUE
Staff Reporter

One of the New England powers Central Connecticut in wrestling came to Amherst Saturday night and flexed their muscles with the Redmen at Boyden Gym, as they were victorious 34-11. The CCSC varsity is now sporting a 6-3 record with a team dominated by sophomores coming off last year's New England Freshman Team Champions.

The closest the home team got to victory was an 8-8 tie after Captain Gene Paltrineri's pin in the 137 lb. class, and the UMass scoring stopped after Fred Fitzpatrick scored a decisive 8-0 decision over the visiting Captain Bob Navitsky. The team scoring at this point was, 16-11 in favor of the visitors, but the heavyweight Redmen could not get on the scoreboard anymore in dropping the last four bouts, three by pins.

Dave Wade returned to his 115 lb. weight and ran into a small but skilled and powerful Dan Riccio, and scored a fall over Wade in 3:49.

At 123, Billy Goodwin wrestled highly regarded Chuck Eminov from Central. After a scoreless first period Goodwin picked up two points in the second period with a penalty and escape. Eminov tried desperately to take Goodwin down for the winning points but couldn't.

Paul Pearl thrilled the crowd with his countering but Louie Grubin walked off with a hard earned 14-6 score and three points for his team.

Captain Gene Paltrineri stepped on the mat with Mike Lawless and proceeded to show the visiting 137 pounder why he was elected the UMass Captain for the year. After Gene caught up to Lawless midway thru the first period and scored the takedown it took little time for him to roll the visitor over for a pin in 1:25 minutes. Gene is undefeated in dual meets, and has scored four pins and two decisions.

Brian Urquhart dropped to the 145 lb. class for ailing Mike McKenna, and battled with a tough Gerry Rosenthal, who took away a 4-0 decision

Wrestling at 152 lbs. Al Sgroi was matched with New England Champ Carl Schleining. From the start Schleining showed superior strength and completely dominated the bout, terminating it in the second period with a pin in 2:35 minutes.

At 160 lbs. Fred Fitzpatrick brought the UMass fans back to life with a surprisingly easy win over the Central Connecticut Captain, Bob Navitsky. At this point UMass was trailing by just 16-11.

Wrestling for his second time, Parker Simonds opposed Andy Donnelson in the 167 lb. bracket. Parker's inexperience was the difference as Donnelson scored a pin in 5.13.

Ernie Smith, going at 177 lbs., wrestled another courageous bout with Dick Marshall, and came out of several difficult positions to keep from being pinned. Marshall, however, took home a 13-0 victory.

Dick Gnatek opposed perhaps Central's most skilled wrestler, Ed Edwards in the 191 lb. class. Edwards went right to work and scored a takedown and predicament in the first, a fast reversal in the second and terminated the bout with a pin in 3.00 min.

In the unlimited class, the battle between Glenn Cummins and Central's Andy Cappozi was a bruiser. The skilled and tough Cappozi punished Glenn in the first period, and the second while giving up a penalty point for an illegal slam before pinning Cummins in 2:34

Gymnasts Score Win Over Army in Best Showing

WEST POINT, N.Y.—In its best performance of the year, the UMass gymnastics team defeated the Military Academy team, 179.95-167.70, here Saturday. It was the first win by the Redmen over Army in over eight years.

It was a case of superior overall strength that spelled victory for UMass. The Redmen took four out of seven events to pace their meet win.

In the side horse Fred Babakian took first place, scoring a 9.25. Bob Leclair took second place for UMass, scoring a 9.00. The floor exercise event, a first place win by Army's Barry Robella prevented a UMass sweep as DickDellGallo, Joe Godwin and Joe Reed finished second, third and fourth respectively.

In the rings competition, the Redmen again took the top two places. Del Gallo was the first place winner with the high individual score of the meet, a 9.35. Reed's second place score was 9.10. Dave March and George Seibert tied for fourth with identical scores of 8.35.

The trampoline event saw Army take the first two places. UMass' brother combination of Mike and Toby Kasavana took third and fourth places. UMass came back in the long horse competition. Bob Leclair was first with a personal high of 9.15, with Steve Brown third with 8.85 and Reed and Toby Kasavana each tieing the fourth and fifth.

Another Redmen one-two finish occurred in the parallel bar event. Reed took first with a 9.05 and Brown scored a personal high of 9.00 to finish second. March finished fourth. The horizontal bar event saw Brown and Reed tie for second with 8.45 and March finishing fourth.

Rusk Denies U. S. Pause in Viet Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Sunday, the United States recently" exercised some restraint" in bombing North Vietnam while exploring the possibility of peace talks with Hanoi.

But Rusk indicated the administration views last week's big Communist offensive against South Vietnamese cities as de facto rejection of those peace probes.

"We have not had a pause in the traditionally accepted sense, but we have limited the bombing at certain points in order to make it somewhat easier to carry forward these explorations, so that a particularly difficult incident would not interrupt them," Rusk said.

At the same time, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara —appearing jointly with Rusk on a television-radio program— pointedly left open the possibility more troops might be deployed to Vietnam.

At this point, additional forces have not been requested by commanders but, McNamara said, "I don't want to foreclose the possibility of requests in the future."

Rusk said the air attacks were restricted "particularly in the immediate vicinity of Hanoi and Haiphong" after North Vietnam stated it would talk if the attacks and other acts of war were halted.

The U.S. position is that the raids will be suspended if there is reasonable assurance that prompt, productive discussions would follow, and that Hanoi would not try to take military advantage.

Execution of Viet Cong Deplored by Wheeler

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, deplored Monday the publicized summary execution of a Viet Cong officer but suggested it occurred "more in a flash of outrage" than in cold blood.

Wheeler expressed a "sense of revulsion at barbarous acts and summary executions" in a letter to Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., who protested that the Saigon killing was "horrible."

Wheeler told Reuss he conferred with Gen. William C. Westmoreland about the matter Saturday and was assured of "his wholehearted efforts to bring such isolated occurrences to a complete halt."

Wheeler enclosed a copy of a Westmoreland directive dated last Nov. 2, listing examples of prohibited war crimes. Among them was "killing spies or other persons who have committed hostile acts without trial."

The directive applied to U.S. military and civilian personnel in Vietnam.

The Wheeler-Reuss exchange was prompted by the South Vietnamese police chief's streetside execution of a captured enemy soldier before newsmen.

AP Photographer Eddie Adams photographed Brig. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan as he shot the prisoner last Thursday. Explaining, Loan said: "They killed many Americans and many of my people."

U. S. Balks At Apology To North Korea; Reports of U. S. Prisoner Release Unconfirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States appeared to be balking Monday at North Korean demands that an apology be made in advance as the price for the release of the 82 surviving crew members of the captured U.S. Navy intelligence ship Pueblo.

At the same time the State Department cautioned against any premature hopes that the U.S.-North Korean negotiators in Panmunjom are on the verge of a settlement that would lead to the speedy release of some or all of the American crew.

That talks are continuing was the only sign that could be considered progress, a spokesman said.

Earlier, Asst. Secretary of State William P. Bundy deflated reports from Seoul that some agreement had been reached in principle for the release of the Pueblo crew.

Bundy, in charge of East Asian affairs, said he had no confirmation of the reports of a settlement, did not know the basis for them, and could not report any progress at this time.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey told newsmen it is incontrovertible that the Pueblo when first approached "was well beyond North Korea's 12-mile limit and North Korea knew this."

He also insisted that remarks by Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara in a nationwide television appearance Sunday should not have been interpreted as laying the groundwork for an apology in advance.

"What they said was that if additional facts became known after the release of the ship and the crew, these facts would be made public," McCloskey said.

"There was no suggestion the United States would make an apology in advance."

The Rusk and McNamara disclosure that the Pueblo maintained radio silence from Jan. 10 to Jan. 21 led to speculation in South Korean government quarters, sources said, that the United States was preparing to apologize to the North Korean Communist regime.

Informants indicated that this may have been the basis for some of the reports that an agreement had been reached at Panmunjom.

Informants added that only a diplomatic move in the form of a note or a special envoy could ease the present strain in relations between Washington and Seoul.

According to qualified sources the United States apparently told the South Korean government that Panmunjon would be used as a place of contact between American and North Korean representatives, and not as a regular military armistice commission meeting.

Dick Gregory Featured At DVP Lecture Tomorrow

Negro protest leader and comedian Dick Gregory will speak Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union. He is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program. His topic will be "The Negro and Black Power".

Until two years ago, Gregory was best known for his bitter Negro comedy delivered in night clubs across the country. In the past two years, however, he has been actively involved in Black Power and anti-war rallies and has lectured extensively.

He has also become involved in politics, running for mayor of Chicago in 1967 and now as an independent candidate for President.

From Thanksgiving to New Years this year, Gregory went on a hunger strike, drinking only distilled water in protest against the Vietnam War. After dropping from 158 to 108 pounds, Gregory stated, "I'm not one of those guys who are pulling for the Viet Cong against the United States. I'm opposed to all war and I feel sorry for every young man who is killed."

Gregory has threatened to disrupt the Democratic National Convention in Chicago this summer unless there is a change in Administration policy on the war and the Negro.

He made clear his position on Black Power recently at the University of Utah. "Whitey fed us," he said, "so now our stomachs are full and we've got hungry minds. And a hungry mind isn't easily satisfied. It's up to you what happens to this country— and I don't say this lightly. Our future once lay in the hands of those in authority but somewhere along the line, they lost the meaning of what we were after. The Negro thinks violence is the only way to get what he wants here in America," he continued, "And this country is so sick, so insane, that I'm afraid he's right."

He will also speak at the other area colleges during the week. Thursday afternoon he will speak on "The Negro and Black Power" at Amherst College in Johnson Chapel. Thursday night at 8 p.m. he will speak on the same topic at Smith College in John M. Greene Hall.

Body of Pueblo Crewman Flown To Enterprise

SEOUL, Korea (AP)— Informed South Korean sources said Tuesday the body of a crewman of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo has been returned to U.S. authorities and flown to the carrier Enterprise.

American officials declined to comment on the report, which said the return of the body was arranged at Panmunjom.

The Enterprise is maneuvering in the Sea of Japan.

New Organization Methods Will be Tried At Winter Carni; "Mustache" Termed "Sleeper"

By RON LABRECQUE
Specials Editor

In order to make "Our Favorite Things" the University's favorite things the Winter Carnival Committee is finalizing details for all events, placing emphasis on curing cage concerts of such past ills as the chaos of mass pre-concert crowds and the over abundance of complimentary reserved seating.

With tickets going on sale to the University community Thursday and advance sales open to juniors today and tomorrow, last minute preparations have become the order of the day.

Junior Class President Wayne Thomas announced to the Daily Collegian today that the doors will be open for all cage concerts one hour previous to showtime. It was also announced that the number of complimentary tickets given have been radically slashed as compared to past years.

In an attempt to keep the entrance to cage concerts orderly, areas will be roped off in front of the doors which will hopefully aid concert-goers in forming lines.

According to Thomas there will be no limit to the number of Johnny Carson show tickets a person may buy but there will be a sale limit of four tickets per person for the Righteous Brothers - Byrds - Glen Campbell concert.

Joel Schiavone, 30-year-old graduate of Yale University and Harvard Business School, is proprietor of the international chain of Your Father's Mustache banjo emporiums, one of which will be simulated in the Student Union Ballroom Friday, February 23 for "Our Favorite Things"; Winter Carnival 1968.

"Your Father's Mustache"

Recently coined as the "sleeper show" of Winter Carnival, "Your Father's Mustache Nightclub" which will be held in the Student Union Ballroom Friday evening February 23, boasts the appearance of "The World's Banjo Band" and a team of professional entertainment waiters.

Modeled after the original "Mustache" nightclubs, the second largest nightclub chain in the world, the Friday evening show will continue with an entertainment "trend" that began more than seventy-five years ago of a banjo, beer (ed. note: it was learned by the Daily Collegian that beer of the root variety will be used) and bo-dee-o-do formula. To assure authenticity, professionals from the "Mustache" organization will supervise decoration of the ballroom. Thomas said that a large variety of Your Father's Mustache souvenirs will be on sale throughout the evening.

Joining the widely acclaimed talent of an original Your Father's Mustache Band will be the folk-rock group of "The Great Friendship."

Winter Carni Queen Balloting Held This Week

These five lovely girls are candidates for the 1968 Winter Carnival Queen and her Court. They are from left to right: Stephanie Bourbonnais, '71, a government major from Seekonk, Mass., nominated by Knowlton House; Linda Brown, '69, a transfer student from Braintree, Mass. She is an elementary education major and was nominated by Patterson House. Dael Chapman, '69, is a transfer student from Wellesley Hills, Mass. She is a Spanish major and was nominated by Iota Gamma Upsilon. Gail Epstein, '71, a psychology major who was nominated by George Washington Upper. Lynn Wells, '70, is an English major from Wellesley Hills and was nominated by Alpha Chi Omega.

Voting for the 1968 Queen will be held in the Student Union lobby Wednesday through Friday.

Experiment in Poetry Reading To Try Non-Academic Atmosphere

By LINDA RICHARDSON
Staff Reporter

An experiment in poetry reading will begin Wednesday at 4 p.m. initiated by John Nelson, of the Department of English.

The hour-long series, 'Oral Messages', will be held every other Wednesday afternoon in the Worcester Room from 4 to 5.

According to Nelson, "Poetry read aloud to a voluntary audience outside the classroom has been tried at several universities with considerable success.

Such readings not only provide an encounter with art unfettered by grades and channelled responses, but also allow students who are non-literature majors to hear poetry in a culture flooded by prose, much of it the jargon of their own textbooks."

In the academic atmosphere of the classroom, poetry is seldom read, but rather torn apart and analyzed, and the poems thereby lose their original essence, Nelson added.

Various faculty and grad students will partake in the readings.

Initiating the program, Nelson will recite works of various poets including Crane, Keed, Ginsberg, and Owen, in a theme dealing with war.

Red Offensive Enters Second Week in Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — U. S. Marines and Communist troops fought foot by foot for control of Hue on Tuesday and street fighting persisted in parts of Saigon as the countrywide Red offensive entered its second week. The U.S. Command said 21,330 enemy have been killed.

A U.S. spokesman said the enemy dead represented more than one-third of the total force with which the Communists began their widespread attacks on 35 cities across South Vietnam. That force has been estimated by allied intelligence officers at about 60,000.

U.S. headquarters said 1,729 allied troops have been killed, 546 of them Americans and 1,169 South Vietnamese.

By U. S. count, the allies were killing 12 enemy for every allied soldier to die.

The casualty report covered the first seven days of the fighting, up to midnight Monday. The enemy toll was up more than 4,000 from the figure announced a day earlier.

The toll of civilians killed, wounded and made homeless by the fighting was mounting into the many thousands. In Saigon, 46,700 homeless civilians were being sheltered in schools, hospitals, churches and Buddhist pagodas.

Applications for 1968-69 Events Available

The University Calendar Coordination Board will begin scheduling events for the 1968-1969 school year, during the second week in February 1968.

Applications will be received on or after January 31, 1968, by the University Calendar Office, Student Union. Note: A priority list is used in the scheduling of events. The earliest application date will be the deciding factor, should two groups request the same facility for the same date.

Conferences being planned should be scheduled through H. C. Durgin, Conference Coordinator, Conference Office, Hampshire House.

Copies of the application may be obtained in the Calendar Office, Student Union.

University Professors Earn Honors; Two Works By Faculty Published

Amherst, Mass.—Dr. William G. Sheldon, leader of the Massachusetts Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit in the department of forestry and wildlife management at the University of Massachusetts, has received the John Pearce Memorial Award, highest honor given by the Northeast Section of the Wildlife Society. Dr. Sheldon was honored for his extensive contributions to wildlife ecology.

An adjunct professor on the UMass graduate faculty, Dr. Sheldon has supervised the research of many graduate students during the past 20 years. His investigations of the ecology and management of the American woodcock have resulted in more than a doezn popular and technical articles, culminating in "The Book of the American Woodcock," published by the UMass Press in 1967. Current management of the woodcock by the federal government is based largely on his findings.

For several years he has been chairman of the Amherst Town Conservation Commission, and he is also a director of the Associated Town Conservation Commissions of Massachusetts.

He is a charter member of the Wildlife Society, which originated in 1937, and of several other professional societies. He has served on the committees on Conservation of Land Mammals and International Wildlife Conservation of the American Society of Mammalogists and on the American Committee for International Wildlife Protection.

Department of Labor Appoints Professor Barkin

An internationally-known labor economist who has just joined the University of Massachusetts faculty will study the manpower policy experiences of the Organization for European Cooperation and Development (OECD) under a $14,904 grant from the U.S. Department of Labor.

Solomon Barkin, whose appointment as professor of economics and research associate at the Labor Relations and Research Center was previously announced, joined the UMass staff last month. He came directly from his former post as deputy director of the OECD in Paris, where he had been since 1963.

The one-year study will be based on Prof. Barkin's OECD experience and will compare manpower policies, programs and directions in Europe with those in the U.S. "It will be primarily an appraisal of what we can learn from Europe and what we can contribute to Europe," Prof. Barkin said.

Dr. Joel Halpern Authors Village Study

"The Changing Village Community," an examination by University of Massachusetts sociologist Joel M. Halpern of the fundamental changes now taking place in rural socities, has been published by Prentice-Hall, Inc., for its Modernization of Traditional Societies Series.

Drawing on his own field work in Laos and Yugoslavia, the UMass associate professor of sociology focuses on the meaning of urban-devised programs and personnel for both the villagers themselves and for the development of the nation as a whole. He examines villages in China, India, the Soviet Union and the United States, exploring the implications of change over a period of time and contrasting these effects under different ideological, social and political backgrounds.

Dr. Halpern is author of "A Serbian Village," monographs on Laos, and many articles in professional journals.

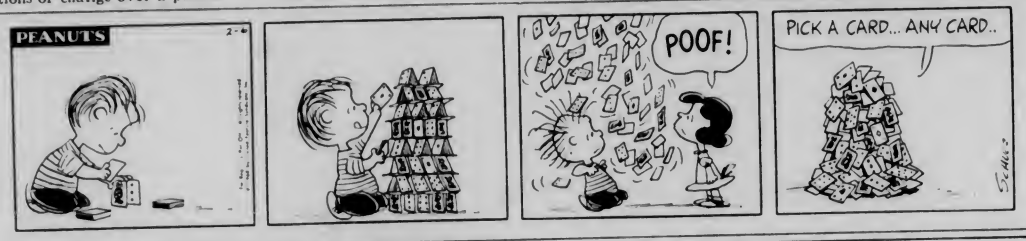
French Flicks Featured At Mahar Auditorium

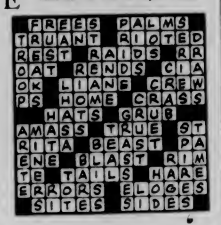
A series of five French films will be presented by the University of Massachusetts French Corridors beginning Wednesday, February 7, at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.



Commencing the showings will be "A Nous La Liberte," a 1931 classic directed by Rene Clair. Starring Raymond Cordy and Henri Marchand, the film established Clair as one of the great satirists of the cinema world. The story, concerning a tramp who becomes rich, has Chaplinesque overtones.

"Mon Oncle," starring, written and directed by Jaques Tati, will be shown Feb. 21. A slapstick comedy on the tribulations of modern gadgetry, the eccentric characterization of Monsieur Hulot provides the highlight of this award-winning film.

Presented March 6 will be Marcel Ophul's 1965 film "Peau de Banane," starring Jeanne Moreau and Jean-Paul Belmondo. In this romantic suspense comedy, Moreau and Belmondo play a pair of hip confidence gamesters involved in a myriad of swindles and counter swindles amid the luxury of the Riviera.



Jean Cocteau's "Ia Belle et la Bete," starring Jean Marais, Josette Day and Marcel Andre, will be shown on March 20. The technical artistry with which Cocteau retells the story of Beauty and the Beast has made

IT'S TIME TO CARE

Attorney General Richardson has declared that "organized crime has declared war on ordered society" in reference to the bomb maiming of lawyer John Fitzgerald in Everett, Massachusetts, last week. He has said that the state will fight back. Hopefully, the legislature will enact stringent laws against crime.

Here is a cause behind which Americans young and old, laborer and employer, can unite. Organized crime is a threat to labor unions, our business community, and the man in the street. Americans may be divided about Vietnam or the guaranteed annual wage but the preservation of ordered, lawful society is a concern to all people.

America has faced organized, politically powerful crime before in the trust cases of the early 1900's, in the range wars of the West during the 1880's, and in sabotage during labor strikes. Intimidation, savagery, and graft have occurred before, but in the past individuals and society eventually saw the threat and supported government efforts to destroy murderous materialism, intimidation of individuals of society, and unlawful profiteering.

The organized crime of today is an atavism in American life and "more of a threat to national security than communism" (Life magazine). If a lawyer can be made so scared for his life that he wishes to leave the country to fight in Vietnam, then once more Americans of all ages and walks of life must support the government and the attorney general against crime; for if they don't society will crumble into chaos and terror.

Sam Spark Speaks Out

More Sam Spark's Greatest Hits?

"Sam Spark's Greatest Hits," if nothing else, has concerned a number of discriminating satire critics questioning the relative facility that a booklet containing the works of two individuals could be published with student funds. Not only are we convinced that the booklet was warranted, but we also think there is a crying need for similar publications.

Now that we have entered the realm of published authorship, we are more than willing to lend assistance to those individuals and groups, whose prospective publications are anxiously awaited by the campus community.

However, since the funds in the Collegian budget are rapidly being depleted, these booklets necessarily will have to be extremely short. So here, then, are the world's thinnest publications that the Collegian is considering publishing.

Will the Real Sam Spark Please Stand Up?

To the editor:

Chet (Chester) Winnerwoman made a valiant attempt at stealing the show on "Greg Laundry Day" with the long awaited distribution of his book Sam Spark's Greatest or Why I Hate the World I Live In.

The Chet was alleged to have muttered as he saw the hoards of frenzied students virtually grabbing their surprise M.D.C. issue, "That big jock has another thing comin' if he thinks he's gonna be the big man in the class of '68."

In an exclusive interview, the young author's reply to a question about his novel distribution tactics was "Well, the Cracker Jack's people seemed to get along o.k. so..."

Concerning the cost of the publication, Winnerwoman said; "Well, me and whatshisname (who helped with the binding) kind of thought you kids wouldn't mind about the funds, with that Dick Birch (Richie the Fox) trial comming up and all. I mean like, when you've got a crack at immortality like that, whose gonna turn it down?"

And with that our boy politely excused himself and proceeded to finish out his application for a position as copyboy to the Hampshire Gazette.

J. L. Garbose

On Student Morality

To the editor:

In the open house proposal and similar legislation, we are attempting to provide, insofar as it is possible in an institution of this nature, a normal environment for our students in order that they might be prepared to take their places upon graduation in an adult society. There are certain dangers involved which, while not extensive, cannot be avoided. On the contrary, since students are exposed to such dangers in a limited manner now, when they are fully on their own they will be better prepared to face the full dangers of adulthood. I believe that greater restraints on our student body would be unreasonable and unprofitable.

People mature while in college. We hope to be able to make this maturation process as smooth as possible without foolishly attempting to dictate unenforceable moral codes upon the students. We do not wish to punish the vast majority of our students for the indiscretions of a few, especially since we realize that those few are no less apt to commit their actions if denied the use of their rooms. Students come to us with patterns of behavior established in high school under their parents' eyes. We cannot seriously attempt to alter such disfunctional patterns of behavior except when such students interfere with the rights of others.

We recognize the rooms of our students as their homes. It is unfortunate that the University cannot provide its students with more adequate housing [illegible] but we see no reason to penalize them any further than already they are by these recognized housing inadequacies.

Bob La Tremouille,
Member, Student Senate

An Apology

To the editor:

Thank you for your explanation. My letter to the Collegian was in response to your letter as it appeared printed in TIME, which was an untrue attack upon the University. If parts of your letter were deleted or twisted, I am truly sorry.

However the readers of TIME do not know this anymore than I did; and one cannot separate "views" from "self". Views are a part of self. I doubt that many would disagree with what you explained in the Collegian, but on the basis of what appeared in TIME the picture was quite different.

The University of Massachusetts tries in every way it can to overcome the impersonality of "bigness". The latter also [illegible] enticement which is seldom mentioned. I also feel that when the University appears to be unfairly criticized that someone must "stand up and be counted". I happen to love the place, what it is striving for and what it is gradually achieving.

The Princeton University Glee Club will join with the Smith College Glee Club in a concert in Northampton on Sunday, February 11. The public is cordially invited to hear a program of mainly classical works presented by the combined groups in John M. Greene Hall at 4 p.m. Conducting the glee clubs, totaling more than 150 voices, will be Walter Nollner of the Princeton music faculty, and Miss Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral music at Smith.

Three choruses for male voices by Franz Schubert will open the program, followed by four Slovak folk songs for mixed chorus by Bela Bartok.

Together with chamber orchestra the glee clubs will then present Komm, Heiliger Geist by Heinrich Schutz, concluding with Mozart's Vesperae de Dominica, K. 321.

Performing the Schutz work will be the 35 members of the Princeton Glee Club and the 45 members of the Smith Glee Club who plan to tour Europe together as the Smith-Princeton Chorus next summer.

The recital is open to the public without charge. It had previously been scheduled for Jan. 31.

Symposium Features Authors Styron and Davis

Novelist William Styron and Pulitzer Prize winning historian David Brion Davis are among the featured speakers at a symposium on "American Negro Slavery: Modern Viewpoints" to be held at Smith College on Friday and Saturday, February 9 and 10. More than a dozen leading authorities on American slavery will serve as speakers and panelists in the two-day conference which is expected to attract scholars, writers and area students.

Styron, author of "The Confessions of Nat Turner" and considered a leading contender for this year's National Book Award and Pulitzer Prize, will speak on "Slavery and Negro Personality." Davis, professor of history at Cornell University and author of "The Problem of Slavery in Western Culture," which won the 1967 Pulitzer Prize in history, will discuss his "Reflections on the Slave Power Conspiracy and the Paranoid Style."

Other speakers at the symposium include Professors Eugene D. Genovese of Sir George Williams University (Montreal) and Winthrop D. Jordan of the University of California (Berkeley). Genovese, author of "The Political Economy of Slavery," will speak on "Slavery as a Social System in the Antebellum South," while Jordan, author of the forthcoming volume, "White Over Black: American Attitudes Toward the Negro, 1550-1812," plans to talk on "White Attitudes Toward the Negro in Antebellum America."

The symposium, which is being held under the auspices of the Elizabeth Morrow Foundation for Lectures, is open to the public.

Romney Sees Dissenters As Losing Hope in America

ALBANY, N.Y.(AP)—Gov. George Romney said Monday night that mounting numbers of Americans, baffled by the war, riot and corruption, "are retreating into their private fears," and Democratic leadership bears the responsibility.

The Michigan governor stepped up his New Hampshire presidential primary campaign against former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, then journeyed to Albany to join Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, an ally who represents a potential problem.

"The danger today is that the American dream is losing hold," Romney said. "Cynicism and debauchery are widespread. Many dissenters seem to be giving up hope in America and taking up hatchets."

His remarks were prepared for the New York State Society of Newspaper Editors.

In Concord, N.H., Romney said his campaign for the nation's opening presidential primary is gathering force and showing Nixon that the outcome will not be as one-sided as the early opinion polls indicated. They had Romney down 5 to 1. The latest sampling: 3 to 1.

"I think he realizes he's in a contest," Romney said. He said there is evidence of this in a step-up in Nixon's campaign schedule. "Whoever was responsible for the early strategy thought it was pretty much of a pushover," Romney said.

"Most people are now undecided," he said. "A majority of the people are going to wait and see."

Rockefeller, rated by national polls as the Republicans' most potent potential vote-getter against President Johnson, has urged GOP moderates to allgn behind Romney.

Czechoslovakian Peace Movement To Be Discussed

"The Peace Movement in Communist Czechoslovakia" will be the topic of a lecture (Thursday Feb. 8) by the Rev. Bohumir J. Sedlisky at the University of Massachusetts, 8 p.m. in the School of Business Administration, room 120.

The Rev. Sedlisky is presently completing in Amherst a six-week visit and lecture tour in the eastern and midwestern states. At home, he is pastor of the Evangelical Church of the Czech Brethren, in Kladno, Czechoslovakia, and chairman of the Ecumenical and Peace Board of the Presbytery of Prague.

The lecture, sponsored by the UMass. Faculty Group on Peace and War, is free and open to the general public.

Brass Recital Rescheduled For Wednesday

Six members of the University of Massachusetts community will present a chamber brass music recital Wednesday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

They are Walter M. Chesnut, trumpet; John A. Jenkins, French horn; and Larry Weed, trombone, members of the U-Mass Faculty Brass Trio, assisted by Miss Dorothy Ornest, piano; C. James Sheppard, trumpet; and Richard Studney, tuba.

The program includes Blacher's Divertimento for Trumpet, Trombone and Piano; Poulenc's Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone; Arnold's Quintet for Two Trumpets, Horn, Trombone and Tuba; Jacob's Scherzo for Two Trumpets, Horn and Trombone; and Ewald's Quintet for Brass.

Featured will be Diversion for Brass Trio written especially for the Faculty Brass Trio in 1967 by Dr. Philip Bezanson, chairman of the UMass music department.

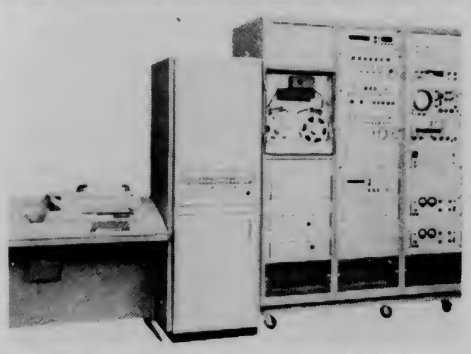
Dinner at Log Cabin To Be Awarded

The Young Republicans Club is sponsoring an expense-paid dinner with the 1967 Homecoming Queen Shirley Capecci. Chances are on sale in the Student Union Lobby through Thursday, February 8, and the winning ticket will be drawn on Thursday evening. On February 11, the winner will escort Miss Capecci in a chauffer-driven car to the Log Cabin Restaurant in Holyoke, noted for its excellent cuisine. The donation is twenty-five cents.



Where else can you work on projects like these ...where the engineers call the shots!

This is a people radar The AN/PPS-6 Battlefield Surveillance Radar is the most recently developed radar of its class to reach operational status. It was developed by the Radio Receptor Division and is now in large scale production for the Marine Corps. It is smaller and lighter than its predecessors and, unlike these, it can be carried, set up and operated by one man.

The Condor, developed by North American Aviation, Columbus, Ohio, is an air-to-ground guided missile to be carried by Grumman's A6A. It carries a TV camera in its head and what it sees is displayed in the cockpit via a radio link. With General Instrument's Mission Recorder, the TV pictures received during flight will be recorded on film for postflight examination.

Computer controlled checkout system for LM (Lunar Module) simulates ground commands from Houston Manned Space Flight Center, in-vehicle pre-recorded mission profile tape commands, and commands from the LM guidance control. Developed and built by G.I. for Grumman, this Automated Test Station will check out the Lunar Module (Command Control Section)

To chart high altitude winds, hang some electronics on a balloon and track it with a satellite. The receiver was developed by G.I. for NASA'S IRLS (Interrogation, Recording and Location System). It is part of a large concept and envisioned as a massive global system of balloons and service buoys, providing constant meteorological data.

Typical of the competence of the company, the programs shown above are some of the many advanced areas in which General Instrument is engaged.

As a graduating engineer, you have an opportunity at General Instrument which you owe to yourself to look into, particularly if your goals demand growth and diversification. General Instrument comprises 20 world-wide facilities in sophisticated commercial and government electronic equipments. The Radio Receptor Division is a medium-sized, engineer-oriented and managed operation. Here engineers call the shots in a broad spectrum activity that includes:

• Radar • Active ECM • Passive ECM • IFF • Telemetry & Communications • Support Systems • Ordnance Electronics • Reconnaissance & Surveillance • Instrumentation • Digital Systems Design • Field Engineering • Quality Assurance Engineering

Graduating engineers who can see their own careers expanding in such a professional environment are urged to call or send a resume to Gene Lester to arrange a mutually convenient appointment to further explore these opportunities.

German Youths Demonstrate Against U.S.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — About 1,000 young demonstrators, shouting "Amis Americans get out of Vietnam," smashed windows at the U.S. trade center Monday after police with water cannons stopped them from forcing their way into the American consulate. About a dozen demonstrators were taken into custody.

Three hundred riot police guarded approaches to the consulate which was the target of thrown stones Friday night.

When the demonstrators approached, the water cannon was trained on them in the near freezing temperature. The drenched demonstrators left the consulate area and went to the trade center.

U. of Mass. student David Ziner, '71, was one of twenty five college students who recently won a trip to the Rose Bowl and Disneyland in a national Football Sweepstakes sponsored by the Insurance Company of North America. Redmen, Eagles Wage War on B.C. Heights

Feathers Will Fly

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Boston College basketball fans must have done a lot of crying in their beer Saturday night. Holy Cross, which had been pushing for "flop of the year" honors, had just handed the Eagles a shocking 89-82 loss.

That could be good or bad for UMass, which faces the Eagles at Roberts Center tonight at 8:15. B.C. could be "down" after the loss while the Redmen, who upset Holy Cross two weeks ago, may realize that B.C. can be beaten. On the other hand, the Eagles, seventh-rated in pre-season polls, may be out for blood after Saturday night's upset.

B.C. brings a 10-6 record into tonight's game, including a loss to second-rated UCLA. But the Eagles have also lost to St. John's twice, disappointing Louisville, St. Joseph's and of course, Holy Cross.

Coach Bob Cousy starts all veterans from last year's NCAA Eastern runner-up. The Eagles have excellent rebounding, good ball-handling and shooting, and as may be expected for a Cousy-coached team, they possess a devastating fast break.

The leading scorer and rebounder on the team is the center whom Cousy believes has All-America potential. He is 6'7 junior Terry Driscoll, who played second fiddle to Willie Wolters last year in the pivot but has moved in this year to be B.C.'s most potent offensive threat.

Driscoll, who averages 17 points a game, has all the moves a pivot man needs. Quick on offense, he can score from anywhere in close. Driscoll's moves also make him prolific off the boards, as the ambidextrous junior is averaging 12.4 rebounds. His best point output this year was a 46-point performance against St. John's. Driscoll's only possible weakness is on defense.

Providing the rest of the firepower up front is 6'6 senior Steve Adelman, who led the team in scoring last year but has slipped to a 41.1 average this season. Adelman rarely moves inside to score, and has a great outside shot.

Adelman, who brought a 19.5 career average into this season, has a wide repertoire of shots. Beside his deadly corner shot, he also likes the medium range jumper and the hook. He occasionally uses his height to hit the boards.

The other forward is 6'8 captain Jim Kissane, who plays because of his rebounding and not his scoring. Kissane owns a 9.8 scoring average and a 7.1 rebounding average.

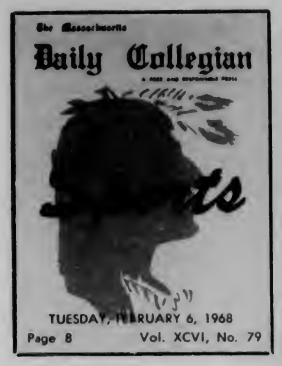
Kissane, fast and agile for his size, likes to play the corner when he is not hitting the boards. He has a good touch but doesn't shoot too much. Kissane is probably the best defensive player up front.

In the backcourt, Jack Kvancz does most of the scoring. A 5'11 senior, Kvancz has an 11.3 average and was B.C.'s leading scorer against Holy Cross with 21 points. He is a fine ballhandler, the primary reason for his being in the lineup, but when he gets hot from 25 feet, he is dangerous.

The other starting guard will be junior Billy Evans last year's ECAC Sophomore-of-the-year. Evans has been hampered by injuries this year and has appeared in only 12 of the Eagles' 16 games. He is a great ball-handler and feeder, and last year averaged a fantastic 12 assists a game. Evans is also a ball-hawk on defense. This year he is averagaing 7.3 points, with 93 assists to his credit.

When Cousy needs scoring from the outside, he is likely to put in his sixth man, sophomore Bob Dukiet. A 6'4 guard, Dukiet is a gunner all the way. Last year he led the freshmen in scoring with a 26.5 average and this year has a 10.7 average. He specializes in shooting from 25 feet.

UMass coach Jack Leaman, when asked how he plans to play B.C., said, "We're going to mix up our defense a little. We'll press a little and sit back a little. We're real worried about their rebounding strength. If we're going to win, we'll have to keep them from getting second and third shots, since we'll give away a lot of height on the front line."



Leaman was not overjoyed at seeing Holy Cross beat B.C. "I'm disappointed that B.C. lost," he said. "B.C. hasn't been playing well, but now they'll be fired up. They may try to prove that they're something." This is not to mention that the Eagles can ill afford any more losses if they are to get a tournament berth.

On the subect of Terry Driscoll, Leaman said, "Driscoll is a problem, and we'll play him the same way we played Bill Corley of UConn. We'll try to keep the ball away from him."

Leaman is undecided on his forward alignments. He will probably play improving defensive player Gary Gasperack on Adelman and Billy Tindall on Kissane. But Tindall will give away three inches in height.

Last year B.C. won both of its games aaginst UMass, but the two were like night and day. In the first, the Eagles won by 23 points, but in the second, at the Boston Garden tournament, they won by only eight. B.C. leads in the series, 9-4. The last UMass win was in 1963.

B.C. will be a heavy favorite in tonight's game, which will be broadcast live on WMUA. But if Holy Cross can do it, who knows?

Little Redmen Meet B. C. Eaglets

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

Fresh from an impressive road win against A.I.C., the UMass freshman basketball team faces its biggest test of the year when it travels to Chestnut Hill tonight to face the Boston College frosh.

B.C. is also fresh from a big win. The Eagles defeated arch rival Holy Cross in overtime, handing the frosh Crusaders their first loss. The win raised B.C.'s record to 10-1, the only loss being to the Providence frosh, whom the Little Redmen earlier had defeated.

The Eaglet offense features a fast break attack that is keyed by a flashy guard, Jim O'Brien. O'Brien, 6' guard from Brooklyn and St. Francis Prep, is in double figures for the year in both assists and points.

The guard is Dave McAuliffe from Teaneck, N.J. by way of Bergen Catholic High School. McAuliffe, 6'1, is a fine outside shooter.

Up front, the Eaglets feature two mobile and quick forwards. Greg Sees, 6'5, from Rome Catholic in Rome, N.Y., starts in one corner. Sees is joined in the forward position by Vin Costello. Costello, 6'5 from Boston Latin School was a High School All-American in his junior year and is a deadly outside shooter.

Starting at center is the Eaglet's leading scorer, Frank Fitzgerald, 6'7, from St. Joseph's High School in Edison, N.J. Fitzgerald, extremely accurate from the pivot area, is also B.C.'s leading rebounder. Spelling up front is Stafford Hillaire, 6'3 from Hollis, N.Y. and Brooklyn Prep.

Seeing a lot of action in the backcourt is Don Crosby, 6'1 from Augusta, Me. and Worcester Academy.

UMass will go with the same starting lineup of Bill Greeley and Jon Kruper in the backcourt and Jim Ryan, Frank Schaffeld and Ken Mathias up front. It will be a homecoming of sorts for Greeley and Ryan, who are Greater Boston products.

The Little Redmen are 7-2, but the long trip they are facing and the finest team they have faced should combine for their toughest contest of the year.

Soini Leads Pro-War Rally

By BILL DICKINSON
Staff Reporter

"It is for our men in Vietnam that the homefront war is being fought." This was the main point of a speech given before a pro-Vietnamese war rally last night in the Student Union ballroom.

The speaker was Wayne Soini, a former member of the Young Conservatives and the Young Republicans and currently a charter member of the New Guard, a newly formed campus group which sponsored the rally. He is also a non-commissioned ROTC officer. He spoke before an audience of about 175, most of which was anti-war.

Wayne Soini stands at podium with an unidentified girl from audience. In the background is Bill Tacy, president of the New Guard. Soini and the girl are discussing an issue brought up in the question and answer period of the rally.

Soini, who was introduced by New Guard President Bill Tacy, declared that the purpose of the rally was "to honor and show support for our men in Vietnam." He continued, "It is for our men that the homefront war is being fought."

Verbally slapping Senator Wayne Morse and historian Arthur Schlesinger for their "dove" positions, Soini went on to quote from Senator Everett Dirksen on what battle is like and then to cite "the tragic possibilities of the homefront battle."

After mentioning that University President John Lederle had declined an invitation to appear at the rally, Soini attacked those who listen to "the chorus of voices of peaceful surrender" and who lack the courage to show their "patriotism." "Communists and Communist-sympathizers are misleading the American public," he declared.

Following his speech Soini took questions and comments from the audience. For the most part the questions were anti-war.

At one point Soini was asked to elaborate on his remark about "Communists and Communist-sympathizers" in the anti-war movement. He explained that if one wanted Ho Chi Minh, who is a Communist, to win, then he could be classified as a "Communist-sympathizer." To this a girl in the audience yelled, "Prove Ho Chi Minh is a Communist." At this the audience broke into laughter.

One man, who said that he is an "ex-training sergeant" described the low morale of men returning from Vietnam due to the total lack of cooperation by the South Vietnamese troops. "If the slant-eyes are going to quit, then the hell with them." The audience applauded loudly.

Soini was also asked how the U.S. can continue "to support with bayonets" governments which make money for their leaders with U.S. aid money. Soini replied, "In some cases you just have to choose the lesser of the two evils."

Following the rally, the Daily Collegian interviewed Bill Tacy, president of the New Guard about the organization. He said that it was just recently formed on campus and is operating "under an executive order" until a constitution is approved.

The club, which has four members, will be "the voice of the conservative students on campus." According to Tacy, the organization has no affiliation with any other group as yet, but there is "a possibility of joining the Young Americans for Freedom" in the future.

YAF is a national conservative youth group with independent affiliates. Some of the affiliates have been closely linked with the John Birch Society in the past.

Koreans Upset by U.S. Private Negotiations

by WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

SEOUL (AP) — The tempo of official protest against secret U.S. negotiations with the North Koreans for the return of the USS 'Pueblo' increased Tuesday night. The National Assembly adopted a resolution expressing "national indignation" at the negotiations.

Park Choon-kyee, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Com., told the assembly that So. Korea was being shut out of the talks at the armistice town of Panmunjom on subjects of vital concern to the country.

Park's remarks and the assembly's action reflected growing government concern over the U.S. handling of the current crisis. They followed closely a protest note Premier Chung Il-kwon handed U. S. Ambassador William J. Porter on the secret talks.

The assembly's resolution insisted that the recent attempt by No. Korean commandos to assassinate Pres. Chung Hee Park was more important to So. Korea than No. Korea's seizure of the 'Pueblo', a communications ship.

The assembly resolution asked the government to take "punitive measures, if necessary alone" against Communist provocations such as the attempt to assassinate Park.

One legislator explained that So. Korea feared the U.S. might sacrifice this country's interests for U. S. global interests.

Indignant So. Koreans say the U.S. didn't react forcefully when the attempt on Park's life was made Jan. 21 but it alerted all So. Korean and U.S. forces when the 'Pueblo' was captured two days later.

The So. Korean forces remain under the U.N. Command that fought the Korean War, and this is another point of irritation.

Baird Speaks at Amherst On Birth Control Crisis

By BOB GORMAN
Staff Reporter

"It is odd that I stand here today pleading with you to help fellow man, but in a month I may be in jail."

William Baird, Director of the Parents Aid Society, said this at the beginning of his lecture Monday night at Amherst College. He was convicted of distributing birth control apparatus at Boston College on Apr. 17, 1967. His case has been appealed to the Mass. Supreme Court on the grounds that the few free samples of contraceptives which he distributed are available at any drug store.

Baird, 36 years old, has been an outspoken advocate of free birth control information and apparatus since he was the Medical Director of Emko Co. four years ago.

In the Amherst College speech, Baird said that the world faces a severe crisis of overpopulation. "We must distribute birth control information and pills to underdeveloped countries but first, we in America, must learn about it ourselves."

He spoke strongly against the Massachusetts Birth Control law which forbids printed information, or giving or consenting to give birth control information to anyone other than married couples by a doctor or nurse.

The birth control advocate was both angered and hurt by the lack of support which he has received for his cause in this state.

He showed several national magazines that have had stories on birth control and that were not prosecuted. Also, the birth control pill, oddly enough, was developed in Massachusetts by a Harvard Univ. Doctor, he said.

"I am dead tired of having people come to me after having an illegal abortion... I as one man cannot sit by and see people suffer because of useless laws," according to the Director of Parents aid.

As director, Baird has purch-

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. J. W. Fulbright suggested Tuesday that the U.S. and Russia simply exchange intelligence information each now gathers at great effort and expense with ships and planes.

"It would save us both a lot of money if we quit hiding everything and made it public," said the Arkansas Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

But Fulbright added that his proposal has a possible drawback — "finding it out surreptitiously is the only way it's credible" to intelligence agents.

He commented to newsmen in connection with a detailed list of what his committee terms unanswered questions about the seizure of the U. S. intelligence ship 'Pueblo'.

Dick Gregory who ended a 40 day hunger strike Jan. 2, will speak on the crisis of Black Power in the Cage at 8:00 tonight.

Romney Criticizes U.S. Image, Hits Johnson Vietnam Policy

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Michigan Gov. George Romney said Tuesday the U.S. image around the world is that of "great big military aggressors and imperialists." He said that is a product of American policy in Vietnam.

At the same time, Romney, intensifying his campaign assault on President Johnson, said it is self-delusion to pretend that the Communists in Vietnam have lost their "great capability, stamina and confidence."

"The facts are the enemy is stronger now in South Vietnam than he's been before," Romney said. "We've got to get somebody down in Washington who will tell the truth. We've had the wool pulled over our eyes. It's about time we saw through it."

Romney stressed that theme at club, factories and homes as he hunted votes in New Hampshire's presidential primary. He aimed past his Republican opponent in New Hampshire, Richard M. Nixon, and concentrated on the Democratic administration in Washington.

He said Americans have been deceived by their government on the war in Vietnam.

"We've got to have an alternative to what the President is doing down there," Romney said as he toured a greeting card factory in Nashua. "He's going to lead us down the road to World War III the way we're going."

He told 60 people at a Merrimack church hall that the United States is not winning in Vietnam, no matter what Johnson says.

"This illusion of military victory is taking us down the wrong road," he said. "The enemy has got support of people in the cities themselves and they can go into the cities and terrorize and kill . . .

"The people over there in Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese, are thwarting the greatest military power on earth, and that shows the power people have got," Romney said.

Romney said the U.S. should go on a political offensive to win popular support in Vietnam insist that the Saigon government move in that direction, and press for peace on the basis of neutralization of the entire area.

War Resister States Beliefs

By RICHARD LANE
Staff Reporter

"We must make it clear that we are not just against this war, but war itself. We are against all violence, even violence in a good cause."

According to Field Secretary David McReynolds, this is the philosophy of the War Resisters League, an internationalist pacifist organization.

In an article entitled "After the Indictments, What?" from the January-February 1968 issue of the WRL News, McReynolds discussed the aims and ideas of the League and more specifically, recent indictments of WRL members in the wake of December's anti-war demonstrations.

The demonstrations were part of Stop the Draft Week in both New York (Dec. 5) and San Francisco (Dec. 18).

McReynolds was among those arrested in the New York demonstration along with League executive committee members Igal Roodenko and Robert Larsen. Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted baby care expert and author, was also arrested and subsequently indicted.

"One thing the indictments point up is the fact that the war has now driven otherwise moderate and liberal spokesmen into a position of direct, radical disobedience aimed at the federal government," the authors stated.

McReynolds listed two positive effects of recent indictments on WRL's position.

First of all, the indictments will close the generation gap, McReynolds believes. "We—the 'older generation'—are no longer above the battle, beyond reach of the courts. Johnson unwittingly brought a new solidarity and fraternity to us all," said the secretary.

Secondly, the President "has weakened that wing of the peace movement which served him best," namely the militarists, according to McReynolds.

McReynolds went on to write that the War Resisters League must first of all keep its "cool," regarding the indictments.

Parking Changes In Progress

In an effort to provide additional parking convenience for students, another portion of controlled area #1 will be made available for student parking. Parking in this area will be limited to those students specifically assigned to it. Requests for assignment to this area must have been filed according to the instructions printed in the Daily Collegian issue of January 29, p. 2.

It is possible that assignments to this new space may be terminated by construction of the campus boulevard any time after April 1. Students assigned to this space will be permitted to use it as long as possible, but will have to be reassigned to pheripheral lots when construction begins. This is not expected before the first of April, so added convenience will be available during the winter months.

There have been a number of complaints voiced that students are squeezing faculty out of their parking spaces. This has been a particular problem in area 5, and could conceivably be a problem with more students being assigned to area 1. Therefore, effective February 12, all students assigned to area 5 should park in the Boyden gymnasium portion of that area. Students assigned to area 1 should park in the southeastern portion of that lot (the portion closest to the new road through the lot, on the Newman Center end of the lot). Your cooperation with this efffort to provide additional parking will be appreciated.

Some of the students requesting changes in parking assignments have been chronic violators of University motor vehicle regulations. The University reserves the right to reject the request for reassignment submitted by any chronic violator of University motor vehicle regulations.

Breathalyzer Training To Begin for Policemen

Now under way throughout Massachusetts is a drive to educate both state and local police on the use of the breathalyzer machine. This device will be used to identify drunken drivers.

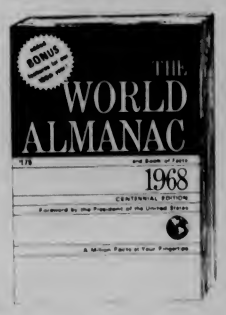
The first breathalyzer training class will be conducted in the Boston Armory. Selected state police men will be the first trainees and later will teach other policemen to operate the machine.

Under a new state law, persons suspected of driving under the influence of alcoholic beverages face loss of driving privileges for 90 days unless they submit to the breathalyzer test.

State and local police have been hampered by the lack of men qualified to operate this machine. Another problem is lack of machines.

In Northampton the police department has a single breathalyzer and five barracks to cover with it. A good deal of time is lost in transporting the lone machine back and forth.

Department of Public Safety officials said training classes on the machine will be held in National Guard armories across the state.



A maximum number of patrolmen will be trained as local police departments send men to the classes. Eventually some 600 state police will be authorized to give the breath test.

Police are seeking federal funds to purchase the sorely needed breathalyzer machine.

Garbage Leader Jailed As Refuse Piles Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The leader of a five-day sanitation men's strike was sentenced to 15 days in jail Tuesday for defying a court's back-to-work order and allowing 40,000 tons of garbage to pile up in New York York City streets.

"Employees cannot strike against the government," State Supreme Court Justice Saul S. Streit told John DeLury, president of the striking Uniformed Sanitationmen's Association, an affiliate of the Teamsters Union.

DeLury also was fined a maximum $250 under the state's Taylor law, which prohibits strikes of municipal employees.

The union head was allowed his freedom overnight and his lawyer said DeLury will begin servicing his contempt of court sentence Wednesday.

Streit continued until Wednesday contempt charges against the union itself. A maximum fine of up to $10,000 a day against a union is provided under the state's Taylor law, which works out to $1 per day for each sanitation man.

Meanwhile, piles of garbage at many city curbsides mounted six or more feet high. Normally, 10,000 tons a day are collected during a six-day week by the city sanitation men.

Midtown Manhattan was fairly clean, however. Private garbage collectors pick up 6,000 tons a day from commercial buildings and restaurants, as well as some luxury apartment buildings.

Winter weather helped moderate the health hazard to the city's eight million as a result of the exposed refuse heaps. But Thomas Hagan, fire chief, said outdoor rubbish fires had doubled or tripled from the normal 80 a day.

Mayor John V. Lindsay had tried to deputize Hospital Department drivers to man sanitation trucks and remove infectious waste from 71 hospitals in the city. But their AFL-CIO State, County and Municipal Employees Union ordered them not to act as "strikebreakers."

Late in the day, the sanitation union agreed to resume garbage collections at hospitals through the city on Wednesday.

The city's 10,000 sanitation men struck Friday in a demand for a $600 a year increase in annual salaries that range from $6,424 to $7,956 after three years. A mediation panel recommended $400 a year.

Education Dean Sees Impending Changes

by Sally Dolgin
Senior Reporter

"American education is a second penitentiary system. Students get sent for twelve to sixteen years, and cannot even look forward to parole for good behavior," said Dr. Dwight Allen, Dean of Education.

Dean Allen, speaking at an Education Club meeting Monday night, presented his views on national trends in education, flaws in the present system, and proposals for revision of the University's department.

"By September, 1969," he declared, "all present programs and courses in the School of Education will be discontinued." Next year, he said, the entire faculty will go into planning.

An expanded faculty, according to Dr. Allen, will consist of knowledgeable people from many fields who are concerned with the process of education. He mentioned one such qualified person, having three BA's in science, law, and Hebrew literature, who is now in charge of training for the Peace Corps.

Three other future faculty members are in history, anthropology, and political science.

Dr. Allen criticized the present system of education and then proposed future policies for the University. He ridiculed the concept of "achievement criteria." He suggested that, along with the removal of "time criteria," goes the "seat-warming notion"—so much time per pupil per year.

Discussing the field of social studies, he declaimed the fact that many sixth graders have been to Puerto Rico but not to the local firehouse. In history, "Columbus sails in the first grade, the fifth grade, and the eight grade, and never gets anywhere," he scoffed.

Turning to the topic of teachers, he announced to future educators that upon graduation, they would become just "interchangeable parts." Instead of class size disputes, he thought that the main criterian in schools should be good teachers. "At present," he declared, "a good teacher does not spend more than two or three years in the same classroom."

To remedy this situation, Dr. Allen suggested different levels of teaching, the outstanding instructor becoming a master.

New appointee Dean of Education, Dwight Allen.

To institute his ideas, the Dean said it might be necessary to "poke some holes in sacred cows." He will attempt to plug the holes with "parallel programs," individual teacher education, student choice, more basic research, and an expanded doctoral program.

Philosophizing on the responsibility of education to society, Dean Allen noted that we must use technology and be sensitive to social changes. "Man is an emotional, feeling being with a rational component, rather than a rational being with emotional sidetracks," he declared.

In the question period that followed his lecture, the following important points were brought out concerning changes in the department:

Q: What will happen to present undergraduates that are caught in the change from the old to the new program?

A: There will be transitional problems, but we cannot be so bogged down in transitional problems that we never "transit."

Q: What will happen to the present Education Department faculty in regard to tenure?

A: We do not need a high turnover rate of faculty; what we need is a high turnover rate of ideas.

Wallace Expected to Announce

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—George Wallace, who has said many times he would run for president unless the major parties "give the people a choice," is expected to announce Thursday that he is a candidate.

The former governor will have a news conference in Washington at 9 a.m. Thursday to make known "his intentions regarding the 1968 presidential campaign," his headquarters said Tuesday.

No one would say unequivocally that Wallace plans to get into the presidential race. But one aide observed, "It doesn't seem likely that he would go to the nation's capital to say he isn't a candidate."

Even as the news conference was being arranged, members of the former governor's staff were in Pennsylvania for a drive to get his name on the presidential ballot there in November as a third party candidate.

Wallace has already won a place on the California ballot, and similar efforts are under way in other states.

Wallace, whose wife, Lurleen, succeeded him as governor in January 1967, is known to many as a symbol of segregationist resistance.

Nixon Advocates Latin American Revolution

by KEN HARTNETT
Associated Press Writer

STEVENS POINT, Wis. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon told a university audience Tuesday that Latin America "needs radical change, needs a revolution."

"I'm not saying we should go out and blow up countries," the former vice president said. "I'm not talking about marching feet, I'm talking about helping hands. That's what we need in Latin America today."

Nixon's comment came after a student questioner at Stevens Point Univ. told him pointedly:

"You either want radical social change or you're a liar."

The student, who didn't identify himself, said that unless something is done about Latin America's problems beyond promises, the next American president would again be "spit upon" by Latin Americans.

Nixon, while vice president, was jeered and spit upon during a visit to South America.

Nixon seemed to take the challenge in stride.

"Latin America needs radical change," he said, "It needs a revolution."

Nixon, in his second day of campaigning for Wisconsin's 30 Republican convention delegates, visited the campus as part of a tour that started in Appleton Tuesday morning and included visits to Stevens Point, Oshkosh and Fond du Lac.

Meanwhile at Madison, he was named officially along with five other Republican contenders — including N. Y. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Ill. Sen. Charles Percy—to the ballot for the Apr. 2 second primary. The other GOP candidates will be Cal. Gov. Ronald Reagan, former Minn. Gov. Harold Stassen and Mich. Gov. George Romney.

Aid to 4-College Committee

For twenty-five years the nebulous concept of Four College co-operation has been subject to haphazard attempts at making it a successful reality. Due to the efforts of the present Four College Co-ordinating Committee—a group of sixteen students comprised of four delegates from each of the schools—it appears that this semester could finally bear the fruits of a UMass-Amherst-Smith-Mt. Holyoke interchange. There is one hindering factor and that is the lack of active involvement by certain elements of the University community.

Transportation is of prime importance to the success of this college interchange. For some months a four college bus, instituted by the Four College Co-ordinating Committee, has been running on a frequent schedule. In the past two weeks it has carried 1200 students.

The future of the bus hinges on financial support. The Committee now has enough funds to run the bus until February 12. With the advantages of four college co-operation, both academic and extra-curricular, being numerous and oftentimes invaluable there is little doubt that the Committee should receive the support it needs.

Students at Amherst, Smith and Mt. Holyoke have been taxed one dollar each to pay for the bus. The administrations of all three schools have either matched or added to the student funds. No money has come from the University, even though UMass students enjoy all the privileges currently available through this aspect of four college co-operation.

The finance committee of the student Senate has given preliminary approval for a $300 allocation to the Four College Co-ordinating Committee.

It is vital that the Senate approve this allocation. The bus is the key to the full availability of all aspects of the college interchange which includes such permanent programs as the Hampshire Inter-Library Center and interchange courses whereby a student may take a course at another school upon departmental approval. In addition, a full schedule of concerts, plays, and lectures is available at each of the schools. The student has but to take advantage of them.

Since the conception of the four college bus, its success at our three neighboring colleges has been indicated by the number of students taking advantage of it.

An information campaign is presently planned for the UMass campus to make the University community aware of what is available through Four College Co-operation. It is now up to the University to respond, by giving its support both financially and more importantly by its active participation in the interchange programs.

Patience Not a Virtue

While patience may be regarded as virtuous by the older generation, it is not a virtue coveted by the growing student generation, says the Ball State News of Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

The newspaper's editorial continued:

History, in many cases, reveals the futility of patience.

"Be patient," the elder statesmen of four generations said to the enslaved Negro. "You will have your day." So the Negro was patient. And "his day" was put off until tomorrow.

The main hope for the student generation lies in its rejection of the belief that patience will be rewarded by "the gift of a better day."

"Listen to all that protest," says the older generation which fights wars, domestic and foreign, from their desks. "There's no respect for age. These students are irresponsible. They make a mockery of freedom."

Freedom does demand responsibility. But responsibility also requires freedom and a voice in the course of events. If an individual's life is put in jeopardy for a cause, then he had a right to question responsibly the reasoning that says his dying is necessary.

The same holds true in a university. If an individual is getting a second-rate education, he has the right to demand something better. If he is treated like a child in the determination of important policies that affect his campus life and as a "young adult" in the less important areas, he should be able to actively seek a cure to this administrative schizophrenia.

If he's a second-class citizen in the campus community because of age, race, or the length of his hair, he should question the middle-aged, closely-cropped, white administration which says this role is best for him.

If the individual chooses to wait for academic reform to descend from Mount Olympus, he must be patient.

Things come to those who wait, but only those things which aren't very important.

Survival of Our Society: Crisis Revealed in Dark Ghetto

To the editor:

There is a small book lying on one of the tables in the Student Union which every student in this University, regardless of class or major, would find fascinating, revealing, and, in many cases (as in mine) shattering: it is called Dark Ghetto and was probably ordered for a sociology course.

But it reads like a novel (although written by a recognized scholar) and if you're a thinking and feeling person at all you probably won't put it down until the end.

Dr. Kenneth Clark—the author—says, among other things, in the introduction: "To my knowledge, there is at present nothing in the vast literature of social science treatises and textbooks and nothing in the practical or field training of graduate students in social science to prepare them for the realities and complexities of this type of involvement in a real, dynamic, turbulent, and at times seemingly chaotic community.

And what is more, nothing anywhere in the training of social scientists, teachers, or social workers now prepares them to understand, to cope with, or to change the normal chaos of ghetto communities. These are grave lacks which must be remedied soon if these disciplines are to become relevant to the stability and survival of our society."

Survival? Surely he jests. What are a few summer riots among friends? This, too, shall pass. Hah. What you cats don't realize is that it is, actually, survival that is at stake. Are you going to go into your bomb shelter and exclude the world?

Or are you going to bend your shoulder (even though you consider yourself a 90-pound weakling) to dismantle the H-bombs, along with the napalm, tear gas and other soul-killing weapons such as making sure that when a Negro parent goes into the community library he will find only seven books by and/or about Negro Americans to bring home for his children to read. (I couldn't resist bringing our enlightened Christian superior community into this: sorry.)

Hey, you guys that wouldn't read it for any other reason, there's lots of things about sex in it, too. Yeah.

What I can't figure out is how any Negro ever got the nerve to print such things right out in white and black where people could read them. Like, nobody ever tells the truth any more. It's not done. Except, maybe, by Kenneth Clark in Dark Ghetto. Well, even if you read it you probably won't believe it. So, don't bother. I dig you're figuring before hand it's all a pack of lies anyway.

Objection Raised Over Sam Spark Supplement

To the editor:

Idealogy differences, personality conflicts, and feuds will always develop in any system. At the University this year, clearly war has opened up between the classes and "Senate-Collegian coalition." As Senator-at-Large for the class of '68, I have seen both sides of the coin. Basically stated, my prejudices are those of a participant—and they should be judged accordingly.

It was with a great recognition of irony that I received the special feature of last week's Massachusetts Daily Collegian entitled Sam Spark's Greatest Hits. From the outset let me make it known that my impression of Sam Spark is not completely negative. On occasion it has served as a humorous satire on various levels of University life.

However, the sum of $2500 was involved with the publication of the Daily Collegian's first "literary publication." That this money should be wasted on a "magazine" whose meaning has been obscure, obtruse, and questionable is regrettable. I'm not trying to play the literary critic. A sum of $66,000 was invested by last year's Student Senate to produce a University newspaper for the whole student body. If the student body really sought a humor magazine, they would vigilantly work for the return of Yahoo. The Collegian was not invested with Yahoo's job.

Secondly, that Chet Weinerman, editor-in-chief of the Collegian, should spend such a sum on his own personal impressions of campus life is incredible! For Dick Wood, for example, to spend two thousand dollars of the class of 1968's money to print a novel entitled "Dick Wood's Greatest Executive Council Speeches" would be ridiculous. Perhaps even if the Student Senate had been given fore - knowledge of how student taxes would be spent, this action on the part of Weinerman would have been acceptable. But it wasn't. There at no time has existed a category allocation for such a "special publication." Only brief mention last year was made of an anthology of Sam Spark's works, which I find to have been in the minds of most of my fellow Senators a four or five page "special edition."

Finally, I can clearly see grounds for grave suspicions concerning this most recent Collegian adventure. I would charge the Senate with its most important duties—that is, acting as a check on Student Government Association expenditures and activities.

Rockefeller's Name Placed on Wisconsin Primary Slate

by ARTHUR L. SRB
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — N. Y. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, despite repeated denials that he is a candidate for President, was placed on Wisconsin's April 2 presidential primary ballot Tuesday by a bipartisan nominating committee.

Soon after the committee action was announced, Rockefeller said at Albany that it was an "embarrassment" because he is supporting Romney.

The New York governor said he would sign a disclaimer to remove his name from the Wisconsin ballot as soon as he is officially notified.

The committee also voted unanimously to list Sen Charles Percy of Illinois on the Republican ballot against announced candidates former V-Pres. Richard Nixon and Mich. Gov. George Romney.

Other Republicans named were Calif. Gov. Ronald Reagan and former Minn. Gov. Harold Stassen.

Reagan, who had said previously he would not campaign in Wisconsin, said he would not change his stand.

At Washington, Percy said he would "respectfully but firmly" file the affidavit needed to take his name off the ballot.

Of the six, only Nixon, Romney and Stassen are declared candidates for the GOP presidential nomination.

A person named to the ballot can remove his name only if he signs an affidavit that he is not and does not intend to become a candidate for president. The deadline for filing the disclaimer is February 29.

On split votes, the committee defeated attempts to place the names of Sen. Robert Kennedy of N. Y. and former Gov. George Wallace of Ala. on the ballot.

Pres. Johnson and Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota were the only Democrats named.

Wisconsin's primary law makes no provision for third party candidates.

Under the law, voters will have an opportunity to vote for any of the candidates listed, write in their own candidates, or vote against all of the candidates listed on either the Republican or Democratic ballots.

Auto Deaths Down in '67

"The final 1967 count of 860 persons killed in automobile accidents on the highways of the Commonwealth is a staggering loss of human life," Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin said. "But," he noted, "this is the first year we have experienced a decrease in the number of highway fatalities since 1963. The total represents a saving of 40 lives in 1967 over 1966.

McLaughlin also stated that this is a banner year for motor vehicle registrations with over two million cars already on the highways creating greater exposure to accidents than ever before.

Hampshire College Holds Third Library Conference

On January 25-26 Hampshire College held the third in a series of library planning conferences.

To make the Hampshire College Library a dynamic force, it is expected that all forms and types of information, both print and non-print, will be available. Included in the plans is an INTRAN (information transfer) Center which will allow the student to experiment and discover his own identity as an information-seeker.

The library conference dealt with the relationship of information transfer systems and experimentation to the design and function of the library.

One of the objectives was to provide the Hampshire College architects with more precise detail on the physical requirements of the relationships between the Library and INTRAN Center. Another explored the effect of new technology on the functions of libraries serving undergraduates. Ways were discussed by which the Library, through use of new technology, could move from a static warehouse to a dynamic institution, participating directly in the educational process.

An interesting idea discussed at the conference was that viewing the library as a physical place may be outmoded. The conferees discussed the possibility of making "total information" available on a "total campus" basis. By use of such devices as dial-access systems and random-access audio retrieval systems, the entire campus (or Connecticut Valley academic community) could be wired into a communications network, making "library" materials from any campus available throughout the Valley.

Publication To Appear on UMass Campus

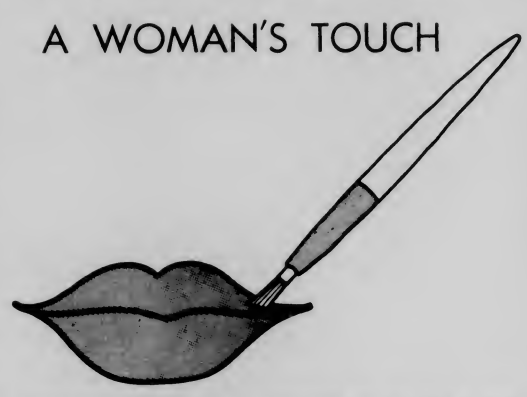
A small group of students and faculty have been meeting for the past two months over the possibility of establishing a new campus publication. Counterpoint, intended to be a free forum for all campus exchange of ideas concerning personal and social issues at UMass, is now ready to become a reality.

With a unique freedom and unusual style, it will attempt to provide a different contribution to the existing landscape provided by The Daily Collegian, and Mother of Voices.

Any student, faculty member or other person who would like to find out about Counterpoint, is welcome to attend an organizational meeting tonight at 9:00 p.m. in the lounge on the 12th floor of George Washington, T-6.

Housemother Is "Real" Mother

Coolidge Middle will provide residence this weekend for a blonde-haired, blue-eyed babe named Stephanie Silva.



The seven-pound, three-ounce baby girl was born Monday at 10:56 p.m. at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Silva.

Mrs. Silva, house mother of Calvin Coolidge Middle, claims the baby, "looks just like Walt." Her husband is the Assistant Area Co-ordinator of the Orchard Hill Complex.

Mrs. Silva will return to the dorm with the child probably sometime this weekend.

Ski Controversy Ends

DeGaulle Opens '68 Olympic Games

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Preside nt Charles de Gaulle beamed with pride as the Winter Olympics opened Tuesday, and G ames' officials were even happier later in the day after erasing a ski controversy tha t had threatened to reduce the Games to mini-Olympics.

Shortly after 60,000 spectators in Grenoble and an estimated 60 million television viewers in the United States and Europe heard de Gaulle proclaim the Games open and watched Alain Calmat light the Olympic flame, the United States dropped the opening match of the hockey competition, losing to Czechoslovakia 5-1.

More significant for the Games, however, was the compromise reached several hours later between the International Olympic Committee and the International Ski Federation in the ski-trademark controversy.

The IOC, which had wanted all manufacturers' names removed from skis of competitors, ruled after a lengthy session that skiing would remain in the Grenoble Olympics but that no skier would be permitted to show any trademarks on his skis at the end of a run.

The decision appeared to be acceptance by the IOC of a compromise formula proposed by FIS to leave the trademarks on but to make sure the skiers do not display their equipment to photographers and television cameras.

The IOC is opposed to skis bearing trademarks because it feels this practice is a commercial exploitation of the Olympics.

The compromise eliminated the possibility of the ski events being crossed off the Olympic program and being reduced to world championships. Skiing represents the backbone and much of the glamor of the Winter Games and its elimination from these Games would have damaged both the prestige and interest in them.

Marc Hedler of Switzerland, president of FIS, said any skier defying the new rule would be disqualified.

Aside from the opening ceremony, Tuesday's Olympic schedule was light.

The U.S.-Czechoslovakia hockey match was first, and it got the games off to a clean start.

Only four penalties were called in the game, three against the Americans, but the U.S. team was not happy, feeling that the referee kept the game in too tight a rein and never let the players cut loose.

Doug Volmar, an engineer from Minneapolis, scored the only U.S. goal, tying the game 1-1 at 16:22 of the first period with an assist from Larry Pleau of Boston.

Newly-Formed Girls' Rifle Team Notches First Win vs. Drexel

UMass' newly-formed Women's Rifle Team experienced its first victory this week when it defeated Drexel Institute of Technology, 1420-1407, in a prone postal match.

Top scorers for UMass were Captain Linda Dempsey with a 292 and Vicky Miller with a 286. High scorers for Drexel were Blair and Dauris, posting a 286 and 284 respectively.

Other significant UMass scorers were Karen MacNutt, 282; Kathy Izatt, 287; and Phyllis Coyne, 279.

The women's team posts a 1-1 record, having lost its first match to Harrisburg Polyclinic Student Nurses earlier this month.

Olympic Teams Dress Edwardian For Winter Games

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Olympic team styles have gone Edwardian this winter. Three-quarter length frock coats for men were favored by the most elegant teams in the opening parade of the 10th Winter Olympics.

The tiny nine-member Liechtenstein team in fur-trimmed Edwardian coats and fur hats was rated by many the best dressed team on parade.

Russian fur hats were in high favor—but not with the Soviet team which appeared in blue-and-white woolen caps tipped and a white pom-pom.

The American team wore red-stylish blazers buttoned off-center with a white band down the shoulders, dark blue ski pants and dark blue headbands.

Many of the American men disliked their uniforms which they said made them look like bellhops. But opinion was divided, and side-by-side with 36 countries the American outfit clearly had a better cut and finish than most of the others.

Athletes from 37 Countries Attend Olympics Opening in France

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — When the Olympic athletes first awoke Tuesday, they saw that rain and snow threatened to turn the opening ceremony into a dismal affair.

But by the time the approximately 1,350 athletes from 37 countries lined up for the march into the stadium, the storm had stopped and the sun had broken through the clouds.

Following the parade, President deGaulle, dressed in a dark overcoat and bareheaded, stepped to the microphone and proclaimed the opening of the 10th Olympic Winter Games.

Shortly afterwards Alvin Calmat, a former French Olympic figure skating ace, jogged into the stadium and up the row of 101 blue steps to the tower housing the flame.

At the top he turned and held the torch high toward the crowd. The spectators cheered loudly. Calmat then turned back to the bowl, touched it with the torch and the Olympic flame blazed in the sky. It will burn for the duration of the Games.

Competition in various other sports was scheduled to get under way in earnest Wednesday.

Women's figure skating was first on the list with Americans Peggy Fleming of Colorado Springs, Colo., Janet Lynn of Rockford, Ill., and Alberta Neyes of Arlington, Mass., set to skate through the first part of their compulsory figures.

The first medals were up for the winning in the men's 30-kilometer 18.6-mile cross-country ski race.

There was not much hope that the U.S. entrants — Charles Kellog of Boston, Mike Elliott of Durange, Colo., Mike Gallagher of Killington, Vt., and Jon Lufkin of Rumford, Maine—would finish higher than the middle of the strong 66-man field.

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — One of the loudest roars heard at the opening ceremony of the Olympics Tuesday was for 350 Olympic hostesses who came over the rim of the stadium and marched in formation onto the infield.

Labeled bunnies because of their red rabbit fur coats and tight fitting blue ski pants, the girls are serving as interpreters for athletes, newsmen and officials.

When President Charles de Gaulle sat down in the stadium, one of the bunnies rushed over and tried to place a blanket over his legs. But De Gaulle brushed her away, refusing the blanket, and the girl stepped aside.

As Alain Calmat ran up 101 steps to light the Olympic flame, the crowd of 60,000 could hear his heartbeat. An electronic device was attached to his chest, and the sound was amplified through the loudspeakers.

North Carolina Overwhelms Virginia, 108-64

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Third-ranked North C a r o l i n a trailed in the opening minutes and then roared back to score a 108-64 victory over Virginia in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Tuesday night.

The Tar Heels fell behind 12-6 in the first four minutes but at the half North Carolina had a 50-26 lead.

It was the sixth conference victory without a loss for the first place Tar Heels, who are 15-1 over-all. Virginia is 3-6 in the league and 6-12 over-all.

Broncos Sign Kuhman, Mitchell

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—The Denver Broncos have signed two University of Vermont football players, the American Football League team announced Tuesday.

They were Jeff Kuhman, a 6-foot-3 tight end, who was picked in the 15th round of the common draft last week, and halfback Bob Mitchell, who signed as a free agent.

Ruth Birthplace Becomes Shrine

BALTIMORE (AP) — The birthplace of baseball immortal Babe Ruth, saved from demolition in December, was turned over to the city of Baltimore Tuesday to be preserved as a shrine.

The transfer of title was made on the 73rd birthday of the Baltimore native who became baseball's greatest slugger and gate attraction. The Babe died of cancer in 1948.

Leaman Says, 'Nothing Could've Stopped B. C.'

By STEVE ROSS
Staff Reporter

CHESTNUT HILL — Last night the Boston College Eagles vented the frustration which they had been building up since last Saturday's stunning 89-82 loss against Holy Cross by scalping the Redmen 94-70 before a near capacity crowd at the Heights.

Boston College showed the potential which the pre-season swamees had predicted. Every facet of their game was near perfection. The Redmen were off their game all night; they were hardly shooting or passing. In the first half, Terry Driscoll got the Eagles off to a flying start with an eight point lead. With only four minutes on the clock, the score showed the Eagles ahead 13-5.

The Redmen were plagued with poor ball handling and "Sara Lee" basketball as they committed 13 turnovers. However, the vital statistics were the shots taken by each team. Boston College was 22 for 41, and the Redmen were 10 for 23.

At the end of the first half, Boston College led 50-29, Driscoll paced the Eagles with 10 points and Tom Verranow chipped in with eight points. The Redmen could not get close in the second half as Coach Bob Cousy emptied the Eagle bench.

Boston College continued to be the dominant force in the game as they built up a large 86-54 lead behind the driving shots of Pete Sollene who was aided by Vera-now and Driscoll. For the Redmen, Ray Ellerbrook had a magnificant half.

Ellerbrook led all the scorers with 25 points. Driscoll paced the Eagles with 21 points. Sollene and Veranow eacn had 12 points for Boston College and Bob Dukiet had 10. The only other Redman to hit double figures was Billy Tindall with 17.

REDMAN RANTINGS . . . U-Mass Coach Jack Leaman said of Boston College, "They're the finest team I've seen this season. We really lost Saturday when Holy Cross beat them. They were sky high and nothing could ha' e stopped them tonight."

Cousy called this "our finest effort this season, with the possible exception of UCLA. If we played like this all the time, no one would ever beat us."

Cousy, puffing on a cigar ala Red Auerbach, had high praise for Ellerbrook and Tindall, and he marvelled at Ellerbrook's shooting.

Driscoll took BC out of the starting gate, and the Eagles ran like never before. It was their finest game of the season.

It is doubtful anyone could have taken the Eagles, Anyone at all.

Ailing Olympic Skaters Recover

GRENOBLE (AP)—The stomach trouble that confined three U.S. speed skaters to bed for 2 days disappeared Tuesday, allowing them to train and march in the opening ceremony of the 10th Winter Olympics.

First to throw off the bug which has hit many athletes here for the Games, was Bill Legigan, 20, of New York.

He even weathered a heavy snow storm to take a practice run around the cold, open air track before returning to the Olympic village for the march to the opening ceremony.

Lanigan will not compete until Feb. 14, when the men's speed skating starts.

Also free from illness was Diane Holum, 16, of Northbrook, Ill. one of the few Americans considered to have a chance for a speed skating medal. She also took a spin around the track.

The third skater, Toy Dorgan, 21, of Springfield, Ill., was able to leave the villege, but the team doctor decided she should not chance catching cold by training.

Freshman Pucksters Defeat American International, 10-6

By RICH FRANKLIN
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshman hockey team broke out with five goals in the first period and held on for a 10-6 win over American International College Monday night at Orr Rink in Amherst. The victory was the team's second against three losses for the season.

Woody Cook led all scorers by turning in a hat trick, two of the three scores coming unassisted. Mike Fallon followed closely with two tallies and an assist and Mike Murray had one goal and three assists.

Murray opened the scoring with an unassisted goal with only six seconds gone on the clock. Tom Peters beat in a rebound at 1:04 of the period, assists going to Murray and Ed Riley. At 2:50 of the period Paul Riley, assisted by Murray, scored the third goal for UMass before the A.I.C. goalie had made any saves at all. The frosh scored twice more in the period with a tally by A.I.C. sandwiched between the two. Both were by Cook, the first unassisted and the second with help from Fallon.

The scoring was all even in the second period, with both teams netting three apiece. The scores banged home by Ed Riley, Cook, and Fallon were all unassisted.

The four goal advantage gained by UMass in the opening period held up as the scoring was again even in the final period. UMass chalked up two more, as did A.I.C. Jerry Burke scored the ninth goal for the frosh, with assists going to Murray and Paul Riley. Fallon ended the scoring for the night with 25 seconds remaining in the contest.

It was a fine offensive effort for the Little Redmen, and they showed promise of salvaging a good season after a dismal start. Larry Walsh, between the pipes, turned in another good performance, kicking out 24 shots.

The freshmen face their next opponent, New Prep, to whom they lost earlier in the season, in an away game Feb. 12.

Frosh Hoopsters Fall To Boston College 70-58

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

CHESTNUT HILL — Hampered by excessive fouling and a taller Boston College team, the UMass freshman basketball team was defeated heree yesterday, 70-58.

Trailing by only two at halftime, 33-31, the Little Redmen were quickly put farther behind in the second half. Boston College outscored UMass 16-4 in the first eight minutes and forced UMass into an uphill battle they could not win. Leading the charge for the Eaglets was Greg Sees, who scored nine points in this period of time. Also playing a big role in the B.C. attack by his ball stealing and handling was guard Jim O'Brien.

Probably the biggest factor in the Boston College surge was the fouls. The Eaglets went to the foul strip 34 times while the Little Redmen only took 22 charity tosses. Ken Mathias, star UMass center, picked up four fouls at 19:25 in the second half and fouled out seven minutes later.

After falling behind by as much as 16 points with only eight minutes left, UMass made valiant attempts to stage a comeback. Leading the rally was Bill Greeley, Jon Kruper, and Frank Shaffeld, who was substituting for Mathias.

UMass cut the BC lead to seven points with 6:28 left on a three point play by Greeley. However, Boston College proceeded to score five straight and was never in trouble again.

The first half was a close one all the way. The largest lead at halftime was four points as both teams were cold from the outside. Greeley and Jim Ryan were the only Little Redmen to consistently find the range, and it was their shooting which kept UMass in the game.

BC meanwhile, aided by the absence of Mathias due to foul trouble, was getting two and three shots at the hoop to overcome their poor shooting. UMass shot only 35 percent in the basketball ball game, while BC was little better with 40 percent. UMass made two lineup changes by starting Stan Kinard at forward and Bob Dempsey in the back court.

Leading all scorers was Sees of Boston College with 21 points and Fitzgerald and O'Brien with 14 and 13 respectively. UMass was led by Greeley and Shaffeld with 13 apiece and Ryan with ten.

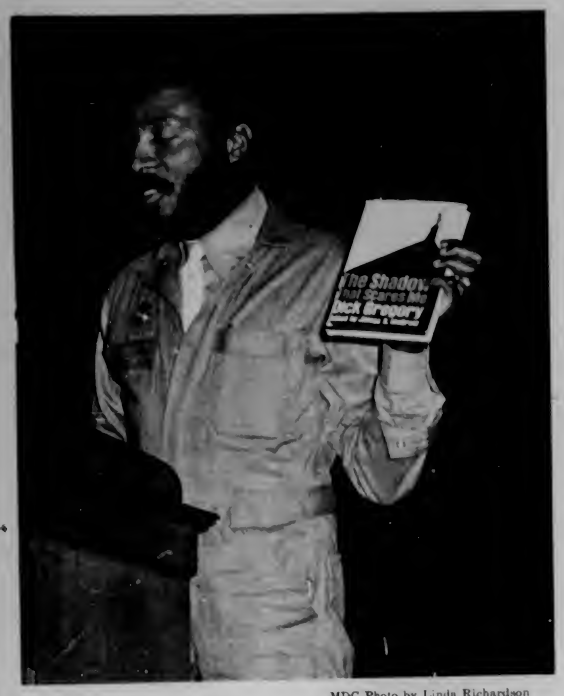
Records Broken in Intrasquad Track Meet

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

Eight meet records and three frosh records were broken, and one school record was tied at the Second Annual UMass Intrasquad Track Meet held last Saturday in Boyden Gym and Curry Hicks Cage. The Maroon squad avenged the loss which they suffered last year to the White Team with a crushing 61-33 victory.

Leading the Maroons were record breakers Marble in the 50-yard dash, 5.6 seconds; Gerry Spellman in the 45-yard hurdles, 5.9 seconds; Ron Wayne in the 1000-yard run, 2:21.6; John Anderson in the 600, 1:14.9 and Charles Lang in the two mile, 9:38.6.

However, the White team also had its share of record breakers in Greg Bowman in the mile, 4:22.5; Cal Carpenter in the high jump, 6'4; and Buzz Hiller in the pole vault, 12'3. Both Carpenter's and Hiller's jumps also established frosh records. Another frosh record was set by Wayne who took a second in the mile in 4:23.0. Frosh Spellman's time of 5.9 not only broke the record, but it also tied the school mark.



Other winners were Arcaro in the shot, 46' 7; and Canterburry in the broad jump, 19' 3½. The relay was won by a Maroon team made up of Tom Derderian, Ed Heywood, Clarence Gaynor, and Spellman. The difference in the meet was the great edge in depth enjoyed by the Maroons.

The best races of the day were the 600, 1000, and mile. In the 600, Anderson took the lead over Bob Hasselbaum at the start and held it all the way to the tape, to win by one second. Wayne used the same strategy as he jumped out to an early lead and kept it all the way beating Maroon teammate Elliot Stevens by eight tenths of a second.

The mile also proved to be an interesting contest as Wayne grabbed the lead, followed by Bowman. It remained that way for eight laps. It was at this moment that Bowman moved ahead of Wayne in the stretch for a half second victory.

For his first place in the 1000 and second in the mile which broke the frosh record, Wayne was a near-unanimous choice for Athlete of the Meet Award.

Dick Gregory, comedian turned civil rights leader addressed a capacity size crowd last night in the Cage. The theme of a sick, insane American society was dominant throughout his speech. Read interview with Dick Gregory in tomorrow's Collegian.

Dick Gregory Criticizes "Our Insane Democracy"

By DON EPSTEIN
Day Editor

"We live in a country so sick and insane that even riots help out." Using these words, Dick Gregory, comedian turned civil rights leader, described his opinions of contemporary American society to a capacity crowd of over 3,000 last night in the Curry Hicks Cage.

Gregory claimed that the number one problem affecting America today is not air pollution but moral pollution. Gregory asked, "When are we going to stop lying and try to honestly settle the problems affecting the country."

In his speech Gregory praised the black power movement headed by Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown. He called America the most "racist country on the face of the earth." He explained his point further by saying that America is so sick that black people as well as white people are racists.

Gregory said that Carmichael's statement telling the white people to get out of the civil rights movement was an "honest, ethical, and moral statement." He told the audience "before you young college students go down south to bug your white cousins, take a Negro home and bug your mother and father in your northern white suburbs. Stay out of our business and don't make comments about something you know nothing about."

In his speech, Gregory urged Martin Luther King to stop preaching non-violence to Negroes and start preaching it to whites." He spoke of how he and Carmichael got fed up with the non-violent philosophy. He told of the day when non-violent Negroes were knocked down and stomped on by white policemen in Birmingham, Alabama.

He related a personal experience of when he was walking one day in Greenwood, Mississippi with a little boy. A white man threw a brick which hit a five-year old Negro boy in the mouth. "You never lived until you saw a brick hit a five-year old in the mouth."

Gregory predicted new riots in the cities this summer and he said that the riots will continue until we stop making the ghetto a battle ground and turn it into a lab.

He concluded, "it is a mark of insanity when a nation as powerful as ours gets frightened over the two simple words 'black power'. He compared H. Rap Brown to Patrick Henry; 'give me liberty, or give me death'."

Gregory, who is a candidate for president, said that if he was ever elected he would "bring all the boys home from Vietnam and send LBJ there all by himself."

He said it's time for our government to start telling the truth. "Sure we killed 22,000 Vietcong this past week, but how many civilians were also killed."

Referring to the picture which appeared in many papers this week of the chief of police of Saigon executing a Vietcong terrorist, Gregory said, "America is supposed to be instilling freedom and democracy in Vietnam, and that includes trial by jury." He said that the picture was evidence that "the whole damn country ain't worth the saving."

Sam Spark Exonerated

The Ways and Means Committee of the Student Senate, under Chairman Tim Roche, concluded its investigation of the Daily Collegian's expenditure of $2,230.60 for the production of Sam Sparks Greatest Hits with a report favoring the Daily Collegian.

According to the Committee's report, the Daily Collegian's action in publishing the special was entirely legal as no particular specifications were placed on the paper's budget for specials. As a result, the Daily Collegian was found by the Committee to have the right to determine for itself the nature of any special it wishes to publish within the $4,875 specials category passed in its budget last year by the Senate.

Following the Ways and Means report, there was no further objection to the special expressed on the floor of the Senate.

Senate Clarifies Open House Stand

By PETE WARD
Senate Reporter

Due to confusion regarding the Student Senate's action concerning civil disobedience last week, the Daily Collegian wishes to re-state the position of the senate on this issue.

Bill S47, as passed by the Senate last week, does not call for immediate illegal open houses by residence halls. It merely sets up the procedure by which the Senate could call for such actions.

The bill reads:

"Be it enacted that the Student Senate unilaterally authorize all houses to hold open houses according to S46 (Fac. Senate Student Affairs committee report concerning open houses) commencing with a separate vote of the Senate to that effect. This vote shall not be considered special business, but shall require the consent of two thirds present."

According to Senate President Collins, the Senate would authorize the use of illegal open houses only if the student proposals were unreasonably rejected or stalled. According to the bill, such authorization would require two-thirds approval in the Student Senate.

President Collins stressed that no house should attempt to hold an illegal open house without the support of such a two-thirds vote of the Senate. He felt that any illegal action undertaken independently of the Senate and the rest of the campus could only damage the unity and the cause of the majority of students.

Communists OK If Elected, Says Romney

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Campaigning Gov. George Romney said Wednesday if the people of South Vietnam were to freely elect a Communist government "what right have we to say that they can't have it?"

The Michigan governor said he does not think that would be the outcome of an open election, free of terrorism.

But as he roamed New Hampshire seeking Republican presidential primary votes, Romney called the current Saigon government a "narrow, restrictive" regime. "Corruption is rampant," he said. He said the situation must be changed.

"That government wouldn't last more than a couple or three weeks without our support," Romney told some 50 people in a storefront headquarters at Meredith.

Answering telephoned questions on a radio station, Romney asserted that the Communist Viet Cong commands more sympathy among the people in Vietnam than the government in Saigon.

"I don't believe the bulk of the

LBJ Calls for Assault on Crime, Emphasizes Stricter Firearms Control

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson asked Congress Wednesday to approve a massive assault on crime, with special emphasis on tougher laws to curb dangerous drugs-mainly LSD and other hallucinogens.

The program also includes individual efforts aimed against organized crime, gambling, rioting and alcoholism.

The President linked a renewed call for legislation to curb firearms sales with a new proposal which would make it a crime to cross state lines to incite riots. He said these are aimed at "two causes of death and destruction — the criminal agitator and the gun."

Johnson called again for enactment of his Safe Streets and Crime Control legislation—and doubled the first year's appropriation request to $100 million. Last year he asked for $50 million to help cities and states improve local law enforcement and raise police salaries.

Johnson aimed a special appeal to governors and mayors, asking them to review their criminal laws and their courts and to be sure they have "efficient, well-trained and fully supported police departments and law enforcement agencies."

He emphasized that the responsibility for local law enforcement lies with local government and the "federal government must never assume the role of the nation's policeman."

Johnson's anti-crime proposals went to Congress in two messages — one devoted entirely to dangerous drugs. The President called for creation of a new and powerful Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. It would be part of the Justice Department, with a director appointed by the attorney general.

Nucleus of the new agency would be the Bureau of Narcotics, now part of the Treasury Department, and the Bureau of Drug Abuse Control, now in the Department of Welfare, Johnson would boost the number of agents in the two agencies by about one-third.

The President said he wants legislation to make the illegal manufacture, sale and distribution of LSD and other dangerous drugs a felony, and possession a misdemeanor. Currently, manufacture and sale of LSD are misdemeanors, and there is no federal penalty for possession.

"Drug abuse presents an insidious and growing threat to our nation's health, particularly the health of young people," Johnson said.

California State Policeman escorts members of the armed Black Panther Party as they protested a bill restricting the carrying of firearms in public. Johnson called for legislation curbing firearms sales to attempt to check increasing crime in the streets.

Hanoi's Big Drive?

Special Forces Camp Leveled

By EWDIN Q. WHITE

SAIGON (AP)—Radio messages from a Special Forces camp on the western flank of U.S. Marine lines below the demilitarized zone told of heavy inroads on the camp Wednesday by Hanoi regulars attacking for the first known time with Russian-made tanks.

Sporadic fighting persisted in and around Saigon, much of it in the Chinese sector, Cholon. Jet bombers heavily attacked an enemy detachment spotted shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday five miles south of the city limits. Explosion of the bombs jarred windows in the heart of the city.

The menaced Special Forces camp was Lang Vei, a lookout post in the mountains near the northwest corner of South Vietnam.

The fight drew attention again to the forecast of allied authorities that North Vietnamese divisions will strike south in the wake of the bloody Communist offensive that has challenged political and military alignments in South Vietnam.

In a claim that didn't jibe with American reports, Radio Hanoi declared the camp was overrun at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday after a fight of little more than two hours and the defenders were annihilated or captured. It said two outposts to the south also fell.

Saigon authorities said five of the tanks were destroyed, four by the defenders' 57mm recoilless rifles and the other by air strikes. But the toll on the garrison was obviously heavy. Red flame throwers were reported to have driven defenders from perimeter gun posts.

A Special Forces sergeant at one point radioed Da Nang that only five of the 25 Americans were still alive—he and four others in a headquarters bunker. He said a wrecked tank was on top of the bunker. All the camp's installations above ground had been leveled.

Asked whether the Lang Vei action might be the start of Hanoi's big drive, a senior member of Gen. William C. Westmoreland's staff commented: "I wouldn't go that far."

There were other clashes across the country, but in many areas the fighting had tapered off from the intensity of last week and the people were trying to begin a recovery from the destructive attacks that hit 35 populated centers.

In Saigon, intermittent street fighting erupted Wednesday, most of it in the Chinese sector of Cholon or in the outskirts. There was no pattern to the fighting as government troops moved freely through areas that had been Viet Cong strongholds last week.

Summer Courses Offered By Michigan State Univ.

Students from across the United States are enrolling now in the new courses offered in Europe this summer by the American Language and Educational Center (AMLEC) of Michigan State University.

Political science at London, Engiand; Lausanne, Switzerland, and Florence, Italy, will be offered. Also scheduled are courses in humanities and graduate education at London.

The courses, taught by MSU professors-in-residence and supplemented by experts in the home countries, provide a new approach in these subject-matter fields.

MSU credit is given for the successful completion of the summer's work. Enrollment deadline for these courses has been extended to March 11.

Credit and noncredit language programs in Europe are also open to qualified students in the AMLEC program, with the deadline set at May 1.

Credit language courses include German at Cologne, Germany; French at Paris, France, and Spanish at Madrid, Spain. Noncredit courses are set at Cologne, Paris and Madrid, in addition to French at Lausanne, Switzerland; Italian at Florence, Italy, and Spanish at Barcelona, Spain.

Interested students can obtain more information by contacting the AMLEC office, 107 Center for International Programs, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan 48823, Telephone 517 353-8921.

Governor Kirk Withdraws from N. H. Primary

CONCORD, N. H. (AP) — Florida Gov. Claude Kirk Jr. told newsmen Wednesday that he is not a candidate for president and that he is withdrawing his name from the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary ballot.

The entry of his name in the New Hampshire primary, Kirk said, "will have a long-term historic effect — it has killed sectionalism — no longer will sectionalism be a determining factor in the choice of our national leadership."

Kirk added, "Up to now, the only way for a Southerner in modern times to occupy the White House has been to enter through the back door."

Kirk said he will go to the Republican national convention in Miami as a favorite son, and added that he will support whoever wins the GOP presidential nomination.

Blinstrub's Razed by Fire

BOSTON (AP)—Richard Cardinal Cushing, Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, and comedian Jimmy Durante have pledged their aid to the owner of Blinstrub's, the nationally known nightclub destroyed in a five-alarm fire Wednesday.

Loss in the fire was unofficially estimated at $1.25 million.

The owner, Stanley Blinstrub, who established the club 35 years ago, said he didn't carry "a penny's worth of fire insurance."

In recent years, Blinstrub and Cardinal Cushing sponsored Thanksgiving parties in the club for elderly persons living alone.

The Cardinal said Wednesday he would start a campaign to raise $100,000 because "Stanley Blinstrub never once sent me a bill for the parties for over 1,500 people."

Cardinal Cushing said the money thus saved went to aid emotionally upset children, the sick and the poor.

The night club was to have been the scene of Durante's 75th birthday celebration, starting this Friday, and the comedian said he lost costumes valued at $7,500 and manuscripts in the fire.

Durante said he would come to Boston sometime next week to stage a performance to benefit Blinstrub.

Blinstrub estimated the building loss at $750,000 and the stock of food and liquor at another $500,000.

No one was reported injured in the fire.

Towering clouds of smoke, seen several miles away, hampered firemen in their efforts to battle the flames that engulfed the building.

The club was one of the most popular in Boston and presented top stars of the entertainment world. It was one of the largest in the country with accommodations for 2,200 patrons.

Cardinal Cushing said Blinstrub "ran the cleanest, most attractive night club in the city." He said that every politician owes a debt to Blinstrub and "they should help him now."

Credibility Gap Narrows; Civilian Casualties Admitted

BEN TRE, Vietnam (AP)—"It became necessary to destroy the town to save it," a U.S. major said Wednesday.

He was talking about the grim decision that allied commanders made when Viet Cong attackers overran most of this Mekong Delta city 45 miles southwest of Saigon.

They decided that regardless of civilian casualties they must bomb and shell the once placid river city of 35,000 to rout the Viet Cong forces.

Heavy guns were turned on the city's streets. Jet fighter-bombers carrying bombs, rockets and napalm were ordered into the attack.

The decision was not taken lightly, U.S. advisers asserted.

"They are our friends out there," said one American, pointing to the smoking city. "We waited until we had no choice. The Vietnamese chief of staff had to bring in an air strike on the house of his neighbor."

Ben Tre was one of the cities attacked by the Viet Cong at the height of last week's fighting. Details of its destruction in the three-day battle to oust the Viet Cong became known Wednesday.

Available casualty statistics indicate that at least as many Vietnamese civilians as combatants died in the battle.

U.S. advisers said the heavy allied firepower hurled on the city to drive out the Viet Cong probably contributed largely to the deaths of at least 500 civilians and possibly 1,000. South Vietnamese officials say the enemy dead totaled 451. About 50 Vietnamese soldiers died, along with more than 20 Americans from the U.S. 9th Infantry Division.

Lt. Col. James Dare of Chicago, commander of U.S. Advisory Team 93, said "we will never know for sure" the number of civilians who died."

"Many families are buried permanently under the rubble," he said.

Americans say 45 per cent of the city was destroyed. The Vietnamese province chief said that if the village environs are considered, Ben Tre was 85 per cent destroyed.

U.S. Officers say the firepower had to be used and that allied casualties would have been far higher if heavy firepower had not been employed.

The battle opened when a regimental-sized enemy force of approximately 2,500 men invaded the city and the surrounding villages, U.S. advisers said. The decision to use jets and heavy guns to dislodge the attackers was made early in the battle when the Viet Cong almost had the city under its control.

The Ben Tre defenders said the Viet Cong was containing Vietnamese and U.S. forces trying to counterattack and that the Viet Cong seized the radio station and began broadcasting to the population.

U.S. advisers said the Viet Cong occupied the city so rapidly it was not possible to warn civilians of the impending air strikes or the artillery barrages, particularly with the Viet Cong in control of the radio station.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—U.S. Ambassador John A. Gronouski had a secret meeting Jan. 26 with a North Vietnamese emissary in Warsaw, U.N. diplomats said Wednesday.

Gronouski set up the meeting, they said, and it took place at a hotel, "neutral ground."

The talk presumably had to do with how to bring about discussions to settle the war in Vietnam. But the diplomats, both Eastern and Western, could not say how it came out.

Library Committee Lacks Student

A small box on page 6 of Tuesday's paper notified the student body that there are vacancies on three joint student-faculty committees open to any student. Included among the vacancies was one on the Faculty Senate Library Committee. The charge of this committee whose membership allows for two students with full voting privileges is to (i) recommend policies for the development of the library so as to serve the academic and research needs of the University. (ii) Advise the Director of Libraries and recommend policies for the operation of the library."

It was the feeling of the joint student-faculty study committee reporting in the spring of 1966 that at least two students should be added to the Library Committee—this recommendation was subsequently approved and put into effect.

One would assume that the purpose of this committee is a valid one which should appeal to the interests of many—to the interests of nearly everyone who has ever used the library. Furthermore, this committee can be compared to the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate (the committee working on the open house proposal) in its University role, a role providing for students, faculty and administration to sit and advise together.

Among the matters of special interests to students that the committee formally and informally has discussed recently are: additional reverse book locations, revision of the overdue fine schedule, extension of library hours during the final exam period, why the library closed during the Christmas recess after it had announced it would be open, what authority do the security personnel have. Issues of importance affecting the entire University community have included the new library building, the report of an accrediting association, the all books current acquisition program, the supplementary budget request, and the search for a permanent library director.

The Library Committee this year interpreted a statement of the American Association of University Professors that "The faculty should have primary responsibility for determining the educational policies of the institution," to mean the committee should have primary responsibility for determining library policy.

In response to the committee statement, the acting director of the University libraries commented: "it is possible to decide which policies the library should follow only through discussions in the Library Committee involving participation of faculty, students, and staff. He stressed the importance of keeping programs of the library responsive to the needs of the University, which can be done only through working together and discussing issues as they come up." (Minutes, Jan. 4, 1968).

This committee is one of the primary avenues open to the students to address complaints on service directly to the man who is in charge; the libraries' director is a member of the committee. It is the vehicle through which students can offer the suggestions which come only to the individuals using the facilities. This is the committee concerned with long-range planning—shall there be open or closed stacks in the new library.

But this is also a committee which must gain its full student membership this year. It is a committee which should not suffer the fate of the Master Planning Committee on which students were given a virtual brush-off until they woke up.

But this is a committee which for the large part of last year, 1966-1967, had student representation in name only and for this academic year has had only one student member. Is one student enough representation for 11,500?

(Anyone interested in the committee should contact the Vice President of the Student Senate.)

Two Senate Treasurers Agree Publication Was Approved

To the editor:

At this time I am compelled to answer Mr. Mellor's charges in the letters to the editor's column concerning the Sam Spark special.

Mr. Mellor was at both meetings of the Student Senate last year when the budget was voted and passed. He voiced no objections at that time. I have enclosed a letter from last year's treasurer, Burt Freedman, which will explain how the Sam Spark Special was budgeted. I don't believe that the Sam Spark Special picked any favorites.

To use a cliche, "it has something to offend everyone."

The publishing of Yahoo for this year was blocked by the administration, but that is no reason to quit. The Sam Spark Special was an example to anyone that college humor can be executed in good "taste".

It is just a lucky thing that the editors of Yahoo had only the Record American, the Legislature and the Administration angry at them. If Mr. Mellor had thrown his weight against them too, they might have been burned at the stake.

Paul J. Silverman
Treasurer, Student Senate

Dear Treasurer Silverman:

It has come to my attention that a question has been raised concerning the disbursement of funds in sub-category 221a, "Specials" in the Collegian Budget, 1967-1968.

As last year's Senate Treasurer, I was particularly involved in the authorization of the Collegian Budget. Because of the large percentage of student taxes involved, the Collegian Budget was carefully scrutinized more than one time in the Budgets Committee of which I was Chairman. To the best of my knowledge (and I believe that can be substantiated by members of last year's committee) the Budgets Committee received the following request for funds in sub-category 221a:

That a portion of these funds would be used to publish a Collegian sponsored anthology of Sam Spark's various articles, to be printed in the form of a booklet distinct from the Daily Collegian. This request was approved in the Budgets Committee and also by the entire Senate.

It is indeed unfortunate that this authorization was not made more explicit in the Student Government Association Budget Act. However, it is clear in my mind that the word "Specials" under subcategory 221a was specifically earmarked for the Sam Spark Anthology. Therefore, in my opinion, there has been no illegal or unethical expenditure of funds from sub-category 221a of the Collegian Budget. I hope that this statement will help clear up the confusion on this matter.

She Thinks She Deserves Her License

To the editor:

When I read Craig Friar's letter to the editor, I found it very hard to believe. For those of you who missed the letter it concerned the auto accident that killed 17 year old Janet Kolb, '70. Friar pointed out that the driver, Mrs. Christine Blackmer, 84, was found guilty of "failing to slow down for a pedestrian and paid a $25 fine."

This was such an outrage to me that I had to investigate some of the facts. I had faith in society and its ability to correct or discipline deviants. However, after personally speaking to Mrs. Blackmer, I was dumbfounded. After a few dazed moments, I could feel strength soar through every blood vessel, wanting to strike at anything but knowing I was on the verge of tears.

Friar did not know if Mrs. Blackmer still had her license. I found that the Registry had suspended her license. However, Mrs. Blackmer told me that the suspension was not permanent. The Registry is investigating the situation.

I asked Mrs. Blackmer that even though she may get her license back, to please refrain from driving (suggesting that maybe she was too old to adequately handle a car anymore), to which she sharply replied, "Well, I don't know. I want it back." I asked her if the death would change her attitude about driving, and after some discussion in which it seemed she tried to turn the conversation into a bitter argument, she concluded by saying, "I think I deserve my license."

I must admit to the readers that I do not have all the facts to the case and do not wish to act as judge and jury. However, this woman's attitude was beyond my belief.

I suspect this is what life is all about. This is probably only a minor injustice to humanity but I still harbor naive and idealistic feelings toward people, feelings which seem totally irrelevant in our society.

Pueblo

Spying and Wealth Determine Offshore Limits

THE SEIZURE OF THE PUEBLO and the legality of its seizure have raised serious questions about how far territorial waters extend from a nation's coast. Virtually all world powers use spy ships to acquire information on the military strength of others.

Voices in the U.S. Senate have called for reciprocal limits. That is, if ships can't go closer than 12 miles to Russia, Russia can't come closer than 12 miles to our shores. This plan is reasonable, but confusion could occur. We might have Russian vessels 12 miles out, French 11¾, Chinese 9 11/16 and so on.

A less confusing plan would be for all nations to agree to the same system of limits.

Because of the exploration of the ocean and its floor and the continuing discovery of valuable resources, nations are interested in preserving as much of their offshore property as possible. The necessity of retaining ocean wealth must be merged with the reality of spying and offshore limits regulated accordingly. The immediate crisis again calls us to action, to make wise decisions of basic policy.

Christian Science Monitor Editor To Speak at Smith College

Erwin Dain Canham, editor in chief of the Christian Science Monitor, will speak in Wright Hall, Smith College on February 13 at 8 p.m. His lecture, "The Changed Terms of International Power," is cosponsored by the Christian Science Organization and the Student Lecture Commiittee. The public is invited to attend.

Mr. Canham is one of the nation's leading writers, radio and television commentators, public speakers and one of the best-known American editors in the world.

Several American presidents have chosen Mr. Canham to serve on various boards and commissions.

In June 1966, Mr. Canham was elected president of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston.

One of the most notable of the books written by Mr. Canham is "Commitment to Freedom," the story of The Christian Science Monitor. His most recent book, written with DeWitt John, is "The Christian Science Way of Life," with "A Christian Scientist's Life," which was published in 1962.

Mr. Canham is now serving as moderator of a television program, "Starring the Editors," a Boston newspaper panel appearing on Sunday afternoons on the W.B.Z. network.

Tank Attack

SAIGON (AP) — Tank-led North Vietnamese infantrymen overwhelmed the Lang Vei Special Forces camp but some of the American Green Beret advisers were lifted to safety in a dramatic helicopter rescue, the U.S. Command announced Thursday.

Cancellation Notice

The University of Massachusetts music department has announced changes in this season's faculty recital series because of the death of assistant professor of music and pianist Howard Lebow.

Prof. Lebow died Jan. 14 of injuries sustained in an auto collision in Amherst the previous day. A two-part recital Feb. 11 in which he was to have appeared with cellist Joel Krosnick has been cancelled, as has a Lebow solo piano recital May 1.

A recital March 6 in which he was to have appeared with Prof. Krosnick and violinist Julian Olevsky will be held. Mrs. Estela Olevsky will be the pianist.

ROTC Accepting Applications

Air Force ROTC is accepting applications from those students who are interested in obtaining an Air Force commission and who will have two academic years remaining with the beginning of the 1968-1969 academic year.

The two-year program is designed for those students who have decided to seek a commission since entering the University or have transferred from a college not offering Air Force ROTC. The two years may be undergraduate, graduate, or a combination of both.

Applicants seeking enrollment must pass a written examination, pass the Air Force physical, and be selected by an interview board of Air Force officers. Those who qualify will be scheduled to attend a six-week Field Training Course during the summer of 1968. The student receives travel pay and salary while at the summer camp.

During the two years in the programs, cadets receive $50.00 per month in tax-free pay. Air Force ROTC also offers a Flight Instruction Program for those seeking a flying career. Those enrolled receive free ground school and 36 hours of actual flight instruction. Successful completion of the flight program can lead to the award of a private pilot's license.

Processing of applications will soon close and interested students should apply as soon as possible. Additional information about the program may be obtained from the Air Force ROTC Detachment in Dickinson Hall.

Frosh Visit Springfield Tonight, Then Face J. C. Phenom Saturday

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

Traveling to Springfield tonight for a rematch with the Springfield College frosh, the freshman basketball team can be excused if they are looking ahead to Saturday's encounter here with Franklin Pierce College. The Rindge, New Hampshire school features the highest scoring player in the nation.

This extraordinary ballplayer is 6'1 Bob Szklarz from Worcester. Szklarz, who played for a New England Catholic championship team at St. Mary's of Worcester two years ago, was averaging a phenomenal 52 points per game going into a game tonight. He has had an almost unbelievable high game of 85 points. Needless to say, Szklarz should make for an interesting evening for the Little Redmen.

Szklarz is supported by two other double figure scorers, 6'1 John Rubin, a 12 point scorer from New Rochelle, N.Y., and 6'1 Gerald Scott, averaging 10 points, from Manchester, N.H. The 8-5 Franklin Pierce team will also start 6'3 Mike Woodhead from Southsworth, N.H., and Mike Turnesa, 5'8, from Elmsford, N. J.

The Springfield team that the Little Redmen face tonight is a team which they defeated a week ago, 54-51. Springfield has been without two of its better ballplayers, Steve Waterman and Sam Provo, for the past few games. However, the fact that the game is on the Chiefs' home court and also the mere fact that UMass won in the first meeting by only three indicates a tough ballgame for the frosh.

Tuesday night's loss to Boston College indicates the importance of 6'6 Ken Mathias to the Little Redmen. Ken fouled out early in the second half and UMass went on to lose the ballgame, 70-58. The frosh have now lost three ballgames and in all three, Mathias got in foul trouble and eventually did foul out. His presence in the lineup is therefore imperative.

A bright spot in the defeat to B. C. was the play of guard Bill Greeley. Greeley, who has been a steady ballhandler and floor general all season, scored his season high of 13 points. Also in a fine performance for UMass was Frank Schaffeld, who subbing for the fouled-out Mathias played a strong board game and scored 13 points.

The play of these two almost led the Little Redmen to a successful comeback. Trailing by 16 points, the frosh came fighting back to within seven points, only to see their upset hopes shattered by the foul shooting of Boston College.

O'Brien Named Track Coach

Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk today announced the appointment of Kenneth O'Brien as head coach of cross country and track at UMass.

O'Brien has served as assistant track and cross country coach for Redmen teams for the past two years and succeeds William Footrick who retired last month after fourteen years as UMass track coach.

In commenting on the new appointment, McGuirk said, "Within a year the University of Massachusetts will have one of the finest outdoor tracks in the East, an all weather surfaced 9-lane Olympic size facility. In Ken O'Brien we feel we have an outstanding coach to help us make the optimum use of this wonderful new track."

A native of Foxboro, Massachusetts, O'Brien was an outstanding all around athlete in high school and won ten letters in football, basketball, baseball, and track. He earned six letters in track and cross country while an undergraduate at UMass, and during his sophomore, junior and senior years was an outstanding performer on the cross country squad which won three straight Yankee Conference crowns and in 1962 were New England Champions.

He ran a 1:52:7 half mile at the Yankee Conference Track Championships in Orono, Maine, in 1962 and that performance still stands in the Conference record book. An honor student in the School of Physical Education, O'Brien was awarded the ECAC Merit Award during his senior year as the outstanding scholar-athlete in the senior class.

In 1964 and 1965 he was assistant track coach at Ohio University, and also spent a year as head coach of track and cross country at Bridgeport University.

Here a young professional ski instructor "spreads" off a 2-meter jump at the recent Glundersprüng contest. Although he shows good form, he lost points due to his jump not being a glundersprüng.

Daily Collegian Photo by John Kelly

Winning form in the Eastern Glundersprüng Championship is exhibited by the Ski School director of Sugarbush Valley. His winning leap of 87 feet topped all professionals during the competition recently at Glen Ellen, Vermont.

"Glundersprung" at Glen Ellen

A Glundersprung is a type of ski jump. In the "olden" days of skiing, i.e. before lifts, the skier used it to get over small crevices, rocks, or other obstacles. Now it is considered a fine point in a skier's repertoire.

The jump itself takes a keen sense of balance and quick timing. The jump is negotiated by placing the skier's poles into the snow ahead of the skier and preferably on the top of a mogol, i.e. a large mound of snow, and using the poles to spring off from. Once in the air the skier then tucks his legs up and shifts his weight slightly forward to ready for the landing.

Glen Ellen Ski Area in Vermont recently held the Eastern Professional Glundersprung Contest and Daily Collegian Photographer John Kelly was on hand to record the results on film.

Panthers vs. ZN For Campus Hoop Title Tonight

It will be the Kennedy Panthers against Zeta Nu for the Campus intramural basketball championship tonight at 7 p.m. at Boyden.

The Panthers made their way to the finals last night by downing the Grayson Aces, 35-29, for the dormitory championship. The Panthers were led by Steve Brennan who scored 20 points. Miguel Brito also scored nine for the Panthers. The losers were led by John Thomas and Dick Meyer, each with eight points.

Zeta Nu won the fraternity championship by edging QTV, 37-33. Joe Bonczek scored 12 and Howland eight for ZN. Tony Garfield of QTV led all scorers with 19, and John Perkins chipped in 10 in a losing cause.

Kappa Sigma had beaten Zeta Nu for the championship Tuesday night, but the result was nullified when it was discovered that KS had an ineligible player.

After tonight's campus championship, there will be one more intramural basketball game, the All-Star game on Tuesday, February 13. This game will pit the Dormitory All-Stars against the Fraternity All-Stars. The game will start at 7 p.m. on Court 2 of Boyden. Incidentally, the fraternities have won all three all-star contests to date.

B. C. Boosts Tourney Hopes with Devastating Performance

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

You could tell they were out for blood when Boston College led by 20 points and some 3,000 B.C. students at Roberts Center were screaming at the top of their collective lungs for more.

The Eagles, with hopes of a post-season tournament berth fading, took out their frustrations on UMass by playing one of their best games of the year and rolling on to an easy 94-70 win over the Redmen Tuesday night at Chestnut Hill.

B.C., so highly rated among basketball powers before the season began, went into the game with a 10-6 record. The losses to UCLA, Louisville and even St. John's, one could see. But losing to Holy Cross last Saturday must have been the last straw for Bob Cousy.

The Eagles showed little mercy against intrastate rival U M. Led by center Tom Driscoll, B. C. got its fluid fast break going early in the game and the Redmen never had a chance. Although UM did not look particularly good, B.C. looked so great that few teams would have beaten the Eagles Tuesday night.

Not only was the starting five red-hot, but subs like Pete Sollene, Bod Dukiet and Tom Verroneau couldn't miss. It was obvious that this was not the same B.C. squad that lost to St. John's, St. Joseph's and Holy Cross.

Even the habitually understanding Cousy admitted that B.C. played one of its best games of the season. Its attack was so devastating that one who saw it could hardly deny that if they play like this the rest of the season, they could win the rest of their games.

Needless to say, it was a rough night for UM coach Jack Leaman, as the Redmen were badly outplayed in every department. Nevertheless, this was a fired-up B. C. team that U M was playing and the Redmen caught them on the wrong night.

Redmen Roundup

The Redmen have three days to recuperate before returning to action Saturday against Vermont at the Cage. This will be a rematch of the earlier game at Burlington in which the Redmen were upset in overtime, 85 - 82.

The Redmen cannot afford another Yan Con defeat if they wish to contend for the title. Rhode Island has a 5-0 record while UM is two games behind in the all - important loss column.

The Catamounts are an up-and-down team who were up when they played the Redmen three weeks ago. Art Loch's squad has a 4-3 Conference record going into tonight's game against last - place U N H.

There is little doubt that the conference cards are stacked against UM. The Redmen must win the rest of their league games, including URI, while they have to hope that someone else knocks off Rhody. Another tough one for UM will be the UConn rematch at Storrs, where the last Redmen win was a generation ago.

The two consistent bright spots for UM in the last two weeks have been forward Billy Tindall and guard Ray Ellerbrook. Tindall has now scored 1,117 points to rank 4th in UM career scoring. He needs 35 points to pass Rodger Twitchell into third place, 140 to pass Doug Grutchfield into second and 253 to replace Clarence Hill at the all-time leader. With 8 games left, Tindall has a good shot at 2nd. but it will take a phenomenal spurt to surpass Hill.

Ellerbrook's shooting has been consistently good. The southpaw soph has averaged 21 points for the last five games while hitting 45 of 76 field goals for an outstanding .592 percentage. That span includes two 25-point performances against Yale and B. C.

The freshmen basketball team doesn't get much of a rest after Tuesday night's 12-point loss to the B. C. Eaglets. The Little Redmen play at Springfield tonight, and then meet Franklin Pierce Jr. Coll. in a 6 p.m. prelim to Saturday night's varsity game at the Cage.

Franklin Pierce is led by 6'1 Bob Szklarz, the nation's leading scorer on all levels of college basketball. He is averaging 52 points a game, including one 85-point game.

The UM Hockey team has the week off and returns to action tomorrow night at Orr Rink against Army at 7:30. The Cadets could be the Redmen's biggest challenge next to UNH. If comparative scores mean anything, Army beat Brown, which is the only team to beat Cornell, the nation's best.

In other sports this weekend, the gymnastics team, off two record performances against Penn State and Army, faces a weak Pittsburgh team Saturday night at Boyden Auxiliary Gym. Coach Erik Kjeldsen's Redmen set a UM record of 179 points in defeating Army last Saturday at West Point.

The wrestling team faces B.C. at Chestnut Hill Saturday night, and the swimming team returns to competition against Vermont at Burlington Saturday.

Lederle, Mendenhall Comment on Increasing Drug Problems

Pres. Thomas C. Mendenhall of Smith went on record yesterday at the request of some of the college personnel on the problem of drugs in a talk before Smith students in an assembly.

Mendenhall joined two other college presidents in Hampshire County in a strong stand against drug abuse by students.

In a statement Pres. John W. Lederle said, "The University of Massachusetts is an institution for learning and not a laboratory for experimentation in hallucination and fantasia. We at the University are concerned for the mental and physical health of our students, and accept the gravity with which drug abuse is regarded by our courts.

"As a consequence, we have co-operated in every way with all law enforcement agencies in the prevention and detection of drug abuse on the UMass campus, and will continue to do so. It is our belief that students must accept their responsibilities as citizens of the Commonwealth and nation, and live up to the state and federal laws."

Mendenhall's remarks follow:

"There are many aspects of life in this community called Smith which we might reflect on together, but there is one in particular — the possession or use of drugs — on which I wish to speak at some length. I do so actually at the suggestion of some of you, in order that there may be no doubt as to the College's policy.

"Both federal and Massachusetts State laws prohibit the use, possession, sale or offering for sale of narcotics (including marijuana). Smith College upholds these laws and will not interfere with the legal prosecution of any members of the community who violate them. It is a particularly serious offense to sell, provide, share or distribute drugs illegally. Any such offense, on or off the campus, may result in expulsion of the offender from the College. That the College does not inspect rooms or seek in some other fashion evidence of drug involvement in no way implies that such involvement is not taken as possible justification for the most serious disciplinary action.

"To go any further in spelling out in advance what Smith's action might be in any particular case is both unwise and impossible. The circumstances in every case, including what the best interests both of the individual and of the community might require, would eventually determine what the College would do.

"The College cannot protect an offender against the penalties of law. Law enforcement officers, when armed with proper documents, have a legal right to search any and all buildings on the campus without prior notice to anyone at the College.

"Besides its illegality there are other reasons why the College refuses to condone the possession, distribution, and use of hallucinogenic or narcotic drugs. Some drugs, like heroin or LSD, are well known to have disastrous, tragic effects, both psychic and physical, on the user. Even marijuana, which is technically non-addictive, has disturbing, disruptive implications for the individual and the community over and beyond its illegality.

"The illegality restricts much of its illicit distribution and sale to sources which also supply LSD and hard narcotics. Any relationship with such a criminal element will be on their terms, which may well include graduation to stronger drugs and invite disruptive intrusions by law enforcement officials into the College.

"To point out that nicotine and alcohol are also drugs and thus to claim some comparable acceptance of marijuana seems to me to blur a very important distinction. Both the smoking of tobacco and the drinking of liquor, which many

Marines Drive Off Communists As Battle of Khe Sanh Begins

SAIGON (AP)—North Vietnamese troops, in possible prelude to a long-awaited northwest offensive, slashed through barbed-wire defenses near Khe Sanh on Thursday and wrested half a scarred hilltop from U.S. Marines before being driven back.

A furious counterattack by the Leathernecks with heavy air and artillery support cost the enemy 124 dead, the U.S. Command reported. Marine losses were 21 dead and 27 wounded in the fight, about two miles from the Khe Sanh combat base in South Vietnam's northwest corner, where the allies expect a big push from two enemy divisions.

Elsewhere, the Communist offensive against the cities appeared to be in its last stages after posting a week of record casualties. Street fighting persisted, however, in Saigon, Hue Dalat and Cae Lanh.

The U.S. Command said another day in the current Red campaign had brought 2,000 more enemy dead. It reported that the Communist death toll had reached 26,621 in 10 days since the countrywide fighting began.

The allied toll since Jan. 30 was put at 2,295 dead, including 810 Americans, 1,434 South Vietnamese and 51 other allies. It listed 9,339 allied wounded, 4,995 of them Americans.

Associated Press correspondent John T. Wheeler reported from Khe Sanh that the North Vietnamese pummeled the dug-in Marines with mortar and rocket fire in paving the way for the uphill attack. One enemy soldier was captured.

The hill is one of three Marine-controlled high points along a ridge that overlooks the combat base from the northwest. With the fall of the Special Forces camp at Lang Vei on Wednesday, Khe Sanh now poses the only major block to massing North Vietnamese. The enemy are expected to cut into the northern provinces of South Vietnam from Laos.

In Hue, the old imperial capital 40 miles northwest of Da Nang, U.S. Marines and Vietnamese troops battled on, block to block, to oust North Vietnamese who still controlled large portions of the city.

The claimed 10-day Communist death toll represented well over one-third of the estimated 60,000 troops the enemy threw into its coordinated assault against 35 cities in the South. If accurate, the combined casualty figures mean the allies were killing the enemy at a ratio of 11.6 to 1.

Gregory Clarifies Statements In 'Collegian' Interview

By LINDA RICHARDSON and NANCY BOURGOIN

In interviews with Dick Gregory following his UMass performance and again after his Amherst College engagement, the civil-rights leader expressed beliefs that Americans are being lied to.

"America is a violent country. There is no way to discuss problems of America today without talking about violence. But I am committed to non-violence," he stated.

Trying to explain the emotions of the Black Power movement, he commented, "We don't want any more insults. We don't hate you white folks we hate your system. We don't need anymore white liberals; we need white radicals."

"A liberal is one who thinks out what he should do before he does it. A radical is one who does it because it's right," he explained.

In speaking to a predominantly white audience, Gregory added, "I don't care what you think of me when I leave, but you can never say that Dick Gregory lied to you."

His statement, "our government is so insane that we're ready to go to war on a mistake" was geared to Johnson's threats on the Pueblo incident.

President Johnson tends to be the target for much of his satire. "LBJ, however, never changes," he said.

He went on to say, "Yeah, we're gripped with an insane nation that you kids are gonna have to change."

Throughout his lecture, he quipped about the insecurity of the nation, but in talking about the realization of the dilemma his voice soon filled with rage.

"That flag doesn't mean anything to me. It's just a damn rag. And I'm not interested in rags; I'm interested in people. Some day people are gonna save your life, not that damn rag."

"This is what you kids inherited from us, a nation so sick and insane. We can't burn a flag. Bring home a chicken; kill and cook it, but don't burn that flag."

"We're a sick country that pretends we hate the Communists, yet we have Russian exchange students, the Russian Ballet, and even a flight from New York to Moscow."

If democracy is so good, why are we running all over the world jamming it down people's throats? And where were we three months ago when democracy failed in Greece?" he asked.

Gregory pondered, "With this kind of democracy, how many young kids are gonna be killed on the false pretense of freedom?"

He urged that the strength of the nation come from the action of the people. He suggested we start with better police-community relationships. By raising a policeman's pay to $10,000 a year, they would think twice about accepting $5 for a bribe.

"A policeman's attitude today is not their fault, but our fault. We treat the police like dirt and the police treat us like dirt."

In describing the dirt, ignorance and depreciation of property involved in the ghettoes, he explained, "It isn't niggerism you're smelling, it's democracy. A ghetto situation is just a social attitude."

Reflecting on the unbalance of opportunity available to a Negro, Gregory explained, "Sure,

Bobby Speaks Out Against Viet War

CHICAGO (AP)—Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., said Thursday that the American military effort to resolve the Vietnam war is "like sending a lion to halt an epidemic of jungle rot."

Kennedy said that "a total military victory is not within sight or around the corner. . .it is probably beyond our grasp."

Speaking at a book and author luncheon sponsored by the Chicago Sun-Times, Kennedy challenged observations that the recent savage fighting in South Vietnam constituted any sort of American victory.

He said that the reported enemy losses "cannot be as devastating as the figures appear."

"Our intelligence chief," he said, "tells us that of 60,000 men thrown into attacks on the cities, 20,000 have been killed. If only

North Vietnam Minister Says: "Stop Bombing and We'll Talk"

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Department officials are studying a new statement by the foreign minister of North Vietnam indicating his government may wish to keep peace exchanges going with the United States alongside the Communist military offensive.

The statement, in the form of an interview broadcast from Hanoi Thursday, moves the North Vietnamese bargaining position slightly beyond where the foreign minister left it six weeks ago.

The United States has taken the position since last Sunday that peace probes have been rendered meaningless by the Communist offensive against key cities in South Vietnam and by the massive North Vietnamese challenge to the U.S. outpost at Khe Sanh.

President Johnson was reported Thursday to have ended a ban on bombing military targets at Hanoi and Haiphong. The ban was imposed about a month ago with word to the North Vietnamese that they were signals of U.S. interest in damping down the war and opening talks.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Sunday the evidence of Hanoi's offensive operations is "that they are not seriously interested at the present time in talking about peaceful settlement."

It is against this background that Thursday's remarks by Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh are being analyzed.

Thursday Trinh said "they are the problems in connection with the settlement of the Vietnam problem on the basis of the 1954 Geneva agreements on Vietnam; there also are other questions which would be raised by the two parties."

To U.S. authorities the language still is far short of suggesting an agenda but does seem to indicate that North Vietnam would be willing to discuss issues raised by the United States.

On the question of timing, Trinh repeated "the talks will start as soon as the United States will demonstrate the reality of the unconditional halt of the bombings and of all other acts of war against North Vietnam."

". . . and the democratic process in Vietnam is justified by the Americans at home. Last week a South Vietnamese general killed a Vietcong terrorist in the street. America is supposed to be instilling freedom and democracy in Vietnam, and that includes trial by jury. Yes, that's our democratic process."

it's true that Negro women have 20% of the illegitimate children and that white women only have 2%. But you white boys can afford the whores and prostitutes. Give us an abortion credit card and we'll show how fast percentages can go down."

Some of the positions now made available to Negroes were questioned by Gregory as to the sincerity in the act. "Do you know why 6,000 Negroes were hired by the Ford Co.? 'Cause the fire last summer got too close to the plant, that's why."

In closing, he explained how we are dealing with a revolution, a revolution is part of evolution. "The hope of the world lies in you kids. I can't apologize for all the old folks. I can only apologize for myself."

"Our lost generation, we were so busy learning how to make a living, we forgot to learn how to live," he said.

Comparing the two, he stated, "More than ever before this generation is the most morally committed group of young folks.

Admitting that there are problems in our society, he believes will help us to solve them faster.

Gregory advocated protests through self-denial. He is planning another 40 day starvation to end on Good Friday. Then he will approach Johnson in Washington, D.C., saying, "At least Christ was dead when they buried him, but you're burying us alive."

He will never shave or get another haircut, and he will only wear work clothes until the war is over.

Riot Erupts on Carolina Campus

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — One Negro was killed and an estimated 50 college students wounded Thursday night in a major outbreak of gunfire on the South Carolina State College campus.

One state highway patrolman was injured, but was not believed seriously hurt.

Orangeburg police said the shooting erupted after Negro students set fire to grass on the campus.

It was the fourth straight night of violence in this city of 15,000 located 40 miles south of Columbia.

two men have been seriously wounded for every one dead, a very conservative estimate, the entire enemy force has been put out of action."

"Who, then," he said, "is doing the fighting?"

"How ironic it is," he continued "that our public officials at the highest levels, should claim a victory because a people whom we have given 16,000 lives, billions of dollars and almost a decade to defend, did not rise in arms against us."

"More disillusioning," he said, "and painful is the fact the population did not rise to defend its freedom against the Viet Cong.

He added that the events of the last two weeks showed that "none of the population is secure.

A group of Negroes on the campus started firing at about 50 officers standing across U.S. Route 601, which passes the college campus.

The officers returned the fire and charged up an embankment onto the campus.

Two Negroes fell and at least one policeman was hit.

The shooting erupted as fire trucks and National Guard troops moved in to the area of the fire.

Rifle-armed National Guardsmen formed a cordon in front of the campus.

Police said there were about 100 persons in each group when the confrontation occurred. They said state troopers and police charged up the grassy slope, then took cover when one of their number was felled.

Lederle Wants To Eliminate Part of Road

By DON LEBLANC
Staff Reporter

In a letter to the Board of Selectmen of Amherst, President Lederle is requesting the discontinuation of the section of North Pleasant St. from Ellis Drive to Stockbridge Road.

The 3,000 foot segment, between the Newman Center and Hasbrouck Laboratory, is part of a town road as well as a county highway. Lederle's proposal must be approved by the Town Meeting Members of Amherst and the County Commissioners before the change can be made.

The President's letter noted recent accidents on the road segment involving pedestrians and vehicles. The relocation of the road would be in anticipation of increased pedestrian traffic when present construction ends in that area. The proposal noted that the widening and improvement of Stockbridge Road would be at University expense.

N.Y.C. Buried Under Tons Of Garbage

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller held a showdown meeting with sanitation strike leaders Thursday, backing it with the threat of a National Guard takeover of New York, a city festering beneath 60,000 tons of garbage.

As the first week of an unprecedented sanitation strike ended, there was enough uncollected trash strewn about the city to fill the holds of six average-sized, ocean-going freighters. The menace of fire, the potential supremacy of rats weighed heavily on the minds of the city's eight million.

Early in the day, Mayor John V. Lindsay declared a state of emergency in the city—a necessary prelude to a National Guard call-up. He did so after the sanitation men defied an ultimatum to return to their jobs by 7 a.m.

Wallace Announces Candidacy For Presidential Election

WASHINGTON (AP)—George C. Wallace formally revealed his third party candidacy for president Thursday, saying he offers the voters "a real choice."

"I fully think we can win," he said.

The 48-year-old former Alabama governor told reporters he stands for an end to lawlessness, against federal interference with the states and with the free enterprise system, and favors a tough foreign policy including winning allied support for the U.S. effort in Vietnam.

Wallace said he is running to fulfill a pledge to Alabama voters because "I don't think there is going to be 10 cents worth of difference," between President Johnson and the Republican nominee.

"Even if we lost, we'd be no worse off," he said. "We have all to gain and nothing to lose. I fully think we can win in the Electoral College."

Asked which party he thinks he will hurt most, Wallace said in the South he will hurt the Republicans by splitting opposition to the Johnson administration.

But in the country as a whole, he said "the great mass of support that supports us have been those who have traditionally supported the Democratic party."

Wallace said he will run as a Democrat only in Alabama and will appear as an independent candidate on as many other ballots as possible.

His American Independent Party has already won a place on California's ballot. Aides said it is likely Wallace will be on all ballots except in Ohio, where 433,000 signatures are required.

Sen. Chares H. Percy, R-Ill., said Wallace's political strength "is surprisingly stronger than I thought it was." He said Wallace might draw enough support to deprive the major candidates of a majority of the vote and thus force the election into the House of Representatives.

Wallace was asked what he realistically thinks his chances are. He replied that while "the odds have not been fully in favor of a new party movement in the past, the odds will be better as the campaign progresses."

He noted that in a three-cornered race a candidate could capture a state's electoral votes with only 34 per cent of the total, and the entry of a peace-oriented fourth party would reduce this further.

Investigation To Be Held In Adams' Death

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The coroner's office Thursday blamed a liquid sedative, paraldehyde, for the death of actor Nick Adams and said further investigation will be needed to determine whether it was suicide or accident.

Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi said the probe will include studies by a team of experts in human behavorial science, similar to the inquiry five years ago in the sleeping pill death of Marilyn Monroe.

. . . They Cannot Win

January 22, 1778
Valley Forge, Pa.

Dear Martha,

We have been driven from Philadelphia. The Tories and British are executing some of the captured as spies and traitors. But we will fight on. We have scored a psychological victory, they know we will last the winter and fight again. They cannot defeat us in our own land; they must not.

How stronge it is that we fight our own kin. Stranger still that their allies are that our ally is our former enemy. The British are not bad at all, but they wish us to be governed by men who are not receptive to our needs, and they will, I fear, seek to impose a religion (Anglicanism) on us which we, of dissenter stock, do not want. They have brought in allies; men from countries where freedom is non-existent to aid them.

The hearts of the British are not in the war, they do not want to deny us freedom, only 90 years ago they got it themselves. Nevertheless we will win, the people are more and more behind us, though they still are apathetic. Martha, I promise you we will win our freedom, and Britain will someday see that our freedom has made her the safer and the richer.

Love,
George

February 3, 1968
Somewhere in Vietnam

Dear Ma Tha,

We have been defeated, driven from Saigon. The government forces are executing our men as traitors. But we will fight on. We have scored a psychological victory; they know they cannot win. They cannot and must not take the land from its people.

How strange it is that we fight our own kin. Stranger still that their allies are Americans, who supposedly champion freedom. We asked their help long ago in driving out the colonialists and they refused, and here they are former colonials aiding the enemies of freedom. How strange that our ally is our former enemy, who in fact I still hate. But we have been driven into the arms of the communists, just as in 1776 Americans were forced to take aid from the monarchists. The government and the Americans are not evil, but they want us to be governed by men who do not care about the people's needs they want to force their blond, blue-eyed god on a Buddhist people. Moreover they have brought in allies from other countries where many are still actual slaves.

The people are more and more behind us, and the hearts of the government forces and the American people are not in this war. They remember their own struggle long ago. Ma Tha, I promise you we will win, our country will be united and free, and the Americans will eventually see that they and the world are richer and better off because we rule our own land, politically and economically.

Love,
Geo Gy

The more things change the more they stay the same.

A Need for Discussion

Since their inception, grades have been a constant source of controversy among both educators and those being educated. That little agreement exists regarding grading practices is only too well evidenced by the broad spectrum of systems currently in use across the nation. Inherent in these diverse systems, however, are certain shortcomings which, while recognized, are often shrugged off–"Grades are a necessary evil." On the contrary, grades in themselves are not evil–rather it is the meaning attached to them which is suspect. As Birney (1964, p. 96) writes:

> Grading originates in an effort to assess achievement, assumes the added role of incentive to behavior, and is endowed by society with the value of currency, redeemable in public honors, admission to further training, and consideration for employment opportunities.

These are indeed important considerations, for as Miller (1967, p. 4) points out in his discussion of the pros and cons of the present system:

> To sum up the arguments for the present system: it is in common use and allows relatively standardized information about students to be interchanged between schools; it enforces academic discipline; it serves numerous administrative purposes both within and without the grading institution; it prepares students for the competitions of life; it motivates students to work; it is a fairly reliable index of academic achievement. These arguments are so powerful, and generally so well known, that there is little point in rehearsing them further. Any change in the present system must take them into account.

Two important questions, however, immediately come to mind: (1) Do grades, as currently determined, deserve to have such meaning attached to them? and (2) Might not these same functions be at least equally well assumed by another system?

In so far as grades measure a student's progress in a course, they are valuable and necessary. They enable both the student and the instructor to engage in self-evaluation, a process deemed by most to be essential to the educational process. Unfortunately, however, this self-evaluation does not necessarily lead to the desired conclusions. The student may resort to "grade-grubbing", cramming, or even cheating in order to improve his grade, rather than seeking out the real source of his problems. Likewise, the instructor may decide to "curve" his grades or mark more leniently to raise the grades of the class, rather than trying to improve his teaching methods and/or seek out individual difficulties. Perhaps some of these difficulties arise because many factors influence a single grade classification. Thus the grade assigned provides few clues to the reasons for the student's success or failure. Some might add that grades provide few clues to the reasons for the instructor's success or failure, for learning is not a one-way street.

Aside from achievement, any factor which affects grading can be viewed as an extraneous one—one which it is impossible to control when comparing grades. The existence of these extraneous factors has, however, often been a matter of conjecture since the research into this area was, until quite recently, at best, sparse. Recent studies have shown, however, that factors such as "chance" (Kirby, 1962), sex (Caldwell and Hartnett, 1967), conformity and insecurity (Kelly, 1958) and the organization or structure of the course (Bahn, Cox and Lee, 1967) can, and do, plan an important role in the grade which the student receives. Add to this the great variability in grades which exists between, as well as within, colleges, levels, and departments (Petersen, 1967), and it is quite easy to see why grades cannot be taken at face value, whether examined individually or comparatively.

In considering the arguments which Miller lists for the "present system," then, several inferences can be made: (1) While the symbols which represent grades may be standardized and in common use, they are not necessarily based on the same considerations. (2) They enforce academic discipline insofar as they warn the student he is failing, but they do not necessarily motivate the student to do better for the desired reasons, i.e. the grade itself too often becomes the goal. (3) While administratively convenient, grades may too often be at variance with the aims of education to warrant their retention for the sake of convenience.

While some argue that grades prepare students for the competitions of life, Miller (1967) points out that "it is difficult to find an institution other than the educational one in which people are publicly graded as many as thirty or forty times each four months. . .and ranked according to decimal points." Promotions in business are based on how well the job is done and on personal evaluations and recommendations, not grades. He goes on to state that "it may be argued that the grading system discourages the development in the student of intrinsic and lasting intellectual interests, and of self-definition generally." Furthermore, there is evidence that grading may discourage creativity and encourage conformity (Miller, 1967). It is questionable, then, whether grading is developing those characteristics which lead to success in the majority of occupations the college student is preparing for.

The Janitor Is Gone

by KATHERINE E. LEE

When I arrived at the University as a freshman everything was new and different. Old Chapel, the first building that I entered on campus, has since become my other home at School as I spend hours each day within its walls. On that day two years ago, when I first entered the Chapel, I saw a man whom I presumed to be the janitor. He was dressed in a brown shirt and brown pants like those janitors wear. He was just standing, watching the people come and go, as janitors do while contemplating which wastebasket to empty next.

Since I spent so much time in Old Chapel I frequently saw this janitor. He never did any work that I could see, but every once in a while he would ask some student who was not really practicing to give up the practice room to someone who could make better use of it, and it was once rumored that he moved a piano around Professor Lebow's office.

I joined the University Symphony Orchestra as a freshman, under the baton of Professor Ronald Steele. For the December concert Professor Steele chose Mozart's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 14 in E-Flat. The new chairman of the piano faculty of the Music Department, a Professor Howard Lebow, was to be the soloist.

Professor Lebow, a Fulbright scholar, graduated from the Julliard School of Music and was a recipient of the highest pianistic honor offered at the School, the Morris Loeb Memorial Prize. He had also toured extensively in the U. S. South America, and Europe before coming to the University in 1965.

In all the time that I had spent at Old Chapel, I could not remember having seen this Professor. Imagine the amazement I felt when, on the night of the dress rehearsal, Professor Steele introduced the soloist for the Mozart piece, the Old Chapel janitor. At first I was rather ashamed that I had thought he was only a janitor, but when I talked to many other students who received the same first impression, I didn't feel quite so bad.

Now the great pianist, Professor Howard Lebow, is gone. He died a week ago Sunday morning from injuries suffered in an automobile accident. The University Community mourns his passing, and the University Music Department, faculty, and students find it difficult to believe that he will not perform or teach again. I will miss him, as will all the others who met him or heard him play; he was very intelligent and very talented, a great musician. The "janitor" is gone.

Look Out for Number One

To the editor:

After reading Thursday's comments about the auto accident that killed Janet Kolb '70, I asked myself, "Is driving a right or a privilege?" According to one communication, Mrs. Blackmer is reported saying, "I think I deserve my license." If 84 year-old Mrs. Blackmer had passed a renewal driver's test (that has been much discussed by the state legislature), I would then agree that she is entitled to the privilege of driving. Driving is not a right guaranteed by our government, and thus, as a privilege, can be temporarily or permanently removed.

The solution to increasing auto accidents may lie in the attitudes and qualifications of the driver. Good driving attitudes can be formed by driver education programs, which have affected some drivers and proven the value of their existence. Driver's qualifications can be determined by regularly scheduled driver's renewal tests, determining not the safety of the automobile but its driver. Federal laws are now being enacted to assure a safe automobile; but what about its operator?

Until these two programs, drivers' education and drivers' renewal tests, are put into full effect, I advise all UM students to: "Look out for number one; your life depends upon it."

Albertson Elected Sec'y Of Oral History Assoc.

Dr. Dean Albertson, professor of history at the University of Massachusetts, has been elected secretary of the recently-formed Oral History Association.

A national group, the Oral History Association was organized in response to the growing number of oral history projects at colleges and universities across the United States and in foreign countries. The first such project began at Columbia University 20 years ago. There are now over 100 oral history programs in operation.

According to Dr. Albertson, oral history involves the recording and transcribing of interviews with persons who have participated in important developments in modern life—political, cultural, economic, social.

The association will function as a clearing house for oral history programs now in operation. It will help members and non-members set up new programs, elevate standards, improve procedures and seek copyright and royalty protection for materials collected. Emphasis will be placed on both improving the means of collecting oral history materials and encouraging the use of these resources by such persons as historians, biographers and teachers.

Dr. Albertson earned his B.A. and M.A. at the University of California at Berkeley and his Ph.D. at Columbia University. Before coming to UMass in 1965, he taught at the University of California, New York University and Brooklyn College and was for seven years assistant director of the Oral History Project at Columbia.

He has written several books including "Roosevelt's Farmer," "Eisenhower as President," and with Howard Quint and Milton Cantor, both of the UMass history department, he was co-author of "Main Problems in American History."

Jordanian Troops Fire On Refugees

MIDDLE EAST (AP) Israeli and Jordanian artillery and machine gun units traded fire for five hours across the Jordan River on Thursday. A Jordanian spokesman claimed the Israelis turned their big guns on refugee camps.

Eight Jordanians, including a woman and two children, were reported killed and 43 wounded in the afternoon-long battle, a military spokesman in Amman said.

There was no immediate word from Tel Aviv on Israeli casualties, but the Israelis charged Jordan with touching off the fighting with a machine-gun barrage. Jordan said it monitored a broadcast in which the Israeli command announced three soldiers were killed and several others wounded.

Amman also claimed to have destroyed four Israeli tanks, a half track, several military cars and six observation posts.

The Israelis said the fighting broke out at 1 p.m., with Jordanian troops firing on an Israeli emplacement near the Damiya Bridge—23 miles north of the Dead Sea. An hour later, the Israeli reports said, Jordanian artillery opened up.

A Jordanian communique said: "Enemy artillery and tank guns shelled the villages of Karameh and Damia and a refugee camp in the Ma'adi area. "Our forces answered with similar fire. But enemy tanks and artillery opened up against Jordanian positions in the Allenby Bridge area. The enemy threw in reinforcements and unleashed intensive shelling."

The fighting sputtered out at 6:30 p.m.

The shooting followed a series of Arab sabotage raids in which the Israelis said three Israelis and four Arabs died. The border area had been relatively quiet for a week.

Mental Health Program Forms Now Available

Application forms are now available for the Mental Health Information Program at Syracuse University's School of Journalism for 1968-69, according to the head of the program, Dr. Robert W. Root.

The program began in 1964 when an initial grant was received from the National Institute of Mental Health to train specialists in mental health communications. NIMH renewed the grant this year for approximately $500,000 for another three years.

Dr. Root stated that for the next academic year 12 fellowships will be available. For those designated as follows, a stipend of $2,800 plus full tuition is offered the first year and $4,800 plus full tuition is given for the second year of the two-year master's program.

Students take new courses in mental health information as well as editing, writing, graphic arts, communication research and related courses in both journalism and the social sciences.

Application deadline is March 1, 1968. More information may be obtained from: Mental Health Information Program, Newhouse Communications Center, School of Journalism, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York 13210.

'Great Decisions' To Discuss Brazil Over WFCR Mon.

Great Decisions 1968 will air a panel discussion on Brazil as the possible key to Latin America's future over WFCR-FM (88.5 mg.) radio from Noah Webster residence hall at the University of Massachusetts on Monday, Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Luther Allen of the UMass department of government will moderate the discussion of panel members Ramon Ruiz, department of history, Smith College; and Howard and Ieda Wiarda, department of government, UMass.

This is the second in a series of seven Great Decisions programs. Each Monday members of the Four-College Community join in an hour-long broadcast on current events and situations. Last week the panelists discussed the prospects for an enduring peace in the Middle East. Future topics include the Upheaval in Communist China (Feb. 19), The Two Germanies (March 11), and Dollars, Trade, and Aid (March 18).

Background material has been prepared by the Foreign Policy Association. Pamphlets may be obtained at Noah Webster House Library. Area residents are cordially invited to participate in the discussion and the question and answer period which will be taped and be re-broadcast at 11:30 that same night.

Theatre Holds Tryouts For Children's Play

University Theatre is holding tryouts for Beyond the Bookshelf, a new children's play about familiar storybook characters, on Mon., Tues., and Wed. evenings, Fe. 12, 13 and 14, in 119 Bartlett at 7:30 p.m.

The play has 16 speaking parts ten male roles and six female roles—plus four non-speaking parts—a pantomimic comedy team of toy soldiers. All University students are welcome to try out for parts, whether they have had previous theatre experience or not.

The story takes place in "the land beyond the bookshelf," where the storybook characters retire whenever they are not being read. The characters include Cinderella's Fairy Godmother, Magic Mirror, Humpty Dumpty, White Rabbitt, Bo Peep, and a spaceman named Joe, who is the villain of the play.

Beyound the Bookshelf will be performed in Bartlett Auditorium Thurs., and Fri. evenings, March 21 and 22, immediately before the start of Spring Vacation. It will be the second Children's Theatre show to be produced during the academic year.

Wrestlers to Grapple With Boston College

By JAN CURLEY
Sports Day Editor

Hoping to do better than the basketball teams which were both defeated by Boston College, Coach Homer Barr's wrestling team travels to the Heights tomorrow for an 8 p.m. meet against the Eagles. Preceding the varsity will be the freshman in a 6:30 p.m. match.

Connecticut defeated the Redmen lost Saturday by a score of 34-11. The Redmen are 2-4 on the season. Coach Barr expects a toss-up match with Boston College as the Redmen will be looking to get back in the win column. The Eagles are stronger in the upper weights, according to Barr. He went on to say that if the team does as well as they have been doing in the lower weights, they could win.

Several lineup changes were announced as Billy Goodwin dropped to the 115 pound class and Dave Wade to 123. Brian Erkhart will be competing in the 145 class and Mike McKenna in the 152 class. Alan Skrol eliminated Parker Simmonds for the 167 class.

The rest of the team will be as usual with Paul Pearl at 130 and undefeated captain Gene Palterineri at 137. In the upper weights Fred Fitzpatrick will be in the 160 class, Ernie Smith at 170, Dick Natick at 191 and Glenn Cummins, unlimited.

On the optimistic side, Coach Barr said, "We're shooting for a .500 season. The team is in good spirits and we're hoping for a victory."

The undefeated frosh will be looking for their fifth straight win as they meet the B.C. frosh.

Gymnasts Meet Pitt Tomorrow

After posting a 179.95 to 167.70 victory last weekend over the Cadets at West Point, the gymnastics team takes on Pittsburgh at 2 p.m. in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym tomorrow.

Coach Erik Kjeldsen's gymnasts are 1-2 in League meets and 3-3 overall in competition.

Pitt is not among the strongest teams in the league this year. Although the meet is not billed as a run through, Coach Kjeldsen hopes it will key the team up for their meet against Springfield Wednesday. Springfield is one of the tougher teams in the league according to pre-season forecasting.

Kjeldsen will stick with the same lineup of the last two meets. Dick DelGallo, last weekend's first place winner in the rings and high scorer for the meet, is out with an injured hand. He hopes to return to the lineup for Wednesday's meet. Joe Godwin and Joe Reed, third and fourth place winners against Army, will be competing on the rings.

The brother combination of Mike and Toby Kasavana will be handling the assignment on the trampoline. Bob LeClair, who scored his personal high of 9.15 last weekend, will be competing on the long horse. He will be backed up by Steve Brown, Reed and Toby Kasavana. Reed, Brown and March will be contending in the parallel bar event.

The freshman gymnasts who lost to Army, 129.85-122.30, last weekend will be hosting Long Island University tomorrow at 4 p.m. in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

Besides Vermont, the Cadets have defeated Norwich, Middlebury, and Brown, who owns a victory over national champion Cornell. The Cadets have lost four one goal games the most recent a 5-4 decision to Dartmouth Wednesday.

The Black Knights are paced by their first line of Dave Merher, Tony Curran and John Albrecht, who stand one two, three in scoring for Army. Albrecht recently scored a hat trick against Vermont.

Six Men and Relay Team to Compete In USTFF at Madison Square Garden

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

Members of the UMass track squad travel to New York today to compete in the United States Track and Field Federation Meet (USTFF) at Madison Square Garden. The team will be bringing six individual performers and a relay team.

Marc Levefer who has been running well lately will compete in the hurdles. Track Coach Ken O'Brien feels that Levefer could possibly win the race. Freshman sprinter Walter Mayo who placed fourth in the Boston K of C Meet will be competing in his specialty.

Another freshman, Cal Carpenter who recently broke the school frosh high jump record, will hope to go higher in the competition.

The UMass squad will have three milers entered in the meet. Co-Captain Greg Bowman and frosh Ron Wayne who recently battled in the mile event in the Intrasquad Meet last weekend will go against each other again. Along with this pair will be Charlie Lang who will switch from his usual two-mile and run the mile.

The mile relay team which recently broke the school record at the BAA, when they also ran the two-mile, will be after their own record in New York, the team that ran the 3:24.5 mile in Boston is made up off Bob Hassebaum, John Anderson, Diego Gonzales and Dave Evans. Coach O'Brien feels that this group could break their own record.

"We should do well," the Coach said. "We're well rested" and have had a good workout. The coach said his individual runners will use this race as a "guideline" to see how they do in good competition. He hopes his relay team can place in the top six and thus qualify to run the night meet at the Garden.

Woman Gymnastics Team to Host Two-Day Exhibition Clinic

After posting a 74-56 win over the Salem State junior varsity team last weekend, the women's gymnastics team will not be competing tomorrow. Instead, they will be hostesses to Madame Berthe Vellincher, from France, head of the women's sect of the International Federation of Gymnasts.

Madame Vellincher will be giving demonstrations at two clinics. Tomorrow the clinic will be held at the Women's Physical Education Building from 10-12:30 a.m. and 2-5 p.m. Sunday the events will be held in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym from 9:30-12 a.m. and 1:30-4:30 p.m. UMass was chosen as one of three universities in the United States at which the clinics will be held. Coaches and teams from the east coast will be here for the event.

According to Mrs. Erik Kjeldsen, woman's gymnastics coach, new rule changes in gymnastics events and the upcoming Olympics will be previewed. Madame Vellincher will also introduce new trends in gymnastics already common in Europe.

The women's gymnastics meet for tonight against Green Mountain Jr. College has been postponed. Next weekend the team will travel to Westchester State College in Pennsylvania.

GROCERY BOY WANTED
($25,000 a year)

Hard to believe? Perhaps. But the future is wide open for college seniors in the booming retailing industry. In case you didn't know, supermarkets and self-service department stores are big business — and Stop & Shop/Bradlees is one of the biggest.

☐ With initiative, brains and just plain hard work, you could soon be running a $2-6 million store operation serving 8-12 thousand customers a week. You could be in charge of anywhere from 60-120 employees, with 4 or more department heads to help you.

☐ Of course, there's a lot of responsibility: supervising daily operations, merchandising, production and inventory control, labor relations, public relations, and the fundamental job of increasing sales and profits.

☐ But the rewards as an experienced store manager are great: high pay (solid five figures), rapid advancement, and the satisfaction of running your own show and seeing your own efforts pay off. And the path upward through field supervisory jobs right up to the very top is wide open with this aggressive, fast-growing company. College graduates are particularly valued in the retailing business and enjoy a much greater advantage than in many less dynamic fields.

☐ If you are graduating this year or next, talking to Stop & Shop/Bradlees might just be the smartest move you could make. Pay is excellent during training, and advancement into responsible positions is rapid for qualified people.

☐ For further information or to apply, please see your Placement Director. Or write or call College Recruiting Manager, Stop & Shop/Bradlees, 397 "D" Street, South Boston, Massachusetts 02210 — phone (617) 463-7515. It will speed things up if you include your resume and indicate whether you are more interested in supermarket or department-store openings; however, feel free to call for information only.

Redmen Meet Catamounts in Crucial Game

Vermont Won First Game In Overtime

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

It was with not a small amount of disbelief that the UMass basketball team looked at the scoreboard after the Vermont game at Burlington January 23. The Catamounts had dealt the Redmen a severe jolt by winning in overtime, 85-82.

UMass has a chance to gain revenge tomorrow night, however, as Vermont invades the Cage for an 8 p.m. clash. A frosh preliminary against Franklin Pierce Junior College and the nation's leading scorer, Bob Szklarz, will precede at 6 p.m.

A quick look at the recent scores of the UMass-Vermont series will show that home court advantages have been a big factor. The Redmen have consistently had trouble at Burlington, while at the Cage it has been an entirely different story.

The game will be a crucial Yankee Conference contest for both teams. UMass is currently tied for second place in the conference with a 4-2 record, while Vermont is fourth with a 4-3 mark. For UMass each Conference game can mean the difference between contention and elimination, since the Redmen are two games behind unbeaten Rhode Island in the loss column.

Coach Art Loche's Catamounts, 8-6 overall going into last night's game against New Hampshire, have a young team with some great shooters. In the earlier game at Burlington, UMass had a ten-point lead in the second half when UVM caught fire.

The Cats went ahead by as much as six points with a minute left, but the Redmen came back to tie it up with a 25-footer by John Shockro at the buzzer. However, Vermont held on to win it in overtime.

UVM is led by senior captain Bill Librera, a 6'3 forward. Librera is a good all-around player who leads the team in scoring and rebounding. He owns a 15.1 scoring average. Librera is a clutch ball player who adds experience to the young Catamount lineup.

Librera did not have one of his better nights in the UMass game last month. He was thrown out of the game in the second half after protesting a call too vigorously. Nevertheless, Librera usually acts as the hub of the team. His best shot is a jumper from medium range.

Vermont's backcourt has two men in double figures. Dave Lapointe, a 6'3 junior, has an average of 14.4. A fine outside shooter, Lapointe directs the Catamounts' offense and is also the best defensive player on the team. Lapointe's clutch shooting played an important role in the first UMass-UVM game. He scored 15 points including two baskets in the final minute of the overtime.

The man who really killed UMass in that game was sophomore guard Frank Martiniuk. He scored 24 points and just couldn't miss in the second half. He is a great long-range shooter who is impossible to stop when he gets hot.

Besides Librera, Vermont's rebounding strength depends on 6'6 forward Ray Bueb and '67 center Aldo Salati. Bueb averages only 6.8 but is an excellent rebounder. His 14 rebounds against UMass played an important part in Vermont's win.

Salati, a sophomore who played with Martiniuk in high school in Union City, N. J., doesn't do too much scoring but can hurt an opponent with his rebounding. He came off the bench against the Redmen to score 10 points and grab nine rebounds.

Another player who should see a lot of action is 6'4 sophomore forward Bob Hutton, who averages 7.1. Hutton is a good medium range shooter and often works himself underneath the basket for clutch rebounds.

Loche usually alternates his players up front. When Salati is not playing at center, he will usually use Bueb at center with Hutton as the other forward along with Librera. However, Lapointe and Martiniuk should play the whole game in the backcourt.

The Redmen will have to stop the shooting of Lapointe, Martiniuk and Librera and will have to watch out for occasional fast breaks by the well drilled Catamounts.

The Redmen, who will be trying to regain the .500 mark, are expected to counter with their regular starting lineup of Billy Tindall, Gary Gasperack, Peter Gayeska, Joe DiSarcina and Ray Ellerbrook.

JOHN SHOCKRO
His 25 foot buzzer shot forced the first game into overtime.

Little Redmen Lose Again To Springfield, 76-57

By PETER PASCARELLI
Staff Reporter

SPRINGFIELD—Leading in all except the first two minutes of the game, the Springfield frosh defeated the UMass frosh 76-57 here last night. It was the second consecutive loss for the Little Redmen.

Springfield was bolstered by the return of probably their two finest ball players, Sam Provo and Steve Waterman, both of whom did not see action in the two previous games. They proved to be the difference in tonight's game.

Provo led all scorers with 25 points and Waterman figured on the back boards as well as chipping in with 15 points. UMass meanwhile could never get moving in this one. They were hampered by poor shooting, errant passing and poor ball handling.

The first half was dominated by Springfield. Provo was on fire from the outside scoring 18 big points to almost match the total of the UMass team.

The Little Redmen, meanwhile, played what was probably their worst half of the season. Coach Peter Broaca substituted freely from the bench in the half, but he could not seem to come up with the right combination.

The Chiefs broke quickly and led through the whole half. They outscored UMass 10-3, aided no end by the Redman turnovers. Waterman garnered eight rebounds in the half. At the half the score was 36-22 in Springfield's favor.

In the second half, The Little Redmen never let up in their bid to come back, but they never got closer than 11 points. Ken Mathias was the only Little Redman to anywhere resemble normal form, but even he was far from it. The only possible bright spot in the UMass defeat was Tom Naily, who in his first extensive action of the season scored seven points and hustled well in the defense game.

Besides Mathias, the only other UMass player in double figures was Dempsey with 11 points.

Intramurals

Panthers Defeat Zeta Nu For Hoop Championship

In last night's intramural action, the Kennedy Panthers defeated Zeta Nu, 43-32 for the campus intramural basketball championship.

In a game to decide the third place spot in the campus championship, the Flaming A's beat QTV, 49-48, in an overtime game.

The fourth annual Intramural Dormitory versus Fraternity All Star Basketball Game featuring the best talent of the dormitory and fraternity leagues will be played Tuesday, Feb. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Boyden Building Gymnasium, Court #2.

The participants in this game were selected by popular vote of their teammates on the basis of their performance and record.

This past intramural basketball season featured 350 games played by 90 competing teams with close to 1000 students taking part.

The fraternity all stars have won all three games to date. All of the games have been hard fought and well played and this year's should be the same.

Puckmen Hope to Break Jinx Against West Point Cadets

By WALT STACHURA
Staff Reporter

Every team has a jinx team or place that it must face during the schedule. For the UMass basketball team, it is the home court of the UConn Huskies at Storrs where they have not won in 30 years. The Redmen will attempt to break their long losing streak against the Cadets tonight when they face off at 7:30 at Orr Rink.

Army has been the jinx team for the Redman hockey team. The UMass skaters have not beaten the Black Knights since 1931, losin/ 13 games during the 37 year span.

The only break in the string of losses was a 3-3 tie in 1954. The past two years have been the worst in the series for the Redmen, getting buried 17-2 last year and 12-1 in 1966.

UMass had a good start in the series dating back to 1912 but now are down 9-17-1 overall.

Redman hopes for snapping the Jinx tonight are not very promising. The team will go into the game with a 3-10 record after a 9-4 loss to Vermont last Saturday.

In this game, the Redmen took an early 1-0 lead but by the end of the first period trailed 4-2. Second period action was all Vermont as they came up with four goals to none for the Redmen despite having only nine shots on net.

Down six goals, UMass made the score respectable by outscoring the Catamounts two to one in the last period. Although the Redmen outshot the Catamounts, Vermont put more of their shots in the goal which is what counts.

Army has an 8-6 record this season, competing mostly in the tough Division 1 of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Among common opponents, Army has beaten Vermont 6-1 and lost to AIC 6-3. The Redmen have been beaten twice by Vermont and lost to AIC 6-1.

Ski Team Travels to Vermont For Two Tough Weekend Meets

After splitting their meets last weekend, the ski team travels to South Londonderry, Vermont today. They will compete in a giant slalom sponsored by Bentley College tomorrow and Sunday in a two run slalom hosted by Tufts College.

The UMass team is currently leading the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference and is hoping to maintain their lead. Their closest competition to date has come from a small liberal arts college across town. The Amherst College team is the defending champion and are only 25 seconds out of first place.

In an effort to close this gap, the Amherst team traveled to Big Bromley this past week to train and familiarize themselves with the terrain. Meanwhile, the UMass team had to content itself with calisthenics and clean living. The results of these varied approaches will be measured tomorrow and Sunday.

The races will be held on the East Meadow Trail, and the courses will be set by Ace Manley, the director of the area's ski school. Big Bromley hosted a nationally ranked slalom earlier this season. This, combined with the fact that 80 per cent of the area is equipped with snow making equipment, should ensure a good race.

Teacher Nominations Due

By STEVE LAZEROWICH
Staff Reporter

Students at UMass have few opportunities to show their approval of good teaching. The annual "Distinguished Teacher of the Year Award" presented each year in September provides them with an opportunity.

This tribute to good teaching at UMass was made possible by a husband-wife team of physicians from California who had no formal ties with the University. Drs. Clifford B. and Kathryn T. Cherry established the award as a special contribution to the University's Centennial Celebration observed in 1962. The Cherrys' only tie with the University has been through a friend, Miss Victoria Schuck, a member of the UMass Board of Trustees and a professor at Mount Holyoke College.

The Cherrys donated a $500 award which was matched by an additional $500 from the Board of Trustees. This practice was continued until 1967 when the Standard Oil (Indiana) Foundation took over the financial end by donating $2,000, making two awards possible. This year, three awards of $1,000 each will be presented at the Opening Convocation in September.

Prof. Burke

The first presentation of the Distinguished Teacher Award was made in 1963 to William H. Ross, Professor of Physics. Since then, six others have received the awards. These include George R. Richason, Professor of Chemistry in 1963; Henry L. Varley, Professor of English in 1964; John H. Dittfach, Professor of Mechanical Engineering in 1965; Hans C. Duus, Professor of Chemical Engineering in 1966. This past September for the first time co-recipients Terence Burke, Professor of Geography, and Richard C. Foley, Professor of Veterinary and Animal Sciences accepted the award.

Any student, faculty member or administrator may submit a nomination letter for any member of the faculty who has demonstrated superior teaching qualities. The letters are then reviewed by a faculty committee headed by Professor Edith G. Walker of the School of Nursing.

Selections are based on the quality of the evidence submitted rather than on the quantity of nomination letters. With three awards this year, the chance to reward faculty members continues as a response to the "publish or perish theory" by providing the needed recognition of good teaching.

The deadline for nomination papers is March 1.

Medical School Delayed By Lack of Federal Funds

By JAN CURLEY
News Day Editor

The first students will probably not pass through the portals of the proposed UMass Medical School until 1973, almost 10 years after the plans were first discussed for such an institution. President Lederle's goal of an entering class in the Fall of 1970 seems to be more of a dream now than a tangible reality.

The school is currently being delayed by the Federal Government which did not approve the architect's plans for the proposed $75 million complex.

Even though the school has submitted revised plans for medical school, the problem is the Federal Government just does not have the money to give to UMass. According to the Boston Globe, the school may not be funded by the government until the summer of 1970. Construction is supposed to take two and a half years.

There is a possiblity that the plans could be approved this June. If this should be the case, Dean Lamar Soutter of the Medical School has stated that he hopes to get a special priority assigned to the school to speed along the money.

However, regulations in the Federal Bureau of Health Manpower, the source of more than half the federal money requested, prevent the start of construction until the money has actually been awarded.

Dr. Soutter talks hopefully of changes in this rule, but according to Washington officials this is unlikely.

A high federal priority on the medical school is not likely either, since priorities are assigned on the probabilities of training large numbers of doctors within the next 10 years.

According to officials in the Health Manpower Bureau, there are a number of medical schools seeking aid with a much greater chance of producing doctors faster than the UMass Medical School. The Bureau of Health Manpower has approved more than $100 million worth of grants for new medical schools which have not yet been funded.

Unfortunately for UMass, when the money becomes readily available, these schools will stand in line before UMass.

In addition to this, there is competition for another $150 million among the other schools also applying for aid across the country. Another application has been submitted by UMass officials. This time the plans included only the medical school and the library. The plans for the teaching hospital were omitted this time from the plans, in spite of the fact that federal officials told the university to submit the plans at the same time.

Dr. Soutter said the plans would be submitted separately because the need for the teaching hospital would not be felt for at least two years after the completion of the medical school building and that if the applications for large amounts of money were submitted separately there would be a better chance of approval, high priority and complete funding.

Report Released On New Jersey Racial Riots

TRENTON, N. J. (AP) — New Jersey Negro leaders declared Sunday that a special report on last summer's race riots vindicated what they have been saying for months—that police and National Guardsmen used unjustified force in quelling the disorder.

Meanwhile, Gov. Richard J. Hughes said the report would probably "come to be regarded as an historic document," and added that its findings represented a "moral imperative for this state."

Elsewhere in the official community, reaction was extremely cautious in commenting about the 477-page report of the blue ribbon commission appointed by Democratic Governor Hughes, which — among other things — called for a grand jury investigation into alleged corruption in Newark, the state's largest city.

In Newark, a spokesman for Mayor Hugh Addonizio, said the mayor would have no detailed comment on the report until later this week. Earlier Addonizio had warned of the danger of "easy solutions" and declared the report made Newark a scapegoat for the nation's racial strife.

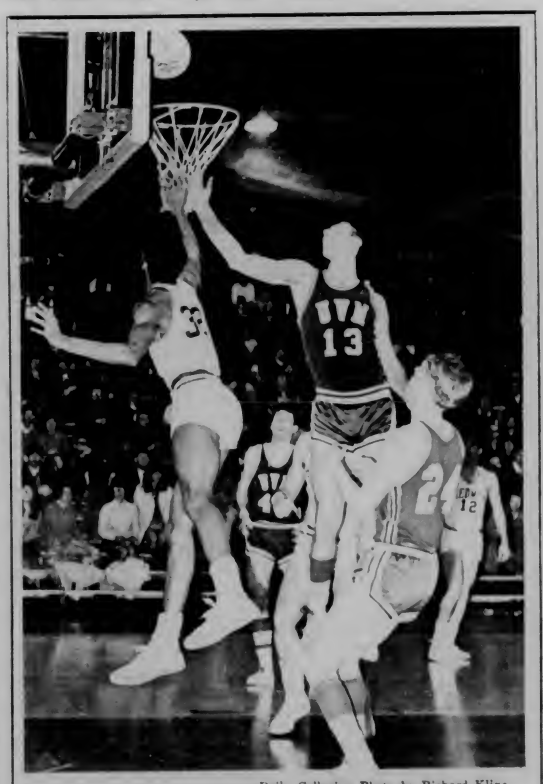
Professors to Receive Decorations from France

Two members of the UMass department of Romance Languages will be decorated Wednesday at 8 p.m. in SBA 120 by Edouard Morot-Sir, French Cultural Ambassador to the United States.

Dr. Robert E. Taylor and Dr. Seymour S. Weiner will become chevaliers in the "Palmes Academiques" during a ceremony preceding Ambassador Morot-Sir's talk on new perspectives in French literary history. The honor is bestowed for eminent merit as professor of French with particular reference to the teaching of French language and literature in American colleges and universities.

Dr. Taylor is professor of French and head of the department of Romance languages at UMass. He received his B.A. from Reed College and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia University. Before coming to UMass in 1963, he taught at Columbia and New York Universities.

Dr. Weiner studied at the University of California at Berkeley and two French universities before receiving his doctorate at Columbia. He is managing editor of the French Review.



Ambassador Morot-Sir is the permanent representative of French universities in the United States.

South Vietnam Mobilizes Troops in Retaliation

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam began mobilizing 65,000 additional troops Sunday in response to the heavy Communist attacks of the last two weeks.

The Cabinet approved President Nguyen Van Thieu's plan to increase the nation's 650,000-man armed forces 10 per cent by June 30. The government radio announced that veterans under 33 with less than five years of service must report for duty between Feb. 15 and March 15.

The announcement said veterans who do not report will be treated as deserters. It also appealed to veterans with more than five years of service to reenlist.

'Credibility Gap' Game Created By Three Local Professors

By BEVERLY GIARD
Staff Reporter

Credibility Gap, a game created by three local professors, has sold over 5,000 and is now on its second printing. It has been on the market for only four months.

The game was designed by Mr. Arnold Silver and Mr. John Weston of the UMass English departments with the help of artist Carl M. Schmalz of Amherst College.

Silver stated that the timing of the game's release took into consideration George Romney's announcement as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. He expects that upcoming conventions and campaigns will increase the already heightened interest in the game. The frequency of the words "Credibility Gap," he suggested, may serve as a reminder.

The game is dedicated to the people of America. Its originators hope it will enable citizens to join in the fun of interpreting governmental news management. On the inside of the cover there is a quotation from Thomas Jefferson, stating, "Of the various executive abilities, none excited more anxious concern than that of placing the interests of our fellow citizens in the hands of honest men, with understanding sufficient for their stations." The satire of the game reveals anger about the possibility of half-truths and mass cover-ups which may result from governmental news management. . . . . .

CREDIBILITY GAP

Articles mentioning Credibility Gap have appeared in the Amherst Record, Student Times, Holyoke Transcript, Business Week, The San Francisco Chronicle, The Humpshire Gazette, the Springfield Republican, The Boston Globe, National Observer, New Republic and Newsweek.

The game and the professors who created it have also received radio recognition. Credibility Gap has been mentioned over the air by CBS in Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles and New York. The Boston Educational television station also took interest in the professors' satirical enterprise. Mr. Silver commented that it was a fortunate coincidence that the name of the program in which the game was mentioned was "What's happening, Mr. Silver?"

The professors have incorporated the Amherst Game Co. since they were unable to sell Credibility Gap to game companies. "One company told us they would if we'd cut out the politics, but we refused," Mr. Silver said.

Silver revealed that although they were advised to sell the game for $1.50 to $2.00 more they decided to keep the price lower so more students could afford it. The game is selling well on many University campuses. Mail orders have come in from senators, Congressmen and judges, and the reorders are encouraging according to Mr. Silver.

Perhaps the concession to allow students to afford the game contributes to the fact that the game, although successful, is still not creating a profit. Mr. Silver said that they are "breaking even" and that they hope to make a profit with the second printing. He mentioned however, that the business and money making part of the game is not nearly as rewarding as the creating.

Israelis, Jordanians Exchange Gunfire Across Jordan River

(AP) — Israeli and Jordanian guns exchanged fire across an 80-mile front of the Jordan River on Sunday. Israel claimed one Jordanian tank destroyed; Jordan reported five Israeli tanks were knocked out.

Each side claimed the other started the shooting.

In Amman, a Jordanian military spokesman said three Israeli 106mm guns and seven observation posts were destroyed. He said he believed Israeli losses were heavy.

He said five Israelis were killed and one Arab was wounded in a clash south of Lake Tiberias. Israel fired first with light and medium weapons, he said, and opened up with artillery after the Jordanians returned the fire.

Israeli army spokesmen in Tel Aviv said one Jordanian tank was knocked out at Abdullah Bridge, a few miles north of the Dead Sea.

The spokesman said the fighting, which lasted until nightfall, started at 10 a.m. when Jordanian machine guns fired on Israeli troops south of Kibbutz Gesher, 10 miles south of the Sea of Galilee.

In the ensuing artillery battle the kibbutz itself was shelled and residents were ordered into bunkers, but there were no civilian casualties, the Israelis said.

They said the battle lapsed at about 2 p.m. but the Jordanians began sporadic machine-gun and artillery bursts.

The Jordanians then widened the front to Damiya Bridge, 30 miles south of Gesher, by launching mortars on an Israeli post, the Israeli spokesman said.

They said Israeli forces at Allenby and Abdullah bridges further south later came under heavy Jordanian tank and artillery bombardment and the Israelis fired back with tanks and artillery.

Film Study Series Starts Tomorrow

The UMass Theatre Film Study Series will begin its second semester with two films tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The films will be Charlie Chaplin's first feature-length film, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which co-stars Marie Dressler, and "The Fall of Babylon," the most spectacular and elaborate sequence from D. W. Griffith's monumental "Intolerance."

Other second semester programs include Fred Astair and Ginger Rogers in "Shall We Dance," Kenji Mizoguchi's "Ugetsu," and Resnais' "Last Year at Marienbad."

The series in the past has brought to the UMass campus such distinguished works as "Birth of A Nation" and "Red Desert." The series is open to the public as well as series subscribers. Tickets will be available at the door.

Amherst Lawyer To Speak Before Pre-Law Group

The Pre-Law Association will hold a career conference tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union. The speaker will be Attorney Paul T. Ford of Amherst who will speak on the duties of a lawyer in a small town.

Mr. Ford is a prominent member of the community and has been a practicing atorney in the area for a number of years.

This engagement is part of an overall program scheduled by the Pre-Law Association to acquaint prospective law students and interested members of the University community with the requirements and demands of the various fields of law.

The Association has scheduled speakers in the fields of criminal and corporate law and government service to give their views on the particular aspects of their profession.

Applications for all forms of financial assistance for the 1968 — Summer Sessions and the 1968-69 academic year are now available in the Placement and Financial Aid office, Room 239, Whitmore Administration Building. All students including those now receiving assistance, who are seeking financial aid must apply before March 1.

Dorothy Ornest to Perform Memorial Concert to Lebow

Dorothy Ornest, soprano, will present a concert of works for voice and instruments as a continuing part of the UMass Faculty Recital Series. The concert will take place Wednesday, February 21 in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The concert has been designated by the Department of Music as a memorial to the late Howard Lebow, pianist and former member of the Department of Music, who was tragically killed in an automobile accident in January.

Miss Ornest will present three works. Two of these works, especially prepared for her by composers on the faculty, are to be performed for the first time.

Henry Purcell's Aria of the Blessed Virgin, a scene for soprano and small orchestra will open the program with a new realization and instrumentation by Charles Fussell, a member of the Music Department. Alessandro Scarlatti's solo cantata, Su Le sponde del Tebro (On the Banks of the Tiber) featuring faculty member Walter Chesnut on trumpet, will complete the first half of the recital. Mr. Fussell will conduct both the Purcell and Scarlatti.

The second half will be devoted to the premiere of a new work by faculty composer Robert Stern. The work is a song cycle for soprano, cello and piano titled Terezin and is based on children's poems and drawings from the Terezin Ghetto, 1942-44. Terezin, located not far from Prague, was a way-station to the point of no return, Auschwitz, for approximately 15,000 children. Joel Krosnick will be the cellist with the composer at the piano.

Other department members who will perform on the program include Julian Olevsky and Ronald Steele, violin; Joseph Contino, clarinet; and Miriam Whaples, harpsichord.

Winner of Date With Homecoming Queen Announced

The winner of the Dinner Date with the 1967 Homecoming Queen raffle was Peter Descenzer. The date was a free dinner at the Log Cabin with Shirley Capecci today.

The raffle was sponsored by the Young Republican Club. The proceeds from the sale of tickets will go to the sponsoring of various Republican speakers to come to the University and to sponsor a possible Draft Rockefeller Movement on the campus. The next meeting of the club will be in the Essex Room, Student Union, at 6:30.

BIG BROTHERS NEEDED

Most of us know that as a child grows up he needs people in his life to give him guidance and to act as a model.

Currently in Northampton there are a number of fatherless boys. The Welfare Department of Northampton thinks that responsible male students on this campus could make a significant contribution by acting as "big brothers" to these fatherless boys.

They would like students to devote a few hours each week on a regular basis, but at the student's convenience, to work with individual boys. Alpha Phi Omega asks students interested in participating in this project to sign up for this tomorow night or Wednesday or to contact Mike (6-8932) or Pete (6-8977).

Rocky Ends Strike Of Sanitation Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of sanitation men pitched into removing 100,000 tons of garbage from the city's streets Sunday, after a nine-day strike was ended on terms Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller forced on a protesting, angry Mayor John V. Lindsay.

Under Rockefeller's unprecedented formula, announced Saturday night, the state will take over the city Sanitation Department and pay the workers with city funds at a rate that Lindsay had said amounted to "blackmail."

Lindsay told a Sunday news conference that the Rockefeller plan was "unsound" and "corrupts the fundamental rights of the people of New York City and their elected representatives."

He said he had no time to lobby against the plan in a special session of the legislature which Rockefeller set for Monday.

But, Lindsay said, his statement should be "a very clear signal to members of the legislature about how I feel about this proposal."

Rockefeller refused to call out the National Guard, as Lindsay, a fellow Republican, requested. The governor said the guardsmen could not have done the job, and that their use could have led to "fighting in the streets." Organized labor had threatened a general strike if troops were used.

Lindsay said he was "shocked" at Rockefeller's "capitulation" to the 10,000-member Uniformed Sanitationmen's Association, a Teamsters Union affiliate. In a radio-television appearance Lindsay used profanity in an aside, apparently unaware he was on the air. It was the most visible display of disagreement between the two men, both frequently mentioned for the GOP national ticket, despite their disavowels.

Rockefeller's formula will require approval by the state legislature, which he said he would summon into special session Monday. The lawmakers are in the midst of their regular session, but the governor's call will mean they will have to drop other business to take care of the garbage dispute.

Credibility Gap Widens

It would seem logical that President Johnson would try to quell increasing criticism by bridging the credibility gap. Yet, recent events indicate the gap is growing wider. While the President has been quick to point out that the United States is winning the war for South Vietnam, recent incidents cast doubtful shadows on this optimism.

If we are winning, why has the Viet Cong suddenly taken the offensife? Last week, the special forces camp at Lang Vei, a strategic link in the fortification of northwestern South Vietnam (here the Ho Chi Minh trails enter the South), was lost along with 316 defenders. Nearby at Khe Sanh, 40,000 Viet Cong encircled some 6,000 American marines, threatening to create another Dien Bien Phu, once the weather provides ample protection from American air power.

If the United States is winning, why is Viet President Ky seriously considering distributing arms to civilians?

If we are winning, why has the Viet Cong suddenly taken the offensive? Last municipalities? Last week 34 major cities (out of 44) felt the brunt of the Communist offensive.

We are told that this winning "momentum" is uniting the people of South Vietnam behind us more than ever, and that South Vietnamese Army desertions have drastically declined. If the people of the South truly want our aid and thus support us, how did some 60,000 armed Viet Cong mass in and around these major cities, unnoticed until the shooting started? No city expected an attack, except Saigon, and even there proper precautions were not taken.

During last week's turmoil, Washington proudly announced that 27,706 Viet Cong were killed in the first 11 days and 6 hours of the Communist offensive. By way of comment we need only quote Newsweek's former Saigon bureau chief, Everett Martin, who only recently left South Vietnam: "To think that in the midst of last week's chaos and breakdown of communications a careful tabulation of such an enormous number of bodies was actually made defies logic and contributes further to the credibility gap."

It is easy to imagine that with the great volume of news emanating from Vietnam, Washington will occasionally quote misinformed sources; however, all doubt arising from administration statements is not due to communication breakdown. It is more logical to suppose that the Johnson Administration is feeding the American public a false sense of optimism.

Open Letter to Arts and Sciences Sophomores

Few Students Have Attended Forums

"Open letter to Arts and Sciences Sophomores"

For the last two weeks I have held open forums for sophomores on Mondays and Tuesdays (4-5 p.m. in CASIAC's office South College). These meetings are to permit sophomores to exchange views about education at the University of Massachusetts with their class dean and fellow class members.

So far the forums have been lightly attended with from two to five students coming each time. I am not disturbed by this. The small numbers facilitate free exchange of ideas, and I am satisfied that the forums are useful even if only one student comes. Our conversations have covered a wide range of questions, among them:

Should the Book Store make a profit?

Are students group-oriented or individualistic?

Do dormitory situations undermine student maturity?

Are drinking and drugs serious problems on our campus?

Why do University student have inferiority complexes?

Do most courses educate?

I would hope that sophomore in the College of Arts and Sci ences who are interested i "blowing off steam" on the abov topics or any others bearing o education at the University wi drop in. I will continue to hol the forums every Monday an Tuesday as long as studen come.

A Breath of Spring

The earth bubbles over with rebirth, mingling with effervescent joys.
It is Spring:
The air is permeated with apple blossom smell.
Spring, rebirth, gives us new hope, and an inspiration for the future.
There is a kind of lightness in the air.
Spring, rebirth, gives us spirit to do more, to live more.
The miracles of nature prove to us that God gives us another chance for a richer life, a fuller life.
It's a breath of Spring that encourages us to write a poem, to write a letter, to compose a song.
We go on and perform our daily tasks with vi and vigor.
We bubble over with the earth and its rebirth, i breath of Spring.

This poem was written by a patient at North ampton State Mental Hospital. She, and many o the other patients, have interests and optimis which they would like to share. Wednesday, Feb ruary 14 is Recruitment Night for all people i terested in volunteering at Northampton Stat Hospital.

Here and There

fall is falling here
leaves are floating freely in the whirling wind smoothly, softly, slowly
they sigh to the awaiting ground with their rainbow of colors they decorate the eager earth the sun shines not at all shyly onto the rustling, roaming leaves and soon almost unnoticed
the leaves cover the ground as if they know a beautiful, blonde, giggling girl will wistfully wrap herself in them she sits with her smiling smile her hair competing with the sun and just throws the leaves into the billowing breez laughing loving living
her ball of fur kitten by her side she picks him up and looks at the sun and the whole wonderful world can be seen in h and in her warm, widening eyes there it is the steaming, stifling, stinking r there is a little girl whose fingers are fused to and in whose eyes nothing will ever be she was hit by napalm
there is only one season there

Can Grades Be Replaced?

As Birney (1964) points out, however, grades have become important criteria in determining the student's placement when he leaves an institution—whether transferring, going to a graduate or professional school, or seeking a job. Interestingly enough, though, Hoyt (1966) in reviewing the literature, indicated that "college grades have no more than a modest correlation with adult success, no matter how defined."

Furthermore, there is little evidence to show that undergraduate grades can be used to predict success at the graduate level—in fact, the attrition rates between graduate school admissions and Ph.D.'s granted suggest serious defects in graduate school admission policies (Miller, 1967).

It is difficult to argue, then, that grades are essential for hiring or for determining graduate admissions. In fact, businesses have frequently complained that they do not want grades, "but personal and individual evaluations of students" (Miller, 1967). And, at the Conference on College Grading Systems held in 1963, the representatives from graduate and professional schools "indicated their willingness to accept whatever grading reforms the undergraduate institutions might propose" (Downing, 1964). While there might be some initial difficulties in these areas as a result of changing the present system, then, there is a willingness, and even a desire, among those affected for such change to be brought about.

Thus, in the view of a substantial number of researchers, the present grading system occupies a dubious position. It is difficult to attach meaning to a particular letter grade, and even more difficult to make comparisons between grades issued among, as well as within, colleges, levels, and departments. It is questionable, then, whether grades deserve the meaning which is often attached to them, but are they irreplaceable?

Suggestions for alternatives to the "present system" run the gamut of systems presently in use, and then some: pass-fail in limited courses, certain levels of courses, all courses, et cetera; finer distinctions, i.e. the addition of pluses and minuses to the letter grades; numerical systems; comprehensive examinations; individual evaluations; dossiers; or some combination of the preceding. Unfortunately, however, many of the systems suggested are based entirely on subjective rather than objective data. Many have been tried and abandoned in the past — often without adequate reasons or because their purpose was misunderstood. Some are being tried now, but are too new to warrant acceptance on their limited success or dismissal on their initial faults.

The pass-fail option, for example, is currently flourishing, and while it is generally considered successful by those offering it (Hewitt, 1967), little objective data exists to testify to its success or failure. Some studies in this area are currently underway; however, only preliminary findings are available. Pascal (1967) has found at Michigan, for example, that "contrary to expectations, students in pass-fail courses did not relax their academic habits."

Concerning the pass-fail option as currently used, Miller (1967) points out that although it is a "very cautious answer to the grading problem...it does not go very far in response to the faults of the grading system." In order to rectify the present situation, Miller feels that pass-fail grading would have to be made available in a far greater number of courses — to the extent of all courses in the first two years or even in all four years. The California Institute of Technology has found pass-fail grading in all courses of the standard freshman curriculum to be most effective (Hewitt, 1967).

Little evidence exists, however, regarding the effects of all pass-fail courses. Here again, subjective opinion must be considered in lieu of objective research.

Perhaps, pass-fail in all courses is best used in conjunction with other forms of evaluation, such as comprehensive examinations and individual evaluations — the University of California at Santa Cruz uses such a system at present and has had success with it to date. In such a system, the usual pressures of grading are removed while retaining indicators for the student to use in the process of self-evaluation; comprehensive examinations attest to the knowledge attained in specific areas; the evaluations provide specific data on the student usually concealed in grades and are invaluable to graduate schools and prospective employers. This is, however, only one possible solution — again, too new to justify its unexamined acceptance.

Refining the present system by the addition of +'s and —'s seems a curious method of solving the problems inherent in it. If grades do not measure what they purport to measure now, more grades will not either. If grades are difficult to interpret now, refined grades will add little meaning. Finally, can instructors always differentiate between, for example, a C + and a B — ? How many subjects lend themselves to such exactitude? This solution seems to give an aura of exactitude that doesn't necessarily exist. The same seems to be true for numerical systems.

'Pro-War Rally' Was Really Anti-War Rally

To the editor:

For the record (a tabloid of which name is more comparable to the Collegian daily), I wish to correct several statements and implications made in Bill Dickinson's article "Soini Leads Pro-War Rally" (February 7 M.D.C.)

To begin with the head-line, the Victory in Vietnam rally could have been called pro-Viet, victory, anti-Cong, plain "Vietnam"—in short, almost anything except pro-WAR. No one desires war and I would hesitate to leave my name immortalized with such a von Bernhardi adjective, especially in view of the fact that I endeavored to lead an "ANTI-war" rally by warning dissenters among us that war is prolonged and made larger by home-front division.

The main point of the twenty-minute speech was just that — that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have won victories only on the home front, are encouraged to believe that although they cannot win, the United States can lose, and that American dissent-watchful communist nations are thereby encouraged to aid the North Viets and Cong. Pro-war is also perhaps the poorest adjective and least accurate summary of the purpose of the rally (to honor and to show support for our men in Vietnam).

Secondly, I quote the article:

After mentioning that University President John Lederle had declined an invitation to appear at the rally, Soini attacked those who listen to the "chorus of voices of peaceful surrender" and who lack the courage to show their "patriotism". "Communists and communist sympathizers are misleading the American public," he declared.

The relevant portion of my speech went:

President Lederle was notified one month ago, more than a month ago, about this rally. He sent regrets. There was a previous appointment, also something about the general cautions. President Lederle's patriin accepting political invitations. President Lederle patriotism and abilities I do not question. Nor his judgment. It is not an indictment against President Lederle that he, among others, could not appear here tonight without jeopardizing his position. It is an indictment on America. We are an American public willing to be intimidated by communists and communist sympathizers . . . (4 paragraphs on college isolations follow) . . . America can, wants to and will come back to victory. Harry Truman, in the middle of the Korean War, summed up this feeling, "It is not our nature to shirk our obligations. We have a heritage that constitutes the greatest resource of this nation. I call it the spirit and character of the American people. American courage and unity in the face of adversity are proverbial . . ."

In comparing the two one notes that the alleged "attack" (I attacked NO ONE's patriotism) was followed by a statement of faith in the ability of the American public to back our men, bury the hatchet and, MOTIVATED by patriotism (!), face the Viet Cong united.

Also, biographically, I am not a "charter member" of New Guard; I am not a member of New Guard. (In presidency of the former Young Conservatives I presided over Y.C.'s dissolution and formation of the analagous New Guard. Aid I gave to New Guard as president of the reforming fall group was in securing information about New Guard for the Senate Activities Committee.

Since New Guard became an R.S.O. group, my connection was at the invited main speaker at New Guard's rally.) Moreover, since membership in New Guard implicates one into association with the Y.A.F., John Birch Society—according to Mr. Dickinson's irrelevant and unfair final paragraph—I feel called upon to note that I am not a John Bircher, Minuteman, etc., etc. My only political connection is as a plain Young Republican club member.

Other distortions and less serious omissions could have been avoided by verbatim speech reporting, as practiced by the New York Times. Isolated words are never lifted out of context and punched into sleazy paraphrases. Nor are biographical statements made without checking with the individual. Often, also, a speaker's manuscript is available on request. Under such conditions no one is said to have "verbally slapped" "doves" (a term I did not use but which Mr. Dickinson would have me use) by stating that they are "witty" and "eloquent"—my slaps!

As I say, such errors would not occur with a Times policy. As it is, the "Record" will have to continue to be corrected.

'Star Trek' Fan Fears Show Will Be Axed

If you are a loyal follower of the NBC-TV series Star Trek, now is the time to do your part in saving the show from the merciless axe of the TV executives.

Wednesday, the final decision will soon be made either to retain Star Trek for another season or to discontinue it. As the situation stands at present, the chances are poor that the show will return next fall, unless those who care enough act now.

Please write letters or notes favoring the return of Star Trek so that NBC will receive them by February 14. The address is the following: Mr. Julian Goodman, President NBC, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N. Y. 10026.

Students Asked To Aid in the Return of Sign

To the editor:

I am appealing to you for your help in returning a sign that has been at my home for over 51 years, which has disappeared from its wrought angle frame at 300 North Pleasant St. This sign was the sign of my late husband who died in 1959. The sign was placed near the home in June of 1916.

Possession of this sign means nothing, as you must know, to the one who has taken it, but it means a lot to me, an elderly woman of over 76.

No questions will be asked when the sign is returned to my side porch.

Frosh Gymnasts Rout LIU, 142.60-113.15

Winning all but two events, the UMass freshman gymnastics team defeated Long Island University, 142.60-113.15, Saturday afternoon at Boyden Gym. The win upped the frosh record to 3-1.

The frosh got to a quick start in the floor exercise event, sweeping the first three events. Bob Therique won the event with a score of 7.8, with Glenn Silvert placing second and Norm Vexler, third.

The UMass team continued its dominaton in the side horse competition. Vexler won the event with a score of 8.25, Jim Riley finished second and Jim Chase grabbed fourth spot.

Vexler again gained a first place as he won the rings event. Two Little Redmen with very little gymnastics background finished second and third respectively, they being Steve Margil and Mike Peloquin.

In the trampoline event, although not gaining first place, the frosh did gain a second place tie between Therique and Silvert, both scoring 4.50 Vexler came back to win his third event in the parallel event. Peloquin, who had no high school experience, finished second and all-around man Eddie Jones finished fourth.

The long horse competition was won by L.I.U., but Vexler gained points finishing second, with Jones and Henry tieing for third. Vexler finished off a superb day by winning the high bar event with Hastings third for UMass.

Vexler ended the day with 46 points, scoring eight or better in four of six events. Jones also was an especially bright figure, hitting his personal highs in his four all-around events.

The frosh next go into action on Wednesday when they travel to Springfield he couldn't turn a stubborn J. Martin over in the 177 lb. class. Martin fought a defensive bout all the way just to keep from being pinned. Willman walked off with a 7-1 decision his opponent scoring his only point when Bob slipped off of a pinning hold. Willman racked up an unbelievable 7:15 minutes riding time.

The fastest pin of the evening was scored by George Zguris in the 191 lb. class in just 51 seconds when bombed G. Romero. George hails from Shirley, Long Island.

In the entire dual meet the BC wrestlers scored just two individual points on two escapes. In both instances the UMass wrestler was applying a pin hold when the opponent slipped away. The frosh record is now 6-0.

Their next meet is Tuesday at Connecticut, as the frosh meet the Huskies in an expected tough meet.

Frosh Cagers Win 95-55

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Day Editor

UMass was to entertain the nation's leading scorer Saturday night, but he was hardly noticed as the UMass freshman basketball team crushed Franklin Pierce College, 95-55, at the Cage. The win snapped a Little Redman two game loss streak and upped their season's mark to 8-4.

UMass trailed in only the first two minutes as the frosh put on probably their best all-around performance of the year. They took the lead at 16:17 of the first half on a basket by Ken Mathias and never again trailed. In the next ten minutes UMss outscored the New Hampshire school 25-13, to lead 38-21.

Leading the Little Redman in what was to be the decisive surge was Frank Schaffeld, who was consistently hitting on his turnaround jumper and Bob Dempsey who, playing his best ball game since early in the season, was stealing the ball regularly and leading numerous fast break baskets.

The lead was steadily increased from this time on as UMass was shooting as well as they have for weeks and finding little trouble penetrating the smaller Franklin Pierce team's defense. The half time lead for UMass was 50-27.

Meanwhile, the high-scoring Bob Szklarz never could get untracked. Harrassed by a superb defensive job by Bill Greeley and Jon Kruper, Szklarz could only muster nine points in the first half and 23 for the game, 11 from the foul stripe, far below his 52 point average.

The second half was a repeat of the first. The Little Redmen's superior height and depth were too much for the out-manned Franklin Pierce team. The big lead for UMass was steadily increased throughout the half. UMass was up 30 at 5:56, 36 at 2:15 and 38 at 1:31. The final 40 point budge was the highwater mark of the game and season for the frosh.

Starting in his first game, Tom Nally led the UMass scorers with 19 points. He was supported in the balanced attack by Mathias with 16 and Dempsey and Schaffeld with 17 each. The performance off Nally was especially encouraging since his fine plays adds depth to frosh frontcourt, weakened by Lou Griffin's injury.

Szklarz with his 23 points was the game leader.

Girls Win 38-22

The University of Massachusetts Women's Basketball team won a 38-32 victory over Greenfield Community College in their first game Wednesday night. The team, coached by Miss Sally Ogilvie consisted of players Nancy Brochu, Judy Bourell, Lorraine Gomes, Jane Jaworski, Joan Nartowt, Jean Schissel and Linda Taylor. High scorers were Lorraine Gomes and Linda Taylor with 14 points each. Outstanding guards were Jane Jaworski and Joan Nartowt. Their next game is away at Springfield College tonight.

y third periods goals by Ed Cutting and Ter-edy led Army to a 6-1 hockey triumph over U-s Friday night at Orr Rink before about 500 fans.

Ahead, 2-0, going into the last period, Army tallied quickly at 1:24 of the period as Cutting was set up right in front of an empty net on picture passes from Kennedy and Tony Curran.

Fifteen seconds later, Kennedy let go a blue line slap shot that beat UMass goalie Pete Scoville to the upper right corner.

UMass gave the Cadets a real battle in the first two periods. Action was up and down throughout the opening period with both teams having scoring chances.

After the Cadets killed off a penalty to Fritz Hausman midway through the first period, the Black Knights scored while Dave Goldberg was off the ice for tripping. Curran got the goal on a shot from about 15 feet out.

Second period action was featured by some fine saves by Scoville during an Army power play. John Ahlbrecht slid a ten footer into the left corner of the net at 11:40 to give the Cadets a two goal lead going into the last period.

After the early outburst by Army in the last period, the Redmen gained control of play during two power plays. The pressure paid off when Don Robinson batted in a rebound of a Doug Powling shot for the lone UMass tally.

Hopes for a UMass comeback were quickly subsided as Cutting picked up his second goal of the night 34 seconds after Robinson's goal.

Curran closed out the scoring late in the third period when he had a clean breakaway and faked Scoville out tucking the puck behind him catching the far corner.

Army hiked its record to 9-6 overall while UMass is now 3-11.

BLUELINE BANTER . . . The game featured some crisp checking by both sides . . . Action in the second period went nearly five minutes without a whistle early in the period . . . UMass hockey coach Jack Canniff nearly lost some finers when the puck smashed against the player's door he was about to open.

Swimmers Dunked in Close Meet, 53-51

BURLINGTON, Vt.—Losing a key race by only an inch, the UMass swimming team was edged by Vermont, 53-51, here Saturday. It was the Redmen's second straight loss.

Ken Novak, swam away with the 50 yard race, as he got off to a blistering start and never relinquished his lead.

Bob Asquith, continued his domination of his opponents by winning the backstroke.

Al Northrup also continued his winning ways by easily gaining a win in the breaststroke. Miller, meanwhile, was successful in taking the 100 yard race.

Coach Rogers was disappointed by the loss. He said, "We should have won the meet, except for some bad breaks."

UMass in Easy 96-58 Romp; Tindall Scores Record 41

By MIKE CURRAN
Staff Reporter

What was billed as a crucial Yankee Conference battle, turned into Billy Tindall night as the 6'5" senior poured in a record-breaking 41 points in leading UMass to a 96-58 rout of Vermont.

1600 freezing fans had come to the Cage expecting a close game since the Catamounts had beaten the Redmen 85-82, in overtime at Burlington earlier in the season. Any fears of another upset were quickly dispelled however.

Joey DiSarcina had the UMass fastbreak in high gear right from the start. Once the Redmen began to find the range, they rattled off strings of nine and ten consecutive points. Vermont was as cold as the Cage, on the other hand, and before the halftime buzzer sounded they were well out of the game.

From the 13 minute mark in the first half to the 5 minute mark, the visitors were outscored 21-4. Tindall was especially hot from the floor during this spell sinking four shots from inside.

At intermission UMass led, 49-21, as Tindall with 136 and DiSarcina with 14 led the way.

Vermont shot an icy 20% for the first 20 minutes.

The big story of the last 20 minutes was Tindall. With a 25 point burst, he broke the single game high of 39 points set by Bill Prevey in 1952 while eclipsing Clarence Hill's field goal mark of 16 established two seasons ago.

Coach Jack Lemon had all starters out except Tindall for the last ten minutes of the game. The subs fed their Captain until with a little over a minute to go he threw in a 20-footer which gave him the scoring record.

The Catamounts played evenly with UMass for the entire second half. Each team scored 47 points.

UMass' control of the boards was the key difference between this game and the Redmen's first effort against the Catamounts. Led by Tindall with 17, UMass outrebounded Vermont, 72-43.

The home team also enjoyed a wide edge in the shooting department, sinking 37 of 74 as opposed to the visitors' 22 of 61.

Tindall's 41 points came on a hot 19 of 33 from the floor and a poor three of 13 from the line. Better foul-shooting would have enabled the senior Captain to break the Cage record of 44 for a varsity contest.

John Dreyer was impressive in his role as a substitute center. The little used center showed he can handle himself well off the backboards picking off seven rebounds in 13 minutes of action.

Ray Ellerbrook had another fine game, coming up with 18 points while Frank Martiniuk led the Catamounts with 22 points. Both sophomore guards from New Jersey shot better than 50% from the floor.

Relay Team Sets Mark

By JOEL FOX
Staff Reporter

NEW YORK—The UMass one-mile relay team broke the school record in winning its heat of the star-studded U.S. Track and Field Federation Meet held Friday night in Madison Square Garden, New York. The meet, the last to be held in the old Garden, hosted such Olympic hopefuls as Jim Ryan, Dave Patrick, Bob Seagran, Charlie Greene, and Gerry Lingren.

The relay which the UMass team won was the final of the preliminary one-mile relays which were run earlier in the afternoon. In the afternoon competition the team made up of Bob Hasselbaum, John Anderson, Diego Gonzales, and Dave Evans, held off a late rush from Colgate to win the seeded heat and qualify for the night action. The squad was timed at 3:23.6, a tenth of a second off the school mark.

But, at night, in the finals, they pulled away early and had little competition as Hasselbaum (50.8 seconds), Anderson (50.4), Gonzales (51.1) and Evans (50.4) broke the school mark with a time of 3:22.7. This time was the ninth fastest of the 47 teams that competed in the one-mile relay during the day.

UMass also had individual entries in the afternoon meet Freshman Ron Wayne ran a strong race in his heat in finishing third in the mile with a time of 4:21, his fastest time to date Frosh Cal Carpenter cleared 6'2"

Gymnasts Romp 177-103

Led by double win performances by Joe Reed, Toby Kasavana and Steve Brown, the UMass gymnastics team defeated Pittsburgh 177-103, at Boyden Gym, Saturday. It was the second straight league win for the Redmen.

UMass dominated over the weaker Pitt team throughout. Joe Godwin won the Floor exercise with Reed finishing second. The team then took all four places in the side horse. Leading the way was Bob Leclair with a 9.1 first place finish, followed by Clarence Fraser, Fred Babakian and Reed respectively.

Reed led the Redmen to sweep off the first three spots in the rings, with George Seibert and Dave March following. Seibert's 8.45 was a personal high. The brothers Kasavana, Mike and Toby then finished one-two in the trampoline with Tom Adams fourth.

Toby Kasavana and Brown tied for top honors in the long horse as the Redmen continued their domination of the Panthers. Reed, March and Brown swept the top three positions in the parallel bars to continue the rout.

UMass put the finishing touches on the victory, as Brown, Reed and Seibert took the top three

Frosh Matmen Remain Unbeaten; Shut Out Boston College, 48-0

By BOB LUMDDUE
Staff Reporter

Notorious Bob Willman was the only frosh wrestler not to register a pin last Saturday night at Boston College as the Little Redmen continue undefeated, defeating B. C., 48-0. As though smarting from almost getting beaten by the Central Connecticut freshmen a week ago, the frosh put on relentless pressure in gaining eight pins, two forfeits, and one decision. There was no contest in the unlimited weight class as both teams failed to enter a contestant.

Nick DiDomenico opened the scoring with a forfeit at 115 lbs.

John Paltrineri looked for a while like he was going to have his hands full with T. Anderson, but John overpowered his opponent with his third pin in three outings in 3:38 minutes.

Phil Davis wrestling at 130 lbs. showed his usual strength and completely dominated S. McElheney and pinned him in 5:33 minutes.

Howie Kaplin won a forfeit in the 137 lb. class.

At 145 lbs. Bobby Freeman decked T. Higgins to the mat with a body press in just 1:59 of the first period.

Mike Brauner did some fancy countering as his oppenent C. Petrocelli fought desperately to change the order of events, but Mike put him away with a pin in 3:25 minutes in the 152 lb. encounter.

Tom Young wrestling at 160 lbs. continued to make a believer of the BC fans with a skillful performance when he bounced S. Pucci into a pin in just 2:25 minutes.

Springfield's contribution to the freshmen team Tom Andrewes didn't waste any time at all when he took W. Moschella down and pinned him in the second fastest time of the evening at 1:01 minutes in his 167 lb. division.

Bob Willman was forced by his teammates to ride the back of the bus on the way home when

Grapplers Pin B.C. 29-13

By BOB LUMDDUE
Staff Reporter

In their most solid performance to date, the UMass wrestlers defeated the Boston College grapplers at Boston Saturday night, 29-13. Key performances were turned in by Brian Urquhart, Mike McKenna, Ernie Smith, and Glenn Cummins. Fred Fitzpatrick registered the only pin for the Redmen in what appeared at the time to be the must bout of the evening.

Billy Goodwin weighed in at 115 lbs. and won a forfeit to open the scoring for UMass. Bill's personal record is now 5-2.

At 123 lbs. Dave Wade wrestled D. Powers from his hometown, Needham, and dropped a 4-0 decision. Power scored a reversal and riding time on Wade to drop his record to 3-4.

Paul Pearl couldn't get started against L. McDade in the 130 lb. class and dropped a 6-1 decision to the BC powerhouse. The loss makes Paul's record 3-4.

Undefeated Captain Gene Paltrineri ran into a tougher than usual opponent in T. Marcarici and was forced to go the limit to win a hard 10-3 decision.

In a tension packed bout at 145 lbs., Brian Urquhart and P. Trombi wrestled to a 0-0 draw. Brian showed good leg riding in the third period to hold down his stronger opponent. Brian is now 1-4-1 for the season.

Mike McKenna picked up the UMass bench with his stunning and clever victory in the 152 lb. bracket with a 2-1 decision over M. Calvey. Because he was out of action last week with a cold, McKenna's game plan was to wrestle defensively in the first period, score a quick escape in the second period, get some riding time in the third period before letting his opponent escape. The plan worked precisely as Mike won, 2-1, on 1:20 riding time. Mike is now 3-3.

Coach Barr told Fred Fitzpatrick that we "Need This One" when he walked on the mat to wrestle L. Milkowski at 160 lbs. Fred responded with a pin in the second period, and UMass sensed the victory as the team score read 18-8. Fred sports a 5-2 record.

Allan Sgroi moved back up to the 167 lb. class to take on D. Bergen and this bout triggered the fireworks for the night. Al proceeded to dominate the bout throughout the early moments and the points were ringing on the scoreboard as he led 5-3 ending the first period. Bergen took the top position to start the second period and caught Al in a roll to score an unexpected pin. Al's record now stands at 2-3.

It looked like the Red Sox had just won the pennant on the UMass bench when Ernie Smith won his first wrestling bout at 177 lbs. against R. Ryan. Ernie scored a takedown, predicament, escape, and riding time, with most of the scoring coming in the third period, to take the 6-4 decision.

At 191 lbs. Dick Gnatek won a forfeit as BC failed to enter an opponent.

Glenn Cummins and M. Peterson locked in a great duel in the unlimited bout as Glenn opened the bout with a takedown. Peterson countered with a reversal and the bout score read, 2-2, until the third period. With a sudden burst of energy Glenn scored an escape takedown predicament, and nearfall plus riding time to win going away with an 11-2 decision.

Academics claimed the only two freshman heavyweights, and the wrestling team is looking for an athlete over 200 pounds. Candidates please report to the wrestling room in Boyden.

Student Employees Eligible To File Income Tax Forms

All students who have earned $600 or more, through part-time work at the university, must file a federal income tax form. Mr. Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Aid, went on to say that, if the student's earnings at the university plus his earnings during the summer or elsewhere total $600, "he is morally, as well as legally, obligated to report both sources of income."

Although no deductions are made from student earnings, and W-2 forms are not sent to student employees, the Treasurer's Office does report those earning over $600 from the university to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. All students who fall into this category can obtain an accurate account of their earnings from the Placement and Financial Aid Office, located in Whitmore Hall.

All federal income tax returns must be filed on or before April 15. Tax forms, 1040 and 1040-A, may be obtained from Mr. William Maus, Treasurer's Office, Room 311, Whitmore Hall.

Johnson Defends Peace Offer Made to North Vietnamese

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson said Monday night that despite the Communist offensive in Vietnam, his San Antonio Formula offer for peace talks still stands and "we would meet them tomorrow."

Johnson discussed Vietnam, dissent at home and unrest in the cities in a wideranging 75-minute question and answer session with a group of 11 college students.

Johnson said that in seeking peace in Vietnam, "we have gone just as far as decent and honorable people can go."

But he said he stands behind his 1967 offer to halt the bombing of North Vietnam and talk promptly if the Communists indicated this would be productive.

But, addressing the Communists in effect, he added: "We don't want you to take advantage like you did during the Tet."

If Hanoi is interested, Johnson said, it wouldn't have to change a "could" to a "will" or indulge in any other semantical niceties in stating its position.

As an example, he went on, all they would have to do "is drop a line and say Geneva is the place and tomorrow is the day."

Johnson said Hanoi's answer to his earlier offer of the San Antonio formula was the assault of 44 South Vietnamese cities and 24 U.S. bases "on a sacred day"—the Vietnamese New Year.

"Yet we would meet them tomorrow," he added, "but we're not going to surrender."

The college students who met with Johnson in the White House living quarters were members of the National Board of Choice '68, a nationwide collegiate presidential preference primary to be held on more than 100 campuses April 24.

In the balloting, students not only will pick their choice for the presidency but will express themselves on referenda issues including Vietnam and the urban crisis.

Johnson was asked how he felt about antiwar sentiment and demonstrations on college campuses.

"They sadden me, they trouble me, I think because I know how they feel," the President replied.

He said it would be a "very unusual student" who wouldn't be concerned, who wouldn't seek alternatives, who wouldn't want to see the war ended as quickly as possible."

The chief executive conceded that a lot of students "think there is a better way out than what we're doing."

Arguing with considerable emotion for his policies, Johnson said:

"You can't run a war by polls and you can't run a peace by polls; but you can't be oblivious to public opinion."

Johnson expressed the opinion that if some kind of meter could be devised to measure human feeling and were installed in a National Security Council meeting, and if the council members were asked if they wanted peace in Vietnam, he would bet "that needle would swing around farther than at Berkeley or Texas or Harvard."

He said he is convinced that the council members are working harder for peace than the people on the campuses he cited.

"I don't know how to do anything better than we are doing," he said. "If there were, I would do it."

Johnson declared that as a college newspaper editor, "I was protesting nearly everything around me." He said he began by protesting against some of the policies of the college president and wound up protesting against the President of the United States.

He said he believes young people are always in the advance guard in expressing their opinion and that this "causes people to stop, look, listen, evaluate."

The first question put to Johnson was whether he thought it would be possible to avert another round of urban riots this summer.

"I don't think you can avert a bad summer," he said. "We'll have a bad summer. Well have several bad summers."

Birth Control Advocated by Drum During Botany 101 Class Lecture

By RICHARD S. KLINE
News Editor

Under campus scrutiny since his first lecture last fall, botany professor Ryan Drum came into the public limelight again yesterday when he advocated to his Botany 101 class of over 500 students the general use and distribution of birth control devices.

Drum's unorthodox teaching methods of playing music throughout each class in a darkened room while showing slides and movies; providing his own commentary; and discouraging note taking, has attracted widespread interest.

The class which turned into a discussion and commentary on birth control began with Drum's walking around the auditorium and carefully surveying the audience. After his completion of fifty pushups at the head of the class, he stated that "after surveying the class singularly and collectively . . . you're all a bunch of creeps. And, anyone who would like to argue with me can meet with me on my terms."

Some ten minutes into the class, Drum tossed his microphone to someone who had made an appearance at the front of the auditorium. The male questioner said that after calling the audience "Creeps" he wanted to know what Drum thought about birth control, "a question in many of our minds."

"I wonder," said the professor, "when I see anyone who looks out over the world and speaks against birth control, whether theyre a b . . . d or not. They don't know . . . . they don't have feelings. It's a means of having your cake and eating it too—I'm for it."

"The whole social order with birth control pills would change," said Drum. "Until the pill, women were biological slaves of men."

He was quick to note, however, that birth control bills can be detrimental to the health of a user. They are a "chemical repression of certain functions—in this case ovulation," said Drum. "It's a form of protection . . . ," but, he said, "blocking endangers the rest of the body."

There are, said the professor, "unfortunate side effects" in some cases. The pills, he said, will magnify ill effects. "With the taking of birth control pills . . . all the defects (a person's physical defects) are pointed out —these show up as side effects."

Fielding questions from the audience, Drum asked if any of the side effects are permanent, said "Death . . ." Noting that all the questions in the early part of the question period come from men, Drum said, "Abortion and birth control laws are funny, because it's men who make them."

Answering a query as to whether there was a time limit that one could take the pills, he said, "People have taken them for ten years now and some Puerto Ricans for 14 years . . ."

On other questions, the doctor stated that, "I've never known somebody that had to get married to love someone else—in fact, when they get married . . ." they tend "to stop loving even themselves." He noted, however that that was "a personal observation." He further said that maybe "without the hangover of childbearing as a fear factor, people are more likely to get married."

According to Drum, 1 in every 7 children born in Connecticut and 1 in every 8 children born in Massachusetts are illegitimate. "As far as I'm concerned, the whole thing is a personal relationship . . ."

Vance and Park Discuss "Pueblo" Incident Rift

by BOB POOS
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL (AP) — U.S. special envoy Cyrus R. Vance had a three-hour talk Monday with President Chung Hee Park and other Korean officials aimed at shoring up a rift between the two allies.

Vance scheduled another meeting with Korean officials Tuesday, the day he was supposed to return to Washington, indicating that the talks have not been entirely smooth.

A former deputy secretary of defense, Vance came here as President Johnson's special envoy to deal with the worst crisis since the Korean War. Presidential press secretary Shin Bum-shik said Vance handed Park another letter from Johnson.

Tension flared Jan. 21 with a 31-man North Korean commando raid aimed at assassinating Park. It grew to fever pitch two days later when North Korean patrol boats seized the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo off the coast of North Korea.

Since then, the Americans and North Koreans held a series of five talks at Panmunjom truce village on the Pueblo incident from which both the South Koreans and the Communist Chinese allies of North Korea were barred.

The South Korean public, press and political leaders did not like the secrecy. It was felt that the Americans were paying attention to the Pueblo and its crew at the expense of the North Korean threat to South Korea, that the United States might appease the North Koreans and thus threaten South Korean security.

Korean officials at the conference included Premier Chung Il-kwen, Foreign Minister Choi Kyu-hah and Defense Minister Kim Sung-eun.

The talks were expected to review the U.S. defense posture, efforts to release the Pueblo crew, more military aid from the United States to South Korea and other American aid.

The U.S. Embassy said only that the talks included a "free, friendly and candid exchange of views." A spokesman for Park said the meeting was conducted in a "sincere atmosphere" but he declined to say if there were any differences between the two groups or whether any progress was made.

UMass Professor Receives Electrification Award

Assistant Professor Edward S. Pira of the UMass agricultural engineering department was recently awarded the New England Farm Electrification Institute Award for his outstanding contributions to improved agricultural production and rural living through the use of electricity. He was cited for conducting electrical seminars and workshops for vocational agricultural teachers and New England 4-H leaders, for developing teaching aids, and for his many publications for the better understanding of electricity. Prof. Pira is shown receiving the award from Dr. J. T. Clayton, head of the agricultural engineering department.

Vermont Senator Says Vietnam Military Victory Still Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., says that despite the massive Communist assault on South Vietnamese cities, he remains confident that a military takeover of the country can be prevented.

Stafford, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said also the present military situation precludes any immediate negotiated settlement of the war.

"But I have not lost hope for such a settlement once this current Communist military offensive is defeated," he said in a newsletter to his constituents.

At that time, Stafford said, he will continue to press for deescalation of the war in line with the proposal he and eight other representatives advanced last July.

Reporting on his 17-day visit to South Vietnam in January, Stafford said: "Our military troops, given the unconventional and often frustrating mission they have been ordered to carry out, are operating remarkably well and their morale is astoundingly high. I have the utmost regard for the way they are performing a most difficult assignment."

Despite the assaults on the cities since his visit, he said, "I am still optimistic that we can prevent the enemy from accomplishing a military take over."

Roll Up for the Mystery Tour

Eric Burdon sings of Monterey and says: "if you want to find the truth in life, don't pass music by." Find Lennon and McCartney and see reflections of yourself. They experience—you experience, they grow — you grow, they show themselves and I am he as you are he as you are me and we are all together and they show us.

You're younger and you saw her standing there and you knew you would never dance with another and living was just twisting and shouting and you just wanted to hold her hand. That was it because all you had to do was call and you sent all your loving and you just never heard those birds or bells until now. And you wanted to be her MAN but you couldn't understand how it could end not realizing you were that BOY. And even though she had the devil in her heart and she couldn't do that she still really had a hold on you. You called her name and knew that you'd get her in the end because you knew that she loved you (you got that second hand from the postman) and the music was the only good music even though Beethoven was rolling over (he was a god guy and all but kind of straight).

You're older and even though you should have known better you fell in that love which money just can't buy, but you didn't know what it really was and you had to have a promise that she she would be true and you were happy just to dance with her but you didn't know that it was all just a hard day's night.

So little Miss Lizzy made you dizzy and eight days a week all you heard were words of love because she liked you too much and every little thing confirmed that yes it was but then before you knew it no it wasn't and you didn't want to spoil that damn party but how could you survive losing her.

Can't help it: getting older and you still need help because you're still a loser not getting any reply and then you get another girl and you feel fine. You stop thinking about the night before for the first time and decide that maybe you should hide your love away. You go on for a while and then you meet Elanor Rigby and after that you begin realizing that life is not just holding her hand.

You've buried that person who knew he would never dance with another and with a little help from your friends it gets better all the time. You leave home but can't quite make it on your own and you are confused and for awhile it takes Lucy in the sky with diamonds to straighten you out. When your mind is wandering, there you will go, and it really doesn't matter if you're right and where you belong you're right where you belong. You start looking at the world around you and its insane but at least now you know how many holes it takes to fill the Albert Hall. But you're not quite there yet because you had to look, having read the book, and life was only turning on.

For awhile you've got nothing to say but then the Magical Mystery Tour takes you away and you've found life because that Magical Mystery Tour is people. He's the fool on the hill but he sees the sun going down and the world spinning round and don't you think the joker laugh at you? Ha Ha Ha! You've found it because its people and I am he as you are he as you are me and we are all together. Well, baby you're a rich man now because THESE strawberry fields are forever. Its people and all you need is love.

McCarthy to Continue Low-Key Campaign Strategy

MANCHESTER, N. H. (AP) — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy has turned down advice to take off the gloves and start punching against President Johnson when he returns Tuesday night for a third round of campaigning in New Hampshire.

He'll employ the same low-key strategy, but with sharp jabs of humor, in his long-odds bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Despite urging of peace groups and "Dump Johnson" enthusiasts on the sidelines — and some young staffers in his own camp—the Minnesota senator has decided to continue the soft sell in search of votes for the primary March 12.

At a gymnasium meeting in Concord on last week's swing through the state McCarthy poked fun at Johnson's use of ranch slang:

"It helps some in understanding this administration to have some knowledge of how cattle are handled.

There are even times McCarthy seems to view the accepted arts of applied politics with downright skepticism.

Some young people who are working in his campaign throw darts at a target bearing Lyndon B. Johnson's likeness. And the peace groups, concerned Democrats and "Dump Johnson" elements are pressing for a much tougher McCarthy assault on the President.

But this strategy has been rejected by the senator who believes a gloves off attack would alienate New Hampshire voters, who have a reputation for hawkishness.

"We're not trying to please peace groups," said a McCarthy worker. "We're trying to get 51 per cent of the vote. We're trying to beat Lyndon Johnson."

Yellow Crane Will Be Part Of Campus for Some Time

Located on the east side of the Student Union, Tower Crane One has held the attention of student and professor alike since it's erection two weeks ago. Bought at a cost of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars by O'Connell Construction Company, the yellow erector set will swing its silent orbit until the new Student Annex is completed. The Tower Crane was built seven months ago in County Kerry, Ireland. It was shipped to New Orleans and used by a local company until purchased by O'Connell. Securely tied aboard a fleet of trailer trucks, the Crane made its way slowly northward, arriving in Amherst two weeks later.

Anchored in six feet of concrete, the tower stands one hundred and ninety six feet high. Another one hundred feet can be added if necessary. Hydrolic jacks are located at the mid-point of the tower and raise or lower the upper section twenty one feet at a time. The crane has a radius of one hundred and thirty five feet and can lift seven tons. There is a counter weight of eleven tons located at the opposite end of the crane. A trolley moves in either direction along the crane and holds the lifting cables. The operator can swing the crane, move the trolley along its track, and lift a load at the same time. This ability to move in three directions at once makes Tower Crane One unique. More conventional cranes can only move in two directions at one time.

The crane is electrically powered. It can be operated from the tower or by remote control from the ground. When the operator is in the tower his only contact with the ground is by walkie-talkie. Before the operation descends, a brake is released which allows the crane to swing laterally in either direction. This is known as windmilling and is a safety precaution against high gusts of wind.

Paul St. Martin, the area superintendent, calls Tower Crane One a wonderful machine.

Volpe Offers Redistricting Plan

BOSTON (AP)—Republican Gov. John A. Volpe proposed Monday his own plan for redistricting the Massachusetts Senate including a Boston district that could elect the state's first Negro state senator.

The proposal was offered as an amendment to the redistricting bill enacted last week, which was returned to the Senate.

Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, D-Holyoke, called the governor's plan "the rape of the Democratic party", and said it would probably cost at least eight Democratic incumbents their seats.

The proposal shakes up nearly every district and returns some to their political character of more than a decade ago when Republicans still held legislative control.

Open House Policy

Absurd Amending To Get Approval

The original Open House proposal of the Student Affairs Committee should be adopted by the Faculty Senate when it meets on Thursday. The report called for a majority of each house to determine its own unique policy on the frequency, duration, and door policies of open houses.

A revised proposal of the committee, however, would permit individual residence units to set the frequency of open houses but would establish a University-wide policy that the doors be "ajar."

The new recommendation modifies the duration during which residence units may register open houses. The original proposal would allow open houses to be held for any periods of time except when residence halls are closed (Sundays through Thursdays from 12:00 midnight to 7:00 a.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 1:00 a.m. to 7:00 a.m.) The new proposal permits open houses to be registered only during "Mondays through Thursdays from 3:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.; Fridays and Saturdays from 12:00 noon to 1:00 a.m.; Sundays from 12:00 noon to 12:00 midnight." This duration revision of the committee is an absurd attempt to legislate the policy by a process of amendment. The most significant change here would disallow open houses from 10 p.m. to 12:00 midnight Mondays through Thursdays. Is this a provision necessary or proper to a policy extending self-government?

We believe that the door policy as well as the frequency and duration of open houses should be determined by the individual residence halls. With the establishment of an "ajar" policy University-wide, open houses would become more a house event than an individual activity. This is apparently the purpose. We believe that the individual should be able to enjoy open houses—his bedroom and study in his living room also, his social activities are part of his education. We do not believe that the chief benefit from an open house policy should be extending the public entertaining area of dormitories — the intent of open doors.

There are many areas on campus available for "public" intimacy—daterooms, libraries, dining commons, the Hatch, even classrooms. One can find a place for quiet conversation and enjoying music with a little effort. But the student has only one room to which entry is by his invitation only.

We believe that an "ajar" policy will result in additional hypocrisy in that doors will be closed except for a technical ½ inch crack or closed yet protected by a blanket. This hypocrisy, we enjoy now, is sometimes inflated to outright disregard (especially regarding alcoholic beverages).

For all practical purposes an "ajar" door policy will not affect sexual activity. It may or may not make parents, citizens, and the legislature happier. But it certainly will affect the learning experience for which we are all here. With an "ajar" policy, the open house proposal says that it is better to be hypocritical than to recognize and enhance the dignity of student life.

The student body may not possess a mature sense of social responsibility. Thus, dormitory-damage and non-enforcement of quiet hours prevail. But, we believe that the student body possesses a mature sense of individual responsibility. Thus, open houses are a right not a privilege.

We urge the members of the Faculty Senate, first, to take the trouble to attend the meeting Thursday and, secondly, to astonish the campus and to earn its respect by passing the original policy recommendation.

Grades Are an Interim Solution

The grading problem is a real one, then; it offers no easy solution. Research has pointed out the errors of the present system, but has failed to prove the worth of alternative systems. While many suggestions have been offered by the researchers, they often represent subjective judgments, not objective observations. How can this gap be filled? Smith and Dobbin (1960, p. 789) recognized this same problem and answered this question in the following way:

> Although research has uncovered some limitations and suggested some promising directions in marking procedure, no commonly accepted system has emerged from half a century of inquiry. Perhaps the development of such a system awaits wider agreement on the goals of instruction and the purpose of marking.

Herein must lie the answer, one which attacks the problem at its most elementary level—decide what the goals of education are and what role grading plays in this grander scheme. This is not a new suggestion, nor will it be an easy task, but it is essential if a new system is to flourish in an environment which may be hostile and critical.

Those who are involved with grades — the instructors, the students, the administrators — must be willing to discuss openly and frankly the goals of education and their relationship to grading. We must be willing to listen to suggestions and be prepared to offer alternatives. We must be prepared to judge on the basis of fact, not emotion. We must be in favor of effectiveness and fairness, not convenience. And, we must approach the conference table willing to learn. As Marshall (1952, p. 285) points out:

> Graders and non-graders will never settle their dispute satisfactorily unless the case can have a calm hearing, and be judged by cold reason rather than the force of numbers, emotion or political maneuvers.

Once a solution has been found one that is acceptable to all, and is in agreement with the goals of education—enough time must be allowed to objectively determine the effectiveness and success of the new system. As with any experiment, positive results will not necessarily occur overnight—if they do indeed occur at all. While the system is being tried, discussion and objective observations will again be essential. A new system must not be regarded as the ultimate solution before it has proved its worth; neither must it be condemned without giving it ample time to prove itself.

In the interim, before grading reform is instituted—for its certainly will not be instituted immediately — what can be done to help rectify the situation? Petersen (1967, p. 178) suggests the following as one way of reducing much of the variability that presently exists in grades:

> To encourage instructors to share information and rationale on the grades they assign their students. In colleges and universities in which grades are private property of the instructor and the student, variation in grading practices and standards should be expected. Information on grade distributions for sections, courses, and departments, along with encouragement to faculty members to review and discuss it, can be expected to serve as a self-correcting technique for reducing the variability in grading practices frequently observed.

Discussion is, then, essential both for reform and for improvement. For the present system, faculty must be encouraged to discuss course objectives and grading techniques and criteria. For future reform, the goals of education, and of grading in particular, can be discussed in the light of fact. In an era when education has become a way of life, we must face the issues and make every attempt to resolve them. Grading is one such issue — it need not remain a "necessary evil."

Dissent from Editors' Views

To the editor:

I dissent from today's policy editorial because I feel that amendments represent a necessary compromise between the University officials and the student body. And compromise is vital to ensure success in a cooperative system. I feel that passage of the amended open house proposal should be the primary concern even if we may be unhappy with one or two of the sections of the bill.

The Real Reason There Is French

To the editor:

... the U. S. felt badly that she did not have claim to the discovery of France. America decided to do the next best thing: aid France with her problems. Of course, this is where the fun started, for before the U. S. A. could help France, Americans first had to understand the French language. A group of American linguists were sent over there and they reported that the French language was most complicated and seemed to be made up of a mixture of German, English, and Chinese.

Linguists said that French would be impossible to learn and advised Americans to stay away from France, but they were quickly hushed up. Before long French had infiltrated the U. S.

Despite the Young Republicans for Freedom, the John Birchers, and the Amherst Police, French teachers have made it to U Mass. These teachers represent the greatest threat to this campus since the Fox Trot. Why? ? French classes have no reason to them. The first step of a Language-Lab-card-carrying teacher is to try to take away inhibitions by forcing the students to make the weirdest noises imaginable, under the guise of teaching them a foreign language. Most French sounds are made by talking through the nose and pressing the tongue against the back of the throat. Anyone knows that this exercise will, at the very least, cause most people to swallow their tongues and choke to death. And there is no better way for a person to completely lose his inhibitions.

French is also a degrading language because it teaches students to read French literature, which is just too risky to comment on further.

Maybe if we turned en masse on U-Mass French teachers there would be some hope — but I'm afraid no one will take this warning seriously.

Yes, I hate to say it but I fear French has infiltrated this country beyond salvage. Ah well, at least the males have a few consolation prizes... like Bridgette Bardot....

Thant Confers with World Leaders; ravda' Indicates Approval of Viet Cong

NDON (AP)—U.N. Secretary-ral U Thant flew in from ow on Monday night seek-Britain's help to head off a way escalation of the Viet-se war and get peace talks ed.

minally the Vietnamese war not U.N. business. But as tary-general Thant is enti- to concern himself with t any issue that could threat- world peace.

ach of the three countries he visited at a time of intensifying conflict in Vietnam has a significant role to play in the peacemaking and peacekeeping process.

India presides over the International Central Commission which is supposed to supervise peace arrangements throughout what once was Indochina.

The Soviet Union and Britain are co-chairmen of the rusting Geneva peacemaking machinery which in 1954 produced the truce in Vietnam that failed.

In Moscow Thant conferred with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, President Nikolai V. Podgerny and Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev on what an official statement called "topical international questions." Besides Vietnam these probably included the Arab-Israeli deadlock and prospects for reopening the Suez Canal.

The Russians went out of their way during Thant's stay to advertise their solidarity with the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong.

The public Soviet attitude was that the Communists are winning in Vietnam and can insist upon their own terms: complete U.S. withdrawal from the country.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, said this in a front-page editorial. It declared the positions of North Vietnam and the Viet Cong "meet with support and approval of general world opinion." If Washington seriously wants peace talks, it can begin them on Communist terms, Pravda said. These terms include an unconditional halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam before peace talks open.

Shortly before meeting Thant, Podgerny received the Viet Cong's resident Moscow representative, Dang Quang Minh.

Al Hulsen, manager of WFCR, is optimistic that future formal courses of this type can "extend the resources of the University to the general public."

The continuing series, "Issues and Eloquence"—a history of public speaking, was the first such University initiated program. Hulsen stressed that appreciation courses like "Japan" are radio-adapted not merely broadcast-lectures.

Since January WFCR has increased the amount of locally produced programs: "The History of Vietnam," presented earlier this month; "Jazz Forum"; "Great Decisions" and the CBC's "Canada's Coming of Age."

The five college station has also expanded its coverage of world, national and local news with the hour long Evening Report heard each weekday night at 5:30. Further information is available in the monthly program guide.

UMass Ski Team Wins Bromley Grand Slalom

By MARTHA CURRAN
Sports Day Editor

"Unforgiving gates" and ice marked the Slalom course Saturday as Collin Garstang, captain of the UMass Ski Team, won second place honors and led his team through zero degree temperatures to second place in NEISC Competition at Bromley Mountain, Vermont.

COLLIN GARSTANG

Wilkie Ward, second man on the mountain for UMass came in sixteenth, Dick McHugh was seventeenth and Jim Garstang placed twenty-first in overall performance time.

By Sunday, the team was back on top. Collin Garstang took first place in the Giant Slalom at Bromley. His younger brother, Jim, was fourth. Mike Zanolli and Dave Kamilla took fifth and eighth place, John Hurd was eleventh and Wilkie Ward placed nineteenth. Overall weekend results prove that UMass has retained first place in the Osborne League with a total of 23 seconds faster than its nearest and arch rival Amherst College.

Team time, computed on the basis of the performances of the fastest four skiers on the six man "A Team" was 489.3 on Saturday, 9.4 seconds slower than first place Amherst. On Sunday, UMass with 530, took first, and was 7.1 seconds faster than second place Amherst.

Eight colleges compete in the Osborne League of the New England Interscholastic Ski Conference. UMass leads the league, followed by Amherst, AIC, BU, Tufts, Bentley, WPI and Northeastern.

There is a remarkable and impressive friendship among the 60 competitors; they race against each other in nine meets over five weekends. The top contenders for first place honors are Collin Garstang, Steve Perrins of AIC, Don Marsh of Tufts and Miles Herkenham of Amherst. UMass' Garstang has won two first places, two second places and one third place this season.

Coach William MacConnell, delighted with his team's success, will see five of his skiers graduate this year: Garstang, from Pittsfield, John Hurd from Melrose, Ned Kelley of Richmond, Mike Zanolli of Springfield and John Williams of Middleboro.

Kelley, who sprained his ankle last week, did not compete at Bromley. Dave Kamilla of Westminster, another of MacConnell's consistent "men on the mountain," joined the team on Sunday and turned in the eighth fastest time.

Crowds don't count in skiing, not really. "Skiing isn't football," said Coach MacConnell. It isn't a crowd-pleasing spectacle, blizzards and the often too-high cost of skis and tows limit the number of spectators.

Bromley Mountain is sparingly sprinkled with tiny, bright red way-stations. They are heated for the convenience of skiers, competitors waiting for their "Ten seconds" to "Go" countdown, and Daily Collegian sports reporters.

Skiing is a colorful sport. UMass uniforms are maroon, Metawampee watches the world from his patch on each ski parka. Red, blue yellow flags dot the course and mark the finish line, snow sun and wind brighten faces, and UMass always lugs home an array of silver trophies.

Skiing is an individual sport, yet the team pulls together because victory is based on percentages. A tenth of a second can often determine happiness and victory. UMass had both this weekend.

Garstang Paces UMass Victory

By MARTHA CURRAN
Sports Day Editor

"The Giant Slalom is my best event," said a smiling Collin Garstang after turning in the best total time to win first place Sunday at the NEISC meet at Bromley Mountain in Vermont.

Garstang, the blond, blue-eyed captain of the UMass Ski team, added another trophy to his collection and headed home to Pittsfield with his wife Carol. A senior, majoring in marketing, Garstang has spent 18 of his 21 years on the ski slopes. He has been racing for nine years.

At 6'3", he probably one of the tallest skiiers in the New England Interscholastic Ski Conference. He is also the Student President of the Conference and is responsible for 26 New England schools.

Garstang, his parents, and his brother Jim, a sophomore member of the UMass Ski team, skiied with the Mount Greylock Ski Club. Collin went on in high school to captain the ski team and was ski meister for three years on the basis of his top performance in the Berkshire Interscholastic Ski meets. He skiied cross country and jumped then, but feels most at home with the Giant Slalom.

"One of the greatest attributes of the team is its unity, we all pull together." Garstang also acknowledged a spirit of friendship among all the competitors.

Garstang, who has won two first place honors, two second place honors and one third in this season's first six meets, has no special skiing style. Nor does he emulate any other skiier. "I'd go west to ski first, then to Europe," he said. And what does he think about French ski king Jean Claude Killy? "He's in a class by himself!"

A four year stint with the UMass Ski team ends with graduation in June, but Garstang plans to coach junior racers as a sideline to his business profession with a ski club or a ski area.

Busy now with practice meets and rushing at QTV where he is a brother, Garstang will knuckle down on the books when NEISC competition ends March 9.

Academics claimed the only two freshman heavyweights, and the wrestling team is looking for an athlete over 200 pounds. Candidates please report to the wrestling room in Boyden.

Holy Cross Test for Tindall

By GLENN BRIERE
Sports Editor

Billy Tindall, who set a UMass record for points in one game with his 41-point output against Vermont Saturday night, has made the ECAC All-East team for the fourth straight week, but the next two weeks will be the acid test for the Redman captain.

Starting with tomorrow night's big rematch at the Cage against Holy Cross, UMass goes on to play UConn at Storrs in another rematch on Saturday, and returns home next week for a pair of toughies against St. John's and Rhode Island.

In these games, as in most of the Redmen's games this season, Tindall will be called upon to guard the toughest players. Tomorrow night, for instance, he will guard 6'7 forward Ed Sindut, who has scored over 30 points in each of his last four games.

Nevertheless, UMass coach Jack Leaman is confident that Tindall will do the job. The Redmen have a 9-9 record, but talk to Leaman about Tindall and his face lights up.

" His performance Saturday night was just out of this world," said Leaman. "I've never been associated with a basketball player who's been so good for so long. His last four weeks have really been tremendous."

Leaman added, "To top it off, he plays the whole game—not just scoring, but rebounding and defense, too. He is always called upon to guard the toughest men on the opposing teams. He's the total basketball player."

When it became evident Saturday night that Tindall had a good shot at Bill Prevey's single game record of 39 points set back in 1952, Leaman gave the team instructions to feed Tindall. And the strategy paid off as Billy beat the old record by two.

Tindall had a shot at the record last year, too. It was in the All-College tourney at Oklahoma City. "We were beating DePaul by about 14," said Leaman, "and Billy had 37 points late in the game when I took him out. But I didn't know how many points he had, otherwise I would have left him in. I felt badly about that afterwards, but I guess Saturday night made up for that."

Leaman was quick to point out that sophomore Ray Ellerbrook has been overshadowed by Tindall this season. "Ray's had a tremendous sophomore season," said Leaman. "He's developing fast, and he and DiSarcina give us a great backcourt." Ellerbrook is currently averaging 15.2.

The Holy Cross team that the Redmen face tomorrow night is a far cry from the team that lost to UMass, 71-65, at Worcester during intersession. The Crusaders are now 11-6, and are aiming for a tournament berth. In their last three games, they have beaten Boston College, Fordham and Syracuse.

"It'll be a tough game," understated Leaman. "We caught them unaware at Worcester, but now they're the hottest team in New England. They've won four in a row.

"But I look for a good, hard fought game tomorrow night. The key, of course, will be how well we play against (Keith) Hochstein and Sindut."

On the subject of the next two weeks, Leaman mused, "We'll be the underdog in our next four games, and it'll be a long, tough two weeks. The outcome of the whole season will depend on these games. But I'm sure we'll give a good account of ourselves."

Tomorrow night's game will be preceded by a freshman game against a tall and talented Crusader frosh five. The Holy Cross freshmen have lost just one game, to B.C.'s frosh. And only one of the starters is under 6'7.

U.S. Will Send 10,500 More Ground Forces to Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is speeding an additional 10,500 Army and Marine ground fighters to South Vietnam as insurance against a "second round" Communist city offensive and assault on the Khe Sanh bastion.

The Pentagon announced Tuesday that "in compliance with Gen. William C. Westmoreland's request we are deploying approximately 10,500 additional troops to South Vietnam."

The action raised the possibility that the United States may increase its planned troop ceiling in Vietnam beyond 525,000 and that National Guard and Reserve ground forces may be called to active duty.

The Pentagon said no decision has been made on either an overall buildup in Vietnam or a reserve call-up, but it was apparent such steps are under study.

Asst. Secretary of Defense Phil G. Goulding told newsmen the rapid shipment of the additional 10,500 ground troops is in response to a Westmoreland request received in "the last few days," and that they are being shipped for "insurance purposes."

He characterized the deployment as a speed-up, but said these troops fall within the 525,000 ceiling. There are now about 500,000 American servicemen in Vietnam.

Goulding said "evaluation will have to be made later" on whether to boost the 525,000 objective. He said Westmoreland has not asked for an increase over that number.

For more than six months, Army forces have been drawn from the lower part of South Vietnam into the northern I Corps to bolster Marine defenses against a series of Communist offensive threats along the demilitarized zone.

So far, the equivalent of two Army divisions, or about 30,000 men have been pulled into I Corps to support the 79,000 Marines there.

This process resulted last summer in a hike in the then-planned troop build-up objective of 470,000 to 525,000 to plug holes in U.S. deployments in the central highlands—a main avenue of infiltration—and the region which centers around Saigon to the south.

Now the new Communist North Vietnamese concentration of perhaps 50,000 soldiers along the DMZ and near threatened Khe Sanh, together with the Viet Cong city offensive, which was sprung with unexpected ferocity and breadth, has put a further strain on U.S. ground combat resources in Vietnam.

Without saying so, Goulding indicated that some of the combat units now heading for Vietnam were not in the deployment plan originally — suggesting that they have displaced some support-type troops on the scheduled.

Whether or not the support troops will go as originally intended remains to be seen. If they do, and this appears likely, the over-all troop build-up objective may be lifted above the 525,000 mark.

Until now, the goal has contemplated a level of 518,000 in Vietnam by June 30, with another 7,000 shortly afterward.

Open House Proposal Revised; To Hit Faculty Senate Soon

The following motion incorporates a proposal to change the current University regulation on open houses, and supersedes the motion submitted by this Committee December 14, 1967.

This new motion was passed at a regular meeting of the Student Affairs Committee February 5, 1968, by a vote of 10-2-2.

Insofar as legal opinion was available, it is believed that the recommendations embodied in the motion are consistent with pertinent statutes of the Commonwealth.

MOVED: that the Faculty Senate accept the following open house policy recommendations:

A. Each residence unit* government shall be allowed to determine its own unique policy on the frequency and duration of open houses. Residence unit governments may establish these open houses as open or closed social events and may establish policies relating to the registration of guests.

B. Open houses may be conducted Mondays through Thursdays from 3:00 to 10:00 p.m.; Fridays and Saturdays from 12:00 noon to 1:00 a.m.; Sundays from 12:00 noon to 12:00 midnight.†
Consistent with existing University security policies, residence halls, fraternities, and sororities will be locked Sundays through Thursdays from 12:00 midnight to 7:00 a.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 1:00 a.m. to 7 a.m. There may be no visitation by members of the opposite sex during these hours.

C. The doors to the rooms of residents who are participating in any open house must be ajar.¶

D. Ultimate authority for open house policy resides in the Board of Trustees or their designated officials.

E. The University policy on open houses as of September, 1967 will remain in force until each residence unit has commulated its provisions for implementing the recommendations embodied in this proposal.

F. Each open house must be approved separately by a majority vote of all the residents either at house meetings or at section meetings.

G. Each residence unit must determine anew the frequency and duration of its open houses for no more than two-week intervals.
Residence unit governments will clearly articulate their open house program, will inform their membership of open house events sufficiently in advance, and will be prepared to submit on request, descriptions of their programs to the Student Personnel representative having administrative liaison with their place of residence.

H. At the end of each semester, each residence unit government will submit an evaluation of its policy to the Student Senate and Student Life Committee.

I. Annual evaluation of the policy will take place by the Student Senate, Student Life Committee, and the Dean of Students.

J. Fraternities and sororities come under the purview of the above policies.

*"Residence unit" as used throughout the motion includes residence halls, fraternities, and sororities.

New Style Planned for Anti-Dow Demonstrations

By RICHARD LANE
Staff Reporter

A new idea on dissent, will be directed against the Dow Chemical Company this Thursday and Friday, on the University of Massachusetts campus. The day's activities are directed by a newly formed Ad Hoc Committee on Dow Chemical Company.

According to Steve Gaman of the Committee, the demonstration will include a rally, bonfire, and full parade with band as highlights.

The demonstration activities will begin outside Whitmore at 10 a.m. with pickets. At 1 p.m. a parade will begin at South West with a jug band and proceed to the Student Union. At approximately 4 p.m. the bonfire will start along with antiwar poetry and faculty speeches.

Friday's activities will include an anti-Dow rally in Bartlett at 7 p.m. with student and faculty speeches. An earlier demonstration against Dow with pickets will take place outside Whitmore between 12 p.m. and 2 p.m.

Speaking for the Ad Hoc Committee against Dow, Jim Plato told the Daily Collegian that his group's activities "represent the beginning of a new kind of tactic in approaching the problem of the war and Dow Chemical."

Plato, an O R C, an underground resistance group, member went on to say that this demonstration is a "theatrical approach" to "appeal to people in a gut way."

In relation to Dow's production of napalm, which committee member Jane Roland called "slow poisoning," there will be a Miss Napalm Contest held Thursday. "We don't use logic in these demonstrations" continued Plato, because "Dow is not logical."

Discussing the philosophy and future hopes of this "new idea on dissent", Plato said that both the U.S. and the University are "unreal" and "fantasy" worlds away from the reality of the Vietnam war.

Thursday's parade is a "fantasy talking about something real," added Plato. He hopes to play up the "irony" and "incongruity" on campus of the situation.

The ORC member stated that as a future trend, he hopes this new type of demonstration and dissent will be "increasingly more effective," and hopes to attract many people to this week's demonstrations.

The Ad Hoc Committee on Dow has obtained a permit for its parade and bonfire and thus "no one is quite prepared to handle it," stated Plato. These new protest tactics would be hopefully "unopposable" he said.

The Ad Hoc Committee is a spontaneous organization of "interested people who have gotten together," according to member Jane Roland, early in the year. The organization represents the two viewpoints of opposition: one against Dow Chemical, the other against the war in Vietnam.

UMass-Boston Faculty in Anti-War Tapes

Student tapes advocating anti-draft and anti-war demonstrations in Greater Boston are believed to be the voices of the UMass-Boston faculty. The students have agreed to testify before a legislative commission as to the authenticity of these tapes.

The tapes were provided by Rep. Joseph M. Kearney, and Rep. John F. Melia at a hearing before a joint committee on education in the State House yesterday.

"We do not want to infringe on the rights of faculty and students to free speech," explained Kearney.

At the request of parents of some UMass students, an investigation of the events that led to the demonstration at Arlington St. Church, and the burning of draft cards of which Greater Boston students took a part, will be held.

Expressing support of resistance to the draft, one taped voice was said to have directly challenged the authority of the President and the administration.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court decided that the burning of draft cards was a direct act of civil disobedience, UMass faculty members declared that they are willing to help young men in any way they can concerning anti-draft movements.

"If Soldier Pays for Lost M14, McNamara Should Pay for Ships"

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army was reported Tuesday to be trying to collect $70.21 from a veteran of the Vietnam war because he lost his M14 rifle in combat.

The source of this report, Rep. Henry C. Schadeberg, R-Wis., said if the Army succeeds, the Navy should collect $30 million from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara for the loss of the USS Pueblo and the USS Liberty. The former was seized by North Korea and the later was a casualty of an Israeli attack.

The congressman said the $70.21 claim was made against one of his constitutents, Ernest J. Wagner, Racine, Wis., who was honorably discharged from the Army after year's service in Vietnam.

Schadeberg said Wagner told him he believes the M14 rifle fell out of a helicopter on a combat mission. The congressman said Wagner has been given 30 days to pay the $70.21 or face legal action.

"If they start legal action," Schadeberg said, "I will start a Wagner-Vietnam Defense Fund and ask for donations from veterans of all wars to fight the legal action.

Rockefeller Deadlocked Over Garbage Strike

by ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the legislature remained deadlocked Tuesday over his mandate to end New York's nine-day garbage strike, and turned to Mayor John V. Lindsay to get them off the hook.

Lindsay replied that he was willing to try, but only on his own terms—that New York garbagemen stay on the job, and that the legislators defer Rockefeller's planned take-over of city sanitation facilities.

Lindsay's telegram was in reply to one from Democratic and Republican legislative leaders in Albany. With Rockefeller's approval, they said they were delaying action on the politically sticky impasse overnight — the second such delay since Rockefeller first sought their approval on his sanitation formula on Monday.

They told Lindsay they were doing so "to provide you with a further opportunity to find a satisfactory conclusion to this problem."

In a statement, Rockefeller urged a permanent agreement between the city and the garbagemen and added: "Anything short of that can only be considered an interim step to meet the crisis."

Lindsay, going his own way, was in Buffalo defending his original plan for a National Guard takeover in the sanitation strike, and declaring that Rockefeller's solution opened the door to unlimited state interference in local affairs.

Thus the breach between the two nationally known Republicans appeared to keep widening, while 10,000 sanitation men continued their cleanup of 100,000 tons of trash that piled up during the strike. The task was expected to take another week or longer.

The walkout began Feb. 2 and was ended last Saturday on Rockefeller's terms.

Meanwhile, State Supreme Court Justice Saul S. Streit fined the striking Uniformed Sanitationmen's Assoc. $80,000 for defying back-to-work orders issued by the courts early in the strike. State law forbids strikes of public employees.

Instead of calling up the National Guard, Rockefeller induced the 10,000 sanitation men to return to work by pledging them a $425 a year increase in annual wages that ranged from $6,424 to $7,956.

The legislation was asked to endorse this statement, for the period until the city reached a contract settlement with the sanitation union. Then the city would be called upon to repay what it cost the state.

ROTC Drills On Mt. Toby

Concluding its week-long pledge initiation, L Company 15th Regiment of Scabbard and Blade, the R.O.T.C. national military honor society, conducted a simulated tactical maneuver recently on Mt. Toby.

Under the leadership of Pledge President Donald B. Legg, the eight junior pledges carried out a practical exercise using the various formations of battle drill.

The maneuver climaxed a lengthy and demanding pledge period. During that time, the pledges underwent physical conditioning exercises and rigorous inspections of the military uniform.

The purpose behind all of the training discipline was to promote a greater degree of fellowship among cadets in R.O.T.C. and to widen the scope of military understanding in all its facets.

More Tension Possible in S.C.

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — The Justice Department asked court desegregation of the Orangeburg Hospital Tuesday in its second legal move in this racially tense city where three youths have died in violence.

Negro student leaders from across the state predicted the tension might trigger new violence if students return prematurely to South Carolina State College, shut down after the three were killed by state police in gunfire on the campus last week.

One student leader warned, "Things might explode." In Washington, the Justice Department said it had filed suit asking for a federal court injunction to end alleged discrimination in patient facilities and medical care at the Orangeburg Hospital.

A court hearing already is set Thursday on the Justice Department's suit seeking to force the city's only bowling alley to comply with civil rights laws. The Orangeburg violence followed an effort by Negro students to integrate the All-Star Triangle Bowling Lanes last week.
